PREFACE

Though many people believe in God, few understand what faith in God means, and what they must do to be after God's heart. This is because, though people are familiar with the word "God" and phrases such as "the work of God," they do not know God, much less do they know His work. No wonder, then, that all those who do not know God are possessed of a muddled belief. People do not take belief in God seriously because believing in God is too unfamiliar, too strange for them. In this way, they fall short of the demands of God. In other words, if people do not know God, do not know His work, then they are not fit for God's use, much less can they fulfill the desire of God. "Belief in God" means believing that there is a God; this is the simplest concept of faith in God. What's more, believing that there is a God is not the same as truly believing in God; rather, it is a kind of simple faith with strong religious overtones. True faith in God means experiencing the words and work of God based on a belief that God holds sovereignty over all things. So you shall be freed of your corrupt disposition, shall fulfill the desire of God, and shall come to know God. Only through such a journey can you be said to believe in God. Yet people often see belief in God as something very simple and frivolous. The belief of such people is meaningless and shall never gain the approval of God, because they tread the wrong path. Today, there are still those who believe in God in letters, in hollow doctrines. They are unaware that their belief in God has no substance, and that they are unable to gain the approval of God, and they still pray for peace and sufficient grace from God. We should stop and ask ourselves: Could believing in God really be the easiest thing on earth? Does believing in God mean nothing more than receiving much grace from God? Can people who believe in God but do not know Him, and believe in God yet oppose Him, really fulfill the desire of God?

God and man cannot be spoken of as equals. His substance and His work are most unfathomable and incomprehensible to man. If God does not personally do His work and speak His words in the world of man, then man would never be able to understand the will of God, and so, even those who have devoted their entire life to God would be incapable of gaining His approval. Without God's work, no matter how good man's doing, it will count for nothing, for the thoughts of God shall always be higher than the thoughts of man, and the wisdom of God is unfathomable to man. And so I say that those who have “seen through” God and His work are ineffectual, they are all arrogant and ignorant. Man should not define the work of God; moreover, man cannot define the work of God. In the eyes of God, man is smaller than an ant, so how can man fathom God’s work? Those who are constantly saying, “God does not work in this or that way” or “God is like this or that”—are they not all arrogant? We should all know that people, who are of the flesh, have all been corrupted by Satan. It is their nature to oppose God, and they are not on a parity with God, much less can they offer counsel for the work of God. How God guides man is the work of God Himself. Man should submit, and should not hold such and such a view, for man is but dust. Since we try to seek God, we should not superimpose our conceptions on the work of God for God’s consideration, least of all should we employ our corrupt disposition to deliberately try to oppose the work of God. Would that not make us antichrists? How could such people say that they believe in God? Since we believe that there is a God, and since we wish to satisfy Him and to see Him, we should seek the way of truth, and should look for a way to be compatible with God. We should not stand in stiff-necked opposition to God; what good could come of such actions?

Today, God has new work. You may not accept these words, they may feel odd to you, but I advise you not to reveal your naturalness, for only those who truly hunger and thirst for righteousness before God can obtain the truth, and only those who are truly devout can be enlightened and guided by God. Nothing will come of seeking the truth through quarreling. Only by seeking calmly can we obtain results. When I say that “Today, God has new work,” I am referring to God’s return to flesh. Perhaps you do not mind these words, perhaps you despise them, or perhaps they are of great interest to you. Whatever the case, I hope that all those who truly yearn for the appearance of God can face this fact and give it careful consideration. It is best not to jump to conclusions. This is the way that wise people should act.

To study such a thing is not difficult, but requires each of us to know this truth: He who is God’s incarnation shall hold the substance of God, and He who is God’s incarnation shall hold the expression of God. Since God becomes flesh, He shall bring forth the work He must do, and since God becomes flesh, He shall express what He is, and shall be able to bring the truth to man, bestow life upon man, and show man

the way. Flesh that does not contain the substance of God is surely not the incarnate God; of this there is no doubt. To investigate whether it is God's incarnate flesh, man must determine this from the disposition He expresses and the words He speaks. Which is to say, whether or not it is God's incarnate flesh, and whether or not it is the true way, must be judged from His substance. And so, in determining^[a] whether it is the flesh of God incarnate, the key is to pay attention to His substance (His work, His words, His disposition, and many more), rather than external appearance. If man sees only His external appearance, and overlooks His substance, then that shows the ignorance and naivety of man. External appearance does not determine substance; what's more, the work of God has never conformed with the conceptions of man. Did not the outward appearance of Jesus conflict with the conceptions of man? Were not His appearance and dress unable to provide any clues as to His true identity? Was not the reason why the earliest Pharisees opposed Jesus because they merely looked at His external appearance, and did not take to heart the words that He spoke? It is My hope that the brothers and sisters who seek the appearance of God will not repeat the tragedy of history. You must not become the Pharisees of modern times and nail God to the cross again. You should carefully consider how to welcome the return of God, and should have a clear mind of how to be someone who submits to the truth. This is the responsibility of everyone who is waiting for Jesus to return with the clouds. We should rub our spiritual eyes, and not fall prey to the words full of flights of fancy. We should think about the practical work of God, and should take a look at the real side of God. Do not get carried away or lose yourselves in daydreams, always looking forward to the day that the Lord Jesus suddenly descends among you on a cloud to take you who have never known Him or seen Him, and do not know how to do His will. It is better to think upon practical matters!

You may have opened this book for the purpose of research, or with the intention to accept; whatever your attitude, I hope that you will read it to the end, and will not put it aside easily. Perhaps, after reading these words, your attitude will change, but that depends on how motivated you are, and how easily you take things to heart. There is, however, one thing that you should know: The word of God cannot be spoken as the word of man, much less can the word of man be spoken as the word of God. A man used by God is not the incarnate God, and the incarnate God is not a man used by God; in this, there is a substantial difference. Perhaps, after reading these words, you do not accept that they are the words of God, and only accept them as the words of a man who has been enlightened. In that case, you are blinded by ignorance. How can the words of God be the same as the words of a man who has been enlightened? The words of God incarnate initiate a new age, guide the whole of mankind, reveal mysteries, and show man the direction ahead in a new age. The enlightenment obtained by man is but simple practice or knowledge. It cannot guide the whole of mankind into a new age or reveal the mystery of God Himself. God, after all, is God, and man is man. God has the substance of God, and man has the substance of man. If man views the words spoken by God as simple enlightenment of the Holy Spirit, and takes the words of the apostles and prophets as words personally spoken by God, then man is wrong. Regardless, you should never turn right into wrong, or speak of the high as the low, or speak of the profound as the shallow; regardless, you should never deliberately refute what you know to be the truth. Everyone who believes there is a God should consider this problem from the correct standpoint, and should accept His new work and words as a creature of God—or else be eliminated by God.

After the work of Jehovah, Jesus became flesh to do His work amongst man. His work was not carried out in isolation, but built upon the work of Jehovah. It was work for a new age after God had concluded the Age of Law. Similarly, after the work of Jesus ended, God still continued His work for the next age, because the entire management of God is always progressing forward. When the old age passes, it will be replaced by a new age, and once the old work has been completed, a new work will continue the management of God. This incarnation is God's second incarnation following the completion of Jesus' work. Of course, this incarnation does not occur independently, but is the third stage of work after the Age of Law and the Age of Grace. Each new stage of God's work always brings a new beginning and a new age. So too are there corresponding changes in the disposition of God, in His way of working, in the location of His work, and in His name. No wonder, then, that it is difficult for man to accept the work of God in the new age. But regardless of how He is opposed by man, God is always doing His work, and is always leading the whole of mankind forward. When Jesus came into the world of man, He brought the Age of Grace and ended the Age of Law. During the last days, God once more became flesh, and when He became flesh this time, He ended the Age of Grace and brought the Age of Kingdom. All those who accept the second incarnation of God will be led into the Age of Kingdom, and be able to personally accept the guidance of God. Though Jesus did much work among man, He only completed the redemption of all mankind and became man's sin offering, and did not rid man of all his corrupt disposition. Fully saving man from the influence of Satan not only required Jesus to take on the sins of man as the sin offering, but also required God to do greater work to completely rid man of his disposition, which has been corrupted by Satan. And so, after man was forgiven his sins, God has returned to flesh to lead man into the new age, and begun the work of chastisement and judgment, and this work has brought man into a higher realm. All those who submit under His dominion shall enjoy higher truth and receive greater blessings. They shall truly live in the light, and shall gain the truth, the way, and the life.

If people remain in the Age of Grace, then they shall never be free of their corrupt disposition, let alone know the inherent disposition of God. If people always live among an abundance of grace but are without the way of life that allows them to know God and satisfy God, then they shall never truly gain Him though they believe in Him. What a pitiful form of belief that is. When you have finished reading this book, when you have experienced each step of the work of God incarnate in the Age of Kingdom, you will feel that the hopes of many years have finally been realized. You will feel that only now have you truly seen God face-to-face; only now have you gazed upon the face of God, heard the personal utterance of God, appreciated the wisdom of God's work, and truly sensed how real and almighty God is. You will sense that you have gained many things that people of times past have never seen or possessed. At this time, you will clearly know what it is to believe in God, and what it is to be after God's heart. Of course, if you cling to views of the past, and reject or deny the fact of the second incarnation of God, then you shall remain empty-handed and acquire nothing, and ultimately be guilty of opposing God. Those who obey the truth and submit to the work of God shall come under the name of the second incarnate God—the Almighty. They will be able to accept the personal guidance of God, and shall acquire more and higher truth and receive the real human life. They shall behold the vision that people of the past have never seen: “And I turned to see the voice that spoke with me. And being turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks; And in the middle of the seven candlesticks one like to the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the breasts with a golden girdle. His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire; And his feet like to fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters. And he had in his right hand seven stars: and out of his mouth went a sharp two edged sword: and his countenance was as the sun shines in his strength” (Revelation 1:12-16). This vision is the expression of God’s entire disposition, and such an expression of His entire disposition is also the expression of the work of God when He becomes flesh this time. In the torrents of chastisements and judgments, the Son of man expresses His inherent disposition through the speaking of words, allowing all those who accept His chastisement and judgment to see the true face of the Son of man, a face that is a faithful depiction of the face of the Son of man seen by John. (Of course, all this will be invisible to those who do not accept the work of God in the Age of Kingdom.) The true face of God cannot be fully articulated using the words of man, and so God uses the expression of His inherent disposition to show His true face to man. Which is to say that all those who have experienced the inherent disposition of the Son of man have seen the true face of the Son of man, for God is too great and cannot be fully articulated using the words of man. Once man has experienced each step of God’s work in the Age of Kingdom, then he shall know the true meaning of John’s words when he spoke of the Son of man among the lampstands: “His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire; And his feet like to fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters. And he had in his right hand seven stars: and out of his mouth went a sharp two edged sword: and his countenance was as the sun shines in his strength.” At that time, you shall know beyond all doubt that this ordinary flesh that has spoken so many words is really the second incarnate God. And you shall truly sense how blessed you are, and feel yourself the most fortunate. Would you be unwilling to accept this blessing?

The first part of this book is the words personally spoken by the Son of man after He officially revealed Himself. It includes a rich content of several types of utterances and words such as prophecy, the revelation of mysteries, and the way of life. There are predictions for the future of the kingdom, revelations of the mysteries of God's management plan, dissections of the nature of man, exhortations and warnings, severe judgments, heartfelt words of consolation, talk of life, talk of entry, and so on. In short, what God has, what He is, and the disposition of God are all expressed in His work and words. Of course, when God becomes flesh this time, His work is to express His disposition, primarily through chastisement and judgment. Using this as the foundation, He brings more truth to man, shows more ways of practice, and so achieves His objective of conquering man and saving man from his corrupt disposition. This is what lies behind the work of God in the Age of Kingdom. Do you wish to enter the new age? Do you wish to rid yourself of corrupt disposition? Do you wish to obtain higher truth? Do you wish to see the true face of the Son of man? Do you wish to live a life that is worthwhile? Do you wish to be made perfect by God? Then, how will you welcome the return of Jesus?

THE APPEARANCE OF GOD HAS BROUGHT A NEW AGE

God's six-thousand-year management plan is coming to an end, and the gate of the kingdom has been opened to all those who seek the appearance of God. Dear brothers and sisters, what are you waiting for? What is it that you seek? Do you await the appearance of God? Are you searching for the footprints of God? How the appearance of God is yearned for! And how difficult it is to find God's footprints! In an age such as this, in a world such as this, what must we do to witness the day of God's appearance? What must we do to follow the footprints of God? Such questions are faced by all those who await the appearance of God. You have all considered them on more than one occasion—but with what outcome? Where does God appear? Where are the footprints of God? Have you gained the answers? Many people's reply would be this: God appears among those who follow Him and His footprints are among us; it's that simple! Anyone can provide a formulaic answer, but do you understand what the appearance of God is, and what the footprints of God are? The appearance of God refers to His personal arrival on earth to do His work. With His own identity and disposition, and in His inherent method, He descends among man to conduct the work of initiating an age and ending an age. This kind of appearance is not a form of ceremony. It is not a sign, a picture, a miracle, or a grand vision, and even less is it a kind of religious process. It is a real and actual fact that can be touched and beheld. This kind of appearance is not for the sake of following a process, or for the sake of a short-term undertaking; it is, rather, for the sake of a stage of work in His management plan. The appearance of God is always meaningful, and is always connected to His management plan. This appearance is completely different from the appearance of God's guidance, leadership, and enlightenment of man. God carries out a stage of great work each time He reveals Himself. This work is different from that of any other age. It is unimaginable to man, and has never been experienced by man. It is work that starts a new age and concludes the old age, and it is a new and improved form of work for the salvation of mankind; moreover, it is work of bringing mankind into the new age. That is the significance of the appearance of God.

At the same time as understanding the appearance of God, how should you seek the footprints of God? This question is not hard to explain: Where there is the appearance of God, you will find the footsteps of God. Such an explanation sounds very straightforward, but is not so easy to do, for many people do not know where God reveals Himself, much less where He is willing to, or should, reveal Himself. Some impulsively believe that where there is the work of the Holy Spirit, there is the appearance of God. Or else they believe that where there are spiritual figures, there is the appearance of God. Or else they believe that where people are well-known, there is the appearance of God. For the moment, let us not deliberate whether such beliefs are right or wrong. To explain such question, we must first be clear about an objective: We are searching for the footprints of God. We are not seeking spiritual figures, much less are we following famous figures; we are following the footprints of God. As such, since we are searching for the footprints of God, we must search for God's will, for the words of God, for the utterances of God—for where there are the new words of God, there is the voice of God, and where there are the footsteps of God, there are the deeds of God. Where there is the expression of God, there is the appearance of God, and where there is the appearance of God, there exists the truth, the way, and the life. While seeking the footprints of God, you ignored the words that “God is the truth, the way, and the life.” So when many people receive the truth, they do not believe that they have found the footprints of God and much less acknowledge the appearance of God. What a serious error that is! The appearance of God cannot be reconciled with the conceptions of man, much less can God appear at the behest of man. God makes His own choices and has His own plans when He does His work; moreover, He has His own objectives, and His own methods. It is not necessary for Him to discuss the work He does with man or to seek the advice of man, much less notify each and every person of His work. This is the disposition of God and, moreover, should be recognized by everyone. If you desire to witness the appearance of God, if you wish to follow the footprints of God, then you must first transcend your own conceptions. You must not demand that God do this or that, much less should you place Him within your own confines and limit Him to your own conceptions. Instead, you should ask how you should seek the footprints of God, how you should accept the appearance of God, and how you should submit to the new work of God; that is what should be done by man. Since man is not the truth, and is not possessed of the truth, man should seek, accept, and obey.

Regardless of whether you are American, British, or any other nationality, you should step beyond your own confines, should surpass yourself, and should view the work of God as a creature of God. In this way, you shall not place constraints on the footprints of God. Because, today, many people conceive it to be impossible that God will appear in a certain country or nation. How profound is the significance of God's work, and how important is the appearance of God! How can they be measured by the conception and thinking of man? And so I say, you should break through the conceptions of your nationality or ethnicity when you seek the appearance of God. In this way, you shall not be constrained by your own conceptions; in this way, you will be qualified to welcome the appearance of God. Otherwise, you shall always be in the darkness, and shall never gain the approval of God.

God is the God of all mankind. He does not make Himself the private property of any country or nation, and does the work of His plan unconstrained by any form, country, or nation. Perhaps you have never imagined this form, or perhaps you deny its existence, or perhaps the country or nation in which God appears is discriminated against and the least developed on earth. Yet God has His wisdom. With His power and through His truth and disposition He has truly gained a group of people who are of one mind with Him. And He has gained a group of people that He wanted to make: a group conquered by Him, who endure agonizing trials and all manner of persecution and can follow Him to the very end. The objective of God's appearance free from the constraints of any form or country is for Him to be able to complete the work of His plan. For example, when God became flesh in Judea, His aim was to complete the work of crucifixion to redeem all mankind. Yet the Jews believed that it was impossible for God to do this, and they thought it impossible that God could become flesh and assume the form of the Lord Jesus. Their "impossible" became the basis by which they condemned and opposed God, and ultimately led to the destruction of Israel. Today, many people have committed a similar error. They wantonly proclaim the imminent appearance of God, yet also condemn His appearance; their "impossible" once more confines the appearance of God within the limits of their imagination. And so I have seen many people fall about laughing after coming upon the words of God. Isn't this laughter no different from the condemnation and blasphemy of the Jews? You are not devout in facing the truth, much less do you yearn for the truth. You merely study blindly and wait nonchalantly. What can you gain from studying and waiting like this? Can you receive the personal guidance of God? If you cannot discern the utterances of God, how are you qualified to witness the appearance of God? Where God appears, there is the expression of the truth, and there is the voice of God. Only those who can accept the truth can hear the voice of God, and only such people are qualified to witness the appearance of God. Put your conceptions to one side! Stop and carefully read these words. If you yearn for the truth, God will enlighten you to understand His will and His words. Put aside your view of “impossible”! The more that people believe something is impossible, the more likely it is to occur, for the wisdom of God soars higher than the heavens, God’s thoughts are higher than man’s thoughts, and the work of God transcends the limits of man’s thinking and conception. The more that something is impossible, the more there is the truth to be sought; the more that something is beyond the conception and imagination of man, the more it contains the will of God. Because no matter where God reveals Himself, God is still God, and His substance will never change because of the location or manner of His appearance. The disposition of God remains the same regardless of where His footprints are. No matter where the footprints of God are, He is the God of all mankind. For example, the Lord Jesus is not only the God of Israelites, but is also the God of all people in Asia, Europe, and America, and even more the only God in the entire universe. So let us seek God’s will and discover His appearance from His utterances, and follow His footprints! God is the truth, the way, and the life. His words and His appearance exist concurrently, and His disposition and footprints shall always be accessible to mankind. Dear brothers and sisters, I hope that you can see the appearance of God in these words, and will begin to follow His footprints toward a new age, and into a beautiful new heaven and new earth prepared for those who await the appearance of God.

GOD PRESIDES OVER THE FATE OF ALL MANKIND

As members of the human race and devout Christians, it is the responsibility and obligation of us all to offer up our mind and body for the fulfillment of God's commission, for our entire being came from God, and it exists thanks to the sovereignty of God. If our minds and bodies are not for God's commission and not for the righteous cause of mankind, then our souls will be unworthy of those who were martyred for God's commission, much more unworthy of God, who has provided us with everything.

God created this world, He created this mankind, and moreover He was the architect of ancient Greek culture and human civilization. Only God consoles this mankind, and only God cares for this mankind night and day. Human development and progress is inseparable from the sovereignty of God, and the history and future of mankind are inextricable from the designs of God. If you are a true Christian, then you will surely believe that the rise and fall of any country or nation occurs according to the designs of God. God alone knows the fate of a country or nation, and God alone controls the course of this mankind. If mankind wishes to have a good fate, if a country wishes to have a good fate, then man must bow down to God in worship, repent and confess before God, or else the fate and destination of man will unavoidably end in catastrophe.

Look back to the time of Noah's ark: Mankind was deeply corrupt, had strayed from the blessing of God, was no longer cared for by God, and had lost the promises of God. They lived in darkness, without the light of God. Thus they became licentious by nature, abandoned themselves to hideous depravity. Such men could no longer receive the promise of God; they were unfit to witness the face of God, nor to hear the voice of God, for they had abandoned God, had cast aside all that He had bestowed upon them, and had forgotten the teachings of God. Their heart strayed farther and farther from God, and as it did, they became depraved beyond all reason and humanity, and became increasingly evil. Thus they came ever closer to death, and fell under the wrath and punishment of God. Only Noah worshiped God and shunned evil, and so he was able to hear the voice of God, and hear the instructions of God. He built the ark according to the instructions of God's word, and assembled all manner of living creatures. And in this way, once everything had been prepared, God unleashed His destruction upon the world. Only Noah and the seven members of his family survived the destruction, for Noah worshiped Jehovah and shunned evil.

Then look upon the present age: Such righteous men as Noah, who could worship God and shun evil, have ceased to exist. Yet God is still gracious toward this mankind, and absolves mankind during this final era. God seeks those who long for Him to appear. He seeks those who are able to hear His words, those who have not forgotten His commission and offer up their heart and body to Him. He seeks those who are as obedient as babes before Him, and do not resist Him. If you are unhindered by any force in your devotion to God, then God shall look upon you with favor, and shall bestow His blessings upon you. If you are of high station, of honorable reputation, possessed of abundant knowledge, the owner of plentiful assets, and supported by many people, yet these things do not prevent you from coming before God to accept His calling and His commission, to do what God asks of you, then all that you do shall be the most significant on earth and the most righteous of mankind. If you reject the call of God for the sake of status and your own goals, all that you do shall be cursed and even despised by God. Maybe you are a president, or a scientist, a pastor, or an elder, but no matter how high your office, if you rely on your knowledge and ability in your undertakings, then you shall always be a failure, and shall always be bereft of the blessings of God, because God accepts nothing that you do, and He does not grant that your career is a righteous one, or accept that you are working for the benefit of mankind. He will say that everything you do, is to use the knowledge and strength of mankind to divest man of the protection of God, and to deny the blessings of God. He will say that you are leading mankind toward darkness, toward death, and toward the start of an existence without limits in which man has lost God and His blessing.

From when man first had social sciences, the mind of man was occupied by science and knowledge. Then science and knowledge became tools for the ruling of mankind, and there was no longer sufficient room for man to worship God, and no more favorable conditions for the worship of God. The position of God sunk ever lower in the heart of man. A world in man's heart with no place for God is dark, empty without hope. And so arose many social scientists, historians, and politicians to express theories of social science, the theory of human evolution, and other theories that contravene the truth that God created man, to fill the heart and mind of man. And in this way, those who believe that God created everything become ever fewer, and those who believe in the theory of evolution become ever greater in number. More and more people treat records of the work of God and His words during the Old Testament age as myths and legends. In their hearts, people become indifferent to the dignity and greatness of God, to the tenet that God exists and holds dominion over all things. The survival of mankind and the fate of countries and nations are no longer important to them. Man lives in a hollow world only concerned with eating, drinking, and the pursuit of pleasure. ... Few people take it upon themselves to seek out where God does His work today, or to look for how He presides over and arranges the destination of man. And in this way, human civilization unconsciously becomes ever more incapable of meeting the wishes of man, and there are even many people who feel that, living in such a world, they are less happy than people who have gone. Even people of countries that used to be highly civilized air such grievances. For without the guidance of God, no matter how much rulers and sociologists wrack their brains to preserve human civilization, it is to no avail. No one can fill the emptiness in man's heart, for no one can be the life of man, and no social theory can free man from the emptiness with which he is afflicted. Science, knowledge, freedom, democracy, leisure, comfort, these are but a temporary respite. Even with these things, man will inevitably sin and bemoan the injustices of society. These things cannot allay man's craving and desire to explore. Because man was made by God and the senseless sacrifices and explorations of man can only lead to more distress. Man will exist in a constant state of fear, will not know how to face the future of mankind, or how to face the path that lies ahead. Man will even come to fear science and knowledge, and fear even more the feeling of emptiness within him. In this world, regardless of whether you live in a free country or one without human rights, you are utterly incapable of escaping the fate of mankind. Whether you are the ruler or the ruled, you are utterly incapable of escaping the desire to explore the fate, mysteries, and destination of mankind. Much less are you capable of escaping the bewildering sense of emptiness. Such phenomena, which are common to all of mankind, are called social phenomena by sociologists, yet no great man can come forth to solve such problems. Man, after all, is man. The position and life of God cannot be replaced by any man. Mankind does not just require a fair society in which everyone is well-fed and is equal and free, but the salvation of God and His provision of life to them. Only when man receives the salvation of God and His provision of life to them can the needs, yearning to explore, and spiritual emptiness of man be resolved. If the people of a country or a nation are unable to receive the salvation and care of God, then such a country or nation will tread the road to ruin, toward darkness, and shall be annihilated by God.

Perhaps your country currently prospers, but if you allow your people to stray from God, then your country shall find itself increasingly bereft of the blessings of God. The civilization of your country shall be increasingly trampled underfoot, and before long the people shall rise up against God and curse Heaven. And so the fate of a country shall be unwittingly brought to ruin. God shall raise up powerful countries to deal with those countries that have been cursed by God, and may even wipe them from the face of the earth. The rise and fall of a country or nation is predicated upon whether its rulers worship God, and whether they lead their people closer to God and to worship Him. And yet, in this final era, because those who truly seek and worship God are increasingly scarce, God bestows special favor upon countries in which Christianity is the state religion. He gathers them together to form the relatively righteous camp of the world, while atheistic countries or those which do not worship the true God become the opponents of the righteous camp. In this way, God not only has a place among mankind in which to conduct His work, but also gains countries that can exercise righteous authority, so as to impose sanctions and restrictions on those countries that resist God. Yet despite this, still there are not more people who come forward to worship God, because man has strayed too far from Him, and God has been absent from the thoughts of man for too long. There remain on earth only countries that exercise righteousness and resist unrighteousness. But this is far from the wishes of God, for no country's rulers will allow God to preside over their people, and no political party shall gather together its people to worship God; God has lost His rightful place in the heart of every country, nation, ruling party, and even in the heart of every person. Although righteous forces do exist in this world, rule in which God holds no place in the heart of man is fragile. Without the blessing of God, the political arena shall fall into disarray and become vulnerable to attack. For mankind, being without the blessing of God is like having no sunshine. Regardless of how assiduously rulers make contributions to their people, irrespective of how many righteous conferences mankind holds together, none of this shall turn things around or alter the fate of mankind. Man believes that a country in which people are fed and clothed, in which they live together peacefully, is a good country, and one with good leadership. But God does not think so. He believes that a country in which no one worships Him is one that He shall annihilate. Man's way of thinking is too much at odds with that of God. If the head of a country does not worship God, then the fate of this country shall be a tragic one, and the country shall have no destination.

God does not partake in the politics of man, yet the fate of a country or nation is controlled by God. God controls this world and the entire universe. The fate of man and the plan of God are intimately connected, and no man, country or nation is exempt from the sovereignty of God. If man wishes to know his fate, then he must come before God. God shall cause those who follow and worship Him to prosper, and shall bring decline and extinction upon those who resist and reject Him.

Recall the scene in the Bible when God wrought destruction upon Sodom, and think also of how Lot's wife became a pillar of salt. Think back to how the people of Nineveh repented their sins in sackcloth and ashes, and recall what followed after the Jews nailed Jesus to the cross 2,000 years ago. The Jews were expelled from Israel and fled to countries around the world. Many were killed, and the entire Jewish nation was subjected to unprecedented destruction. They had nailed God to the cross—committed a heinous crime—and provoked the disposition of God. They were made to pay for what they did, were made to bear the consequences of their actions. They condemned God, rejected God, and so they had but one fate: to be punished by God. This is the bitter consequence and disaster that their rulers brought upon their country and nation.

Today, God has returned to the world to do His work. His first stop is the grand assemblage of dictatorial rulers: China, the staunch bastion of atheism. God has gained a group of people by His wisdom and power. During the period, He is hunted by China's ruling party in every means and subjected to great suffering, with no place to rest His head and unable to find a shelter. Despite this, God still continues the work He intends to do: He utters His voice and spreads the gospel. None can fathom the almightiness of God. In China, a country that regards God as an enemy, God has never ceased His work. Instead, more people have accepted His work and word, for God does all He can to save each and every member of mankind. We trust that no country or power can stand in the way of what God wishes to achieve. Those that obstruct God's work, resist the word of God, disturb and impair the plan of God shall ultimately be punished by God. He who defies the work of God shall be sent to hell; any country that defies the work of God shall be destroyed; any nation that rises up to oppose the work of God shall be wiped from this earth, and shall cease to exist. I urge the people of all nations, countries, and even industries to listen to the voice of God, to behold the work of God, to pay attention to the fate of mankind, thus making God the most holy, the most honorable, the highest, and the only object of worship among mankind, and allowing the whole of mankind to live under the blessing of God, just as the descendants of Abraham lived under the promise of Jehovah, and just as Adam and Eve, who were originally made by God, lived in the Garden of Eden.

The work of God is like mightily surging waves. No one can detain Him, and no one can halt His footsteps. Only those who listen carefully to His words, and who seek and thirst for Him, can follow His footsteps and receive His promise. Those who do not shall be subjected to overwhelming disaster and deserved punishment.

BEHOLDING THE APPEARANCE OF GOD IN HIS JUDGMENT AND CHASTISEMENT

Like hundreds of millions of other followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, we abide by the laws and commandments of the Bible, enjoy the abundant grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and gather together, pray, praise, and serve in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ—and all this we do under the care and protection of the Lord. We are often weak, and often strong. We believe that all of our actions are in accordance with the teachings of the Lord. It goes without saying, then, that we also believe ourselves to walk the path of obedience to the will of the Father in heaven. We long for the return of the Lord Jesus, for the glorious arrival of the Lord Jesus, for the end of our life on earth, for the appearance of the kingdom, and for everything as it was foretold in the Book of Revelation: The Lord arrives, and brings disaster, and rewards the good and punishes the wicked, and takes all those who follow Him and welcome His return into the air to meet Him. Every time we think of this, we can't help but be overcome with emotion. We are thankful that we were born in the last days and are lucky enough to witness the coming of the Lord. Though we have suffered persecution, it is in return for "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory"; what a blessing that is! All of this longing and the grace bestowed by the Lord make us often sober unto prayer, and bring us together more often. Maybe next year, maybe tomorrow, or maybe even sooner when man does not expect it, the Lord shall suddenly arrive, and shall appear among a group of people who have been attentively waiting for Him. We are all contending with each other, none wanting to fall behind, in order to be the first group to behold the appearance of the Lord, to become one of those who shall be raptured. We have given everything, regardless of the cost, for the coming of this day. Some have given up their jobs, some have abandoned their families, some have renounced marriage, and some have even donated all of their savings. What selfless devotion! Such sincerity and loyalty must be beyond even the saints of ages past! As the Lord bestows grace upon whomever He wishes, and has mercy on whomever He wishes, our devotion and spending, we believe, have already been beheld by His eyes. So, too, have our heartfelt prayers already reached His ears, and we trust that the Lord will reward us for our devotion. Moreover, God was graceful toward us before He created the world, and none shall take away God's blessings and promises to us. We are all planning for the future, and take it for granted that our devotion and spending are bargaining chips or stock for our rapture into the air to meet the Lord. What's more, without the slightest hesitation, we place ourselves on the future throne, presiding over all nations and all peoples, or ruling as kings. All this we take as a given, as something to be expected.

We disdain all those who are against the Lord Jesus; in the end, they will all be annihilated. Who told them not to believe that the Lord Jesus is the Savior? Of course, there are times when we learn from the Lord Jesus and are compassionate toward the world, for they do not understand, and we should be tolerant and forgiving of them. Everything that we do is in accordance with the words of the Bible, for everything that does not conform to the Bible is heresy, and an evil cult. Such belief is deeply embedded in each of our minds. Our Lord is in the Bible, and if we do not depart from the Bible we shall not depart from the Lord; if we abide by this principle, then we shall be saved. We spur each other on, and support each other, and every time we gather together we hope that everything we say and do is in accordance with the will of the Lord, and can be accepted by the Lord. Despite the severe hostility of our environment, our hearts are filled with joy. When we think of the blessings that are within such easy reach, is there nothing we cannot forsake? Is there nothing we cannot bear to part with? All of this is implicit, and all of this is looked upon by the eyes of God. We, the handful of the needy who have been lifted from the dunghill, are the same as all ordinary followers of the Lord Jesus: We dream of rapture, and of being blessed, and of ruling all the nations. Our corruption is laid bare in the eyes of God, and our desires and greed are condemned in the eyes of God. Yet all of this happens so unremarkably, so logically, and none of us wonder whether our longing is right, much less do any of us doubt the accuracy of all that we hold to. Who can know God's will? We do not know to seek, or explore, or even concern ourselves with the path that man walks. For we only care about whether we can be raptured, whether we can be blessed, whether there is a place for us in the kingdom of heaven, and whether we shall have a share of the water of the river of life and the fruit of the tree of life. Do we not believe in the Lord, and are we not followers of the Lord, for the sake of gaining these things? Our sins have been forgiven, we have repented, we have drunk the bitter cup of wine, and we have put the cross upon our back. Who can say that the price we have paid will not be accepted by the Lord? Who can say that we have not prepared enough oil? We don't want to be those foolish virgins, or one of those who are forsaken. Moreover, we pray often, and ask the Lord to keep us from being deceived by false Christs, for it is said in the Bible that "Then if any man shall say to you, See, here is Christ, or there; believe it not. For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; so that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect" (Matthew 24:23-24). We have all committed these verses of the Bible to memory, we know them back to front, and we see them as precious treasure, as life, and as the credentials for our rapture and salvation....

For thousands of years, the living have passed away, taking their longings and dreams with them, and no one truly knows whether they have gone to the kingdom of heaven. The dead return, and they have forgotten all the stories that once occurred, and still follow the teachings and the paths of the forefathers. And so, as the years pass and the days go by, no one knows whether our Lord Jesus, our God, truly accepts all that we do. We simply look forward to an outcome and speculate about all that will happen. Yet God has kept His silence throughout, and has never appeared to us, or spoken to us. And so we willfully judge God's will and disposition according to the Bible and the signs. We have become accustomed to the silence of God; we have become accustomed to measuring the rights and wrongs of our behavior using our own way of thinking; we have become accustomed to using our knowledge, conceptions, and moral ethics to replace God's demands of us; we have become accustomed to enjoying the grace of God; we have become accustomed to God providing assistance whenever we need it; we have become accustomed to holding out our hands to God for all things, and to ordering God about; we have also become accustomed to following doctrine, not paying attention to how the Holy Spirit leads us; moreover, we have become accustomed to days in which we are our own master. We believe in a God such as this, whom we have never met. Questions such as what His disposition is like, what His possessions and being are, what His image is like, whether or not we will know Him when He comes, and so on—none of these are important. What's important is that He is in our hearts, that we all await Him, and that we are able to imagine what He is like. We appreciate our faith, and treasure our spirituality. We consider everything as dung, and tread all things underfoot. Because we are the followers of the glorious Lord, no matter how long and arduous the journey, no matter what hardships and dangers befall us, nothing can halt our footsteps as we follow the Lord. "A pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeded out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. On either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bore twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations. And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him: And they shall see his face; and his name shall be in their foreheads. And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God gives them light: and they shall reign for ever and ever" (Revelation 22:1-5). Every time we sing these words, our hearts brim with surpassing joy and satisfaction, and tears flow from our eyes. Thanks be to the Lord for choosing us, thanks be to the Lord for His grace. He has given us a hundredfold now in this time, has given us eternal life in the world to come, and if He asked us to die now, we would do so without the slightest complaint. Lord! Please come soon! Do not delay a minute longer, for we desperately yearn for You, and have forsaken everything for You.

God is silent, and has never appeared to us, yet His work has never stopped. He looks upon all lands, and commands all things, and beholds all the words and deeds of man. His management is conducted in steps and according to His plan. It proceeds silently, without dramatic effect, yet His footsteps advance ever closer to mankind, and His judgment seat is deployed in the universe at the speed of lightning, immediately followed by the descent of His throne among us. What a majestic scene that is, what a stately and solemn tableau. Like a dove, and like a roaring lion, the Spirit arrives among us all. He is wise, He is righteous and majestic, He quietly arrives among us possessed of authority and filled with love and compassion. No one is aware of His arrival, no one welcomes His arrival, and, moreover, no one knows all that He will do. Man's life remains unchanged; his heart is no different, and the days go by as usual. God lives among us like an ordinary person, as a most insignificant follower and an ordinary believer. He has His own pursuits, His own goals, and, moreover, He has divinity not possessed by ordinary men. No one has noticed the existence of His divinity, and no one has perceived the difference between His substance and that of man. We live together with Him, unconstrained and unafraid, for we see Him as nothing more than an insignificant believer. He watches our every move, and all of our thoughts and ideas are laid bare before Him. No one takes an interest in His existence, no one has any imagination of His function, and, moreover, no one has any suspicion about who He is. We merely continue our pursuits, as if He has nothing to do with us....

By chance, the Holy Spirit expresses a passage of words “through” Him, and though it feels very unexpected, we recognize that this is the utterance of God, and we readily accept it from God. That is because, regardless of who expresses these words, as long as they come from the Holy Spirit we should accept them, and cannot deny them. The next utterance could be through me, it could be through you, or it could be through him. Regardless of who it is, all is the grace of God. Yet no matter who the person is, we should not worship them, for regardless of anything else, they cannot possibly be God; we can by no means choose an ordinary person such as this to be our God. Our God is so great and honorable; how could He be represented by someone so insignificant? What’s more, we are all awaiting the arrival of God to take us back to the kingdom of heaven, and so how could someone so insignificant be qualified for such an important and arduous task? If the Lord comes again, it must be upon a white cloud, visible to all. How glorious that will be! How could He quietly hide among an ordinary group of people?

And yet it is this ordinary person hidden among people who is doing the new work of saving us. He does not clarify anything for us, nor does He tell us why He has come. He merely does the work He intends to do in steps, and according to His plan. His words and utterances become ever more frequent. From consoling, exhorting, reminding, and warning, to reproaching and disciplining; from a tone that is gentle and kind, to words that are fierce and majestic—they all instill both compassion and trepidation in man. Everything that He says hits home at the secrets hidden deep within us, His words sting our hearts, sting our spirits, and leave us ashamed and humiliated. We begin to wonder whether the God in this person’s heart really loves us, and what exactly He intends to do. Perhaps we can only be raptured after enduring such pain? In our heads we are calculating ... about the destination to come, and about our future fate. Still none of us believes that God has assumed flesh and works among us. Even though He has been with us for so long, even though He has already spoken so many words face to face with us, we are still unwilling to accept someone so ordinary as the God of our future, much less are we willing to entrust control of our future and fate to someone so insignificant. From Him we enjoy an unending supply of living water, and thanks to Him we live face-to-face with God. We are only thankful for the grace of the Lord Jesus in heaven, and have never paid any attention to the feelings of this ordinary person who is possessed of divinity. He still does His work humbly hidden in the flesh, expressing His heart's voice, seemingly insensible to mankind's rejection of Him, apparently eternally forgiving of man's childishness and ignorance, and forever tolerant of man's irreverence toward Him.

Unbeknownst to us, this insignificant man has led us into step after step of God's work. We undergo countless trials, are subjected to innumerable chastenings, and tested by death. We learn of God's righteous and majestic disposition, enjoy, too, His love and compassion, come to appreciate God's great power and wisdom, witness the loveliness of God, and behold God's eager desire to save man. In the words of this ordinary person, we come to know the disposition and substance of God, come to understand God's will, come to know the nature and substance of man, and see the way of salvation and perfection. His words cause us to die, and cause us to be reborn; His words bring us comfort, yet also leave us wracked with guilt and a sense of indebtedness; His words bring us joy and peace, but also great pain. Sometimes we are as lambs to the slaughter in His hands; sometimes we are like the apple of His eye, and enjoy His love and affection; sometimes we are like His enemy, turned to ashes by His wrath in His eyes. We are the mankind saved by Him, we are the maggots in His eyes, and we are the lost lambs that He thinks of finding day and night. He is merciful toward us, He despises us, He raises us up, He comforts and exhorts us, He guides us, He enlightens us, He chastens and disciplines us, and He even curses us. He worries for us night and day, He protects and cares for us night and day, He never leaves our side, and He devotes all His care to us and pays any price for us. Among the words of this small and ordinary flesh, we have enjoyed the entirety of God, and beheld the destination that God has bestowed upon us. Yet despite this, vanity still stalks within our hearts, and we are still unwilling to actively accept a person such as this as our God. Though He has given us so much manna, so much to enjoy, none of this can usurp the Lord's place in our hearts. We honor this person's special identity and status only with great reluctance. If He does not speak up to make us acknowledge that He is God, then we will never take it upon ourselves to acknowledge Him as the God that is soon to arrive yet has been working among us for so long.

The utterance of God continues, and He employs various methods and perspectives to admonish us what to do and express His heart's voice. His words carry life power, and show us the way we should walk, and allow us to understand what the truth is. We start to be drawn to His words, we begin to focus on the tone and manner of His speaking, and subconsciously begin to take an interest in the heart's voice of this unremarkable person. He makes painstaking efforts for us, loses sleep and appetite for us, weeps for us, sighs for us, groans in sickness for us, suffers humiliation for the sake of our destination and salvation, and His heart bleeds and sheds tears for our numbness and rebelliousness. Such being and possessions of His are beyond an ordinary person, and cannot be possessed or attained by any of the corrupted. He has tolerance and patience possessed by no ordinary person, and His love is not possessed by any created being. No one apart from Him can know all of our thoughts, or have such a grasp of our nature and substance, or judge the rebelliousness and corruption of mankind, or speak to us and work among us like this on behalf of the God of heaven. No one except for Him can possess the authority, wisdom, and dignity of God; the disposition of God and what He has and is are issued forth, in their entirety, from Him. No one apart from Him can show us the way and bring us light. No one apart from Him can reveal the mysteries God has not disclosed from creation until today. No one apart from Him can save us from Satan's bondage and our corrupt disposition. He represents God, and expresses the heart's voice of God, the exhortations of God, and the words of judgment of God toward all mankind. He has begun a new age, a new era, and brought a new heaven and earth, new work, and He has brought us hope, and ended the life we led in vagueness, and allowed us to fully behold the path of salvation. He has conquered our whole being, and gained our hearts. From that moment onward, our minds become conscious, and our spirits seem to be revived: This ordinary, insignificant person, who lives among us and has long been rejected by us—is He not the Lord Jesus, who is ever in our thoughts, and whom we long for night and day? It is He! It's really Him! He is our God! He is the truth, the way, and the life! He has allowed us to live again, to see the light, and has stopped our hearts from wandering. We have returned to the home of God, we have returned before His throne, we are face-to-face with Him, we have witnessed His countenance, and have seen the road ahead. At the time, our hearts have been completely conquered by Him; we no longer doubt who He is, and no longer oppose His work and word, and we fall down, completely, before Him. We wish for nothing except to follow the footprints of God for the rest of our lives, and to be made perfect by Him, and to repay His grace, and repay His love for us, and to obey His orchestrations and arrangements, and to cooperate with His work, and to do everything we can to complete what He entrusts to us.

Being conquered by God is like a martial arts contest.

Each of God's words strikes at our mortal spot, and leaves us sorrowful and afraid. He reveals our notions, reveals our imaginations, and reveals our corrupt disposition. Through all that we say and do, and every one of our thoughts and ideas, our nature and substance are revealed by His words, leaving us humiliated and trembling with fear. He tells us of all of our actions, our aims and intentions, and even the corrupt disposition that we have never discovered, making us feel we are thoroughly exposed, and even more feel completely convinced. He judges us for our opposition to Him, chastises us for our blasphemy and condemnation of Him, and makes us feel that in His eyes we are worthless, and we are the living Satan. Our hopes are dashed, we no longer dare to make any unreasonable demands and attempts upon Him, and even our dreams vanish overnight. This is a fact that none of us can imagine, and which none of us can accept. For a moment, our minds become unbalanced, and we do not know how to continue on the road ahead, do not know how to continue in our beliefs. It seems like our faith has gone back to square one, and that we have never met and been acquainted with the Lord Jesus. Everything before our eyes perplexes us, and makes us feel as if we have been cast adrift. We are dismayed, we are disappointed, and deep in our hearts there is insuppressible anger and disgrace. We try to vent, try to find a way out, and, what's more, we attempt to continue waiting for our Savior Jesus, and pour our hearts out to Him. Though there are times when we are neither haughty nor humble on the outside, in our hearts we are afflicted with a sense of loss like never before. Though sometimes we may seem unusually calm on the outside, inside we endure rolling seas of torment. His judgment and chastisement have stripped us of all our hopes and dreams, have left us without our extravagant desires, and unwilling to believe that He is our Savior and capable of saving us. His judgment and chastisement have opened up a deep gulf between us and Him and no one is even willing to cross. His judgment and chastisement are the first time that we suffer such a great setback and such great humiliation. His judgment and chastisement have allowed us to truly appreciate God's honor and intolerance of man's offense, compared to which we are so lowly and impure. His judgment and chastisement have made us realize for the first time how arrogant and pompous we are, and how man will never be the equal of God, or on a par with God. His judgment and chastisement have made us yearn to no longer live in such a corrupt disposition, and have made us long to rid ourselves of such nature and substance as soon as possible, and no longer be detested by Him and disgusting to Him. His judgment and chastisement have made us happy to obey His words, and no longer willing to rebel against His orchestrations and arrangements. His judgment and chastisement have once more given us the desire to seek life, and have made us happy to accept Him as our Savior.... We have walked out of the work of conquest, stepped out of hell, stepped out of the valley of the shadow of death.... Almighty God has gained us, this group of people! He has triumphed over Satan, and defeated all of His enemies!

We are just such an ordinary group of people possessed of corrupt satanic disposition, we are the ones predestined by God before the ages, and we are the needy whom God has lifted from the dunghill. We once rejected and condemned God, yet now we have been conquered by Him. We have received life and have received the way of eternal life from God. No matter where we are on earth, despite persecution and tribulation, we cannot be apart from the salvation by Almighty God. For He is our Creator, and our only redemption!

The love of God extends forth like the water of a spring, and is given to you, and to me, and to him, and to all those who truly seek the truth and await the appearance of God.

Just as the moon always follows the sun, the work of God never ceases, and is carried out upon you, upon me, upon him, and upon all those who follow the footprints of God and accept the judgment and chastisement of God.

PART ONE

GOD'S UTTERANCES TO THE ENTIRE UNIVERSE

INTRODUCTION

“God’s Utterances to the Entire Universe” are utterances expressed by Christ, in which He employs the identity of God Himself. They cover the period from February 20, 1992 to June 1, 1992, and are comprised of a total of forty-seven utterances. In this portion of utterances, God expresses His words from the perspective of the Spirit. The manner in which He speaks is unattainable by created mankind. Moreover, the vocabulary and style of His words are beautiful and moving, and no form of human literature could take their place. The words with which He exposes man are accurate, they are irrefutable by any philosophy, and they bring all people into submission. Like a sharp sword, the words with which He judges man cut straight to the depths of people’s souls, even leaving them with no place to hide. The words with which He comforts people carry mercy and lovingkindness, they are warm as a loving mother’s embrace, and they make people feel secure as never before. The single greatest characteristic of these utterances is that, during this stage, God does not speak using the identity of Jehovah or Jesus Christ, nor of Christ of the last days. Instead, using His inherent identity—the Creator—He speaks to and teaches all those who follow Him and have yet to follow Him. It is fair to say that this was the first time since the creation that God had addressed all mankind. Never before had God spoken to created mankind in such detail and so systematically. Of course, this was also the first time He had spoken so much, and for so long, to all mankind. It was totally unprecedented. What’s more, these utterances were the first text expressed by God among mankind in which He exposed people, guided them, judged them, and spoke heart-to-heart to them and so, too, were they the first utterances in which God let people know His footsteps, the place in which He lies, God’s disposition, what God has and is, God’s thoughts, and His concern for mankind. It can be said that these were the first utterances that God had spoken to mankind from the third heaven since the creation, and the first time that God had used His inherent identity to appear and express His voice to mankind amid words.

The utterances are profound and unfathomable; they are not easy to understand, nor is it possible to grasp the origins and purposes of God’s words. Thus, Christ has added an explanation after each utterance, using language that is easy for man to comprehend to bring clarity to the greater part of the utterances. This, combined with the utterances themselves, makes it easier for everyone to understand and know God's words. We have made these words an appendix to "God's Utterances to the Entire Universe." In them, Christ provides explanations using the most easy to understand wording. The combination of the two is the perfect marrying of divinity and God in humanity. Although God speaks in the perspective of the third person in the appendix, no one can deny that these words were personally uttered by God, for no human can explain God's words clearly; only God Himself can elucidate the origins and purposes of His utterances. Thus, although God speaks using many means, the aims of His work never change, nor does the objective of His plan ever alter.

Although "God's Utterances to the Entire Universe" ends with an utterance in which God parts with man, in fact, this was when God's work of conquest and salvation among man, and His work of making people perfect, was officially unveiled. Thus, it is more suitable for us to regard "God's Utterances to the Entire Universe" as the prophecy of God's work of the last days. For only after this point did the incarnate Son of man officially begin to work and speak using the identity of Christ, walking among the churches and providing life, and watering and shepherding all His people—which gave rise to the many utterances in "The Words of the Son of Man Incarnate as He Walked in the Churches."

THE FIRST UTTERANCE

Do those who witness My words really accept them? Do you really know Me? Have you truly learned obedience? Do you sincerely expend yourselves for Me? Have you really borne strong, unyielding witness to Me in the face of the great red dragon? Does your devotion truly humiliate the great red dragon? Only through the trial of My words can I achieve My goal of purifying the church and choosing those who truly love Me. For how else could anyone understand Me? Who can understand My majesty, My wrath, and My wisdom through My words? I will finish what I have started, but still it is I who measures the hearts of men. In truth, no man fully understands Me, so I guide them with words, and lead them into a new era this way. In the end I will complete all of My work through My words, and bring those who truly love Me back to My kingdom, to live before My throne. The situation is not what it once was, and My work has entered a new starting point. That being so, there will be a new approach: Those who read My word and accept it as their very life are the people of My kingdom. Since they are in My kingdom, they are My people in the kingdom. Because they are guided by My words, although they are referred to as My people, this title is not at all inferior to being called My “sons.” As My people, all must be faithful in My kingdom and fulfill their duties, and those who offend My administrative decrees must receive My punishment. This is My warning to all.

As now a new approach is used, all that from the past need not be said again. However, I have said these words: What I have said must be counted, what is counted must be completed, and this cannot be changed by anyone; this is absolute. Whether it be what I have said in the past or what I say in the future, all will come to be, and all of mankind will see this. This is the principle behind the work of My words. As the construction of the church has already been achieved, it is now no longer the era of church building, but rather the era in which the kingdom is successfully built. However, as you are still on earth, your assemblies will remain known as the church. Nevertheless, the essence of the church is not the same as it once was, and it has shown true success. Therefore, I say My kingdom has descended to earth. None can grasp the root of My words, nor can they understand the purpose behind them. As I speak today, you may experience an epiphany. Perhaps some will burst out weeping; others may feel afraid that this is the way that I speak. Some may maintain an old-fashioned perspective to My every action; some may regret their complaints or resistance to Me; some may inwardly rejoice, for they have never strayed from My name, and now today are revived; perhaps some people were rattled by My words long ago, and they hover between life and death, dispirited and downcast, and no longer have the heart to hear the words I speak even if I choose a different manner of expression. There may be some who are so devoted to Me that they have never complained, never doubted, and today are fortunate enough to gain release and feel gratitude in their hearts toward Me that is beyond words. Everyone falls under these categories to varying degrees. But as the past is the past, and now is the present, there is no need to long for the past any longer, or to worry about the future. Among men, those who go against reality and do not do things according to My guidance will not come to a good end, and will only bring trouble upon themselves. Of everything that occurs in the universe, there is nothing that I do not have the final say in. What exists that is not in My hands? All that I say goes, and among men, who is there who can change My mind? Could it be the covenant I made on the earth? Nothing can hinder My plan; I am ever-present in My work as well as in the plan of My management. What man can interfere? Is it not I who has personally made these arrangements? Entering into this situation today, it still does not stray from My plan or what I foresaw; it was all determined by Me long ago. Who among you can fathom My plan for this step? My people will listen to My voice, and each and every one of those who truly loves Me shall return before My throne.

THE SECOND UTTERANCE

Following the undertaking of the new approach, there will be new steps in My work. As it is in the kingdom, I will do things directly through divinity, leading every step of the way, precise to the finest detail, and absolutely free of any adulteration with human intentions. The following outlines the ways of actual practice: As it is through hardship and refinement that they have earned the title of the “people,” and as they are the people of My kingdom, I must hold them to stringent requirements, which are higher than the methods of My work for previous generations. It is not only the reality of words, but even more importantly it is the reality of practice, and this must first be achieved. In all words and deeds, they must meet the standards required of the people of the kingdom, and any offenders will immediately be removed, to avoid shame coming to My name. However, those ignorant who cannot see clearly, and cannot understand are an exception. In the construction of My kingdom, pay attention to eating and drinking the words I speak, understand My wisdom, and corroborate through My work. Whoever pays mind to the words of a book that is not Mine is absolutely unwanted by Me; this is a harlot who is defiant of Me. As an apostle, one must not dwell at home for too long. If this cannot be done, I will discard and no longer use him. I do not force him. Since apostles are not at home for long, it is through spending long periods of time in the church that they are edified. Of every two assemblies of the churches, apostles must participate at least once. So, co-workers' assemblies must become regular (co-workers' assemblies include: all apostle assemblies, all church leader assemblies, and all assemblies for saints who have clear insight). At least some of you must attend each assembly, and apostles only pay attention to watching over the churches. The requirements previously made of saints have become more profound. For those who had committed offenses before I bore witness to My name, due to their devotion to Me, I will still use them once they have been tested by Me. However, for those who commit an offense again after My testimony and are determined to turn over a new leaf, such people only remain within the church. Still, they cannot be careless and wanton, but rather must be more constrained than others. As for those who do not mend their ways after I have uttered My voice, My Spirit will leave them immediately, and the church will have the right to carry out My judgment, and make them leave the church. This is absolute, and there can be no extra room for consideration. If one collapses in the trial, that is, he leaves, no one should pay any mind to that person, so as to avoid testing Me and allowing Satan to enter the church in madness. This is My judgment of him. Whoever does unrighteousness and acts based on their emotions will also not be numbered among My people, not just the one who defected. Another function of apostles is to focus on spreading the gospel. Of course, saints can also do this work, but they must be wise in doing so, and must refrain from stirring up trouble. The above are the current ways of practice. Also, as a reminder, you must pay attention to making your sermons more profound, so that all may enter the reality of My words. You must closely follow My words, and make it so all people may understand them clearly, and unambiguously. This is most crucial. Those among My people who harbor thoughts of betrayal must be expelled, and must not be allowed to stay long in My house, lest they bring insult to My name.

THE THIRD UTTERANCE

Since you are called My people, things are not as they used to be; you should listen to and obey the utterances of My Spirit, closely follow My work, and may not separate My Spirit and My flesh, for We are inherently one, and are not apart. Whosoever divides the Spirit and the person, cherishing either the person or the Spirit, shall suffer loss, and will only be able to drink from their own bitter cup—and that's all there is to say. Only those who are able to look upon the Spirit and the person as an inseparable whole shall have an ample knowledge of Me, and only then can changes gradually occur in the life contained within them. So that the next step of My work may proceed smoothly and without hindrance, I employ the refinement of words to test all those who are in My house, using the method of working to test those who follow Me. Under these circumstances, it is fair to say that they all lose hope; as people, there is not one among them whose conditions are not negative and passive, as if their entire space has changed. Some people rail against Heaven and earth; some, in their despair, still bite the bullet and accept the test of My words; some look to the skies and sigh deeply, tears filling their eyes, as if distraught by the untimely demise of a newborn infant; some even feel there is shame in living thus, and pray for God to take them away soon; some spend all day in a daze, as if they've just been seriously ill and have yet to come to their senses; some, after complaining, quietly leave; and some still praise Me from their own place, yet are still a little negative. Today, when all has been revealed, I need speak no more of the past; of greater importance is that you should still be capable of the utmost loyalty from the place I give you today, so that all you do meets My approval, and all you say is the product of My enlightenment and illumination, and ultimately what you live out is My image, is completely the manifestation of Me.

My words are released and expressed at any time or place, and so, too, should you know yourselves before Me at all times. For today is, after all, unlike what came before, and you can no longer accomplish whatever you wish. Instead, you must, under the guidance of My words, be capable of subduing your body, you must use My words as a mainstay, and must not act recklessly. All the paths to real practice for the church can be found in My words. Those who do not act according to My words directly offend My Spirit, and I shall destroy them. Since things have come as far as today, you need not feel too aggrieved and regretful about your deeds and actions of the past. My magnanimity is as boundless as the seas and the sky—could it be that the extent of man's action and knowledge of Me is not as familiar to Me as the back of My own hand? Who among man is not in My hands? Do you think I know nothing of how great your stature is, do you believe Me totally ignorant of this? That is impossible! Thus, when all people are at their most despairing, when they can wait no longer and wish to start anew, when they want to ask Me what is going on, when some indulge in dissipation and some want to revolt, when some are still loyally doing service, I begin the second part of the era of judgment: purifying and judging My people. Which is to say, I officially begin to train My people, allowing you to not only bear beautiful testimony to Me, but, moreover, to achieve beautiful victory in battle for Me from the seat of My people.

At all times, My people must be on guard against the cunning schemes of Satan, protecting the gate of My house for Me, able to support each other and provide to each other, which will stop you falling into Satan's trap, at which time it will be too late for regrets. Why am I training you with such urgency? Why do I tell you the facts of the spiritual world? Why do I remind and exhort you time and time again? Have you ever given this any thought? Have you ever figured it out? Thus, you not only need to be able to become seasoned based upon the foundation of the past, but, moreover, to expel the impurities within you under the guidance of the words of today, allowing each of My words to take root and blossom within your spirits, and more importantly, to bear more fruit. That's because what I ask for is not bright, lush flowers, but bounteous fruit—fruit, what's more, that does not go bad. Do you understand the true meaning of My words? Although the flowers in a greenhouse are as innumerable as the stars, and draw all the tourists, once they have wilted, they become as tattered as the deceitful schemes of Satan, and no one shows any interest in them. But for those who have been buffeted by the winds and scorched by the sun and bear testimony to Me, although these flowers are not pretty, once they have withered there comes fruit, for this is My requirement. When I speak these words, how much do you understand? Once the flowers have wilted and borne fruit, and once all of this fruit can be provided for My enjoyment, I shall conclude all of My work on earth, and shall begin enjoying the crystallization of My wisdom!

THE FOURTH UTTERANCE

All of My people who serve before Me should think back on the past: Was your love for Me tainted by impurity? Was your loyalty to Me pure and wholehearted? Was your knowledge of Me true? How much of a place did I hold within your hearts? Did I fill their entirety? How much did My words accomplish within you? Don't take Me for a fool! These things are perfectly clear to Me! Today, as the voice of My salvation is uttered forth, has there been some increase in your love for Me? Has part of your loyalty to Me become pure? Has your knowledge of Me deepened? Did the praise of the past lay a solid foundation for your knowledge today? How much of your inside is occupied by My Spirit? How much of a place does My image hold within you? Have My utterances struck you at your Achilles' heel? Do you truly feel that you have nowhere to hide your shame? Do you truly believe that you are unqualified to be My people? If you are completely oblivious to the questions above, then this shows that you are fishing in murky waters, that you are only there to make up the numbers, and at the time preordained by Me, you will surely be eliminated and cast into the bottomless pit for a second time. These are My words of warning, and any who take them lightly will be struck by My judgment, and, at the appointed time, will be assailed by disaster. Is this not so? Do I still need to provide examples to illustrate this? Must I speak more plainly to provide an exemplar for you? From the time of creation until today, many people have disobeyed My words and thus been cast out and eliminated from My stream of recovery; ultimately, their bodies perish and their spirits are cast into Hades, and even today they are still subjected to grievous punishment. Many people have followed My words, but they have gone against My enlightenment and illumination, and have thus been kicked aside by Me, falling under the domain of Satan and becoming those who oppose Me. (Today all those who directly oppose Me obey only the superficialities of My words, and disobey the substance of My words.) There have been many, too, who have merely listened to the words I spoke yesterday, who have held on to the junk of the past and not treasured the produce of the present day. These people have not only been taken captive by Satan, but have become eternal sinners and become My enemies, and they directly oppose Me. Such people are the objects of My judgment at the height of My wrath, and today they are still blind, still within the dark dungeons (which is to say, such people are rotten, benumbed corpses that are controlled by Satan; because their eyes have been veiled by Me, I say that they are blind). It would be well to provide an example for your reference, so that you can learn from it:

At the mention of Paul, you will think of his history, and of some of the stories about him that are inaccurate and out of line with reality. He was taught by his parents from a young age, and received My life, and as a result of My predestination he was possessed of the caliber that I require. At the age of 19, he read various books about life; thus I do not need to go into detail about how, because of his caliber, and because of My enlightenment and illumination, he could not only speak with some insight about spiritual matters, but was also able to grasp My intentions. Of course, this does not exclude the combination of internal and external factors. Nevertheless, his one imperfection was that, because of his talents, he would often be glib and boastful. As a result, due to his disobedience, part of which directly represented the archangel, when I became flesh for the first time, he made every effort to defy Me. He was one of those who do not know My words, and My place in his heart had already vanished. Such people directly oppose My divinity, and are struck down by Me, and only bow down and confess their sins at the very end. Hence, after I had utilized his strong points—which is to say, after he had worked for Me for a period of time—he once more fell into his old ways, and although he did not disobey My words directly, he disobeyed My inner guidance and enlightenment, and thus all that he had done in the past was futile; in other words, the crown of glory he spoke of had become empty words, a product of his own imagination, for even today he is still subjected to My judgment amid My bonds.

From the example above it can be seen that whoever opposes Me (by opposing not only My fleshly self but more importantly, My words and My Spirit—which is to say, My divinity), receives My judgment in their flesh. When My Spirit leaves you, you plummet downward, descending directly into Hades. And although your fleshly body is upon earth, you are like someone suffering from mental illness: You have lost your reason, and immediately feel as if you are a corpse, such that you beg Me to terminate your flesh without delay. Most of you who are possessed of the spirit have a deep appreciation of these circumstances, and I need not go into further detail. In the past, when I worked in normal humanity, most people had already measured themselves against My wrath and majesty, and already knew a little of My wisdom and disposition. Today, I speak and act directly in divinity, and there are still some people who will see My wrath and judgment with their own eyes; moreover, the main work of the second part of the era of judgment is to make all of My people know My deeds in the flesh directly, and to make all of you behold My disposition directly. Yet because I am in the flesh, I am considerate of your weaknesses. My hope is that you do not treat your spirit, soul and body as playthings, insouciantly dedicating them to Satan. It is better to treasure all that you have, and to not treat it like a game, for such things relate to your fate. Are you really able to understand the true meaning of My words? Are you really capable of being considerate of My true feelings?

Are you willing to enjoy My blessings on earth, blessings that are akin to those in heaven? Are you willing to treat the understanding of Me, and the enjoyment of My words and the knowledge of Me, as the most valuable and meaningful things in your life? Are you truly able to fully submit to Me, without thought to your own prospects? Are you truly able to allow yourselves to be put to death by Me, and led by Me, like a sheep? Are there any among you capable of achieving such things? Could it be that all who are accepted by Me and receive My promises are the ones who gain My blessings? Have you understood anything from these words? If I test you, can you truly put yourselves at My mercy, and, in the midst of these trials, search for My intentions and perceive My heart? I do not wish for you to be able to speak many touching words, or tell many exciting stories; rather, I ask that you are able to bear fine testimony to Me, and that you can fully and deeply enter into reality. If I did not speak directly, could you forsake everything around you and allow yourself to be used by Me? Is this not the reality that I require? Who is able to grasp the meaning in My words? Yet I ask that you no longer be weighed down by misgivings, that you be proactive in your entry and grasp the substance of My words. This will prevent you misunderstanding My words, and being unclear as to My meaning, and thus violating My administrative decrees. I hope that you grasp My intentions for you in My words. Think no more of your own prospects, and act as you have resolved before Me that all should be at the mercy of God. All of those who stand within My household should do as much as they possibly can; you should offer the best of yourself to the last section of My work on earth. Are you truly willing to put such things into practice?

THE FIFTH UTTERANCE

When My Spirit gives voice, it expresses the whole of My disposition. Are you clear on this? To be unclear on this point would be tantamount to opposing Me directly. Have you truly seen the importance that lies herein? Do you really know how much effort, how much energy, I expend on you? Do you really dare to lay bare what you have done before Me? And you have the nerve to call yourselves My people to My face—you have no sense of shame, still less any reason! Sooner or later, people like this will be expelled from My house. Don't you come the old soldier with Me, thinking that you have stood for My testimony! Is this something that humanity is capable of doing? If nothing remained of your intentions and your goals, you would long since have struck out on a different path. Do you think I don't know how much the human heart can hold? From this time forth, in all things you must enter into the reality of practice; merely flapping your gums, as you used to do, will no longer get you by. In the past, most of you managed to sponge under My roof; the fact that you are able to stand firm today is entirely due to the severity of My words. Do you think that My words are randomly spoken without an object? Impossible! I look down upon all things from on high, and exercise dominion over all things from on high. In the same way, I have sent forth My salvation over the earth. There is never a moment when I am not watching, from My secret place, humanity's every move, everything they say and do. Humanity is to Me an open book: I see and know them one and all. The secret place is My abode, and the empyrean the bed on which I lie. Satan's forces cannot reach unto Me, for I am overflowing with majesty, righteousness, and judgment. An ineffable mystery resides in My words. When I am speaking, you become like fowls that have just been cast into water, overwhelmed with confusion, or babies who have just had a fright, seeming to know nothing, because your spirit has fallen into a state of stupefaction. Why do I say that the secret place is My abode? Do you know the deeper meaning of what I say? Who in all humanity is capable of knowing Me? Who is capable of knowing Me as they know their own father and mother? Resting in My abode, I observe closely: All the people on earth bustle about, "traveling around the world" and rushing back and forth, all for the sake of their destiny, their future. But not a single one has energy to spare for building My kingdom, not even so much as the strength one might use in drawing breath. I created the human race, and I have rescued them many times from tribulation, but these humans are all ingrates: Not a single one among them is able to enumerate all the instances of My salvation. How many years, how many centuries has it been from the creation of the world down to the present day, and how many miracles have I worked, how many times made manifest My wisdom? But man, like a lunatic afflicted with dementia and torpor or, even worse, sometimes like a wild beast flailing about in the forest, has not the slightest intention of paying heed to My affairs. Many times I have given man the death sentence and condemned him to die, but the plan of My management cannot be altered by anyone. And so man is, still in My hands, strutting the old things he clings to. Because of the steps of My work, I have, once again, rescued you, you beings born into the corrupt, decadent, filthy, and sordid big family.

The work I have planned keeps pressing forward without a moment's surcease. Having moved into the Age of Kingdom, and having carried you into My kingdom as My people, I will have other demands to make of you; that is to say, I will begin to promulgate before you the constitution with which I will govern this era:

Since you are called My people, you should be able to glorify My name, that is, stand testimony in the midst of trial. If anyone attempts to deceive Me and conceal the truth from Me, or engage in disreputable dealings behind My back, they will without exception be chased out, removed from My house to await summary action. Those who have been unfaithful and disobedient to Me in the past, and today rise up again to judge Me openly, they too will be chased out from My house. Those who are My people must constantly care for My burdens as well as seek to know My words. Only people like this will I enlighten, and they will surely live under My guidance and enlightenment, never meeting with chastisement. Those who, failing to care for My burdens, concentrate on planning for their own futures, that is, those who do not aim with their doings to satisfy My heart but rather to cadge a handout, these beggar-like creatures I absolutely refuse to use, because from the time they were born they know nothing of what it means to care for My burdens. They are people with abnormal sense; people like this are suffering from “malnutrition” of the brain, and need to go home for some “nourishment.” I have no use for people of this kind. Among My people, everyone will be required to regard knowing Me as an obligatory duty to be fulfilled to the end, like eating, dressing, and sleeping, something that one never forgets about for a moment, so that in the end knowing Me will become a familiar skill like eating, something you do effortlessly, with a practiced hand. As for the words I speak, every single one must be taken with the utmost certainty and fully assimilated; there can be no perfunctory half-measures. Anyone who does not pay attention to My words will be regarded as directly opposing Me; anyone who does not eat My words, or does not seek to know them, will be regarded as not giving Me attention, and will directly be swept out the door of My house. For, as I have said in the past, what I desire is not a great many people, but a select few. Out of a hundred people, if only one is able to know Me through My words, then I would willingly throw away all the others to focus on enlightening and illuminating this single one. From this you can see, it is not necessarily true that greater numbers alone can manifest Me, live out Me. What I want is wheat (even though the kernels may not be full) and not tares (even when the kernels are full enough to call for admiration). As for those who give no regard to seeking but instead behave in a slack manner, they should leave of their own accord; I don't wish to see them anymore, lest they go on bringing disgrace to My name. On what I require of My people, I will stop at these precepts for now, and will wait to make further sanctions depending on how circumstances change.

In days past, the great majority of people thought I was the God Himself of wisdom, that I was the very God who saw deep into the hearts of men; but it was all superficial talk. If man had truly known Me, he would not have presumed to leap to conclusions, but would have kept on trying to know Me through My words. Only when he had arrived at a stage where he truly saw My deeds, would he have been worthy to say that I was Wise, that I was Wonderful. Your knowledge of Me is too shallow. Throughout the ages, how many people have served Me for how many years and, having seen My deeds, really came to know something of Me; and so they always had a submissive heart toward Me, not daring to harbor the least intention of opposing Me, because how difficult it is to seek out My footprints. If My guidance was absent among these people, they would not dare to act rashly, and so, after living through many years' experience, they eventually generalized a portion of knowledge about Me, saying that I am Wise, Wonderful and Counselor, that My words are like a double-edged sword, that My deeds are great, astounding, and wondrous, that I am robed in majesty, that My wisdom reaches higher than the firmament, and other insights. But today you are only knowing Me on the foundation they have laid, so the great majority of you, like parrots, are just mouthing the words that they have spoken. It is only because I take into account how shallow is the way in which you know Me and how poor your "education" is that I have spared you so much chastisement. But even so, the great majority of you still do not know yourselves, or think you have already reached My will in your deeds, and for this reason have escaped judgment. Or you think that, after becoming flesh, I have completely lost track of man's doings, and for this reason you have also escaped chastisement. Or you think that the God you believe in does not exist in the wide spaces of the universe, and so you have relegated knowing God to a chore to be done in your spare time rather than holding it in your hearts as a duty that must be fulfilled, using belief in God as a way of beguiling the time that otherwise would be spent in idleness. If I did not take pity on your lack of qualifications, reason, and insights, then all of you would perish in the midst of My chastisement, wiped out from existence. But until My work on earth is finished, I will remain lenient to mankind. This is something you must all know. Stop getting good and bad muddled up.

February 25, 1992

THE SIXTH UTTERANCE

In matters within the spirit, you should be delicately sensitive; to My words, you should be carefully attentive. You should aim for the state in which you see My Spirit and My fleshly self, My words and My fleshly self, as one indivisible whole, so that all of humanity will be able to satisfy Me in My presence. I have trodden the universe with My feet, stretching out My gaze over its entire expanse, and I have walked in the midst of all mankind, tasting the sweet, sour, bitter, and pungent flavors of human experience, but man never truly recognized Me, nor did he notice Me as I walked abroad. Because I was silent, and performed no supernatural deeds, because of this no one ever truly saw Me. Things are not now as they once were: I am going to do things that, since the beginning of creation, the world has never seen, I am going to speak words that, throughout the ages, men have never heard, because I ask that all humanity come to know Me in the flesh. These are steps in My management, about which humanity has not the faintest inkling. Even when I speak of them openly, man is still so befuddled in his mind that it is impossible to articulate them to him in every detail. Herein lies man's abject lowliness, does it not? This is precisely what I wish to remedy in him, is it not? All these years, I have not worked anything upon man; all these years, even those who were in direct touch with My incarnate flesh never heard the voice coming directly from My divinity. And so it is unavoidable that human beings should be lacking in their knowledge of Me, but this one thing alone has not affected humanity's love for Me through the ages. Now, however, I have wrought upon you countless amount of work miraculous and unfathomable as well as spoken to you many words. And yet, even under conditions like these, so many people still oppose Me to My face. Let Me give you a few examples:

Daily you pray to a vague God, trying to grasp My intentions, to get the feel of life. But, when My words actually come down, you look at them differently: You take My words and My Spirit as one indivisible entity, but you kick the man aside, thinking that the man that I am is simply incapable of uttering words of this kind, and that they are rather the result of My Spirit's disposing. How would you know about a situation like this? You believe in My words to a certain extent, but as for the flesh that I put on, to greater or lesser degree you entertain your own ideas, about which you cogitate day by day, saying: "Why does He do things in that way? Could it be that this comes from God? Impossible! In my view, He is pretty much the same as I am—a normal, ordinary person." Again, how would you explain a situation like this?

Regarding what I said above, is there any one among you who is not equipped with it? Any who does not possess it? It would appear to be something that you're holding onto like a piece of personal property, and all this time you've been reluctant to let it go. Still less have you been willing to pursue active effort; instead you wait for Me to do the work in person. Truth be told, there is not a single human being who, without seeking after Me, comes to know Me with ready ease. Indeed, these are not shallow words with which I preach you a lesson, because I can raise an example from a different angle for your reference:

As soon as Peter is mentioned, everybody is full of praise, instantly reminded of all these stories about Peter—how he thrice denied knowing God and moreover rendered service unto Satan, thereby testing God, but in the end was nailed upside down on the cross for His sake, and so on. Now I place great importance on narrating for you how Peter came to know Me as well as his final outcome. This man Peter was of excellent caliber, but his circumstances were different from those of Paul. His parents persecuted Me, they belonged to demons possessed by Satan, and for this reason one cannot say that they transmitted the way to Peter. Peter was agile of wit, endowed with native intelligence, doted on from boyhood by his parents; after growing up, however, he became their enemy, for he always sought to know Me, and this led him to turn his back on his parents. This was because, first of all, he believed that the heavens and earth and all things are in the hands of the Almighty, and that all positive things originate from God and come directly from Him, without passing through any processing by Satan. With the counterexample of his parents to serve as a foil, this enabled him all the more readily to recognize My love and mercy, thereby inflaming in him an even greater passion to seek after Me. He paid close attention not only to eating and drinking My words, but even more to grasping My intentions, and was constantly prudent and cautious in his thoughts, so that he was always keenly astute in his spirit, and hence was able to please Me in everything he did. In ordinary life, he paid close attention to integrating the lessons of those who had failed in the past so as to spur himself on to greater endeavor, deeply afraid that he might fall into the nets of failure. He also paid close attention to assimilating the faith and love of all those who through the ages had loved God. In this way he not only in negative aspects, but much more importantly, in positive aspects sped up the progress of his growth, until he became in My presence the one human being who knew Me best. For this reason, it is not difficult to imagine how he could place all that he had in My hands, no longer being his own master even in eating, dressing, sleeping, or where he stayed, but made satisfying Me in all things the foundation on which he enjoyed My bounty. So many times did I put him under trial, which of course left him half dead, but even in the midst of these hundreds of trials, he never once lost faith in Me or became disillusioned with Me. Even when I said I had already thrown him aside, he did not grow faint of heart or fall into despair, but continued as before to carry out his principles so as to realize his love for Me. When I told him that, even though he loved Me, I did not commend him but would cast him into Satan's hands in the end. In the midst of these trials, which did not reach unto his flesh but were trials by means of words, he still prayed to Me: Oh, God! Among the heavens and earth and the myriad things, is there any man, any creature, or any thing that is not in the hands of You, the Almighty? When You wish to show me mercy, my heart rejoices greatly on account of Your mercy; when You wish to execute judgment on me, unworthy though I may be, I feel all the more the profound mystery of Your deeds, because You are filled with authority and wisdom. Though my flesh may suffer, I am comforted in my spirit. How could I not extol Your wisdom and Your deeds? Even if I die after coming to know You, I would be ever ready and willing. Oh, Almighty One! Surely it is not that You truly do not wish to let me see You? Surely it is not that I am truly unworthy of receiving Your judgment? Can it possibly be that there is something in me that You do not wish to see? In the midst of these kinds of trials, even though Peter was not able to grasp My intentions accurately, it is evident that he considered it a matter of pride and personal glory to be used by Me (be it only to receive My judgment so that humanity might see My majesty and wrath), and was anything but dejected on account of being put under trial. Because of his loyalty in My presence, and because of My blessings upon him, he has become an exemplar and a model for mankind for thousands of years. Is this not precisely the example that you should follow? At this time, you should think hard and try to work out why I have given such a lengthy account of Peter. This should serve you as a code of conduct.

Even though there are very few people who know Me, I will not on that account vent My anger upon humanity, because human beings have so many shortcomings that it is difficult for them to attain the level that I ask of them. And so I have been lenient to humanity for thousands of years, all the way down to the present day. But I hope that you will not, because of My leniency, be too ready to indulge yourselves; you should rather, through Peter, come to know Me and seek after Me, and through all of Peter's stories, receive revelation in unprecedented ways, and in this way arrive at a realm previously unattained by humanity. Throughout the universe and the limitless expanses of the firmament, the myriad things of creation, the myriad things on earth, and the myriad things in heaven are each and every one consecrating their whole strength for the sake of My last stage of work. Surely you do not wish to remain spectators on the sidelines, driven hither and yon by Satan's forces? Satan is constantly devouring the knowledge that men hold of Me in their hearts, and constantly, with teeth bared and claws unsheathed, engaged in the last throes of its death struggle. Do you wish to be captured by its deceitful stratagems at this moment? Do you wish, at the moment that the last phase of My work is completed, to cut off your own life? Surely you are not still waiting for Me to dispense My leniency one more time? Seeking to know Me is the key thing, but neither should you neglect to pay attention to actual practice. I am revealing insights to you directly in My words, in hopes that you will be able to submit to My guidance, and cease to entertain aspirations or designs of your own.

THE SEVENTH UTTERANCE

All of the western branches should listen to My voice:

In the past, have you been faithful to Me? Have you obeyed My excellent words of counsel? Do you have hopes that are realistic and not vague and uncertain? Man's loyalty, his love, his faith—there is none but what comes from Me, none but what is bestowed by Me. My people, when you listen to My words, do you understand My will? Do you see My heart? In the past, as you traveled the path of service, you met with ups and downs, advances and setbacks, and there were times when you were in danger of falling down and even of betraying Me; but did you know that at every moment I was ever in the act of saving you? That at every moment I was ever uttering My voice to call and save you? How many times have you fallen into Satan's nets? How many times have you been entangled in the snares of men? And again, how often have you, failing to let go of yourselves, lapsed into endless contention with one another? How often have your bodies been in My house but your hearts were who knows where? Nevertheless, how many times have I reached out My saving hand to hold you up; how many times have I cast among you the grains of mercy; how many times have I been unable to bear seeing the pitiful state of your suffering? How many times ... do you know?

But today, you have, in My keeping, at last conquered all difficulties and I rejoice along with you; this is the crystallization of My wisdom. Nevertheless, remember this well! Who among you has fallen down while you remained strong? Who among you has been strong without ever having moments of weakness? Among men, who has enjoyed any blessing that did not come from Me? Who has experienced any misfortune that did not come from Me? Could it be that all those who love Me receive only benediction? Could it be that misfortunes befell Job because he failed to love but rather resisted Me? Could it be that Paul managed to serve Me with loyalty in My presence because he was truly able to love Me? Though you may hold fast to My testimony, can there be any one among you whose testimony is, like pure gold, unadulterated with impurities? Is man capable of genuine loyalty? That your testimony brings Me enjoyment does not conflict with your "loyalty," because I have never demanded much from anyone. Going by the original intention of My plan, you would all be "second-rate goods—unsatisfactory.” Is this not an example of what I told you about “casting grains of mercy”? Is not what you see My salvation?

You should all cast your minds back: Since returning to My house, is there anyone who, without considering his gain or loss, comes to know Me in the way that Peter did? You have got the surface of the Bible down pat, but did you imbibe anything of its essence? Even so, you are still holding onto your “capital,” refusing to truly let go of yourselves. When I make an utterance, when I speak to you face to face, who among you has ever put down the closed scroll to receive the words of life that I have disclosed? You have no regard for My words, nor do you cherish them. Rather, you use My words like a machine gun to fire upon your enemies in order to maintain your own position; not in the slightest degree do you try to accept My judgment to know Me. Every one of you points a weapon at someone else, you are all “unselfish,” all “taking thought for others” in every situation; isn’t this precisely what you were doing yesterday? And today? Your “loyalty” has gone up by a few points, you are all a bit more seasoned, a bit more mature, and because of this, your “fear” of Me has increased somewhat, and no one “dares to act lightly.” Why do you exist in a state of perpetual passivity? Why is it that the positive aspects are always nowhere to be found in you? Oh, My people! The past is long gone; you must not cling to it any longer. Having stood your ground yesterday, today you should give Me your sincere loyalty, and even more you should bear a good testimony for Me tomorrow, and you will inherit My benediction in the future. This is what you should understand.

Though I am not present before you, My Spirit will surely confer grace on you. I hope that you will treasure My benediction and be able, relying on this, to know yourselves. Do not take this to be your capital; rather, you should fill what is lacking in you from within My words, and from this derive your positive elements. This is the message I bequeath to you!

THE EIGHTH UTTERANCE

When My revelations reach their peak, and when My judgment draws to an end, it will be the time when all My people are revealed and made complete. My footsteps tread across all corners of the universe world in perpetual search of those who are after My own heart and fit for My use. Who can stand up and cooperate with Me? Man's love of Me is too meager and his faith in Me is pitifully small. If the brunt of My words was not directed at man's weaknesses, he would boast and exaggerate, and would pontificate and concoct high-sounding theories, as if he was omniscient and all-knowing about matters upon the earth. Who still dares to boast among those who were loyal to Me in the past, and who today stand fast before Me? Who is not secretly delighted by their own prospects? When I did not expose directly, man had nowhere to hide and was tormented by shame. How much worse would it be when I speak through other means? People would have an even greater sense of indebtedness, they would believe that nothing could cure them, and would all be tightly bound by their passiveness. When man loses hope, the salute of the kingdom formally rings out, which is "the time when the sevenfold intensified Spirit begins to work," as spoken of by man, when, in other words, the life of the kingdom officially begins on earth, that is, when My divinity comes forth to act directly (without being processed by the brain). All people become as busy as bees; it seems as if they are revived, as if they are roused from a dream, and as soon as they awake, they are astonished to find themselves in such circumstances. In the past, I said much about the building of the church, I revealed many mysteries, and when the building of the church reached its peak, it came to an abrupt end. The building of the kingdom, however, is different. Only when the battle in the spiritual realm reaches its final stage do I begin anew on earth. That is to say, it is only when man is about to draw back that I formally begin and raise up My new work. The difference between the building of the kingdom and the building of the church is that, in the building of the church, I worked in humanity that was governed by divinity. I directly dealt with man's old nature, directly revealed the ugly self of man, and exposed the essence of man. As a result, man came to know himself on this basis, and so was convinced in heart and by word. In the building of the kingdom I act directly in My divinity, and allow all people to know what I have and am based on the knowledge of My words, ultimately allowing them to achieve the knowledge of Me who is in the flesh. Thus it brings to an end all mankind's pursuit of the vague God, and puts an end to the place of the God in heaven in man's heart, which is to say, it allows man to know My deeds in My flesh, and so concludes My time on earth.

The building of the kingdom is aimed directly at the spiritual realm. In other words, the battle of the spiritual realm is made plain directly among all My people, and from this can be seen that all people are always warring, not just in the church, but even more in the Age of Kingdom, and that although man is in the flesh, the spiritual realm is revealed directly, and man engages with the life of the spiritual realm. Thus, when you begin to be faithful, you must properly prepare for the next part of My work. You should give over the entirety of your heart, and only then can you satisfy My heart. I care nothing about what man previously did in the church; today, it is in the kingdom. In My plan, Satan has ever snapped at the heels of every step, and, as the foil of My wisdom, has always tried to find ways and means to disrupt My original plan. But could I succumb to its deceitful schemes? All in heaven and on earth serves Me—could the deceitful schemes of Satan be any different? This is precisely the intersection of My wisdom, it is precisely that which is wondrous about My deeds, and it is the principle by which My entire management plan is carried out. During the time of the building of the kingdom, still I do not avoid the deceitful schemes of Satan, but continue to do the work I must do. Among all things in the universe, I have chosen the deeds of Satan as My foil. Is this not My wisdom? Is this not precisely that which is wondrous about My work? On the occasion of the entry into the Age of Kingdom, tremendous changes occur in all things in heaven and on earth, and they celebrate and rejoice. Are you any different? Who does not feel as sweet as honey in their heart? Who does not burst with joy in their heart? Who does not dance with delight? Who does not speak words of praise?

In all that I have talked of and spoken of above, do you grasp aims and origins of My utterances, or do you not? If I did not ask this, most people would believe that I am merely prattling on, and would be unable to locate the source of My words. If you ponder them carefully, you will know the importance of My words. You'd do well to read them closely: Which of them are not of benefit to you? Which of them are not for the sake of the growth of your life? Which of them do not speak of the reality of the spiritual realm? Most people believe there is no rhyme or reason to My words, that they lack any explanation and interpretation. Are My words really so abstract and unfathomable? Do you truly submit to My words? Do you truly accept My words? Do you not treat them as toys? Do you not use them as clothing to cover your ugly appearance? In this vast world, who has personally been examined by Me? Who has personally heard the words of My Spirit? So many people grope around in the darkness, so many pray in the midst of adversity, so many watch in hope whilst hungry and cold, so many are bound by Satan, yet so many know not where to turn, so many betray Me amid happiness, so many are ungrateful, and so many are loyal to the deceitful schemes of Satan. Who among you is Job? Who is Peter? Why have I made repeated mention of Job? And why have I referred to Peter many times? Have you ever perceived My hopes for you? You should spend more time pondering such things.

Peter was faithful to Me for many years, yet he never grumbled or had a complaining heart, and even Job was not his equal. Throughout the ages the saints, too, have all fallen far short of him. He not only pursued the knowledge of Me, but also came to know Me during the time that Satan was carrying out its deceitful schemes. This led to many years of service that was after My own heart, as a result of which he was never exploited by Satan. Peter drew upon the faith of Job, yet he also clearly perceived his shortcomings. Although Job was of great faith, he lacked a knowledge of matters in the spiritual realm, and thus he said many words that did not correspond to reality; this shows that his knowledge was still shallow, and incapable of being perfect. And so, Peter always looked to gaining a sense of the spirit, and always focused on observing the dynamics of the spiritual realm. As a result, he was not only able to ascertain something of My wishes, but also understood a little of the deceitful schemes of Satan, and thus his knowledge was greater than any other throughout the ages.

From Peter's experiences it is not hard to see that if man wishes to know Me, he must concentrate on the careful consideration in the spirit. I do not ask that you devote a great amount to Me externally; this is of secondary concern. If you do not know Me, then all the faith, love and loyalty that you speak of are but illusions, they are froth, and you are sure to become someone who makes great boasts before Me but does not know himself, and thus you will once more be ensnared by Satan and unable to extricate yourself; you will become the son of perdition, and will become the object of destruction. But if you are cold and uncaring toward My words, then you undoubtedly oppose Me. This is fact, and you'd do well to look through the gate to the spiritual realm at the many and varied spirits that are chastised by Me. Which of them were not passive, and uncaring, and unaccepting toward My words? Which of them were not cynical toward My words? Which among them did not try to find a handle in My words? Which among them did not use My words as a defensive weapon with which to protect themselves? They did not pursue the knowledge of Me through My words, but merely used them as toys to play with. In this, did they not directly oppose Me? Who are My words? Who is My Spirit? So many times have I posed such words to you, yet have your seeings ever been higher and clear? Have your experiences ever been true? I remind you once again: If you do not know My words, do not accept them, and do not put them into practice, then you will inevitably become the object of My chastisement! You will surely become a victim of Satan!

THE NINTH UTTERANCE

Since you are one of the people of My household, and since you are faithful in My kingdom, all that you do must meet the standards that I require. I do not ask that you be nothing more than a drifting cloud, but that you be gleaming snow, and possessed of its substance and even more its value. Because I came from the holy land, not like the lotus, which has only a name and no substance because it came from the mire and not the holy land. The time that a new heaven descends upon the earth and a new earth spreads over the skies is also the very time that I formally work among man. Who among man knows Me? Who beheld the moment of My arrival? Who has seen that I not only have a name, but, moreover, am also possessed of substance? I sweep away the white clouds with My hand and closely observe the skies; in space, nothing is not arranged by My hand, and beneath space, no man does not contribute his own tiny effort to the accomplishment of My mighty enterprise. I do not make onerous demands of the people on earth, for I have always been the practical God, and because I am the Almighty that created man and knows man well. All people are before the eyes of the Almighty. How could even those in the remotest corners of the earth avoid the scrutiny of My Spirit? Although man knows My Spirit, he also offends My Spirit. My words lay bare the ugly face of all people, and lay bare the innermost thoughts of all people, and cause all upon earth to be made plain by My light and fall down in the midst of My scrutiny. But though man falls down, his heart does not dare to stray far from Me. Among the creatures, who does not come to love Me because of My deeds? Who does not yearn for Me as a result of My words? In whom are not born feelings of devotion because of My love? It is only because of the corruption of Satan that man is unable to reach the realm as required by Me. Even the lowest standards that I require produce misgivings in him, to say nothing of today, the era in which Satan runs riot and is madly despotic, or the time when man has been so trampled by Satan that his entire body is caked in filth. When has man's failure to care for My heart as a result of his depravity not caused Me grief? Could it be that I pity Satan? Could it be that I am mistaken in My love? When man disobeys Me, My heart secretly weeps; when man opposes Me, I chastise him; when man is saved by Me and resurrected from the dead, I feed him with the utmost care; when man obeys Me, My heart rests easy and I immediately sense great changes in all things in heaven and on earth; when man praises Me, how could I not enjoy it? When man witnesses Me and is gained by Me, how could I not be glorified? Could it be that all man does is not governed and supplied by Me? When I do not provide direction, people are idle and quiescent, and, behind My back, they engage in those "laudable" dirty dealings. Do you think the flesh, with which I clothe Myself, knows nothing of your actions, your behavior, and your words? Many years have I endured the wind and the rain, and so too have I experienced the bitterness of the human world, yet upon closer reflection, no amount of suffering can make man of flesh lose hope in Me, much less can any sweetness cause man of flesh to become cold, downhearted, or dismissive toward Me. Is man's love for Me really limited to either no pain or no sweetness?

Today, I inhabit flesh and have begun to officially carry out the work that I must do, yet though man fears the voice of My Spirit, he disobeys the substance of My Spirit. I need not elaborate upon how difficult it is for man to know the Me of the flesh in My words. As I have said before, I am not exacting in My requirements, and it is not necessary for you to achieve a full knowledge of Me (for man is lacking; this is an inherent condition, and acquired conditions are incapable of making up for it). You need only know all that is done and said by the Me in fleshly form. Since My requirements are not exacting, it is My hope that you can come to know, and that you can achieve. You must rid yourselves of your impurities in this filthy world, must strive to make progress in this backward family of emperors, and must not cut yourselves some slack. You should not be the slightest bit lenient toward yourself: You would need to devote great time and effort in order to know that which I utter in a single day, and the knowledge of even a single sentence spoken by Me is worthy of a lifetime's experiencing. The words I speak are not vague and abstract, they are not empty talk. Many people hope to gain My words, but I pay them no heed; many people yearn for My fatness, but I give them not a bit; many people wish to see My face, yet I have ever hidden it; many people listen intently to My voice, but I close My eyes and tilt back My head, unmoved by their yearning; many people fear the sound of My voice, but My words are always on the offensive; many people are fearful of seeing My face, but I deliberately appear to strike them down. Man has never truly seen My face and has never truly heard My voice, for he does not truly know Me. Even though he is struck down by Me, even though he leaves Me, even though he is chastised by My hand, he still does not know whether all that he does is truly after My own heart, and is still ignorant of just whom My heart is revealed to. From the creation of the world until today, no one has ever truly known Me, or truly seen Me, and though I have become flesh today, you still do not know Me. Is this not a fact? Have you ever beheld even a little of My actions and disposition in the flesh?

In heaven is where I recline, and beneath heaven is where I find rest. I have somewhere to dwell, and I have a time for when I display My powers. If I were not on earth, if I did not conceal Myself within flesh, and if I were not humble and hidden, would heaven and earth not have already been changed long ago? Would you, the people of Mine, not have already been used by Me? Yet there is wisdom to My actions, and although I am fully aware of man's deceit, I do not follow his example, but instead make an exchange for it. My wisdom in the spiritual realm is inexhaustible, while My wisdom in the flesh is everlasting. Is this not the very time in which My deeds are made plain? I have forgiven and pardoned man many times, right up until today, in the Age of Kingdom. Could I really delay My time any longer? Although

I have been somewhat more merciful toward the fragile man, once My work is complete, could I still bring trouble upon Myself by doing old work? Could I wittingly allow Satan to accuse? I do not need man to do anything but accept the reality of My words and the original meaning of My words. Though My words are simple, in substance they are complex, for you are too small, and have grown too numb. When I reveal My mysteries directly and make plain My will in the flesh, you take no notice; you listen to the sound, but do not understand the meaning. I am overcome with sadness. Although I am in the flesh, I am unable to do the work of the ministry of the flesh.

Who has come to know My deeds in the flesh among My words and actions? When I reveal My mysteries in writing, or speak them aloud, people are all dumbstruck, they close their eyes in silence. Why is what I say incomprehensible to man? Why are My words unfathomable to him? Why is he blind to My deeds? Who is able to see Me and never forget? Who is able to hear My voice and not allow it to pass them by? Who is able to sense My will and please My heart? I live and move among people, I have come to experience their lives, and though I felt that everything was good after I created them for man, I take no joy from life among man, and am not gladdened by the happiness among man. I do not detest and reject man, but neither am I sentimental toward him—for he does not know Me, he finds it hard to see My face in the darkness, and has difficulty hearing My voice, and is unable to discern My words, amid the clamor. Thus, superficially, all that you do is in obedience to Me, but in your heart, you still disobey Me. The whole of mankind's old nature, it can be said, is like this. Who is an exception? Who is not one of the objects of My chastisement? But who does not live under My tolerance? If man were destroyed by My wrath, what would be the significance of My creation of the heavens and earth? I once warned many people, and exhorted many people, and openly judged many people—is this not much better than directly destroying man? My aim is not to put man to death, but to cause him to know all My deeds amid My judgment. When you ascend from the bottomless pit, which is to say, when you free yourselves from My judgment, your personal considerations and plans will all disappear, and all people will aspire to satisfy Me. And in this, will I not have achieved My aim?

THE TENTH UTTERANCE

The Age of Kingdom is, after all, different from times past. It does not concern what man does. Instead, I personally carry out My work after descending upon the earth—work that human beings can neither conceive nor accomplish. From the creation of the world until today, all these years it has always been about building the church, but one never hears of building the kingdom. Even though I speak of this with My own mouth, is there anyone who knows its essence? I once descended into the world of men and experienced and observed their suffering, but without fulfilling the purpose of My incarnation. When the building of the kingdom gets under way, My incarnate flesh formally begins to perform the ministry; that is, the King of the kingdom formally takes up His sovereign power. From this it is evident that the descent of the kingdom into the human world, far from being merely a matter of words and appearances, is one of actual reality; this is one aspect of the meaning of “the reality of practice.” Man has never seen a single one of My acts, has never heard a single one of My utterances. Even if he had seen, what would he have discovered? And should he have heard Me speak, what would he have understood? Throughout the world, all humanity lies within My love, My compassion, but so does all humanity lie under My judgment, and likewise under My trial. I have been merciful and loving to mankind, even when all men had been corrupted to a certain degree; I have meted out chastisement to mankind, even when all men had bowed down in submission before My throne. But is there any human being who is not in the midst of the suffering and refinement that I have sent? How many people are groping through the darkness for the light, how many are struggling bitterly through their trial? Job had faith, and yet, for all that, was he not seeking a way out for himself? Although My people can stand firm in trial, is there anyone who, without saying it aloud, believes it in his heart? Is it not rather that he mouths his belief while doubting in his heart? There are no human beings who have stood fast in trial, who give true obedience in trial. Did I not cover My face to avoid looking at this world, the entire human race would topple under My burning gaze, for I do not ask anything of humanity.

When the salute to the kingdom rings out—which is also when the seven thunders peal—this sound convulses heaven and earth, shaking up the empyrean and causing the heartstrings of every human being to vibrate. An anthem to the kingdom ceremoniously rises up in the nation of the great red dragon, proving that I have destroyed the great red dragon's nation and then established My kingdom. Even more important, My kingdom is established on the earth. At this moment, I begin sending My angels out to every one of the world's nations so that they may shepherd My sons, My people; this is also to meet the needs of the next step of My work. But I personally go to the place where the great red dragon lies coiled, to do battle with it. And when all of humanity comes to know Me from within the flesh, and is able to see My deeds from within the flesh, then the great red dragon's lair will turn to ashes and vanish without a trace. As the people of My kingdom, since you abominate the great red dragon in your bones, you must satisfy My heart with your actions and in this way bring shame upon the dragon. Do you really feel that the great red dragon is hateful? Do you really feel that it is the enemy of the King of the kingdom? Do you really have faith that you can bear wonderful testimony to Me? Do you really have faith to defeat the great red dragon? This is what I ask of you. All I need is for you to be able to go as far as this step; will you be able to do this? Do you have faith that you can attain this? What is man capable of doing? Is it not rather that I do it Myself? Why do I say that I personally descend upon the place where battle is joined? What I want is your faith, not your deeds. Human beings are incapable of receiving My words in a straightforward way, but just peer from the side. And have you attained the goal in this way? Have you come to know Me in this way? To tell the truth, of the men on the earth, not one is able to look Me straight in the face, not one is able to receive the pure and unadulterated meaning of My words. And so I have set in motion an unprecedented feat of engineering upon the earth, in order to attain My goal and set up the true image of Myself in men's hearts, and in this way bring to an end the period when notions wield power over men.

Today, not only am I descending upon the nation of the great red dragon, I am also turning My face toward the entire universe, so that the whole empyrean is quaking. Is there a single place that does not undergo My judgment? Is there a single place that does not exist under the scourges that I hurl down? Everywhere I go I have scattered seeds of disaster of all kinds. This is one of the ways in which I work, and is without doubt an act of salvation for man, and what I extend to him is still a kind of love. I wish to make even more people come to know Me, be able to see Me, and in this way come to revere God whom they have not seen for so many years but who, today, is real. For what reason did I create the world? For what reason, when mankind became corrupt, did I not completely destroy them? For what reason does the whole human race live under scourges? For what reason did I Myself put on the flesh? When I am performing My work, humanity knows the taste not only of the bitter but also of the sweet. Of the people in the world, who but lives within My grace? Did I not endow human beings with material blessings, who would be able to enjoy sufficiency in the world? Surely, allowing you to take up your place as My people is not the only blessing, is it? Supposing that you were not My people but rather service-doers, would you not be living within My blessing? Not one among you is capable of fathoming the place whence My words come. Humanity—far from treasuring the names that I have conferred upon you, so many of you, at the title “service-doers,” nurse resentment in your hearts, and so many, at the title “My people,” breed love in your hearts. Do not try to fool Me—My eyes see and penetrate all! Who among you receives willingly, who among you gives complete obedience? If the salute to the kingdom did not ring out, would you truly be able to obey to the end? What man is capable of doing, of thinking, how far he is able to go—all these I have predetermined since long ago.

The great majority of people accept My burning fire in the light of My countenance. The great majority of people, inspired by My encouragement, stir themselves to forge ahead in pursuit. When the forces of Satan attack My people, I am there to fend them off; when Satan's plots wreak havoc in the lives of My people, I send it fleeing in a rout, once gone never to return. On earth, all manner of evil spirits are endlessly on the prowl for a place to rest, are ceaselessly searching for the corpses of men to eat up. My people! You must remain inside My care and protection. Never behave dissolutely! Never behave recklessly! Rather, offer up your loyalty in My house, and only with loyalty can you mount a countercharge against the devil's cunning. Under no circumstances must you behave as in the past, doing one thing before My face and another behind My back—that way you are already beyond redemption. Surely I have uttered more than enough of words like these, have I not? It is precisely because man's old nature is incorrigible that I have repeatedly reminded him. Do not get bored! All that I say is for the sake of ensuring your destiny! What Satan needs is precisely a foul and filthy place; the more hopelessly irredeemable, and the more debauched you are, refusing to submit to restraint, the more will unclean spirits avail themselves of any opportunity to infiltrate. Once you have arrived at this pass, your loyalty will be but idle chatter, without any reality, and your resolution will be eaten up by unclean spirits, to be turned into disobedience or Satan's wiles, and used to disrupt My work. Thereat I will smite you to death whenever and wherever I please. No one knows the gravity of this situation; all regard what they hear to be so much hot air and do not take caution in the least. I remember not what was done in the past. Do you still wait for Me to be lenient toward you by forgetting once more? Though humanity has opposed Me, I will not hold it against him, for man's stature is too short, and so I do not make high demands of him. All I require is that he should not dissipate himself, and submit to restraint. Surely it is not beyond your capacity to meet this one stipulation? The majority of people are waiting for Me to reveal even more mysteries for them to feast their eyes upon. And yet, should you come to understand all the mysteries of heaven, what could you do with that knowledge? Would it increase your love for Me? Would it inflame your love for Me? I do not underestimate man, nor do I lightly arrive at a verdict about him. If these weren't man's actual circumstances, I would never casually crown people with these labels. Think back upon the past: Have there been any times when I slandered you? Any times when I underestimated you? Any times when I have looked upon you without regard for your actual circumstances? Any times when what I say has failed to fill your hearts and your mouths with conviction? Any times when I have spoken without sounding a deeply resonant chord within you? Who among you has read My words without fear and trembling, deeply afraid that I will strike him down into the bottomless pit? Who does not endure trial within My words? Inside My words resides authority, but this is not for passing casual judgment on man; rather, mindful of man's actual circumstances, I constantly manifest to man the meaning that inheres in My words. In point of fact, is there anyone who is capable of recognizing My omnipotent might in My words? Is there anyone who can receive into himself the purest gold of which My words are made up? How many words have I spoken, but has anyone ever treasured them?

KINGDOM ANTHEM

The people cheer Me, the people praise Me; all mouths name the one true God, all people raise their eyes to watch My deeds. The kingdom descends on the world, My person is rich and bountiful. Who would not celebrate for this? Who would not dance with joy for this? Oh, Zion! Raise your triumphant banner to celebrate Me! Sing your triumphant song of victory and spread My holy name! All things on earth! Now purify yourselves in sacrifice for Me! Stars in the sky! Now return to your places and show My greatness in the firmament! I attend to the voices of the people on earth, pouring out infinite love and reverence for Me in song! On this day, as all things rejuvenate, I come to walk the earth. At this moment, the flowers bloom, the birds sing, all things are full of jubilation! In the sound of the kingdom's salute, Satan's kingdom collapses, destroyed in the reverberating chorus of the kingdom anthem. And it will never rise again!

Who on the earth dares to rise and resist? As I descend to earth I bring burning, bring wrath, bring all disasters. The earthly kingdoms now are My kingdom! Up in the sky, the clouds tumble and billow; under the sky, lakes and rivers surge and churn out a moving melody. Resting animals emerge from their dens, and all peoples who slumber are awakened by Me. The day all peoples have awaited finally has come! They offer up the most beautiful songs to Me!

At this beautiful moment, at this exciting time,

The heavens above and all under heaven now praise. Who would not be excited for this?

Who would not rejoice for this? Who would not weep on this occasion?

The sky is not the same sky, now it is the kingdom's sky.

The earth is not the earth it was, but now is holy earth.

After a heavy rain has passed, the filthy old world is utterly transformed.

The mountains changing ... the waters changing ...

Quiet mountains! Dance for Me!

Stagnant waters! Flow freely!

Slumbering men! Rise up in your pursuits!

I have come ... And I reign ...

All will see with their own eyes My face, all will hear with their own ears My voice, Experience for themselves life in the kingdom ...
Unforgettable ... Unforgettable ...

In the burning of My wrath, the great red dragon struggles;
In My majestic judgment, devils show their true forms;
At My stern words, all feel shame,
Not daring to show their faces.
Recalling the past, how they mocked Me,
Always showing off themselves, always defying Me.
Today, who will not weep? Who feels no remorse?
The entire universe world is full of tears ...
Full of the sounds of rejoicing ... full of laughter ...
Incomparable joy ... Incomparable joy ...

Light rain pattering ... heavy snow fluttering down ...
People mingling sorrow and joy ... some laughing ...
Some sobbing ... and some cheering ...
As if people have forgotten ... whether it is an overcast and rainy spring,
A summer of blooming flowers, an autumn of bountiful harvest,
A winter cold as ice and frost, no one knows ...
In the sky the clouds drift, on the earth the seas boil.
The sons wave their arms ... the people move their feet in dance ...
The angels are at work ... the angels are shepherding ...
The people of earth bustle, all things on earth multiply.

THE ELEVENTH UTTERANCE

Every person in mankind should accept the observation of My Spirit, should closely scrutinize their every word and action, and, moreover, should look upon My wondrous deeds. How do you feel at the time of the kingdom's arrival on earth? When My sons and people stream to My throne, I formally commence judgment before the great white throne. Which is to say, when I begin My work on earth in person, and when the era of judgment nears its end, I start to direct My words to the entire universe, and release the voice of My Spirit to the entire universe. Through My words, I will wash clean all the people and things among all that is in heaven and on earth, so that the land is no longer filthy and licentious, but is a holy kingdom. I will renew all things, so that they will be provided for My use, so that they will no longer bear the earthy breath, and no longer be stained with the flavor of the ground. On earth, man has groped for the goal and origins of My words, and has observed My deeds, yet no one has ever truly known the origins of My words, and no one has ever truly beheld the wondrousness in My deeds. It is only today, when I personally come among man and speak My words, that man has a little knowledge of Me, removing the place for “Me” in their thoughts, instead creating a place for the practical God in their consciousness. Man has conceptions and is full of curiosity; who would not want to see God? Who would not wish to encounter God? Yet the only thing that occupies a definite place in man’s heart is the God that man feels is vague and abstract. Who would realize this if I did not tell them plainly? Who would truly believe that I indeed exist? Surely without a hint of doubt? There is a vast difference between the “Me” in man’s heart and the “Me” of reality, and no one is capable of drawing comparisons between them. If I did not become flesh, man would never know Me, and even if he came to know Me, wouldn’t such knowledge still be a conception? Each day I walk among the unceasing flow of people, and each day I operate within every person. When man truly sees Me, he will be able to know Me in My words, and will grasp the means by which I speak as well as My intentions.

When the kingdom formally arrives on earth, what, among all things, is not silent? Who, among all people, is not afraid? I walk everywhere throughout the universe world, and everything is personally arranged by Me. At this time, who does not know that My deeds are wonderful? My hands uphold all things, yet I am also above all things. Today, is not My incarnation and My personal presence among man the true meaning of My humility and hiddenness? Outwardly, many people applaud Me as good, and praise Me as beautiful, but who truly knows Me? Today, why do I ask that you know Me? Is My aim not to shame the great red dragon? I do not wish to force man to praise Me, but to make him know Me, through which he will come to love Me, and thus praise Me. Such praise is worthy of its name, and is not empty talk; only praise such as this can reach My throne and soar into the skies. Because man has been tempted and corrupted by Satan, because he has been taken over by the thinking of conceptions, I have become flesh in order to personally conquer all of mankind, to expose all the conceptions of man, and to tear apart the thinking of man. As a result, man no longer parades about in front of Me, and no longer serves Me using his own conceptions, and thus the “Me” in man’s conceptions is completely dispelled. When the kingdom comes, I first of all begin this stage of work, and I do so among My people. Being My people who are born in the country of the great red dragon, surely there is not only a little, or a part, of the great red dragon’s venom within you. Thus, this stage of My work is primarily focused on you, and this is one aspect of the significance of My incarnation in China. Most people are unable to grasp even a fragment of the words I speak, and when they do, their understanding is hazy and muddled. This is one of the turning points of the method by which I speak. If all people were able to read My words and understand their meaning, then who among man could be saved, and not cast down into Hades? When man knows Me and obeys Me will be when I rest, and will be the very time that man is able to grasp the meaning of My words. Today, your stature is too small, it is almost pitifully small, not even worthy of mention—to say nothing of your knowledge of Me.

Though I say the angels have begun to be sent forth to shepherd My sons and people, no one is able to understand the meaning of My words. When I personally come among man, the angels simultaneously begin the work of shepherding, and during the time of the angels’ shepherding, all the sons and people not only receive trials and shepherding, but are also able to behold, with their own eyes, the occurrence of all kinds of visions. Because I work directly in divinity, everything enters into a new beginning, and because this divinity works directly, it is not the slightest bit constrained by humanity, and seems to man to operate freely under supernatural circumstances. Yet, to Me, all is normal (man believes it is supernatural because he has never encountered divinity directly); it is possessed of none of the conceptions of man, and is untainted by human meaning. People will only see this when they all enter onto the right track; because now is the beginning, when it comes to his entry man has many shortcomings, and such failings and opacity can hardly be avoided. Today, since I have led you to this point, I have made fitting arrangements, and have My own aims. If I were to tell you of them today, would you truly be able to know them? I am well acquainted with the thoughts of man's mind and the wishes of man's heart: Who has never looked for a way out for themselves? Who has never thought of their own prospects? Yet even though man is possessed of a rich and prismatic intellect, who was able to predict that, following the ages, the present would turn out as it has? Is this really the fruit of your own subjective efforts? Is this the payment for your tireless industry? Is this the beautiful tableau envisaged by your mind? If I did not guide all mankind, who would be able to separate themselves from My arrangements and find another way out? Is it the thoughts and wishes of man that have brought him to today? Many people go their whole lives without having their wishes fulfilled. Is this really because of a fault in their thinking? Many people's lives are filled with unexpected happiness and satisfaction. Is this really because they expect too little? Who of the whole of mankind is not cared for in the eyes of the Almighty? Who does not live in the midst of the Almighty's predestination? Whose birth and death come from their own choices? Does man control his own fate? Many people cry out for death, yet it is far away from them; many people want to be those who are strong in life and fear death, yet unbeknownst to them, the day of their demise draws near, plunging them into the abyss of death; many people look to the skies and sigh deeply; many people cry great, wailing sobs; many people fall amidst trials; and many people become the prisoners of temptation. Though I do not appear in person to allow man to behold Me clearly, many people fear seeing My face, deeply afraid that I will strike them down, that I will snuff them out. Does man truly know Me, or does he not? No one can say for sure. Is this not so? You fear both Me and My chastisement, yet you also stand up and openly oppose Me and pass judgment on Me. Is this not the case? That man has never known Me is because he has never seen My face or heard My voice. Thus, even though I am within man's heart, are there any in whose heart I am not hazy and indistinct? Are there any in whose heart I am perfectly clear? I do not wish for those who are My people to also see Me vaguely and opaquely, and thus I embark upon this great work.

I quietly come among man, and I softly depart. Has anyone ever seen Me? Is the sun able to see Me because of its burning flames? Is the moon able to see Me because of its lustrous clarity? Can the constellations see Me because of their place in the sky? When I come, man does not know, and all things remain ignorant, and when I depart, still man is unaware. Who can bear testimony to Me? Could it be the praise of the people on earth? Could it be the lilies blossoming in the wild? Is it the birds flying in the sky? Is it the lions roaring in the mountains? No one can fully witness Me! No one can do the work that I will do! Even if they did do this work, what effect would it have? Each day I observe every action of many people, and each day I search the hearts and minds of many people; never has anyone escaped My judgment, and never has anyone divested themselves of the reality of My judgment. I stand above the skies and look into the distance: Innumerable people have been struck down by Me, yet so, too, do countless people live amid My mercy and lovingkindness. Do you also not live under such circumstances?

THE TWELFTH UTTERANCE

When lightning issues forth from the East—which is also precisely the moment that I begin to speak—at the moment the lightning comes forth, the whole empyrean is illuminated, and all the stars begin to transform. It seems as though the entire human race is subjected to a proper cleaning and sorting out. Under the glow of this shaft of light from the East, all of mankind is revealed in their original form, eyes dazzled, stymied in confusion; still less are they able to conceal their ugly features. Again, they are like unto animals fleeing from My light for refuge in mountain caves; yet, not one among them can be effaced from within My light. All human beings lie in the grip of terror and alarm, all are waiting, all are watching; with the advent of My light, all rejoice at the day they were born, and likewise all are cursing the day they were born. Conflicting emotions are impossible to articulate; tears of self-castigation form rivers, and are borne away on the sweeping torrent, gone without trace in a twinkling. Once again, My day is pressing close upon the human race, once again arousing the human race, giving humanity a point from which to make a new beginning. My heart beats and, following the rhythms of My heartbeat, the mountains leap for joy, the waters dance with joy, and the waves, keeping time, beat upon the rocky reefs. It is difficult to express what is in My heart. I want all unclean things to burn up into ashes under My gaze, I want all the sons of disobedience to disappear from before My eyes, never more to linger on in existence. Not only have I made a new beginning in the dwelling place of the great red dragon, I have also embarked on new work in the universe. Soon the kingdoms of the earth will become My kingdom; soon the kingdoms of the earth will forever cease to exist because of My kingdom, because I have already achieved victory, because I have returned triumphant. The great red dragon has exhausted every conceivable means to disrupt My plan, hoping to erase My work on the earth, but can I grow disheartened on account of its deceitful stratagems? Can I be frightened into losing confidence by its threats? There has never been a single being in either heaven or earth that I do not hold in the palm of My hand; how much the more is this true of the great red dragon, this device that serves as a foil to Me? Is it not also an object to be manipulated with My hands?

At the time of My incarnation in the human world, mankind arrived unwittingly at this day with the help of My guiding hand, came unwittingly to know Me. But, as for how to walk the path that lies ahead, no one has any inkling, no one is aware, and still less does anyone have a clue as to the direction in which that path will take him. Only with the Almighty watching over him will anyone be able to walk the path to the end; only guided by the lightning in the East will anyone be able to cross over the threshold leading to My kingdom. Among men, there has never been one who has seen My face, one who has seen the lightning in the East; how much the less, one who has heard the voice emanating from My throne? In fact, since the days of old, not one human being has directly come into contact with My person; only today, when I have come into the world, do men have a chance to see Me. But even now, men still do not know Me, just as they look only upon My face and hear only My voice, but without understanding what I mean. All human beings are like this. Being one of My people, do you not feel deep pride when you see My face? And do you not feel abject shame because you do not know Me? I walk among men, and I live among men, for I have become flesh and I have come into the human world. My aim is not merely to enable humanity to look upon My flesh; more importantly, it is to enable humanity to know Me. What is more, I will, through My incarnate flesh, convict humanity of his sins; I will, through My incarnate flesh, vanquish the

Although the human beings that populate the earth are as numerous as the stars, I know them all as clearly as I see the palm of My own hand. And, though the human beings that “love” Me are also as innumerable as the sands of the sea, only a few are chosen by Me: only those that pursue the bright light, who are apart from those who “love” Me. I do not overestimate man, nor do I underestimate him; rather, I make demands of man according to his natural attributes, and so what I require is the kind of man who sincerely seeks after Me—this is in order to attain My goal in choosing men. There are wild beasts without number in the mountains, but they are all as tame as sheep before Me; unfathomable mysteries lie underneath the ocean, but they present themselves to Me as clearly as all things upon the face of the earth; in the empyrean above are realms that man can never reach, yet I walk about freely in those inaccessible realms. Man has never recognized Me in the light, but has only seen Me in the world of darkness. Are you not in exactly the same situation today? It was at the climax of the great red dragon’s rampages that I formally put on the flesh to do My work. It was when the great red dragon revealed its true form for the first time that I bore witness to My name. When I walked about on the roads of mankind, not one being, not one person, was startled into wakefulness, and so when I was incarnate in the human world, nobody knew it. But when, in My incarnate flesh, I began to take up My work, then humanity awoke, was startled out of his dreams by My thunderous voice, and from this moment commenced upon life under My guidance. Among My people, I have once again started upon new work. Having said that My work on the earth is not finished, this is sufficient to prove that those people of whom I spoke previously are not the ones I had perceived Myself as needing, but nevertheless I am still counting chosen ones among these people. From this it becomes evident that I do this not only to enable My people to know the incarnate God, but also in order to cleanse My people. Due to the severity of My administrative decrees, a great majority of people are still in danger of being eliminated by Me. Unless you make every effort to deal with yourself, to subdue your own body, unless you do this, you will assuredly become an object that I despise and reject, to be cast down into hell, just as Paul received chastisement directly from My hands, from which there was no escape. Have you perhaps discovered something in My words? As before, it is still My intention to cleanse the church, to continue to purify the people I need, because I am God Himself, who is all holy and immaculate. I will make My temple not just iridescent with the colors of the rainbow, but also spotlessly clean, with an interior to match its exterior. In My presence, you should one and all think back on what you have done in the past, and decide whether you can today resolve to give Me perfect satisfaction in My heart.

It is not merely that man does not know Me in My flesh; even worse, he has failed to understand his own self that resides in a fleshly body. How many years has it been, and all this time human beings have deceived Me, treating Me as a guest from outside? How many times have they shut Me out from the door to their home? How many times have they, standing before Me, paid Me no heed? How many times have they renounced Me in the midst of other men? How many times have they denied Me in front of the devil? And how many times have they attacked Me with their bickering mouths? Yet I do not keep account of man's weaknesses, nor do I on account of his disobedience ask for a tooth in return for a tooth. All I have done is to apply medicine to his illnesses, in order to cure his incurable diseases, thereby restoring him to health, so that he may at last come to know Me. Has not all I have done been for the sake of humanity's survival, for the sake of giving humanity a chance at life? Many times I came into the world of men, but men did not, because I had come in My own person into the world, pay Me any regard; instead, each went about his own affairs, seeking a way out for himself. Little do they know that every single road below the heavens comes out from My hands! Little do they know that every single thing below the heavens is subject to My ordination! Which one of you dares to harbor resentment in his heart? Which one of you dares lightly to come to a settlement? I have just been quietly going about My work in humanity's midst, that is all. If, during the period of My incarnation, I had not cared for man's frailty, then all of humanity would, solely on account of My incarnation, have been frightened out of their wits and, as a result, fallen into Hades. It is only because I humbled Myself and hid Myself away that humanity has escaped catastrophe, met deliverance from My chastisement, and in this way arrived at today. Mindful of how difficult it was to arrive at today, should you not cherish all the more the tomorrow that is still to come?

THE THIRTEENTH UTTERANCE

Hidden within the proclamations of My voice are a number of My intentions. But man knows and understands nothing of these, and keeps receiving My words from the outside and following them from the outside, without being able to realize My heart or intuit My will from within My words. Even if I have made My words clear, has anyone understood? From Zion I came into mankind. Because I have put on the humanity of an ordinary man and clothed Myself in the skin of a man, men merely come to know My appearance from the outside, but they do not know the life that lies within Me, nor do they recognize the God of the Spirit, and only know the man of flesh. Could it be that the real God Himself is unworthy of your trying to know Him? Could it be that the real God Himself is unworthy of your making an effort to try to “dissect” Him? I detest the corruption of the whole human race, but I feel compassion for their weakness. I am also dealing with the old nature of the whole human race. As one of My people in China, are you not also a part of the human race? Among all My people, and among all My sons, that is, among the ones that I have chosen out of the whole human race, you belong to the lowest group. For this reason, I have expended the largest amount of energy on you, the greatest amount of effort. Do you still not cherish the blessed life that you enjoy today? Are you still hardening your hearts to rebel against Me and set upon your own designs? Were it not that I still have pity and love for you, the whole of humanity would long ago have fallen captive to Satan and turned into “delectable morsels” in its mouth. Today, in the midst of all humanity, those who genuinely expend themselves for Me and who genuinely love Me are still rare enough to be counted on the fingers of one hand. Could it be that today the title of^{a]} “My people” has already become your personal property? Has your conscience simply grown ice-cold? Are you truly worthy to become the people that I require? Thinking back on the past, and looking again at today, which of you has satisfied My heart? Which of you has shown genuine solicitude for My intentions? Had I not prompted you, you would still not have awakened, but would have remained as if in a frozen state, and again, as if in a state of hibernation.

In the midst of the roiling waves, man sees My wrath; in the tumbling welter of dark clouds, men are terrified out of their wits, and know not where to flee, as though in fear that the thunder and rain will wash them away. Then, after the swirling snowstorm has drifted past, their mood grows easy and lightsome as they delight in nature's beauteous scenery. But, at such moments, which one among them has ever experienced the boundless love I bear humanity? In their hearts is only My figure, but not the substance of My Spirit: Could it be that man is not openly defying Me? When the tempest has blown over, all mankind is as if renewed, as if, following refinement through tribulations, they have regained light and life. Did you not also, after enduring the blows I struck, have the good fortune to arrive at today? But, when today is gone and tomorrow comes, will you be able to keep the purity that followed upon the downpour? Will you be able to keep the devotion that followed upon your refinement? Will you be able to keep the obedience of today? Can your devotion remain steadfast and unchanging? Surely this is not a demand that lies beyond man's capacity to fulfill? Day by day, I live with men, and act together with men, in mankind's midst, but no one has ever noticed this. If not for the guidance of My Spirit, who out of the entire human race would still exist in the present age? Could it be that, when I say I live and act in the company of men, I am exaggerating? In the past, I said "I created humanity, and guided the whole of humanity, and commanded the whole of humanity"; was this not actually so? Could it possibly be that your experience of these things is insufficient? The mere phrase "service-doer" should be enough for you to spend the effort of a lifetime in explicating. Without actual experience, a human being would never come to know Me, would never be able to come to know Me through My words. But today I have come personally into your midst: Won't this facilitate your getting to know Me? Could it be that My incarnation is not also salvation for you? If I did not descend into mankind in My own person, the entire human race would long ago have been permeated with conceptions, which is to say, have become Satan's possessions, because what you believe in is merely Satan's image and has nothing whatever to do with God Himself. Is this not My salvation?

When Satan comes before Me, I do not recoil from its wild ferocity, nor am I frightened by its hideousness: I simply ignore it. When Satan tempts Me, I see through its trickery, causing it to slink away in shame and humiliation. When Satan fights with Me and tries to wrest away My chosen people, I go all-out with it in My flesh; and in My flesh I sustain and shepherd My people so that they may not easily fall down or get lost, and I lead them every step of the way. And when Satan retires in defeat, I will have been glorified in My people, and My people will have borne bright and resounding witness to Me. Hence, I will take the foils in My plan of management and cast them down once and for all into the bottomless pit. This is My plan, this is My work. In your lives, there may come a day when you will meet with this kind of situation: Would you willingly allow yourselves to fall captive to Satan, or will you have Me obtain you? This is your own fate, and you must think it over carefully.

Life in the kingdom is the life of the people and God Himself. All humanity lies under My care and protection, and all are engaged in a fight to the death with the great red dragon. In order to win this final battle, in order to finish off the great red dragon, all people should offer up their whole being to Me in My kingdom. When I say “kingdom,” what I mean is the life that is lived directly under the auspices of divinity, in which all humankind is shepherded by Me directly, is trained by Me directly, so that the lives of all humankind, though still on earth, are as if in heaven, a true embodiment of life in the third heaven. Although I am in My flesh, I do not suffer the limitations of the flesh. How many times have I come into man’s midst to listen to his prayers, and how many times have I, walking among men, enjoyed their praises? Even though human beings have never been aware of My existence, I still go about My work in this way. In My dwelling place, which is the place where I am hidden, nevertheless, in this My dwelling place, I have defeated all My enemies; in My dwelling place, I have gained real experience of living on earth; in My dwelling place, I am observing man’s every word and action, and watching over and dictating to the whole of the human race. If humanity could feel solicitude for My intentions, thereby satisfying My heart and giving Me pleasure, I would then surely bless all mankind. Is this not what I intend for humanity?

As mankind lies comatose, it is only through the peals of My thunder that human beings are aroused from their dreams. And when they open their eyes, many are hurt in the eye by these blasts of cold radiance, to the point of losing their sense of direction, and knowing not whence they come nor whither they are going. Most people are struck by the laser-like beams and as a result collapse in a heap under the tempest, their bodies swept away by the gushing torrents, leaving behind no trace. In the light, the survivors are finally able to see My face clearly, and only then do they come to know something of My external appearance, to the point where they no longer dare to look Me directly in the face, deeply fearful lest I visit My chastisement and curses once more upon their flesh. How many people break down in uncontrollable sobbing? How many fall into despair? How many form rivers with their blood? How many become corpses drifting aimlessly this way and that? How many people, finding their own place in the light, feel the sudden pang of heartache and shed tears for their long years of unhappiness? How many people, under the ominous glare of the light, confess their uncleanness and resolve upon self-reformation? How many people, being blinded, have already lost the joy of living and in consequence have no mind to take notice of the light, and thus continue to stagnate, waiting for their end? And how many people are hoisting up the sails of life and, under the guidance of the light, eagerly anticipate their tomorrow? ... Today, who among mankind does not exist in this state? Who does not exist within My light? Even if you are strong, or supposing you are weak, how can you avoid the coming of My light?

THE FOURTEENTH UTTERANCE

Throughout the ages, no human has entered the kingdom and thus none has enjoyed the grace of the Age of Kingdom, none has seen the King of the kingdom. Though under the illumination of My Spirit many people have prophesied the kingdom's beauty, they know but its exterior, not its significance within. Today, as the kingdom comes into formal existence on earth, most of humanity still knows not just what is to be accomplished, what realm man is ultimately to be brought to, during the Age of Kingdom. About this, I'm afraid all men are in a state of confusion. Because the day of the kingdom's complete realization has not fully come, all men are befuddled, unable to see it clearly. My work in divinity begins formally with the Age of Kingdom. It is with the formal start of the Age of Kingdom that My disposition begins to progressively manifest itself to man. Thus at this moment the holy trumpet formally begins to sound and proclaim to all. When I formally take My power and reign as King in the kingdom, all My people shall over time be made complete by Me. When all the nations of the world are disrupted, that is precisely when My kingdom will be established and shaped and also when I will be transfigured and turn to the entire universe. At that time, all people shall see My glorious face, see My true countenance. From the creation of the world to the present, humanity has been corrupted by Satan to the extent that exists today. With man's corruption, I have become more and more concealed from humans and increasingly unfathomable to them. Man has never seen My true face, never directly interacted with Me. Only in hearsay and myth has there been a "Me" of man's imagination. I therefore accord with human imagination, that is, with human conceptions, to tackle the "Me" in men's minds, that I might change the state of "Me" that they have harbored for myriad years. This is My work principle. Not a single person has been able to know it through and through. Although men have prostrated themselves to Me and come before Me to worship Me, I do not enjoy such acts of men because in their hearts they hold not My image, but an image exterior to Me. Therefore, their mind lacking My disposition, they know nothing about My true face. Therefore, when they believe they have resisted Me or offended My administrative decrees, I yet turn a blind eye. And therefore, in their memories, I am a God who shows mercy on men rather than chastises them, or I am God Himself who does not mean what He says. These are all imaginations born of human thought and not in accordance with the facts.

I stand over the universe day after day, observing, and I humbly hide Myself in My dwelling place to experience human life, closely studying man's every deed. No one has ever truly offered up himself to Me. No one has ever pursued the truth. No one has ever been conscientious for Me. No one has ever made resolutions before Me and kept to his duty. No one has ever allowed Me to dwell in him. No one has valued Me as he would his own life. No one has ever seen in practical reality the whole being of My divinity. No one has ever been willing to be in contact with the practical God Himself. When the waters swallow men whole, I save them from the stagnant waters and give them a chance to have life anew. When men lose their confidence to live, I pull them up from the brink of death, granting them the courage to live, that they take Me as the foundation of their existence. When men disobey Me, I cause them to know Me in their disobedience. In light of humanity's old nature and in light of My mercy, rather than putting humans to death, I allow them to repent and make a fresh start. When men suffer famine, I wrest them from death so long as they have one breath left, preventing them from falling prey to Satan's trickery. How many times have people seen My hands; how many times have they seen My kind countenance, seen My smiling face; and how many times have they seen My majesty, seen My wrath. Though humanity has never known Me, I do not seize upon their weakness to make unnecessary trouble. Experiencing humanity's hardships, I thus sympathize with man's weakness. It is only in response to men's disobedience, their ingratitude, that I mete out chastisements in varying degrees.

I conceal Myself in men's times of busyness and reveal Myself in their times of leisure. Humanity imagines Me to be omniscient and the God Himself who grants all pleas. Most therefore come before Me only to seek God's help, not owing to a desire to know Me. When in the throes of illness, men urgently plead My aid. When in adversity, they confide their difficulties to Me with all their might the better to shed their suffering. Yet not a single human being has been able to also love Me whilst in comfort. Not a single person has reached out in their time of peace and happiness that I might partake of their joy. When their immediate family is happy and well, men already cast Me aside or shut the door on Me, prohibiting Me from entering, and thus enjoying the family's blessed happiness. The human mind is too narrow, too narrow even to hold a God as loving, merciful, and touchable as I. How many times was I rejected by men in their time of joyous laughter; how many times was I leaned upon as a crutch by men as they stumbled; how many times was I forced into the role of doctor by men suffering illness. How cruel is mankind! Utterly unreasonable and immoral. Not even the feelings that humans are supposedly equipped with can be perceived in them. They are nearly devoid of any human touch. Ponder the past and compare it to the present. Are changes taking place within you? Is less of that past at play in the present? Or has that past yet to be replaced?

Over hill and down dale I have traversed, experiencing the ups and downs of the world. Among men I have roamed and among men I have lived for many a year, yet it appears that humanity's disposition has changed little. And it is as if men's old nature has taken root and sprouted in them. Never are they able to change that old nature, only to improve it somewhat upon the original foundation. As people say, the essence has not changed, but the form has changed much. Everyone, it seems, is trying to fool Me, to dazzle Me, that he might slip by and win My appreciation. I neither admire nor pay attention to people's tricks. Rather than flying into a rage, I adopt an attitude of looking but not seeing. I plan to grant humanity a certain degree of laxity and, thereafter, deal with all humans as one. As humans are all un-self-respecting and worthless wretches, cherishing not themselves, why then would they even need Me to show renewed mercy and love? Without exception, men do not know themselves, and do not know their heft. They should put themselves on a scale to be weighed. Humanity pays Me no heed, thus neither do I take them seriously. Humans pay no attention to Me, so neither do I need to exert effort on them. Is this not the best of both worlds? Does this not describe you, My people? Who has made resolutions before Me and not discarded them afterward? Who has made long-term resolutions before Me rather than resolved frequently on this and that? Always, men make resolutions before Me in times of ease and write them all off in times of adversity. Later they pick their resolve back up and set it before Me. Am I so disrespectful that I would casually accept the junk that man has picked up from the garbage heap? Few humans hold fast to their resolutions, few are chaste, and few offer their most precious as their sacrifice to Me. Are all of you not this same way? If, as one of My people in the kingdom, you are unable to keep to your duty, you will be detested and rejected by Me!

THE FIFTEENTH UTTERANCE

Man is a creature without self-knowledge. Yet, unable to know himself, he nevertheless knows everyone else like the palm of his hand, as though all others have first passed his inspection and received his approval before they say or do anything, and hence as though he has taken the full measure of all others down to their psychological state.

Human beings are all like this. Man has entered into the Age of Kingdom today, but his nature remains unchanged. He still does as I do in front of Me, but behind My back he starts getting up to his own unique "business." Once that's over and he comes before Me again, however, he is like a different person, seeming audaciously calm, features composed, pulse steady. Is this not precisely what makes man so despicable? How many people wear two completely different faces, one in front of Me and another one behind My back? How many of them are like newborn lambs before Me but behind Me turn into ravening tigers, and then become like little birds flitting merrily about in the hills? How many show purpose and resolve in front of Me? How many come before Me, seeking My words with thirst and longing but, behind My back, grow sick of them and renounce them, as though My words were an encumbrance? So many times, seeing the human race corrupted by My enemy, I have given up placing My hopes in mankind. So many times, seeing man come before Me in tears to sue for pardon, but on account of his lack of self-respect, his stubborn incorrigibility, I have closed My eyes to his action in anger, even when his heart is genuine and his intentions sincere. So many times, I see man capable of having faith to cooperate with Me, and how, before Me, he seems to be lying in My embrace, tasting the warmth of My embrace. So many times, seeing the innocence, liveliness, and loveliness of My chosen people, in My heart I have always taken pleasure on account of these things. Human beings know not how to enjoy their predestined blessing in My hands, because they do not know what is ultimately meant by either blessing or suffering. For this reason, mankind is far from sincere in their quest for Me. If there were no such thing as tomorrow, which of you, standing before Me, would be as white as the driven snow, as unspotted as pure jade? Surely your love for Me is not something that can be exchanged for a delicious meal, or a classy suit of clothes, or high office with handsome emoluments? Or can it be exchanged for the love that others bear you? Surely, undergoing trial will not drive man to abandon his love for Me? Surely, suffering and tribulation will not cause him to complain against what I have arranged? No man has ever truly appreciated the sword in My mouth: He knows only its surface meaning without truly grasping the inner. If human beings were genuinely able to see the sharpness of My sword, they would go scurrying like rats into their holes. Because of their numbness, human beings understand nothing of the true meaning of

My words, and so they have no clue as to how formidable My words are, or just how much of their nature is revealed, and how much of their corruption has received judgment, within those words. For this reason, based on their half-baked ideas about My words, most people have taken up a lukewarm and noncommittal attitude.

Within the kingdom, not only do utterances issue forth from My mouth, but My feet tread ceremoniously everywhere upon the ground. In this way, I have triumphed over all unclean and filthy places, so that not only is heaven changing, but earth also is in the process of change, soon thereafter to be renewed. Within the cosmos, everything becomes new in the radiance of My glory, presenting a heartwarming aspect that ravishes the senses and lifts the spirits, as if man now exists in a heaven beyond the heavens, as conceived in the human imagination, unmolested by Satan, free from the assaults of enemies from outside. Above the cosmos, the myriad stars take up their appointed places at My command, beaming their light through the astral regions in the hours of darkness. Not one single being dares to harbor thoughts of recalcitrance, and so, in accordance with the substance of My administrative decrees, the entire universe is well regulated and in perfect order: No disturbance has ever arisen, nor has the unity of the cosmos ever been broken. I execute flying leaps above the stars, and when the sun shoots forth its rays, I blot out their warmth, sending giant flurries of snowflakes as big as goose feathers drifting down from My hands. But when I change My mind, all the snow melts into a river. In a moment, spring has sprung everywhere beneath the skies, and emerald green transforms the entire landscape upon the earth. I go wandering above the firmament, and immediately, the earth is shrouded in pitch-black darkness because of My shape: Without warning, “night” has arrived, and throughout the world it is so dark that one cannot see the hand in front of one’s face. With the light’s extinction, mankind seizes the moment to embark on a rampage of mutual destruction, snatching and plundering one from another. The nations of the earth, falling into chaotic disunity, enter upon a state of muddy turbulence, to the point where they are past redemption. Men struggle in the throes of suffering, moan and groan in the midst of suffering, set up a piteous wail in their suffering, yearning for the light to come into their midst once again and so end the days of darkness and restore the vitality that was once existing. But I have long since left man with a flick of My sleeves, never again to take pity on him for the wrongs of the world: Long have I detested and rejected the people of the whole world, closed My eyes to the conditions on earth, turned My face away from man's every move, his every gesture, and ceased to take pleasure in his babyhood and innocence. I have embarked on another plan to make the world anew, so that this new world may find rebirth betimes and no longer be submerged. In humanity's midst, how many outlandish states are waiting for Me to set them to rights, how many mistakes for Me to come in person to prevent them from happening, how much dust for Me to sweep away, how many mysteries for Me to unveil: All humanity awaits Me, and longs for My coming.

On earth, I am the practical God Himself in the hearts of men; in heaven, I am the Master of all creation. I have climbed mountains and forded rivers, and I have also drifted in and out of humanity's midst. Who dares openly to oppose the practical God Himself? Who dares to break away from the sovereignty of the Almighty? Who dares to assert that I am, beyond the shadow of a doubt, in heaven? Again, who dares to assert that I am, without the slightest chance of error, on earth? There is no one in all of humanity capable of articulating in every detail the places where I reside. Could it be that, when I am in heaven, I am then the supernatural God Himself? Could it be that, when I am on earth, I am then the practical God Himself? That I am the Ruler of all creation, or that I experience the sufferings of the human world—surely these cannot determine whether or not I am the practical God Himself? If man thinks so,^[a] is not he benighted beyond all hope? I am in heaven; I am also on earth; I am among the myriad things of creation, and also in the midst of the myriads of people. Man can touch Me every day; moreover, he can see Me every day. As far as humanity is concerned, I seem to be sometimes hidden and sometimes visible; I seem to have real existence, and yet I seem also not to have being. In Me lie mysteries unfathomable to humanity. It is as though all men are peering at Me through a microscope in order to discover even more mysteries in Me, hoping thereby to dispel that uncomfortable feeling in their hearts. But even were they to use a fluoroscope, how could humanity uncover any of the secrets lodged in Me?

When My people, through My working, are glorified together with Me, at that moment the great red dragon's lair will be unearthed, all the mud and dirt swept clean away, and the polluted water, accumulated over countless years, dried up in My burning fires, to exist no more. Thereupon the great red dragon will perish in the lake of fire and brimstone. Are you truly willing to remain under My watchful care so as not to be snatched away by the dragon? Do you really hate its deceitful stratagems? Who is able to bear staunch witness for Me? For the sake of My name, for the sake of My Spirit, for the sake of My whole plan of management—who is able to offer up all the strength in his body? Today, when the kingdom is in the world of men, is the time that I have come in person into the world of men. If this were not so, is there anyone who could, intrepidly, go into the battlefield in My behalf? So that the kingdom may take shape, so that My heart may be contented, and again, so that My day may come, so that the time may come when the myriad things of creation are reborn and grow abundant, so that man may be rescued out of the sea of suffering, so that tomorrow may come, and so that it may be wondrous, and blossom and flourish, and again, so that the enjoyment of the future may come to pass, all of humanity is striving with all their might, sparing nothing in sacrificing themselves for Me. Is this not a sign that victory is already Mine, and a mark of the completion of My plan?

The more that men dwell in the last days, the more they will feel the emptiness of the world and the less courage they will have for living life. For this reason, countless people have died in disappointment, countless others have been disappointed in their quest, and countless others suffer themselves to be manipulated in Satan's hands. I have rescued so many people, succored so many, and, so often, when human beings have lost the light, I have moved them back into a place of light, so that they might know Me within the light, and enjoy Me in the midst of happiness. Because of the coming of My light, adoration grows in the hearts of the people who dwell in My kingdom, for I am a God for humanity to love, a God to whom humanity clings in fond attachment, and mankind is filled with an abiding impression of My figure. But, when all is said and done, there is no one who understands whether this is the working of the Spirit, or a function of the flesh. This one thing alone is sufficient for man to experience in minute detail through the course of a lifetime. Man has never despised Me in his heart's innermost reaches; rather, he cleaves to Me in the depths of his spirit. My wisdom raises his admiration, the wonders that I work are a feast for his eyes, My words boggle his mind, and yet he cherishes them dearly. My reality renders man at a loss, dumbfounded and perplexed, and yet he is willing to accept it all. Is this not precisely the measure of man as he really is?

THE SIXTEENTH UTTERANCE

There is so much that I wish to say to man, so many things that I must tell him. But man's abilities of acceptance are too lacking: He is incapable of fully grasping My words according to that which I provide, and only understands one aspect but remains ignorant of the other. Yet I do not put man to death because of his powerlessness, nor am I aggrieved by his weakness. I merely do My work, and speak as I have always done, even though man does not understand My will; when the day comes, people will know Me in the depths of their hearts, and will remember Me in their thoughts. When I depart from this earth will exactly be when I ascend to the throne in man's heart, which is to say, it will be when all men know Me. So, too, will it be when My sons and people rule over the earth. Those who know Me will assuredly become the pillars of My kingdom, and none but they will be qualified to rule and wield power in My kingdom. All those who know Me are possessed of My being, and able to live out Me among all men. I care not to what extent man knows Me: No one can hinder My work in any way, and man can offer Me no assistance and do nothing for Me. Man can only follow My guidance in My light, and seek My will in this light. Today, people have become qualified, and believe they can strut about in front of Me, and laugh and joke with Me without the slightest inhibition, and address Me as an equal. Still man does not know Me, still he believes that in essence we are about the same, that we are both of flesh and blood, and both dwell in the human world. His reverence for Me is too meager; he reveres Me when he is before Me, but is incapable of serving Me before the Spirit. It is as if, for man, the Spirit does not exist at all. As a result, no man has ever known the Spirit; in My incarnation, people see only a body of flesh and blood, and do not perceive the Spirit of God. Can My will really be accomplished in such a way? People are experts at deceiving Me; they seem to have been pecially trained by Satan in order to fool Me. Yet I am untroubled by Satan. I will still use My wisdom to conquer the whole of mankind and to defeat the corrupter of all mankind, in order that My kingdom may be established on earth.

Among man, there are those who have attempted to ascertain the size of the stars, or the magnitude of space. Yet never has their research proved fruitful, and they can but hang their heads in dismay and resign themselves to failure. Looking up among all men and observing the dynamics of man in his failures, I see none who are utterly convinced of Me, none who obey Me and submit to Me. How wild are the ambitions of man! When the entire face of the deep was murky, among man I began to taste the bitterness of the world. My Spirit travels throughout the world and looks upon the hearts of all people, yet so, too, do I conquer mankind in My incarnate flesh. Man does not see Me, for he is blind; man does not know Me, for he has grown numb; man opposes Me, for he is disobedient; man comes to bow down before Me, for he has been conquered by Me; man comes to love Me, for I am inherently worthy of man's love; man lives out Me and manifests Me, because My power and My wisdom make him after My heart. I have a place in man's heart, but never have I received man's love of Me in his spirit. There are indeed things in man's spirit that he loves above all else, but I am not one of them, and so man's love is like a soap bubble: When the wind blows it pops and is gone, never to be seen again. I have always been constant and unchanging in My attitude toward man. Could any among man have done the same? In the eyes of man, I am as impalpable and invisible as air, and for this reason the great majority of people seek only in the boundless sky, or upon the rolling sea, or upon the placid lake, or among empty letters and doctrines. There is not a single person who knows the substance of mankind, much less is there one who can say anything of the mystery within Me, and so I do not ask that man achieve the highest of standards that he imagines I require of him.

Amid My words, mountains topple, waters flow in reverse, man becomes submissive, and lakes begin to flow without cease. Though the roiling seas surge angrily toward the sky, amid My words such seas are becalmed like the surface of a lake. With the slightest wave of My hand, fierce gales immediately dissipate and depart from Me, and the human world is immediately returned to tranquility. But when I unleash My wrath, the mountains are immediately torn asunder, the ground immediately begins to convulse, water immediately dries up, and man is immediately beset by disaster. Because of My wrath, I pay no heed to the screams of man, provide no assistance in answer to his cries, for My anger is rising. When I am among the heavens, never have the stars been thrown into panic by My presence. Instead, they put their hearts into their work for Me, and so I bestow more light upon them and make them shine more brilliantly, so that they gain greater glory for Me. The brighter the heavens, the darker the world beneath; so many people have complained that My arrangements are unbecoming, so many have left Me to make their own kingdom, which they employ to betray Me, and reverse the state of darkness. Yet who has achieved this by their resolve? And who has been successful in their resolution? Who can reverse that which has been arranged by My hand? When spring spreads across the land, I secretly and quietly send light to the world, so that, on earth, man has a fleeting sense of freshness in the air. Yet at that very moment, I obscure the eyes of man, so that he sees only a fog cloaking the ground, and all people and things are rendered indistinct. People can but sigh to themselves, Why did the light last only for a moment? Why does God give man only fog and haziness? Amid people's despair, the fog disappears in an instant, but when they spy a glimmer of light, I unleash a torrent of rain upon them, and their eardrums are shattered by the thunderstorm as they sleep. Seized by panic, they have no time to take shelter, and are engulfed by the downpour. In an instant, all things beneath the heavens are washed clean in the midst of My wrathful ire. People no longer complain about the onset of heavy rain, and in them all is born reverence. Because of this sudden onslaught of rain, the great majority of people are drowned by the water that rains down from the sky, becoming corpses in the water. I look upon the entire earth and see that many are awakening, that many are repenting, that many are searching for the source of the waters in little boats, that many are bowing down to Me to ask for My forgiveness, that many have seen the light, that many have seen My face, that many have the courage to live, and that the whole world has been transformed. Following this great torrent of rain, all things have returned to how I pictured them in My mind, and are no longer disobedient. Before long, the whole land is filled with the sound of laughter, everywhere on earth there is an atmosphere of praise, and nowhere is without My glory. My wisdom is everywhere on earth, and throughout the entire universe. Among all things are the fruits of My wisdom, among all people teem the masterworks of My wisdom; everything is like all things in My kingdom, and all people dwell in rest beneath My heavens like the sheep upon My pastures. I move above all men and am watching everywhere. Nothing ever looks old, and no person is as he used to be. I rest upon the throne, I recline across the whole universe, and I am fully satisfied, for all things have recovered their holiness, and I can peacefully reside within Zion once again, and the people on earth can lead serene, contented lives under My guidance. All peoples are managing everything in My hand, all peoples have regained their former intelligence and original appearance; they are no longer covered with dust, but, in My kingdom, are as pure as jade, each with the face like that of the holy one within man's heart, for My kingdom has been established among man.

THE SEVENTEENTH UTTERANCE

My voice rings out like thunder, illuminating all four quadrants and the whole earth, and in the midst of thunder and lightning, humanity is struck down. No man has ever stayed firm in the midst of thunder and lightning: Most men are terrified out of their wits at the coming of My light and know not what to do. When a faint glimmer of light begins to show in the East, many people, moved by this tenuous luminescence, are instantaneously roused from their illusions. Yet no one has ever realized that the day has come when My light descends upon the earth. The great majority of men are dumbstruck by the sudden advent of the light; some of them, with a gaze of curious fascination, observe the light's movements and from what direction it is approaching; or some stand at the ready as they face the light, that they might more clearly understand the source whence the light comes. Be this as it may, has anyone ever discovered how precious is the light of today? Has anyone ever awakened to the strangeness of the light? The great majority of men are merely bewildered; they are wounded in the eyes and cast down into the mud by the light. One could say that, under this nebulous light, the earth lies blanketed under chaos, making an unbearably sorry sight that, examined closely, assails one with an overwhelming melancholy. From this one gathers that, when the light is at its strongest, the state of the earth will be such that it cannot allow mankind to stand up before Me. Humanity lies in the radiance of the light; again, humanity lies in the salvation of the light but at the same time also under the wounds inflicted by the light: Is there anyone who does not lie under the light's killing blows? Is there anyone who can escape the burning of the light? I have walked all over the face of the earth, strewing with My hands the seeds of My Spirit, so that all humanity upon the earth will on this account be moved by Me. From heaven's highest height, I look down upon the whole earth, watching the grotesque and fantastic phenomena of the creatures on earth. The surface of the ocean seems to be suffering the shock of an earthquake: Seabirds fly this way and that, looking for fish to swallow up. Meanwhile, this is completely unknown at the bottom of the sea, which the surface conditions are utterly unable to rouse into consciousness, because the ocean's bottom is as serene as the third heaven: Here living things great and small coexist in harmony, never once engaging in "conflicts of mouth and tongue." Among the myriad bizarre and whimsical phenomena, humanity is the one that finds it most difficult to please Me. This is because the position I have given man is too high, and so his ambition is too great, and in his eyes there is always a measure of rebelliousness. Within My discipline of man, within My judgment of him, there has been much that is painstaking, much that is compassionate, but of these things mankind has not the least inkling. I have never treated any human being harshly: I have only, when mankind has been disobedient, administered suitable corrections, and only, when mankind has been weak, proffered suitable help. But, when humanity keeps aloof from Me and moreover makes use of Satan's deceitful stratagems to rebel against Me, I will forthwith exterminate mankind, leaving men no chance to make a grand display of their skills in front of Me, so that they will no longer be able to swagger about with pomp and circumstance, bullying others, upon the face of the earth.

I wield My authority upon the earth, unfolding My work in its entirety. All that is in My work is reflected upon the face of the earth; mankind has never, on earth, been able to grasp My movements in heaven, nor to ponder exhaustively the orbits and trajectories of My Spirit. The vast majority of human beings only grasp the minutiae that lie outside the spirit, without being able to comprehend the actual state of the spirit. The demands that I make of humanity do not issue from the vague I that am in heaven, or from the imponderable I that am on the earth: I make suitable demands according to the stature of man on earth. I have never put anyone in difficulties, nor have I ever asked anyone to “squeeze out his blood” for My pleasure: Could it be that My demands are limited only to these conditions? Of the myriad creatures on earth, which one does not submit to the dispositions of the words in My mouth? Which of these creatures, coming before Me, is not completely incinerated through My words and My burning fire? Which of these creatures dares to strut about in proud exultation in front of Me? Which of these creatures does not bow down before Me? Am I the God that merely imposes silence on creation? Of the myriad things in creation, I choose those that satisfy My intention; of the myriad human beings in mankind, I choose those who care for My heart. I choose the best of all the stars, thereby adding a faint gleam of light to My kingdom. I go walking upon the earth, dispersing My fragrance everywhere, and in every place I leave behind My form. Each and every place reverberates with the sound of My voice. People everywhere linger nostalgically over the beauteous scenes of yesterday, for all humanity is remembering the past. ...

All humanity longs to see My face, but when I descend in person upon the earth, they are all averse to My coming, they all chase away the light from coming, as if I were man’s enemy in heaven. Man greets Me with a defensive light in his eyes, and remains constantly on the alert, deeply afraid that I might have other plans for him. Because human beings regard Me as an unfamiliar friend, they feel as if I bear the intent of killing them indiscriminately. In man’s eyes, I am a deadly antagonist. Having tasted My warmth in the midst of calamity, man is nevertheless still unaware of My love, and is still bent on fending Me off and defying Me. Far from taking advantage of his being in this condition to take action against him, I enfold man in the warmth of embrace, fill his mouth with sweetness, and put needful food into his stomach. But, when My wrathful ire shakes the mountains and rivers, I will no longer, on account of man’s cowardice, bestow on him these different forms of succor. At this moment, I will wax furious, refusing all living things a chance to repent and, abandoning all hope of man, I will mete out the punishment that he so richly deserves. At this time, thunder and lightning flash and roar, like the ocean’s waves raging in anger, like ten thousand mountains crashing down. For his rebelliousness, mankind is felled by the thunder and lightning, other creatures are wiped out in the blasts of thunder and lightning, the whole universe descends abruptly into chaos, and creation is unable to recover the primal breath of life. The myriad hosts of humanity cannot escape from the thunder's roar; in the midst of flashes of lightning, human beings, horde upon horde, topple over into the swiftly flowing stream, to be swept away by torrents cascading down from the mountains. All of a sudden, in mankind's place of refuge there converges a world of men. Corpses drift about on the ocean's surface. All of humanity goes far away from Me on account of My wrath, for man has offended against the essence of My Spirit, his rebellion has displeased Me. But, in the places empty of water, other men are still enjoying, amid laughter and song, the promises that I have vouchsafed unto them.

When the whole of humanity quiets down, I emit a gleam of light before its gaze. Thereupon, men become clear of mind and bright of eye, and cease to be willing to keep silent; thus, spiritual feeling is summoned up in their hearts immediately. At this time, all humanity is resurrected. Casting aside their unspoken grievances, all men come before Me, having won another chance at survival through the words that I proclaim. This is because human beings all wish to live on the face of the earth. Yet who among them has ever had the intention of living for My sake? Who among them has ever uncovered splendid things in him to give Me pleasure? Who among them has ever detected a seductive scent on Me? Human beings are all made of coarse and unrefined stuff: On the outside, they seem to dazzle the eyes, but in their essential selves they do not love Me sincerely, because in the deep recesses of the human heart there has never been even the smallest measure of Me. Man is too lacking: Comparing him with Myself, it would appear that we are as far apart as earth from heaven. But, even so, I do not attack man in his weak and vulnerable spots, nor do I laugh him to scorn on account of his deficiencies. My hands have been working^[a] on earth for thousands of years, and all the while My eyes have kept watch over all of humanity. But I have never casually taken up a single human life to play with as if it were a toy. I observe the heart's blood of man, and I understand the price that he has paid. As he stands before Me, I do not wish to take advantage of man's defenselessness to chastise him, nor to bestow upon him undesirable things. Instead, I have only provided for man, and given unto man, all this time. And so, what man enjoys is entirely My grace, entirely the bounty that comes from My hand. Because I am on earth, man has never had to suffer the torments of hunger. Rather, I allow man to receive from My hands the things that he may enjoy, and allow mankind to live within My blessings. Does not all of mankind live under My chastisement? Just as the mountains hold in their depths things of plenty and abundance, and the waters in their capaciousness things to be enjoyed, do not the people living within My words today have, all the more, the food that they appreciate and taste? I am on earth, and mankind enjoys My blessings on earth. When I leave the earth behind, which is also when My work reaches its completion, at that time, humankind will no longer receive any accommodation from Me on account of their weakness.

THE EIGHTEENTH UTTERANCE

In a flash of lightning, every animal is revealed in its true form. So too, illuminated by My light, human beings have regained the sanctity they once possessed. Oh, that the corrupt world of the past has at last toppled over into the filthy water and, sinking below the surface, dissolved into mud! Oh, that all the humanity I created has at last come back to life again in the light, found the foundation for existence, and ceased to struggle in the mud! Oh, the myriad things of creation that I hold in My hands! How can they not, through My words, be renewed? How can they not, in the light, give play to their functions? Earth is no longer still and silent, heaven no longer desolate and sad. Heaven and earth, no longer separated by a void, are united as one, never to be sundered again. On this jubilant occasion, at this moment of exultation, My righteousness and My holiness have gone abroad throughout the universe, and all mankind extols them without surcease. The cities of heaven are laughing with joy, and the kingdoms of earth are dancing with joy. Who at this moment is not rejoicing? And who at this moment is not weeping? Earth in its primordial state belongs to heaven, and heaven is united with earth. Man is the cord uniting heaven and earth, and thanks to his sanctity, thanks to his renewal, heaven is no longer concealed from earth, and earth is no longer silent toward heaven. The faces of humanity are wreathed in smiles of gratification, and secreted in their hearts is a sweetness that knows no bounds. Man does not quarrel with man, nor do men come to blows with one another. Are there any who, in My light, do not live peacefully with others? Are there any who, in My day, disgrace My name? All human beings direct their reverential gaze toward Me, and in their hearts they secretly cry out to Me. I have searched humanity's every action: Among the human beings who have been cleansed, there are none that are disobedient to Me, none that pass judgment on Me. All humanity is suffused with My disposition. Everyone is coming to know Me, is drawing closer to Me, and is adoring Me. I stand fast in the spirit of man, am exalted to the highest pinnacle in man's eyes, and flow through the blood in his veins. The joyous exaltation in men's hearts fills every place on the face of the earth, the air is brisk and fresh, dense fogs no longer blanket the ground, and the sun shines resplendent.

Now, look upon My kingdom, where I am King over all, and where I reign over all. From the beginning of creation until the present day, My sons have, guided by Me, undergone so many of life's hardships, so many of injustices from the world, so many ups and downs of the world, but now they dwell in My light. Who does not weep at yesterday's injustices? Who does not shed tears at the hardships of getting to today? And again, are there any who do not take this occasion to dedicate themselves to Me? Are there any who do not take this opportunity to give vent to the passion swelling in their hearts? Are there any who, at this moment, do not give voice to what they have experienced? At this time, all human beings are consecrating the best part of themselves to Me. How many are tormented with regret for the benighted follies of yesterday, how many abominate themselves for yesterday's pursuits! Human beings have all come to know themselves, they have all seen Satan's deeds and My wonderfulness, and inside their hearts a place has been established for Me. No longer will I meet with aversion or renunciation among men, for My great work has already been accomplished, and is hindered no more. Today, among the sons of My kingdom, are there any who have not taken thought in their own behalf? Are there any who do not have additional cause for worry on account of the ways in which My work is done? Are there any who have sincerely offered up themselves for My sake? Have the impurities inside your hearts lessened? Or have they increased? If the impure elements in your hearts have become neither less nor more, such people I will assuredly throw away. What I want are saints who are after My heart, not unclean spirits that rebel against Me. Even though I do not ask much of humanity, the inner world of men's hearts is so complicated that humanity cannot readily accord with My will or immediately satisfy My desires. The great majority of human beings are secretly exerting themselves in hopes of being able to lay hold of the crowning laurel in the end. The great majority of human beings are striving with all their might, not daring to slacken for even a moment, fearful of falling captive to Satan a second time. They dare not presume any longer to harbor grievances against Me, but are constant in showing their loyalty before Me. I have heard the words spoken from the heart by so many people, the accounts told by so many people about the painful experiences in the midst of suffering; I have seen so many, in the direst straits, unfailingly offer up their loyalty to Me, and watched so many, as they walked the rocky path, struggle to find a way out. In these circumstances, they have never complained; even when, unable to find the light, they grew a little dejected, they have never once complained. But I have also heard so many people giving vent to curses from the depths of their hearts, imprecating Heaven and accusing earth, and I have seen, too, so many people abandon themselves to despair in the midst of their distress, throwing themselves away like garbage into a dustbin, to be covered up with filth and grime. I have heard so many people quarreling one with another, because a change in position, with accompanying changes of "face," has led to a change in their relationships with their fellow human beings, so that friends cease to be friends and become enemies, attacking each other with their mouths. The great majority of people use My words like bullets from a machine gun, opening fire on others unawares, until the world of men is everywhere filled with a noisy clamor that shatters the tranquil calm. Fortunately, it is now today; otherwise who knows how many might have perished under the relentless barrage of this machine gun fire.

Following the words that issue forth from Me, and keeping pace with the conditions of all humanity, My kingdom, step by step, descends onto the earth. No longer does man harbor worrisome thoughts, or "take account of" other people, or "take thought" in their behalf. And so, contentious disputes are no more, and, following the words that issue forth from Me, the sundry “weapons” of the modern age too are withdrawn. Man finds peace again with man, the human heart once more radiates a spirit of harmony, no longer is anyone on the defensive against covert attack. All mankind has returned to normal and embarked upon a new life. Existing in the new surroundings, a goodly number of people look around them, feeling as if they have entered into a brand-new world, and because of this they are not able to adapt to their present environment right away or get straight onto the right track. And so it's a case of “the spirit is willing but the flesh is weak” as far as humanity is concerned. Although I have not, like man, tasted the bitterness of adversity Myself, I do know all there is to know about his inadequacies. I am intimately acquainted with man's needs, and My understanding of his weaknesses is complete. For this reason, I do not make fun of man for his shortcomings; I only administer, depending on his unrighteous deeds, a fitting measure of “education,” the better to enable everyone to get onto the right track, so that humanity will cease to be wandering orphans and become cherished babies with a home. Nevertheless, My actions are governed by principles. If human beings are unwilling to enjoy the bliss that is in Me, all I can do is to go along with their desires and send them into the bottomless pit. At this point, no one should harbor grievances in his heart anymore, but all should be able to see My righteousness in the arrangements I have made. I do not compel humanity to love Me, nor do I strike any human being for loving Me. In Me is total freedom, total release. Though man's fate rests in My hands, I have given man a free will, which is not subject to My control. In this way, human beings will not invent ways of getting into trouble on account of My administrative decrees, but will rather, relying on My magnanimity, win release. And so many people, far from being held in restraint to Me, go seeking their own way out in the act of being released.

I have always treated humanity with a liberal hand, never setting insoluble problems, never putting any single person in difficulty; is this not so? Although a great many people do not love Me, far from being vexed by this kind of attitude, I have given human beings freedom, allowing them leeway to the extent of letting them swim about in the bitter sea. For man is a vessel not to be prized: Though he sees the blessing that I hold in My hand, he has no interest in enjoying it, but would rather pluck a scourge from the hand of Satan, thereby dooming himself to be sucked up by Satan as “nourishment.” Of course, there are some who have seen My light with their eyes, and so, even though they are living in the mists of the present time, they have not on account of these obscuring mists lost faith in the light, but continue to grope and seek through the mists—albeit along a path strewn with obstacles. When man rebels against Me, I hurl My wrathful ire upon him, and so man may perish by his disobedience. When he obeys Me, I remain hidden from him, in this way exciting a love in the depth of his heart, a love that seeks not to cozen but to afford Me enjoyment. How many times, in man's quest for Me, have I closed My eyes and kept silent, in order to elicit his true faith? But when I do not speak, man's faith changes in an instant, and so all I see are his counterfeit "wares," because man has never sincerely loved Me. It is only when I manifest Myself that human beings all make a tremendous show of "faith"; but when I am hidden in My secret place, they grow weak and faint of heart, as if afraid of offending Me, or even because some cannot see My face, they subject Me to a good working over and from that conclude I do not in fact exist. How many people remain in this state, how many have this mentality, but it is just that human beings are all good at covering up what is shameful in themselves. Because of this, they are reluctant to call attention to their own inadequacies, and only admit to the truth of My words while brazenly seeking to give protective camouflage to their own self-respect.

THE NINETEENTH UTTERANCE

It is mankind's proper occupation to take My words as the basis for his survival. Man must establish his individual portion in each and every part of My words; not to do so would be asking for trouble, seeking his own destruction. Humanity does not know Me, and because of this, instead of bringing his own life to Me to offer in exchange, all he does is parade in front of Me with the trash in his hands, trying thereby to give Me satisfaction. But, far from being satisfied by things as they are, I keep on making demands of humanity. I love man's tribute, but hate his extortions. All men have hearts filled with greed; it is as if the human heart is in thrall to the devil, and man is unable to break free and offer his heart up to Me. When I speak, man listens to My voice in rapt attention; but when I stop speaking, he starts again on his own “enterprise” and ceases entirely to heed My words, as if My words were an adjunct to his enterprise. I have never been lax with humanity, and yet I have also been long-suffering and magnanimous with humanity. And so, because of My leniency, human beings have all grown overweening, incapable of self-knowledge and self-reflection, and they take advantage of My forbearance to deceive Me. Not a single one among them sincerely cares for Me, and not a single one truly treasures Me as an object dear to his heart; only when they have idle moments to spare do they give Me their perfunctory regard. The effort I have expended on man is already beyond measure. I have wrought on man an unprecedented kind of work, and apart from this, I have given him an additional burden, in order that, out of what I have and what I am, man might gain in knowledge and undergo a change. I do not ask man to be a mere consumer, but ask him to be a producer capable of inflicting defeat on Satan. Though I may not demand anything of man, nonetheless I do have standards for the demands I make, for there is a purpose in what I do, as well as principles in accordance with which I act: I do not, as man imagines, play around haphazardly, nor do I, in willful capriciousness, fashion the heavens and earth and the myriad things of creation. In My working, man should be able to see something, gain something. He should not squander away the springtime of his youth, or treat his own life like a garment on which dust is carelessly allowed to gather; rather, he should stand strict guard over himself, taking from My bounty to provide for his own enjoyment, until, for My sake, he cannot turn back toward Satan, and for My sake he mounts an attack against Satan. Isn't what I ask of man as simple as this?

When a faint glimmer of light begins to show in the East, all the people within the universe on that account turn their attention for the nonce toward the light in the East. No longer steeped in slumber, mankind goes to observe the source of the eastern light, but due to the limits of human power, no one is able to see the place whence the light originates. When all within the universe is fully illuminated, man will rouse from sleep and dream, and only then will he realize that My day is slowly coming into the world. All humanity celebrates because of the coming of the light, and because of this no longer lies sound asleep, and is senseless no longer. Under the radiance of My light, all humanity becomes clear of mind and sight, and suddenly awakens to the joy of living. Under cover of a shrouding mist, I look out over mankind. The animals are all at rest; because of the coming of a faint glimmer of light, everything in creation becomes conscious that a new life is approaching. For this reason, the animals too all creep out from their caves, looking for food. Plants, of course, are no exception, and in the light's radiance their green leaves glisten with a lustrous sheen, waiting to consecrate their individual portion to Me at the time when I am on the earth. All human beings wish for the coming of the light, and yet they all fear its advent, anxious that their own ugliness will no longer find concealment, for man is stark naked, and lacks for covering. How many people have fallen into panic, because of the light's coming, and because the light has appeared, are in a state of shock? How many people, on seeing the light, are filled with boundless remorse, abhorring their own uncleanness, but, powerless to alter the accomplished fact, can only wait for Me to pronounce sentence. How many people, refined by suffering in the darkness, on seeing the light are suddenly struck by its profound meaning, and thenceforth hug the light close to their bosoms, fearful of losing it again? How many people, instead of being thrown out of orbit by the light's sudden appearance, simply go about the daily work in hand, because they have been blind for long years, and so they do not notice that the light has come, nor are they gratified by it. In men's hearts, I am neither high up, nor low down. As far as men are concerned, it is a matter of indifference whether I exist or not, as though man's life would not get any lonelier if I did not exist, and if I did, would not gain in pleasure. Because human beings do not cherish Me, the enjoyments that I afford them are few. But as soon as humanity gives Me so much as an ounce of adoration, then I will also make a change in the attitude I bear toward humanity. For this reason, only when humanity grasps this law, only then will men be fortunate enough to dedicate themselves to Me and demand the things I hold in My hand. Surely man's love for Me is not bound solely to his own interests? Surely his faith in Me is not bound solely to the things that I give? Could it be that, unless he sees My light, man is unable to love Me sincerely by means of his faith? Surely man's strength and vigor are not really restricted to the conditions of today? Could it be that man needs courage in order to love Me?

Relying on My existence, the myriad things of creation make obedient submission in the places where they reside, and do not, in the absence of My discipline, indulge in licentious abandon. Therefore, the mountains become boundaries between nations upon the land, the waters become barriers to keep people apart between the lands, and the air becomes that which flows from man to man in the space on earth. Only humanity is incapable of truly obeying the demands of My will; this is why I say that, out of all creation man alone belongs in the category of the disobedient. Man has never truly submitted to Me, and for this reason I have all along kept him under strict discipline. If in the midst of humanity, it should come to pass that My glory extends over the whole universe, then I will surely take all of My glory and make it manifest before mankind. Because in his defilement man is unfit to look upon My glory, for thousands of years I have never come into the open, but have remained hidden; for this reason My glory has never been manifest before mankind, and man has always been sunk in sin's deep abyss. I have forgiven the unrighteousness of humanity, but human beings know not how to preserve themselves, and are instead always laying themselves open to sin, allowing sin to injure them. Is this not man's lack of self-respect and self-love? In humanity's midst, is there one who can truly love? How many ounces can man's devotion weigh? Aren't there adulterated goods mixed into his so-called authenticity? Isn't his devotion compounded wholly of a mish-mash? What I require is man's undivided love. Man does not know Me, and though he may seek to know Me, he will not give Me his true and earnest heart. From man I do not exact what he is unwilling to give. If he gives Me his devotion, I will accept it without polite demurrals; but if he does not trust Me, and refuses to offer up even an iota of himself to Me, rather than growing more vexed on that account, I will simply dispose of him in some other way and send him to the home for which he is fit. The thunder, rolling across the skies, strikes man down; the high mountains, as they topple, bury him; the wild beasts in their hunger raven him up; and the oceans, surging, close over his head. As humanity engages in fratricidal conflict, all men will seek their own destruction in the calamities arising from humanity's midst.

The kingdom is expanding in humanity's midst, it is forming in humanity's midst, it is standing up in humanity's midst; there is no force that can destroy My kingdom. Of My people who are in the kingdom of today, which of you is not a human being among human beings? Which of you lies outside the human condition? When My new starting point is announced to the multitude, how will humanity react?

You have seen with your own eyes the state of mankind; surely you do not still harbor hopes of enduring forever in this world? I am now walking abroad in the midst of My people, I live in the midst of My people. Today, those who bear genuine love toward Me, people like these are blessed; blessed are those who submit to Me, they will surely stay in My kingdom; blessed are those who know Me, they will surely wield power in My kingdom; blessed are those who seek after Me, they will surely escape from Satan's bonds and enjoy blessing in Me; blessed are those who are able to forsake themselves, they will surely enter into My possession, and inherit My kingdom's bounty. Those who run around for My sake I will commemorate, those who go to expense for My sake I will joyfully embrace, those who make offering to Me I will give enjoyments. Those who find enjoyment in My words I will bless; they will surely be the pillars that hold up the ridgepole in My kingdom, they will surely have matchless bounty in My house, and no one can compare with them. Have you ever accepted the blessings that you were given? Have you ever sought the promises that you were made? You will surely, under the guidance of My light, break through the stranglehold of the forces of darkness. You will surely not, in the midst of darkness, lose the light guiding you. You will surely be the master of all creation. You will surely be an overcomer before Satan. You will surely, at the downfall of the kingdom of the great red dragon, stand up amid the myriad throngs to bear witness to My victory. You will surely be resolute and unwavering in the land of Sinim. Through the sufferings you endure, you will inherit the blessing that comes from Me, and will surely irradiate within the entire universe with My glory.

THE TWENTIETH UTTERANCE

The riches of My household are without number and unfathomable, yet man has never come to Me to enjoy them. He is incapable of enjoying them on his own, nor of protecting himself using his own efforts; instead, he has always placed his trust in others. Of all those I look upon, no one has ever sought Me deliberately and directly. They all come before Me at the urging of others, following the majority, and they are unwilling to pay the price or spend the time to enrich their lives. Hence, among man, no one has ever lived in reality, and all people live lives that are without meaning. Because of the long-established ways and customs of man, the bodies of all people are suffused with the odor of earthly soil. As a result, man has grown callous, insensible to the world's desolation, and he instead busies himself with the work of enjoying himself on this frozen earth. Man's life has not the slightest warmth, and is devoid of any human flavor or light—yet he has ever inured himself to it, abiding a lifetime bereft of worth in which he rushes about without achieving anything. In the blink of an eye, the day of death draws near, and man dies a bitter death. In this world, he has never accomplished anything, or gained anything—he only hurriedly arrives, and hurriedly departs. None of those in My eyes have ever brought anything, or taken anything away, and so man feels that the world is unfair. Yet none are willing to hurry away. They merely await the day when My promise from heaven will suddenly come among man, allowing them, at the time when they have gone astray, to once more behold the way of eternal life. Thus, man fixates upon My every deed and action to see whether I have really kept My promise to him. When he is in the midst of affliction, or in extreme pain, or beset by trials and about to fall, man curses the day of his birth so that he may sooner escape his troubles and move to another ideal place. But when the trials have passed, man is filled with joy. He celebrates the day of his birth on earth and asks that I bless his day of birth; at this time, man no longer mentions the oaths of the past, deeply fearful that death will come upon him a second time. When My hands raise up the world, people dance with joy, they are no longer sorrowful, and they all depend on Me. When I cover My face with My hands, and press people beneath the ground, they immediately feel short of breath, and are barely able to survive. They all cry out to Me, terrified that I will destroy them, for they all wish to behold the day when I am glorified. Man takes My day as the principal of his existence, and it is only because people long for the day when My glory will arrive that mankind has survived until today. The blessing decreed by My mouth is that those who are born during the last days are fortunate enough to behold all of My glory.

Throughout the ages, many have departed from this world in disappointment, and with reluctance, and many have come into it with hope and faith. I have arranged for many to come, and have sent many away. Countless people have passed through My hands. Many spirits have been cast into Hades, many have lived in the flesh, and many have died and been reborn on earth. Yet never have any of them had the opportunity to enjoy the blessings of the kingdom today. I have given man so much, yet he has gained little, for the onslaught of Satan's forces has left him unable to enjoy all of My riches. He has only had the good fortune to look upon, but has never been able to fully enjoy. Man has never discovered the treasure house in his body to receive the riches of heaven, and so he has lost the blessings that I have bestowed upon him. Is man's spirit not the very faculty that connects him to My Spirit? Why has man never engaged Me with his spirit? Why does he draw near to Me in the flesh, yet is incapable of doing so in spirit? Is My true face of the flesh? Why does man not know My substance? Has there really never been any trace of Me in the spirit of man? Have I completely disappeared from the spirit of man? If man does not enter into the spiritual realm, how can he grasp My intentions? Is there that in the eyes of man which can directly penetrate the spiritual realm? Many are the times that I have called out to man with My Spirit, yet man acts as if he has been stabbed by Me, regarding Me from a distance, in great fear that I will lead him into another world. Many are the times that I have inquired in the spirit of man, yet he remains utterly oblivious, profoundly afraid that I will enter into his home and seize the opportunity to strip him of all his belongings. Thus, he shuts Me outside, leaving Me faced with nothing but a cold, tightly-closed door. Many are the times that man has fallen and I have saved him, yet after waking he immediately leaves Me and, untouched by My love, shoots Me a guarded look; never have I warmed the heart of man. Man is an emotionless, cold-blooded animal. Even though he is warmed by My embrace, never has he been deeply moved by it. Man is like a mountain savage. Never has he treasured all of My cherishment of mankind. He is unwilling to approach Me, preferring to dwell among the mountains, where he endures the threat of wild beasts—yet still he is unwilling to take refuge in Me. I do not compel any man: I merely do My work. The day will come when man swims to My side from amid the mighty ocean, so that he might enjoy all the riches on earth and leave behind the risk of being swallowed by the sea.

Following the completion of My words, the kingdom is gradually formed on earth and man is gradually returned to normality, and thus there is established on earth the kingdom in My heart. In the kingdom, all the people of God recover the life of normal man. Gone is the frosty winter, replaced by a world of cities of spring, where it is spring all year round. No longer are people faced with the gloomy, miserable world of man, no longer do they endure the cold chill of the world of man. People do not fight with each other, countries do not go to war against each other, no longer is there carnage and the blood that flows from carnage; all lands are filled with happiness, and everywhere teems with warmth between men. I move throughout the world, I enjoy from atop My throne, I live among the stars. And the angels offer unto Me new songs and new dances. No longer does their own fragility cause tears to run down their faces. No longer do I hear, before Me, the sound of the angels weeping, and no longer does anyone complain of hardship to Me. Today, you all live before Me; tomorrow, you will all exist in My kingdom. Is this not the greatest blessing that I bestow upon man? Because of the price you pay today, you will inherit the blessings of the future and will live among My glory. Do you still not wish to engage with the substance of My Spirit? Do you still wish to slay yourselves? People are willing to pursue the promises that he can see, even though they are ephemeral, yet none are willing to accept the promises of tomorrow, even though they are for eternity. The things that are visible to man are the things that I will annihilate, and the things that are impalpable to man are the things that I will accomplish. This is the difference between God and man.

Man has kept a record of My day, yet no one has ever known the exact date, and thus man can live only in the midst of stupor. Because man's longings resound across the limitless skies, and then disappear, man has lost hope over and over again, such that he has descended to his current circumstances. The goal of My utterances is not to make man pursue dates, nor to drive him to his own destruction as a result of his despair. I wish to make man accept My promise, and I wish for people all over the world to have a share of My promise. What I want are living creatures that are full of life, not corpses that have been steeped in death. Since I recline at the table of the kingdom, I will command all people on earth to receive My inspection. I do not allow the presence of any unclean thing before Me. I do not brook any man's interference in My work; all those who interfere in My work are cast into dungeons, and after they are released they are still beset by catastrophe, receiving the scorching flames of earth. When I am in My incarnate flesh, whosoever debates My work with My flesh will be loathed by Me. Many are the times that I have reminded all men that I am without kin on earth, and whosoever looks upon Me as an equal, and pulls Me to them so that they may reminisce about times past with Me, will be subject to destruction. This is what I command. In such matters I am not in the least bit lenient toward man. All those who interfere in My work and offer counsel to Me are chastised by Me, and will never be forgiven by Me. If I do not speak plainly, man will never come to his senses, and will unwittingly fall into My chastisement—for man does not know Me in My flesh.

THE TWENTY-FIRST UTTERANCE

Man falls in the midst of My light, and stands fast because of My salvation. When I bring salvation to the entire universe, man tries to find ways to enter among the flow of My restoration, yet there are many who are washed away without trace by this torrent of restoration; there are many who are drowned and engulfed by the torrential waters; and there are many, too, who stand fast amid the torrent, who have never lost their sense of direction, and who have thus followed the torrent until today. I advance in step with man, yet he has still never known Me; he knows only clothes that I wear on the outside, and is ignorant of the riches hidden within Me. Though I provide to man and give to him each day, he is incapable of true acceptance, is unable to receive all the riches given by Me. Nothing of man's corruption escapes My notice; to Me, his inner world is like the bright moon on the water. I am not playing around with man, nor going through the motions with him; it is just that man is unable to take responsibility for himself, and thus the whole of mankind has always been depraved, and even today remains incapable of extricating itself from such depravity. Poor, pitiable mankind! Why is it that man loves Me, but is unable to follow the intentions of My Spirit? Have I really not revealed Myself to mankind? Has mankind really never seen My face? Could it be that I have shown too little mercy toward mankind? O the rebels of all mankind! They must be destroyed beneath My feet, they must vanish amid My chastisement, and they must, on the day on which My great enterprise is completed, be cast out from among mankind, so that the whole of mankind knows their ugly face. That man rarely sees My face or hears My voice is because the whole world is too turbid, and its clamor is too great, and thus man is too lazy to search for My face and try to understand My heart. Is this not the cause of man's corruption? Is this not why man is in need? The whole of mankind has always been among My provision; if it were not so, if I were not merciful, who would have survived until today? The riches in Me are without equal, yet all disaster is also held within My hands—and who is able to escape from disaster whenever they please? Do the prayers of man allow him to do so? Or the tears in man's heart? Man has never truly prayed to Me, and so among the whole of mankind no one has ever lived their entire life amid the light of truth, and people only live amid the fitful appearance of the light. It is this that has led to mankind's need today.

Everyone is chomping at the bit, willing to go all out for Me in order to get something from Me, and so, in keeping with man's psychology, I give him promises to inspire true love in him. Is it really man's true love that gives him strength? Is it man's loyalty to Me that has moved My Spirit in heaven? Heaven has never been the slightest bit affected by the actions of man, and if My treatment of man were based on his every action, then the whole of mankind would live amid My chastisement. I have seen many people with tears coursing down their cheeks, and I have seen many people offer up their hearts in exchange for My riches. Despite such "piousness," I have never freely given My all to man as a result of his sudden urges, for man has never been gladly willing to devote himself before Me. I have plucked off the masks of all people and thrown these masks into the lake of fire, and as a result, man's supposed loyalty and pleas have never held firm before Me. Man is like a cloud in the sky: When the wind howls, he fears the mightiness of its force and so floats hurriedly after it, deeply fearful that he will be struck down for his disobedience. Is this not the ugly face of man? Is this not the so-called obedience of man? Is this not the "true feeling" and phony goodwill of man? Many people refuse to be convinced by all the sayings from My mouth, and many do not accept My evaluation, and hence their words and actions betray their rebellious intentions. Is what I speak of contrary to the old nature of man? Have I not given man a fitting definition according to the "laws of nature"? Man does not truly obey Me; if he truly searched for Me, I would not have to say so much. Man is worthless trash, and I must use My chastisement to force him onward; if I did not do so, how—even though the promises I give him are sufficient for his enjoyment—could his heart be moved? Man has lived amid painful struggle for many years; he has, it can be said, always lived in despair. As a result, he has been left despondent, and physically and mentally exhausted, and so he does not joyfully accept the riches that I give him. Even today, no one is able to accept all the sweetness of the spirit from Me. People can only remain poor, and await the last day.

Many people wish to truly love Me, but because their hearts are not their own, they have no control over themselves; many people truly love Me among the trials given by Me, yet they are incapable of grasping that I really exist, and merely love Me amid emptiness, and not because of My actual existence; many people, after laying their hearts before Me, pay them no heed, and thus their hearts are snatched away by Satan whenever it gets the chance, after which they leave Me; many people genuinely love Me when I provide My words, yet do not cherish My words in their spirits, instead casually using them like public property and tossing them back to where they came from whenever they feel like it. Man searches for Me in the midst of pain, and he looks unto Me among trials. During times of peace he enjoys Me, when in peril he denies Me, when he is busy he forgets Me, and when he is idle he goes through the motions for Me—yet never has anyone loved Me throughout their whole life. I wish for man to be earnest before Me: I do not ask that he give Me anything, but only that all people take Me seriously, that, instead of misleading Me, they allow Me to bring back the sincerity of man. My enlightenment, illumination, and the cost of My efforts penetrate among all people, yet so too does the true fact of man's every action penetrate among all people, penetrating their deception of Me. It is as if the ingredients of man's deception have been with him since the womb, as if he has possessed these special skills of trickery since birth. What's more, he has never given the game away; no one has ever seen through to the source of these deceitful skills. As a result, man lives amid deception without realizing it, and it is as if he forgives himself, as if it is the arrangements of God rather than his deliberate deception of Me. Is this not the very source of man's deception of Me? Is this not his cunning scheme? Never have I been befuddled by the blandishments and chicanery of man, for I figured out his essence long ago. Who knows how much impurity is in his blood, and how much of Satan's venom is within his marrow? Man grows more accustomed to it with each passing day, such that he is insensible to Satan's affliction, and thus has no interest in finding out the "art of a healthy existence."

When man is distant from Me, and when he tests Me, I hide Myself from him among the clouds. As a result, he is unable to find any trace of Me, and lives only by the hand of the wicked, doing all that they ask. When man is close to Me, I appear to him and do not hide My face from him, and at this time, man sees My kind countenance. He suddenly comes to his senses, and though he does not realize it, in him is born the love of Me. In his heart, he suddenly feels an incomparable sweetness, and wonders how he could not have known of My existence in the universe. Thus man has a greater sense of My loveliness, and, moreover, of My preciousness. As a result, he wishes to never leave Me again, he sees Me as the light of his survival, and, deeply fearful that I will leave him, he hugs Me tight. I am not moved by man's zeal, but am merciful to him because of his love. At this time, man instantly lives amid My trials. My face disappears from his heart, and he immediately feels that his life is empty and thinks of escaping. At this moment, man's heart is laid bare. He does not embrace Me because of My disposition, but asks that I protect him because of My love. Yet when My love hits back at man, he immediately changes his mind; he tears up his covenant with Me and breaks away from My judgment, unwilling to look upon My merciful face ever again, and so he changes his view of Me, and says that I have never saved man. Does true love really involve nothing but mercy? Does man only love Me if he lives beneath My shining light? He looks back to yesterday but lives in today—are these not the circumstances of man? Will you really still be like this tomorrow? What I want is for man to have a heart that yearns for Me in its very depths, not one that is satisfied with superficialities.

THE TWENTY-SECOND UTTERANCE

Man lives amid the light, yet he is unaware of the preciousness of the light. He is ignorant of the substance of the light, and of the source of the light, and, moreover, of to whom it belongs. When I conferred the light among man, I immediately examine the conditions among man: Because of the light, all people are changing, and growing, and have left the darkness. I look upon every corner of the universe, and see that the mountains are engulfed in fog, that the waters have frozen amid the cold, and that, because of the coming of the light, people look to the East in order that they might discover something more precious—yet man remains incapable of discerning a clear direction among the mist. Because the whole world is blanketed by fog, when I look on from among the clouds, My existence is never discovered by man; man is searching on earth for something, he seems to be foraging, he intends, it seems, to await My arrival—yet he does not know My day, and can only often look to the glimmer of light in the East. Among all peoples, I seek those who are truly after My own heart. I walk among all peoples, and live among all peoples, but man is safe and sound on earth, and so there are none who are truly after My own heart. People do not know how to care for My will, they cannot see My actions, and they cannot move among the light and be shone upon by the light. Although man ever treasures My words, he is incapable of seeing through the deceitful schemes of Satan; because man's stature is too small, he is unable to do as his heart wishes. Man has never loved Me sincerely. When I exalt him, he feels himself unworthy, but this does not make him try to satisfy Me. He merely holds the station I have given him in his hands and scrutinizes it; insensible to My loveliness, he instead persists in engorging himself on the blessings of his station. Is this not the deficiency of man? When the mountains move, could they make a detour for the sake of your station? When the waters flow, could they cease before your station? Could the heavens and the earth be reversed by your station? I was once merciful toward man, over and over again—yet no one cherishes or treasures this, they merely listened to it as a story, or read it as a novel. Do My words really not touch the heart of man? Do My utterances really have no effect? Could it be that no one believes in My existence? Man does not love himself; instead, he unites with Satan to attack Me, and uses Satan as an “asset” by which to serve Me. I will penetrate all the deceitful schemes of Satan, and stop the people from earth accepting the deceptions of Satan, so that they do not oppose Me because of Satan's existence.

In the kingdom, I am King—but instead of treating Me as its King, man treats Me as the Savior that has descended from heaven. As a result, he longs for Me to give him alms, and does not pursue the knowledge of Me. So many have cried out before Me like a beggar; so many have opened their “sacks” to Me and implored Me to give them food to survive; so many have fixed greedy eyes upon Me, like hungry wolves, wishing they could gobble Me up and fill their bellies; so many have bowed their heads in silence because of their transgressions and felt ashamed, praying for My clemency, or willingly accepting My chastisement. When I speak, the various follies of man appear preposterous, and his true form is revealed amid the light, and in the shining light, man is unable to forgive himself. Thus, he hurries before Me to bow down and confess his sins. Because of man’s “honesty,” I draw him once more upon the chariot of salvation, and hence man is grateful to Me, and casts Me a loving look. Yet he is still unwilling to truly take refuge in Me, and has not fully given his heart to Me. He merely boasts of Me, yet he does not truly love Me, for he has not turned his mind to Me; his body is before Me, yet his heart is behind Me. Because man’s understanding of rules is too lacking and he has no interest in coming before Me, I provide him with appropriate support, so that he may turn toward Me from amid his pertinacious ignorance. This is precisely the mercy that I give unto man, and is the method by which I strive to save man.

People throughout the universe celebrate the arrival of My day, and angels walk among the masses. When Satan causes trouble, the angels, because of their service in heaven, always help My people. They are not deceived by the devil due to human weakness, but gain greater experience of the fog-enshrouded life of man as a result of the onslaught of the forces of darkness. All the people submit beneath My name, and never does anyone rise up to openly oppose Me. Because of the labors of the angels, man accepts My name and all are amid the stream of My work. The world is falling! Babylon is in paralysis! The religious world—how could it not be destroyed by My authority on earth? Who still dares to disobey and oppose Me? The scribes? All religious officials? The rulers and authorities on earth? The angels? Who does not celebrate the perfection and fullness of My body? Among all peoples, who does not sing My praises without cease, who is not unflinching happy? I live in the land of the great red dragon’s lair, yet this does not cause Me to tremble with fear or run away, for all of its people have already begun to loathe it. Never has the “duty” of any thing been performed before the dragon; instead, all things go about their own business, picking the route that suits them best. How could the countries on earth not perish? How could the countries on earth not fall? How could My people not cheer? How could they not sing with joy? Is this the work of man? Is it the doing of man's hands? I gave man the root of his existence, and provided him with material things, yet man is dissatisfied with his current circumstances and asks that he enter My kingdom. But how could he enter My kingdom so easily, without having paid a price, and unwilling to offer his selfless devotion? Instead of exacting anything from man, I make requirements of him, so that My kingdom on earth may be filled with glory. Man has been guided by Me into the present age, he exists in this state, and he lives amidst the guidance of My light. If it were not thus, who among the people on earth would know their prospects? Who would understand My will? I add My provisions to the requirements of man; is this not in line with the laws of nature?

Yesterday you lived in the midst of wind and rain, today you have entered into My kingdom and become its people, and tomorrow you will enjoy My blessings. Who ever imagined such things? How much adversity and hardship will you experience in your life, do you know? I advance amid wind and rain, and have spent year after year among man, and that is followed by the present day. Are these not the steps of My management plan? Who has ever added to My plan? Who can break away from the steps in My plan? I live in the hearts of hundreds of millions of people, I am King among hundreds of millions of people, and I have been rejected and reviled by hundreds of millions of people. My image is not truly within the heart of man. Man only dimly perceives My glorious countenance in My words, but because of the interference in his thoughts, he does not trust his own feelings; there is only a vague Me in his heart, but it does not remain there long. And so, his love of Me is also thus: His love before Me appears fitfully, as if he loves Me as the urge takes him, as if his love winks in and out of view beneath hazy moonlight. Today, it is only because of My love that man remains and has had the good fortune to survive. If it were not thus, who among man would not, as a result of their emaciated body, be cut down by the laser light? Man still does not know himself. He shows off before Me, and brags about himself behind My back, yet no one dares to "oppose" Me before Me. However, man does not know the meaning of the opposition of which I speak; instead, he keeps trying to fool Me, and keeps exalting himself—and in this, does he not openly oppose Me? I tolerate the weakness of man, but I am not in the slightest bit lenient toward opposition of man's own making. Although he knows its meaning, he is unwilling to act in accordance with this meaning and merely deceives Me as befits his own preferences. I make plain My disposition in My words at all times, yet man is not reconciled to defeat—at the same time, he reveals his disposition. Amid My judgment man will be utterly convinced, and amid My chastisement he will finally live out My image and become a manifestation of Me on earth!

THE TWENTY-THIRD UTTERANCE

As My voice sounds out, as My eyes shoot forth fire, I am watching over the whole earth, I am observing the entire universe. All humanity are praying to Me, turning their gaze up to Me, beseeching Me to cease My anger, and swearing to rebel against Me no more. But this is no longer the past; it is now. Who can turn back My will? Surely not the invocation within men's hearts, nor the words in their mouths? Who has been able to survive until the present, if not because of Me? Who survives except by the words in My mouth? Who does not lie under My watchful eye? As I carry out My new work on the whole earth, who has ever been able to escape from it? Could it be that the mountains are able to evade it by means of their height? Could it be that the waters, by their multitudinous vastness, are able to fend it off? In My plan, I have never lightly let any thing go, and so there has never been any person, or any thing, that has eluded the grasp of My hands. Today, My holy name is extolled throughout humanity, and again, words of protest rise up against Me throughout humanity, and legends about My being on earth are rife throughout humanity. I do not tolerate men making their judgments about Me, nor do I tolerate their dividing up My body, still less do I tolerate their vituperations against Me. Because he has never truly known Me, man has always resisted and deceived Me, failing to cherish My Spirit or to treasure My words. For his every deed and action, and for the attitude he bears toward Me, I give man the "reward" that is his due. And so, men all act with an eye to their reward, and not a single one has ever done any work involving self-sacrifice. Human beings are unwilling to render selfless dedication, but rather delight in rewards that can be got for nothing. Though Peter consecrated himself before Me, it was not for the sake of tomorrow's reward, but for the sake of the knowledge of today. Humanity has never entered into a genuine connection with Me, but time and time again has dealt with Me in a superficial manner, thinking thereby effortlessly to win My approval. I have looked deep into man's heart, so I have unearthed in its innermost recesses "a mine of many riches," something of which even man himself is not yet aware but that I have discovered anew. And so, only when they have seen the "material evidence," only then do human beings cease their sanctimonious self-abasement and, with palms outstretched, admit to their own unclean state. Among men, there is much more that is new and fresh waiting for Me to "extract" for the enjoyment of all humanity. Far from stopping My work on account of man's incapacitation, I carry on mending and maintaining him in accordance with My original plan. Man is like a fruit tree: Without trimming and pruning, the tree will fail to bear fruit and, in the end, all one sees are withered branches and fallen leaves, with no fruit dropping onto the ground.

As I decorate the "inner chamber" of My kingdom day by day, no one has ever suddenly burst into My "workroom" to disrupt My work. All mankind are doing their utmost to cooperate with Me, fearful of "being dismissed" and "losing their position" and thus reaching a dead end in their lives where they may even fall into the "desert" occupied by Satan. Because of man's fears, I comfort him every day, move him to love every day and furthermore give him instruction in the midst of his daily life. It is as if human beings are all babies who have just been born; unless supplied with milk, they will soon depart this earth, to be seen no more. In the midst of humanity's supplications, I come into the world of men and, straight away, humanity lives in a world of light, no longer sealed up inside a "room" from which they cry out their prayers to heaven. As soon as they see Me, men insistently make plaint of the "grievances" stored in their hearts, opening their mouths before Me to beg for food to be dropped into them. But afterward, "their fears allayed and composure restored," they no longer ask anything of Me, but fall soundly asleep, or else, denying My existence, they go off to mind their own affairs. In mankind's "abandonment" it is clearly evident how human beings, devoid of "feeling," carry out their "impartial justice" toward Me. Therefore, seeing man in his unlovely aspect, I depart silently and will no longer readily come down again at his earnest supplication. Unbeknownst to him, man's troubles grow day by day, and so, in the midst of his toil and moil, when he suddenly discovers My existence, he, refusing to take "no" for answer, grabs hold of Me by the lapels and ushers Me into his house as a guest. But, though he may set forth a sumptuous meal for My enjoyment, he has never once considered Me to be one of his own, instead treating Me as a guest in order to obtain a modicum of help from Me. And so, at this time, man unceremoniously presents his sorry condition before Me, hoping to get My "signature," and, like one in need of a loan for his business, he tackles Me with all his might. In his every gesture and motion, I catch a fleeting glimpse of man's intent: It is as though, in his view, I do not know how to read the meaning hidden in a person's facial expression or tucked away behind his words, or how to look deep into a person's heart. And so man pours out in confidence to Me every single experience in every single encounter he has ever had, without error or omission, and afterward sets out his demands before Me. I hate and despise man's every deed and action. Among humanity, there has never been a single one who has done work that I love, as if humanity is intentionally antagonizing Me, and purposefully attracting My wrath: They all parade back and forth in front of Me, indulging their own will before My eyes. There is not a single one among humanity who lives for My sake, and in consequence the existence of the entire human race has neither value nor meaning, so that humanity lives in an empty void. Even so, humanity still refuses to awaken, but continues to rebel against Me, persisting in its vanity.

In all the trials they have passed through, human beings have never once pleased Me. Because of their cruel iniquity, mankind does not aim to bear witness to My name; rather, he "runs the other way" while relying on Me for sustenance. Man's heart does not wholly turn to Me, and so Satan lays waste to him till he is a mass of wounds, his body covered in filth. But man still does not realize how repulsive is his countenance: All along he has kept worshiping Satan behind My back. For this reason, with wrath I cast man down into the bottomless pit, making it so that he will never be able to free himself. Even so, in the midst of his piteous wailing, man still refuses to reform his mind, intent on opposing Me to the bitter end, and hoping thereby willfully to stir up My wrath. On account of what he has done, I treat him as the sinner that he is and deny him the warmth of My embrace. From the first, the angels have served Me and obeyed

Me without change or surcease, but man has always done the exact opposite, as if he came not from Me, but was born of Satan. The angels in their respective places all give Me their utmost devotion; unswayed by Satan's forces, they strive only to fulfill their duty. Suckled and nourished by the angels, the multitudes of My sons and My people all grow strong and healthy, not one among them weak or feeble. This is My doing, My miracle. As salvo after salvo of cannon fire inaugurates the founding of My kingdom, the angels, walking to the rhythmic accompaniment, come before My rostrum to submit to My inspection, because their hearts are free of impurity and of idols, and they do not shun My inspection.

At the howling of the gale, the heavens come pressing down in an instant, suffocating all mankind so that human beings are no longer able to call upon Me as they wish. Without knowing it, all humanity has collapsed. The trees sway back and forth in the wind, from time to time branches are heard to snap, and all the withered leaves are blown away. The earth feels bleak and desolate all of a sudden, and people hug themselves tight, braced for the disaster following upon the autumn to strike their bodies at any moment. The birds on the hills fly hither and thither, as if crying out their sorrow to someone; in the mountain caves, lions roar, terrifying people with the sound, freezing their marrow and making their hair stand on end, and it is as if there is an ominous feeling presaging the end of mankind. Unwilling to await My pleasure in disposing of them, all men pray silently to the Sovereign Lord in heaven. But how can a gale be blocked by the noise of water flowing in a little brook? How can it suddenly be stopped by the sound of men's invocations? How can the rage in the heart of the thunderclap be stilled for the sake of man's timidity? Man sways back and forth in the wind; he runs hither and thither to hide himself from the rain; and under My wrath, human beings quake and tremble, deeply afraid that I will plant My hand on their bodies, as if I am the muzzle of a gun pointed at all times at man's breast, and again, as if he is My enemy, and yet he is My friend. Man has never discovered My true intentions to him, has never understood My true aims, and so, unawares, he offends against Me, unawares, he opposes Me, and yet, without meaning to, he has also seen My love. It is difficult for man to see My face in the midst of My wrath. I am hidden in the black clouds of My anger, and I stand, amid thunderclaps, above the entire universe to send My mercy down to man. Because man does not know Me, I do not chastise him for failing to understand My intent. In the eyes of men, I vent My wrath from time to time, I show My smile from time to time, but even when he sees Me, man has never seen the whole of My disposition, is still unable to hear the joyful noise of the clarion, because he has grown too numb and insensate. It is as if My image exists in man's memories, and My form in his thoughts. However, there has never been a single person who has truly seen Me throughout the evolution of the human race, because man's brain is too impoverished. For all that man has dissected Me, the science of the human race is so primitive that, till now, his scientific research has yielded no conclusive results. And so, the subject of "My image" has always been a complete blank, with no one to fill it in, no one to break a world record, because for mankind even to be able to keep his foothold in the present is already an inestimable consolation in the midst of great misfortune.

THE TWENTY-FOURTH UTTERANCE

My chastisement comes upon all people, yet it also remains distant from all people. The whole life of every person is filled with love and hate toward Me, and no one has ever known Me—and so man's attitude toward Me blows hot and cold, and is incapable of being normal. Yet I have always cared for and protected man, and it is only because of his dull-wittedness that he is incapable of seeing all of My deeds and understanding My eager intentions. I am the leading One among all countries, and the Most High among all people; it is simply that man does not know Me. For many years I have lived among man and experienced life in the world of man, yet he has always ignored Me and treated Me like a being from outer space. In consequence, because of differences in disposition and language, people treat Me like a stranger in the street. My clothing, it seems, is also too idiosyncratic, as a result of which man lacks the confidence to approach Me. Only then do I feel the desolation of life among man, and only then do I sense the injustice of the world of man. I walk among passers-by, observing all of their faces. It is as if they live in the midst of an illness, which fills their faces with melancholy, and among chastisement, which prevents their release. Man shackles himself, and abases himself. Most people create a false impression of themselves before Me so that I might applaud them, most people deliberately make themselves appear pitiable before Me so that they might gain My help. Behind My back, people all deceive Me and disobey Me. Am I not right? Is this not man's survival strategy? Who has ever lived out Me in their lives? Who has ever exalted Me among others? Who has ever been bound before the Spirit? Who has ever stood firm in their testimony to Me before Satan? Who has ever added the truthfulness to their "loyalty" to Me? Who has ever been eliminated by the great red dragon because of Me? People have cast their lot in with Satan, they are experts at defying Me, they are the inventors of opposition to Me, and they are graduates in paltering with Me. For the sake of his own destiny, man searches here and there on earth; when I beckon him, he remains insensible to My preciousness and continues to have faith in his reliance upon himself, unwilling to be a burden on others. Man's aspirations are precious, yet never have anyone's aspirations achieved full marks: They all crumble before Me, toppling without sound.

Each day I speak, and each day I do new things as well. If man does not draw upon all of his strength, then he will have difficulty hearing My voice, and will find it hard to see My face. The beloved may be fine, and His speech gentle, but man is incapable of easily beholding His glorious face and hearing His voice. Throughout the ages, no one has ever easily beheld My face. I once spoke to Peter and appeared to Paul, and no one else—with the exception of the Israelites—has ever truly seen My face. Today, I have personally come among man to live together with him. Does this really not feel rare and precious to you? Do you not wish to make the best use of your time? Do you want to let it pass you by in this way? Could the hands of time in people's minds suddenly stop? Or could time flow backward? Or could man become young again? Could the blessed life of today ever come again? I do not give man an appropriate "reward" for his "waste." I merely persist in doing My work, detached from all else, and do not stop the flow of time because man is busy, or because of the sound of his cries. For several thousand years, no one has been able to divide My strength, and no one has been able to upset My original plan. I will transcend space, and span the ages, and embark upon the core of My entire plan both above and among all things. No one has been able to receive special treatment from Me, no one has been able to obtain the “reward” in My hands. And even though people have opened their mouths and prayed to Me, even though, heedless of all else, they have reached out their hands to make demands of Me, none of them have ever affected Me, and they have all been pushed back by My “heartless” voice. Most people still believe that they are “too young,” and so wait for Me to show great mercy, to be compassionate toward them for a second time, and they ask that I allow them to take the back door. Yet how could I casually meddle with My plan? Could I stop the earth rotating for the sake of man’s youth, so that he could live a few more years on earth? Man’s brain is so complex, yet it seems that there are also things it lacks. In consequence, in man’s mind there often appear “wonderful ways” to deliberately interrupt My work.

Although many are the times that I have forgiven man his sins, and shown him special favor because of his weakness, many are also the times that I have given him appropriate treatment because of his ignorance. It is simply that man has never known how to appreciate My kindness, such that he has sunk to his present denouement: covered in dust, his clothes in tatters, his hair covering his head like a growth of weeds, his face caked in grime, his feet shod in homemade shoes, his hands like the claws of a dead eagle, hanging weakly at his sides. When I open My eyes and look, it is as if man has just climbed out of the bottomless pit. I can’t help but be angry: I have always been tolerant of man, yet how could I allow the devil to come and go as it pleases from My holy kingdom? How could I allow a beggar to eat for free in My household? How could I tolerate having an unclean spirit as a guest of My household? Man has always been “strict with himself” and “lenient toward others,” yet he has never been the least bit courteous toward Me, for I am the God in heaven, and so he treats Me differently, and has never had the slightest affection for Me. It is as if man’s eyes are especially astute: As soon as he encounters Me, the look on his face immediately changes and he adds a little more expression to his cold, impassive visage. I do not impose appropriate restrictions on man because of his attitude toward Me, but merely look upon the skies from above the universes and thence carry out My work on earth. In the memories of man, I have never shown kindness to any person, but neither have I ever mistreated anyone. Because man does not leave an “empty seat” for Me in his heart, when I fling caution to the wind and reside within him, he unceremoniously forces Me out, and then uses smooth talk and flattery to make excuses, saying he is too lacking and incapable to provide himself for My enjoyment. As he talks, his face frequently becomes overcast with “dark clouds,” as if disaster might fall among man any time. Yet still he asks Me to leave, without any consideration of the dangers involved. Even though I give to man with My words and the warmth of My embrace, he seems to have no hearing organ, and so he pays not the slightest attention to My voice, instead clutching his head as he takes to his heels. I depart from man feeling a little disappointed, but also a little wrathful. Man, meanwhile, immediately vanishes amid the onslaught of great gales and mighty waves. Soon after, he cries out to Me, but how could he affect the movement of the wind and waves? Gradually, all trace of man is lost, until he is nowhere to be found.

Before the ages, I looked upon all lands from above the universes. I planned a great undertaking on earth: the creation of a mankind that was after My own heart, and the building of a kingdom on earth like the one in heaven, allowing My power to fill the skies and My wisdom to spread throughout the entire universe. And so today, thousands of years later, I continue with My plan, yet no one knows of My plan or management on earth, much less do they see My kingdom on earth. Hence, man chases shadows, and comes before Me to try to fool Me, wanting to pay a “silent price” for My blessings in heaven. In consequence, he provokes My wrath and I bring judgment upon him, but still he does not awaken. It is as if he is working underground, completely ignorant of that which is above ground as he pursues nothing other than his own prospects. Among all people, I have never seen anyone who lives beneath My shining light. They live in a world of darkness, and seem to have become used to living amid the gloom. When the light comes they stay far away, and it is as if the light has disturbed their work; as a result, they look a little annoyed, as if the light has shattered all their peace and left them unable to sleep soundly. In consequence, man summons all his strength to drive away the light. The light, too, seems to lack awareness, and so rouses man from his sleep, and when man awakens, he closes his eyes, overcome with anger. He is somewhat displeased with Me, yet in My heart I know the score. I gradually intensify the light, causing all people to live amid My light, such that before long they become adept at associating with the light, and, furthermore, all treasure the light. At this time, My kingdom has come among man, all people dance with joy and celebrate, the earth is suddenly filled with jubilation, and several thousand years of silence is broken by the arrival of the light. ...

THE TWENTY-FIFTH UTTERANCE

Times passes, and in the blink of an eye today has arrived. Under the guidance of My Spirit, all people live amid My light, and no longer does anyone think of the past or pay heed to yesterday. Who has not ever lived in the present day? Who has not spent wonderful days and months in the kingdom? Who has not lived beneath the sun? Though the kingdom has descended among man, no one has truly experienced its warmth; man only regards it from the outside, uncomprehending of its substance. During the time that My kingdom is formed, who does not rejoice because of it? Can the countries on earth really escape? Is the great red dragon really able to escape thanks to its cunning? My administrative decrees are announced throughout the universe, they institute My authority among all people, and come into effect across the cosmos; nevertheless, man has never truly known this. When My administrative decrees are revealed to the universe is also when My work on earth is about to be completed. When I rule and wield power among all men and when I am recognized as the one God Himself, My kingdom will fully descend to earth. Today, all people have a new beginning upon a new path. They have begun a new life, yet no one has ever truly experienced a life on earth akin to heaven. Do you truly live amid My light? Do you truly live among My words? Who does not give thought to their own prospects? Who is not distressed by their own fate? Who does not struggle amid the sea of affliction? Who does not wish to free themselves? Are the blessings of the kingdom in exchange for man's hard work on earth? Could all of man's desires be fulfilled just as he wishes? I once presented the beautiful sight of the kingdom before man, yet he merely stared at it with greedy eyes and there were none who truly aspired to enter it. I once "reported" the true situation on earth to man, but he did no more than listen, and did not face the words that came from My mouth with his heart; I once told man of the circumstances in heaven, yet he treated My words as wonderful tales, and did not truly accept that which My mouth described. Today, scenes of the kingdom flash among man, but has anyone ever “crossed peak and vale” in search of it? Without My urging, man would still not have awoken from his dreams. Is really he so enthralled by his life on earth? Are there really no high standards in his heart?

Those whom I predestined as My people are able to dedicate themselves to Me and live in harmony with Me. They are precious in My sight, and shine with love for Me in My kingdom. Among the people of today, who fulfills such conditions? Who is able to make the grade as per My requirements? Do My requirements really cause difficulties for man? Do I deliberately cause him to make mistakes? I am lenient toward all people, and give them preferential treatment. However, this is only toward My people in China. It is not that I underestimate you, nor that I look upon you favorably, but that I am practical and realistic toward you. People inevitably encounter setbacks in their lives, whether in regard to their families or the wider world. Yet whose hardship has been arranged by their own hand? Man is incapable of knowing Me. He has some understanding of My external appearance, yet is ignorant of My substance; he does not know the ingredients of the food he eats. Who is able to carefully perceive My heart? Who is able to truly understand My will before Me? When I come down to earth, it is cloaked in darkness and man is “fast asleep.” I walk among all places, and all that I see is torn and tattered and unbearable to look at. It is as if man is only willing to enjoy, and has no desire to heed “things from the outside world.” Unbeknownst to all people, I survey the entire earth, yet I see nowhere that is filled with life. Straight away, I shine forth the light and heat and look upon the earth from the third heaven. Although the light falls upon the land and the heat spreads over it, only the light and heat seem to be rejoicing; they arouse nothing in man, who is reveling in comfort. Seeing this, I immediately bestow among man the “rod” that I have prepared. As the rod falls, the light and the heat are gradually dispersed and the earth immediately becomes desolate and dark—and because of the darkness, man seizes the opportunity to carry on enjoying. Man has a slight sense of the arrival of My rod, but he does not react, and carries on enjoying his blessings on earth. Next, My mouth proclaims the chastisement of all men, and people throughout the universe are nailed to the cross upside down. When My chastisement comes, man is shaken by the noise of the mountains toppling and the earth tearing apart. Having been startled awake, he is astounded and terrified, and wishes to run away, but it is too late. As My chastisement falls, My kingdom descends upon earth and all countries are smashed to pieces, disappearing without trace and leaving nothing behind.

Each day I look upon the face of the universe, and each day I do My new work among man. Yet people are all “working selflessly,” and no one pays attention to the dynamics of My work or takes notice of the state of things beyond themselves. It is as if people live in a new heaven and a new earth of their own making, and don’t want anyone else to interfere. They’re all engaged in the work of enjoying themselves, are all admiring themselves as they do their “physical exercises.” Is there really none of My place in man’s heart? Am I really incapable of being the Ruler of man’s heart? Has man’s spirit really left him? Who has ever carefully pondered the words from My mouth? Who has ever perceived the desire of My heart? Has man’s heart really been taken over by some other thing? Many are the times that I have cried out to man, yet has anyone ever felt compassion? Has anyone ever lived in humanity? Man may live in the flesh, but he is without humanity. Was he born in the animal kingdom? Or was he born in heaven, and is possessed of divinity? I make My requirements of man, yet it is as if he doesn’t understand My words, as if I am an unapproachable monster that is alien to him. So many times have I been disappointed by man, so many times have I become enraged by his poor performance, and so many times have I been aggrieved by his weakness. Why do I not arouse the spiritual feeling in man’s heart? Why do I not inspire love in man’s heart? Why is man unwilling to treat Me as the apple of his eye? Is man’s heart not his own? Has some other thing taken up residence in his spirit? Why does man wail without cease? Why is he miserable? Why, when he is sorrowful, does he ignore My existence? Do I stab him? Have I deliberately abandoned him?

In My eyes, man is the ruler of all things. I have given him no small amount of authority, allowing him to manage all things on earth—the grass upon the mountains, the animals among the forests, and the fish in the water. Yet instead of being happy because of this, man is beset by anxiety. His entire life is one of anguish, and rushing about, and fun added to emptiness, and in his whole life there are no new inventions and creations. No one is able to extricate themselves from this hollow life, no one has ever discovered a life of meaning, and no one has ever experienced a real life. Although the people of today all live beneath My shining light, they know nothing of life in heaven. If I am not merciful toward man and do not save mankind, then all people have come in vain, their lives on earth are without meaning, and they will depart in vain, with nothing to be proud of. The people of every sect, sphere of society, nation, and denomination all know the emptiness on earth, and they all seek Me and await My return—yet who is capable of knowing Me when I arrive? I made all things, I created mankind, and today I have descended among man. Man, however, hits back at Me, and takes revenge on Me. Is the work I do upon man of no benefit to him? Am I really incapable of satisfying man? Why does man reject Me? Why is man so cold and indifferent toward Me? Why is earth covered with corpses? Is this really the state of the world I made for man? Why is it that I have given man incomparable riches, yet he offers Me two empty hands in return? Why does man not truly love Me? Why does he never come before Me? Have all My words really been for nothing? Have My words vanished like heat from water? Why is man unwilling to cooperate with Me? Is the arrival of My day really the moment of man's death? Could I really destroy man at the time when My kingdom is formed? Why, during My entire management plan, has no one ever grasped My intentions? Why, instead of cherishing the utterances from My mouth, does man loathe and reject them? I condemn no one, but merely cause all people to calm down and carry out the work of self-reflection.

PEOPLE! REJOICE!

In My light, people see the light again. In My word, people find the things for enjoyment. I have come from the East and I hail from there. When My glory shines, all nations are lighted, all is brought to light, not a thing remains in darkness. In the kingdom, the life of God's people with God is incomparably happy. The waters dance for people's blessed lives, the mountains enjoy with people My abundance. All men are striving, working hard, showing their loyalty in My kingdom. In the kingdom, there is no more rebellion, no more resistance; the heavens and the earth depend on each other, man and I are close and feel deeply, through life's felicities, leaning together.... At this time, I formally begin the heavenly life. Satan's interference is no more, and the people enter into rest. Throughout the universe, My chosen people live in My glory, blessed beyond compare, not as people living among people, but as people living with God. Everyone has experienced Satan's corruption, tasted life's bitterness and sweetness. Now living in My light, how can one not rejoice? How can one simply forgo such a beautiful moment and let it pass? People! Now sing the songs in your hearts and dance for Me! Now lift your sincere hearts and offer them to Me! Now beat your drums and play for Me! I shine joy over all the universe! I show the people My glorious face! I shall thunder! I shall transcend the universe! Already I reign among the people! I am exalted by the people! I drift in the blue heavens and the people move with Me. I walk among the people and My people surround Me! The people's hearts are joyous, their songs shake the universe, cracking the skies! The universe is no longer shrouded in fog; there is no more mud, no more sewage gathering. Holy people of the universe! Under My inspection your true countenance is revealed. You are not men covered in filth, but saints pure as jade, all My beloved, all My delights! All things come back to life! All saints are back in heavens serving Me, entering My warm embrace, no longer weeping, no longer anxious, offering up themselves to Me, returning to My home, and in their homeland they will love Me endlessly! Unchanging! Where is the sorrow! Where are the tears! Where is the flesh! The earth is no longer; the heavens are forever. I appear to all peoples, and all peoples praise Me. This life, this beauty, from time immemorial and forevermore, will not change. This is life in the kingdom.

THE TWENTY-SIXTH UTTERANCE

Who has abided in My home? Who has stood up for My sake? Who has suffered in My behalf? Who has pledged his word before Me? Who has followed Me to the present and yet has not become indifferent? Why are all human beings cold and unfeeling? Why has mankind abandoned Me? Why has humanity grown weary of Me? Why is there no warmth in the human world? While in Zion, I have tasted the warmth that is in heaven, and while in Zion I have enjoyed the blessing that is in heaven. Again, I have lived in mankind's midst, I have tasted the bitterness in the human world, I have seen with My own eyes all the different states that exist amongst men. Unawares, man has changed along with My changes, and only in this way has he arrived at the present day. I do not require that man be able to do anything for My sake, nor do I require that he make any increase on My account. I only want him to be able to accord with My plan, neither disobeying Me nor becoming a mark of shame to Me, and to bear resounding witness unto Me. Among men, there have been those who have borne Me good witness and glorified My name, but how can man's practices, man's conduct possibly satisfy My heart? How can he possibly meet with My desire or fulfill My will? Of the mountains and waters on the earth, and the flowers, grasses, and trees on the earth, not one but shows the work of My hands, not one but exists for My name. Yet why cannot man attain to the standards of what I demand? Could this be due to his abject lowliness? Could it be due to My elevation of him? Could it be that I am too cruel to him? Why is man always fearful of My demands? Today, among the multitudes in the kingdom, why is it that you only listen to My voice but do not wish to see My face? Why do you only look at My words without trying to match them to My Spirit? Why do you keep Me apart in heaven above and on the earth below? Could it be that I, when I am on earth, am not the same I that I am in heaven? Could it be that I, when I am in heaven, cannot come down onto the earth? Could it be that I, when I am on earth, am unworthy to be borne up to heaven? It is as though I, when I am on earth, am a lowly creature, as though I, when I am in heaven, am an exalted being, and as though there lies between heaven and earth an unbridgeable chasm. But in the world of men they seem to know nothing of the origins of these things, but all along have been going contrary to Me, as though My words have only sound and no meaning. All men spend effort on My words, undertaking investigations of their own into My outward semblance, but they all meet with failure, without any results to show, but instead are struck down by My words and dare not get up again.

When I put mankind's faith to the test, not one human being has the capacity to bear true witness, not one is capable of offering up his all; rather, man keeps hiding and refuses to open himself up, as if I were going to ravish his heart. Even Job never truly stood up under trial, nor did he emanate sweetness in the midst of suffering. All that humanity is capable of doing is to produce a faint hint of green in the warmth of springtime; he has never stayed evergreen under the cold blasts of winter. Bony and emaciated in stature, man cannot fulfill My intention. In all of humanity, there is no one who can serve as a model for others, because men are basically alike and no different from each other, with little to distinguish them one from another. For this reason, even today men are still unable fully to know My works. Only when My chastisement descends upon all mankind will men, unbeknownst to themselves, become aware of My works, and without My doing anything or compelling anyone, men will come to know Me, and thereby get to see My works. This is My plan, it is the aspect of My works that is manifest, and it is what man should know. In the kingdom, the myriad things of creation begin to revive and regain their life force. Due to changes in the state of the earth, the boundaries between one land and another also begin to shift. Formerly, I have prophesied: When land is divided from land, and land unites with land, this will be the time that I will smash up the nations into smithereens. At this time, I will renew all of creation and repartition the entire universe, thereby putting the universe in order, transforming its old state into a new one. This is My plan. These are My works. When the nations and the peoples of the world all return before My throne, I will thereupon take all the bounty of heaven and confer it upon the human world, so that, thanks to Me, it will brim with matchless bounty. But so long as the old world continues to exist, I will hurl forth My rage upon its nations, openly promulgating My administrative decrees throughout the universe, and visit chastisement on whomever violates them:

As I turn My face to the universe to speak, all mankind hears My voice, and thereupon sees all the works I have wrought throughout the universe. Those who go contrary to My will, that is to say, who oppose Me with the deeds of man, will fall down under My chastisement. I will take the multitudinous stars in the heavens and make them anew, and thanks to Me the sun and the moon will be renewed—the skies will no longer be as they were; the myriad things on the earth will be renewed. All will become complete through My words. The many nations within the universe will be partitioned afresh and replaced by My nation, so that the nations upon the earth will disappear forever and become a nation that worships Me; all the nations of the earth will be destroyed, and will cease to exist. Of the human beings within the universe, all those belonging to the devil will be exterminated; all who worship Satan will be laid low by My burning fire—that is, except for those now within the stream, the rest will be turned to ashes. When I chastise the many peoples, those in the religious world will, in differing degrees, return to My kingdom, conquered by My works, because they will have seen the advent of the Holy One riding on a white cloud. All of humanity will follow their own kind, and will receive chastisements varying with what they have done. Those who have stood against Me will all perish; as for those whose deeds on the earth have not involved Me, they will, because of how they have acquitted themselves, continue to exist on the earth under the governance of My sons and My people. I will reveal Myself to the myriad peoples and the myriad nations, sounding forth with My own voice upon the earth to proclaim the completion of My great work for all mankind to see with their own eyes.

As My voice deepens in intensity, I am also observing the state of the universe. Through My words, the myriad things of creation are all made new. Heaven changes, and earth too changes. Humanity is exposed in their original form and, slowly, each according to their kind, men find their way unawares back into the bosom of their families. At this, I will be greatly pleased. I am free from disruption, and My great work becomes complete, all unawares, the myriad things of creation are transformed, all unawares. When I created the world, I fashioned all things according to their kind, making everything with a visible form gather together with its kind. As the end of My management plan draws near, I will restore the former state of creation, I will restore everything to the way it originally was, profoundly changing everything, so that everything will return into the bosom of My plan. The time has come! The last stage in My plan is about to be accomplished. Ah, unclean old world! You shall surely fall down under My words! You shall surely be reduced to nothingness by My plan! Ah, the myriad things of creation! You will all gain new life within My words, you now have a Sovereign Lord! Ah, pure and unblemished new world! You shall surely revive within My glory! Ah, Mount Zion! Be silent no more. I have returned in triumph! From the midst of creation, I scrutinize the whole earth. On earth, mankind has begun a new life, has won new hope. Ah, My people! How can you not come back to life within My light? How can you not jump for joy under My guidance? The lands are shouting in jubilation, the waters are cacophonous with gleeful laughter! Ah, the resurrected Israel! How can you not feel pride on account of My predestination? Who has wept? Who has wailed? The Israel of old has ceased to be, and today's Israel has risen up, erect and towering, in the world, has stood up in the hearts of all humanity. Today's Israel shall surely attain the source of existence through My people! Ah, hateful Egypt! Surely you do not still stand against Me? How can you take advantage of My mercy and try to escape My chastisement? How can you not exist within My chastisement? All those that I love will surely live for eternity, and all those who stand against Me will surely be chastised by Me for eternity. For I am a jealous God, I will not lightly spare men for all that they have done. I will watch over the whole earth, and, appearing in the East of the world with righteousness, majesty, wrath, and chastisement, I will reveal Myself to the myriad hosts of humanity!

THE TWENTY-SEVENTH UTTERANCE

Human behavior has never touched My heart, nor has it ever struck Me as precious. In the eyes of man, I am always treating him very strictly, and I am always exercising authority over him. In all of man's actions, there is scarcely anything done for Me, scarcely anything standing firm before My eyes. Ultimately, everything pertaining to man has imperceptibly crumbled before Me, and only in such a time do My actions become apparent, letting everyone, in their own failure, come to know Me. Human nature remains unchanged. What is in their hearts is not in accordance with My will—it is not what I need. What I detest the most is man's stubbornness and recidivism, but what force would there be provoking them to continue being a stranger to Me, to always keep a distance, to never act in accordance to My will before Me and oppose Me behind My back instead? Is this their loyalty? Is this their love for Me? Why can't they repent and be born again? Why are people forever willing to live in the swamp instead of a place free of mud? Could it be that I have mistreated them? Could it be that I have led them astray? Could it be that I lead them to hell? Everyone is willing to live in "hell." When the light comes, their eyes go instantly blind, as everything they have stored up in them comes from hell. However, they are ignorant of this, and they are just enjoying "infernal pleasures." They even hold them as treasures close to their chests with an intense fear that I will steal them away, leaving them without the source of existence. People fear Me, which is why they stay far away from Me and hate to draw near to Me when I come to earth, for they are unwilling to “cause trouble for themselves,” wishing instead to maintain a peaceful family life so that they might enjoy “happiness on earth.” However I cannot allow them to fulfill their wishes, as destroying their families is precisely what I am here to do. From the moment of My arrival the peace in their homes will be disturbed. I will shatter all the nations, not to mention the families. Who could ever escape My grasp? How could it be that those who receive blessings could escape by virtue of their unwillingness? How could it ever be that those who suffer chastisement could gain My sympathy by virtue of their fear? In all of My words, people have seen My will and seen My actions, but who could ever break free of the entanglement of his own thoughts? Who could ever find a way out from within or without My words?

People experienced My warmth, they sincerely served Me, and they were sincerely obedient to Me and doing everything for Me in My presence. But people today somehow cannot arrive at this way of being, and they can only mourn in their spirits as if stolen away by a ravenous wolf. They can only look at Me with anxiously awaiting eyes, and furthermore they keep crying out to Me for help. But from start to finish, they cannot get themselves out of trouble. I think back to how people in the past made promises in My presence, swore to the end of the world in My presence, to repay My kindness with their affection. They wept sorrowfully before Me, and the sound of their cries was heartbreaking and difficult to tolerate. I often supported them by virtue of their will. People have come before Me countless times to obey Me, and their adorable manners have been memorable. Countless times they have come to love Me with unwavering faith, and their sincere emotion has been admirable. On countless occasions, they have risked their lives to love Me, to love Me more than themselves, and seeing their sincerity, I have accepted their love. On countless occasions, they have offered themselves in My presence, indifferent in the face of death for Me, and I wiped the worry off their faces, and carefully sized up their visages. There have been countless occasions where I have loved them like My own treasure, and there have been countless occasions where I have hated them as My own enemy. Such am I—they can never guess what is on My mind. When people are sad, I come to comfort them, and when they are weak, I come to help them along. When they are lost, I give them direction. When they weep, I wipe away their tears. However, when I am sad, who can comfort Me with their hearts? When I am worried sick, who is considerate of My feelings? When I am sorrowful, who can make up for the hurt I feel? When I need someone, who would offer to cooperate with Me? How could it be that their past attitude toward Me is now lost and never to return? Why is it that there is not a little left in their memories? How is it that people have forgotten all these? Isn't this because mankind has been corrupted by his enemies?

When the angels play music and percussion in praise to Me, I cannot help but have My sympathy evoked for man. I suddenly feel extremely sad in My heart, and it is difficult to rid Myself of this painful emotion. In My joys and sorrows, My separation and being reunited with man, I cannot wax nostalgic. Separated in heaven above and on earth below, we are unable to meet regularly. Who could ever break free from nostalgia? Who could ever stop reminiscing about the past? Who would not eagerly anticipate the continuance of good feelings past? Who would not expect My return? Who would not long for My reunion with man? My heart is deeply troubled, and their spirits are deeply worried. Although we are the same in our spirits, we cannot often be together, and we cannot often see each other. Thus the life of all mankind is deeply aggrieved and lacking in vitality, as they have always yearned for Me. It is as if they were objects knocked out of heaven, crying out My name from the earth, lifting their gaze to Me from the ground—but how can they escape from the mouth of the ravenous wolf? How can they free themselves from its threat and temptation? How could they not sacrifice themselves by way of obedience to the direction of My plan? When they loudly entreat, I turn My face away from them, I can no longer bear to witness it; however, how could I not hear the sound of such weeping people? I want to correct the injustices of the human world. I will do My work personally throughout the entire world, forbidding Satan from harming My people again, forbidding the enemy from doing whatever they please again. I will become King on earth and move My throne there, making all the enemy fall to the ground and confess their crimes before Me. In My sadness mixed with anger, I will overcome the whole universe, sparing no one, and putting all of the enemy in awe. I want to reduce the earth to ruins, among which all the enemy will be, henceforth preventing them from further corrupting mankind. My plan is determined, and no one, no matter who they are, will be able to change it. As I float above the universe swaggering, all people will have a renewed outlook, and everything will be revived. They will no longer weep, and no longer cry out to Me for help. Then My heart will rejoice, and the people will return in celebration to Me. The whole universe, from top to bottom, will roil in jubilation....

Today among various countries, I am doing the work I have set out to accomplish. I am moving around everyone, doing all My work as planned, and all the people split the nations according to My will. The people on the ground have their attention fixed on their own destination, as the day is coming closer and the angel's trumpet has already sounded. There will be no more delays in hours or days, and all things will begin to dance in jubilation. Who could ever extend My day just at their will? Could it be an earthling? Could they be the stars in the sky or the angels? When I make an utterance and start the salvation of Israel's people, My day approaches all of mankind. Every man fears the return of Israel. When it returns, that will be My day of glory, and the day when everything changes and becomes renewed. As a righteous judgment will be facing the whole universe, all are timid and fearful, because in the human world, righteousness is unheard of. When the Sun of righteousness appears, the East will be illuminated, and then it will illuminate the whole universe, reaching everyone. If man can really do My righteousness, what would there be to fear? All My people await the arrival of My day, anticipating the coming of My day. They await Me to repay all of mankind and determine their destination as the Sun of righteousness. My kingdom is forming over the whole universe, and My throne is seizing the hearts of trillions of people. With the angels' assistance, My great accomplishment will soon be brought to successful completion. All the masses of My sons and My people, anxiously await My return, anticipating My reuniting with them, never to be separated again. How could all the populace of My kingdom not run around in celebration with each other over My being together with them? Could this be a costless reunion? I am honorable in the eyes of everyone, I am proclaimed in everyone's words. When I return, I will conquer all enemy forces even more. The time has come! I will put My work in motion, I will reign supreme among man! I am returning! I am leaving! This is what everyone is anticipating, what they are hoping for. I want to let everyone see the arrival of My day and joyfully welcome the coming of My day!

THE TWENTY-EIGHTH UTTERANCE

When I came from Zion, I was awaited by all things, and when I returned to Zion, I was greeted by all men. As I came and went, never were My steps hindered by things that were in enmity to Me, and hence My work progressed smoothly. Today, when I come among all creatures, all things greet Me with silence, deeply fearful that I will depart once more and remove their support. All things follow My guidance, and all watch the direction indicated by My hand. The words from My mouth have made perfect many creatures and chastised many sons of disobedience. Thus, all men gaze intently upon My words, and listen closely to the utterances from My mouth, and are profoundly afraid of missing this good opportunity. It is for this reason that I have continued to speak, so that My work may be carried out more quickly, and so that gratifying conditions may appear sooner on earth and remedy the scenes of desolation on earth. When I look upon the skies is when I once more turn to mankind; all lands are instantly filled with life, dust no longer hangs in the air, and mire no longer blankets the ground. My eyes at once shine forth, causing the people of all lands to look up to Me and take refuge in Me. Among the people of today's world—including all those who are present in My household—who truly takes refuge in Me? Who gives their heart in exchange for the price I have paid? Who has ever dwelt in My household? Who has ever truly offered themselves before Me? When I make requirements of man, he immediately closes up his "little storehouse." When I give to man, he quickly opens his mouth to take My riches stealthily, and in his heart he often trembles, deeply fearful that I will strike back at him. Thus the mouth of man is half open and half closed, and he is incapable of truly enjoying the riches that I bestow. I do not easily condemn man, yet he always takes Me by the hand and asks Me to bestow mercy upon him; only when man entreats Me do I once again bestow "mercy" upon him, and I give unto him the harshest words of My mouth, such that he immediately feels ashamed, and, being incapable of directly receiving My "mercy," instead makes others pass it on to him. When he has thoroughly grasped all of My words, man's stature is commensurate with My wishes, and his pleas are fruitful, and not in vain or futile; I bless the pleas of mankind that are sincere, and not a pretense.

I have been acting and speaking throughout the ages, yet never has

man heard such utterances as I speak today, and never has he had a taste of My majesty and judgment. Although people in the world of the past have heard legends of Me, no one has ever truly discovered the extent of My riches. Though the people of today hear the words from My mouth, they remain ignorant of how many mysteries are in My mouth, and thus consider it a cornucopia. All people wish to acquire something from My mouth. Whether it be the secrets of state, or the mysteries of heaven, or the dynamics of the spiritual world, or the destination of mankind, all people wish to receive such things. Thus, if I were to assemble people together and tell “stories” to them, they would immediately rise from their “sickbed” to hear My way. Too much is lacking within man: He requires not just “nutritional supplements,” but even more “mental support” and a “spiritual supply.” This is what is lacking in all people; this is the “sickness” of all men. I provide a cure for man’s sickness in order that better effects may be achieved, so that all may be restored to health, and so that, thanks to My cure, they may return to normality. Do you truly hate the great red dragon? Do you truly, sincerely hate it? Why have I asked you so many times? Why do I keep asking you this question, again and again? What image is there of the great red dragon in your heart? Has it really been removed? Do you truly not consider it your father? All people should perceive My intention in My questions. It is not to provoke the anger of the people, nor to incite rebellion among man, nor so that man may find his own way out, but is to allow all people to liberate themselves from the bondage of the great red dragon. Yet no one should worry. All will be accomplished by My words; no man may partake, and no man can do the work that I will carry out. I will wipe clean the air of all lands and eradicate all trace of the demons on earth. I have already begun, and I will commence the first step of My work of chastisement in the dwelling place of the great red dragon. Thus it can be seen that My chastisement has befallen the entire universe, and that the great red dragon and all kinds of unclean spirits will be powerless to escape My chastisement, for I look upon all lands. When My work on earth is completed, that is, when the era of judgment comes to an end, I will formally chastise the great red dragon. My people will see My righteous chastisement of the great red dragon, they will pour forth their praise because of My righteousness, and will forever extol My holy name because of My righteousness. Hence you will formally perform your duty, and will formally praise Me throughout the lands, forever and ever!

When the era of judgment reaches its peak, I will not hasten to conclude My work, but will integrate into it the evidence of the era of chastisement and allow this evidence to be seen by all My people; and in this will be borne greater fruit. This evidence is the means by which I chastise the great red dragon, and I will cause My people to behold it with their own eyes so that they will know more of My disposition. The time that My people enjoy Me is when the great red dragon is chastised. Causing the people of the great red dragon to rise up and revolt against it is My plan, and the method by which I make perfect My people, and is a great opportunity for all My people to grow in life. When the bright moon rises, the tranquil night is at once shattered. Though the moon is in tatters, man is in fine spirits, and sits peacefully under the moonshine, admiring the beautiful scene beneath the light. Man can't describe his emotions; it is as if he wishes to cast his thoughts back to the past, as if he wishes to look ahead to the future, as if he is enjoying the present. A smile appears on his face, and among the pleasing air there permeates a crisp scent; as a gentle breeze begins to blow, man detects the rich fragrance, and he seems intoxicated by it, unable to rouse himself. This is the very time that I have personally come among man, and man has a heightened sense of the rich aroma, and thereby all men live amid this fragrance. I am at peace with man, he lives in harmony with Me, no longer is he deviant in his regard of Me, no longer do I prune the deficiencies of man, no longer is there a distressed look upon the face of man, and no longer does death threaten the whole of mankind. Today, I advance together with man into the era of chastisement, going forth with him side by side. I am doing My work, which is to say, I strike down My rod among man and it falls upon that which is rebellious in man. In the eyes of man, My rod seems to have special powers: It comes upon all those who are My enemies and does not easily spare them; among all who oppose Me, the rod performs its inherent function; all those who are in My hands perform their duty according to My original intention, and never have they defied My wishes or changed their substance. As a result, the waters will roar, the mountains will topple, the great rivers will disintegrate, man will be ever given to change, the sun will grow dim, the moon will darken, man will have no more days of living in peace, there will be no more times of tranquility upon the land, the heavens will never again remain calm, and quiet, and will never again endure. All things will be renewed and will recover their original appearance. All households upon earth will be torn apart, and all nations on earth will be rent asunder; gone will be the days of the reunion between husband and wife, no more will mother and son meet again, never again will there be the coming together of father and daughter. All that used to be on earth will be smashed by Me. I do not give people the opportunity to release their emotions, for I am without emotions, and have grown to detest the emotions of people to an extent. It is because of the emotions between people that I have been cast to one side, and thus I have become an “other” in their eyes; it is because of the emotions between people that I have been forgotten; it is because of the emotions of man that he seizes the opportunity to pick up his “conscience”; it is because of the emotions of man that he is always weary of My chastisement; it is because of the emotions of man that he calls Me unfair and unjust, and says that I am heedless of man’s feelings in My handling of things. Do I also have kin upon earth? Who has ever, like Me, worked day and night, without thought for food or sleep, for the sake of My entire management plan? How could man be comparable to God? How could he be compatible with God? How could God, who creates, be of the same kind as man, who is created? How could I always live and act together with man on earth? Who worries for My heart? Is it the prayers of man? I once agreed to join man and walk together with him—and yes, unto this day man has lived under My care and protection, but when is the day that man can separate himself from My care? Though man has never cared for My heart, who can keep living in a land without light? It is only because of My blessings that man has lived until today.

THE TWENTY-NINTH UTTERANCE

On the day that all things were resurrected, I came among man, and I have spent wonderful days and nights with him. Only at this point does man sense a little of My approachability, and as his interaction with Me becomes more frequent, he sees some of what I have and am—and as a result, he gains some knowledge of Me. Among all people, I raise My head and watch, and they all see Me. Yet when disaster

befalls the world, they immediately grow anxious, and My image vanishes from their hearts; panic-stricken by the arrival of the disaster, they pay no regard to My exhortations. Many years have I passed among man, yet he has always remained unaware, and has never known Me. Today I tell to him with My own mouth, and make all people come before Me to receive something from Me, but still they keep their distance from Me, and so they do not know Me. When My footsteps tread across the ends of the universe, man will begin to reflect upon himself, and all people will come to Me and bow down before Me and worship Me. This will be the day of My glorification, the day of My return, and also the day of My departure. Now, I have begun My work among all mankind, have formally embarked, throughout the entire universe, upon the finale of My management plan. From this moment onward, any who are not cautious are liable to be plunged amid merciless chastisement at any moment. This is not because I am heartless, but is a step of My management plan; all must proceed according to the steps of My plan, and no man can change this. When I formally begin My work, all people move as I move, such that people throughout the universe occupy themselves in step with Me, there is “jubilation” across the universe, and man is spurred onward by Me. In consequence, the great red dragon itself is whipped into a state of frenzy and bewilderment by Me, and serves My work, and, despite being unwilling, is unable to follow its own desires, leaving it no choice but to submit to My control. In all of My plans, the great red dragon is My foil, My enemy, and also My servant; as such, I have never relaxed My “requirements” of it. Therefore, the final stage of the work of My incarnation is completed in its household. In this way, the great red dragon is more able to do service for Me properly, through which I will conquer it and complete My plan. As I work, all angels embark upon the decisive battle with Me and resolve to fulfill My wishes in the final stage, so that the people on earth yield before Me like the angels, and have no desire to oppose Me, and do nothing that rebels against Me. These are the dynamics of My work throughout the universe.

The purpose and significance of My arrival among man is to save all mankind, to bring all mankind back to My household, to reunite the heaven with the earth, and to make man convey the “signals” between heaven and earth, for such is the inherent function of man. At the time I created mankind, I had made all things ready for mankind, and later, I allowed mankind to receive the riches I gave him according to My requirements. Thus, I say that it is under My guidance that all mankind has reached today. And all this is My plan. Among all mankind, countless numbers of people exist under the protection of My love, and countless numbers live under the chastisement of My hate. Though people all pray to Me, still they are unable to change their present circumstances; once they have lost hope, they can only let nature take its course and cease to disobey Me, for this is all that can be accomplished by man. When it comes to the state of man's life, man has yet to find the real life, he still hasn't seen through to the injustice, desolation, and miserable conditions of the world—and so, were it not for the advent of disaster, most people would still embrace Mother Nature, and would still engross themselves in the flavor of "life." Is this not the reality of the world? Is this not the voice of salvation that I speak forth to man? Why, among mankind, has no one ever truly loved Me? Why does man love Me only in the midst of chastisement and trials, yet no one loves Me under My protection? I have bestowed My chastisement many times upon mankind. They take a look at it, but then they ignore it, and they do not study and contemplate it at this time, and so all that comes upon man is merciless judgment. This is only one of My methods of working, but it is still in order to change man and make him love Me.

I reign in the kingdom, and, moreover, I reign throughout the entire universe; I am both the King of the kingdom and the Head of the universe. From this time onward, I will assemble all those who are not the chosen ones and will begin My work among the Gentiles, and I will announce My administrative decrees to the whole universe, so that I may successfully embark upon the next step of My work. I will use chastisement to spread My work among the Gentiles, which is to say, I will use force against all those who are Gentiles. Naturally, this work will be carried out at the same time as My work among the chosen ones. When My people rule and wield power on earth will also be the day that all people on earth have been conquered, and, moreover, it will be the time when I rest—and only then will I appear to all those who have been conquered. I appear to the holy kingdom, and hide Myself from the land of filth. All who have been conquered and become obedient before Me are able to see My face with their own eyes, and able to hear My voice with their own ears. This is the blessing of those who are born during the last days, this is the blessing predestined by Me, and this is unalterable by any man. Today, I work in this way for the sake of the work of the future. All of My work is interrelated, in all of it is a call and response: Never has any step halted suddenly, and never has any step been carried out independently of any other. Is this not so? Is the work of the past not the foundation of the work today? Are the words of the past not the precursor to the words today? Are the steps of the past not the origin of the steps today? When I formally open the scroll is when people throughout the universe are chastised, when people all over the world are subjected to trials, and it is the climax of My work; all people live in a land without light, and all people live amid the threat of their environment. In other words, it is the life that man has never experienced from the time of creation until the present day, and no one throughout the ages has ever “enjoyed” this kind of life, and so I say that I do work that has never been done before. This is the true state of affairs, and this is the inner meaning. Because My day draws near to all mankind, because it does not appear distant, but is right before man’s eyes, who could not be fearful as a result? And who could not be delighted in this? The filthy city of Babylon has finally come to its end; man has met with a brand-new world, and heaven and earth have been changed and renewed.

When I appear to all nations and all peoples, the white clouds churn in the sky and enshroud Me. So, too, do the birds on earth sing out and dance with joy for Me, highlighting the atmosphere on earth, and thus causing all things on earth to come alive, to no longer “sediment” but instead live amid an atmosphere of vitality. When I am among the clouds, man dimly perceives My face and My eyes, and at this time he feels a little fearful. In the past, he has heard historical records about Me in legends, and as a result he is only half believing and half doubtful toward Me. He knows not where I am, or just how large My face is—is it as wide as the sea, or as boundless as green pastures? No one knows these things. It is only when man sees My face in the clouds today that man feels that the Me of legend is real, and so he becomes a little more favorable toward Me, and it is only because of My deeds that his admiration for Me becomes a little greater. But man still does not know Me, and only sees one part of Me in the clouds. Thereafter, I stretch out My arms and show them to man. Man is astonished, and claps his hands over his mouth, deeply fearful of being struck down by My hand, and so he adds a little reverence to his admiration. Man fixes his eyes upon My every move, profoundly afraid that he will be struck down by Me when he is not paying attention—yet being watched by man does not restrict Me, and I continue to do the work on My hands. It is only in all the deeds I do that man has some favor toward Me, and thus gradually comes before Me to associate with Me. When My entirety is revealed to man, man will see My face, and from then on I will no longer hide or obscure Myself from man. Throughout the universe, I will appear publicly to all people, and all those who are of flesh and blood will behold all of My deeds. All those who are of the spirit will surely dwell in peace in My household, and will assuredly enjoy wonderful blessings together with Me. All those whom I care for will surely escape chastisement, and will certainly avoid the pain of the spirit and the agony of the flesh. I will appear publicly to all peoples and rule and wield power, so that the smell of corpses no longer pervades the universe; instead, My crisp fragrance will spread across the whole world, because My day is drawing near, man is awakening, everything on earth is in order, and the days of survival of the earth are no more, for I have arrived!

THE THIRTIETH UTTERANCE

Among man, I once summarized man's disobedience and weakness, and thus I understood man's weakness and became conversant with his disobedience. Prior to arriving among man, I had long since come to understand the joys and sorrows among man—and because of this, I am capable of doing that which man cannot, and of saying that which man cannot, and I do so easily. Is this not the difference between Me and man? And is this not a clear difference? Could it be that My work is achievable by people of flesh and blood? Could it be that I am of the same kind as created beings? People have ranked Me as of a similar kind—and is this not because they do not know Me? Why, instead of rising upon high among man, must I humble Myself? Why does mankind keep renouncing Me, why is mankind incapable of proclaiming My name? There is great sorrow in My heart, but how could people know? How could they see? Never treating that which concerns Me as of the utmost importance in their lives has left people dazed and confused, as if they have just taken a sleeping pill; when I call out to them, they simply carry on dreaming, and so no one has ever been aware of My deeds. Today, most people are still fast asleep. Only when the kingdom anthem sounds do they open their sleepy eyes and feel a little melancholy in their hearts. When My rod strikes among mankind, they still only^[a] pay a little bit of attention, as if their fate is as worthless as the sand in the sea. Although most of them have some awareness, they still don't know how far My steps have come—for they do not try to understand My heart, and so have never been able to free themselves from Satan's bondage. I move above all things, and live among all things, and at the same time, I take center stage in the hearts of all people. For this reason, people look upon Me as different, believing that I am extraordinary, or else that I am unfathomable—and as a result, their trust in Me becomes stronger each day. I once reclined in the third heaven, observing all people and things in the universe. When I sleep, people fall quiet, deeply fearful of disturbing My rest. When I awake, they immediately grow animated, as if they are doing the work of expressly bringing Me joy. Is this not people on earth's attitude toward Me? Who among the people of today sees the Me in heaven and on earth as one? Who does not venerate the Me in heaven? And who does not look down on the Me on earth? Why does man always tear Me apart? Why does man always have two different attitudes toward Me? Is the incarnate God on earth not the God who commands all in heaven? Is the Me in heaven not now on earth? Why do people see Me but do not know Me? Why is there such a great distance between heaven and earth? Are these things not worthy of being delved into deeper by man?

When I do My work, and during the times that I utter My voice, people always wish to add “flavoring” to it, as if their sense of smell is more acute than Mine, as if they prefer strong flavor, and as if I am unaware of what man needs, and thus must “trouble” man to “supplement” My work. I do not deliberately dampen people's positivity, but ask them to cleanse themselves based on the foundation of knowing Me. Because they lack too much, I suggest that they spend more efforts making up for their deficiencies in order to satisfy My heart. People once knew Me in their conceptions, yet were utterly unaware of this, and thus their cherishment was like treating sand as gold. When I reminded them, they only dispensed with part of this, but instead of replacing the part that had gone with things of silver and gold, they have continued enjoying the part in their hands that still remains—and as a result, they are always humble and patient before Me; they are incapable of being compatible with Me, for they have too many conceptions. Thus, I made up My mind to seize all that man has and is and hurl it far away, so that all can live with Me and no longer be apart from Me. It is because of My work that man does not understand My will. Some believe that I will conclude My work for a second time and cast them into hell. Some believe I will begin a new method of speaking, and most of them tremble with fear: They are deeply fearful that I will finish My work and leave them with nowhere to go, and are profoundly afraid that I will abandon them once more. People always use old conceptions to measure My new work. I said people had never grasped the method by which I work—could they give a good account of themselves this time? Are people's old conceptions not the weapons that interfere with My work? When I speak to people, they always avoid My gaze, deeply afraid that My eyes will settle on them. Thus, they dip their heads, as if accepting an inspection from Me—and is this not caused by their conceptions? Why is it that I've humbled Myself until today, but no one has ever noticed? Must I bow down for man? I came from heaven to earth, I descended from upon high to a secret place, and came among man and revealed all that I have and am to him. My words are sincere and earnest, patient and kind—but who has ever seen what I am and have? Am I still hidden to man? Why is it so difficult for Me to meet with man? Is it because people are too busy in their work? Is it because I'm neglecting My duties, and people are all intent on pursuing success?

In people's minds, God is God, and is not easily engaged with, while man is man, and should not easily become dissolute—yet people's deeds still cannot be brought before Me. Could it be that My requirements are too high? Could it be that man is too weak? Why do people always look upon the standards that I require from afar? Are they really unattainable by man? My requirements are calculated based on people's "constitution," and so have never exceeded man's stature—but even so, people remain incapable of achieving the standards I require. Countless times have I been forsaken among man, countless times have people looked at Me with mocking eyes, as if My body were covered in thorns and loathsome to them, and thus people abhor Me, and believe that I am without worth. In this way, I am shoved back and forth by man.

Countless times have people brought Me home for a low price, and countless times have they sold Me for a high price, and it is because of this that I find Myself in the situation I am in today. It is as if people are still cooking up schemes for Me; most of them still want to sell Me for a profit of hundreds of millions of dollars, for man has never cherished Me. It is as if I've become an intermediary between people, or a nuclear weapon with which they fight amongst each other, or an agreement signed between them—and as a result, I am, in sum, utterly without value in man's heart, I am a dispensable household item. Yet I do not condemn man because of this; I do nothing but save man, and have always been compassionate toward man.

People believe that I will feel at ease when I cast people into hell, as if I'm specially doing a deal with hell, and as if I'm some sort of department that specializes in selling people, as if I'm a specialist in swindling people and will sell them at a high price once I have them in My hands. People's mouths don't say it, but in their hearts this is what they believe. Although they all love Me, they do so secretly. Have I paid such a great price and expended so much in return for this little bit of love from them? People are tricksters, and I always play the role of the tricked. It is as if I am too guileless: Once they have seen this weak point, they keep tricking Me. The words from My mouth do not mean to put people to death or to stick labels on them at random—they are the reality of man. Perhaps some of My words "go too far," in which case I can only "beg" for people's forgiveness; because I am not "skilled" in the language of man, much of what I say is incapable of satisfying people's demands. Perhaps some of My words pierce people's hearts, so I can only "beg" that they be tolerant; because I am not proficient in the life philosophy of man and not good at the means by which to speak, many of My words evoke pain in people. Perhaps some of My words speak to the root of people's illness and expose their sickness, and so I advise taking some of the medicine I've prepared for you, for I have no intention of hurting you and this medicine has no side effects. Perhaps some of My words don't sound "realistic," but I "beg" people not to panic—I am not "nimble" of hand and foot, so My words have yet to be carried out. I ask that people be "forbearing" toward Me. Are these words of help to man? I hope that people can gain something from these words, so that My words are not always in vain!

THE THIRTY-FIRST UTTERANCE

I have never had a place in people's hearts. When I truly search for people, they squeeze shut their eyes and ignore My actions, as if all I do is an attempt to please them, as a result of which they are always disgusted by My doings. It is as if I lack any self-awareness: I always show off Myself before man, causing infuriation in man, who is "upright and righteous." Yet under such adverse conditions, I endure, and continue My work. Thus, I say that I have tasted the sweet, sour, bitter, and pungent flavors of human experience, that amid the wind and rain, I have experienced the persecution of family, have experienced the ups and downs of life, and have experienced the pain of the parting of the body. However, when I came to earth, instead of welcoming Me because of the hardship I had suffered for them, people "politely" declined My good intentions. How could I not be pained by this? How could I not be aggrieved? Could it be that I became flesh for it to all end like this? Why does man not love Me? Why has My love been repaid with man's hate? Could it be that I am supposed to suffer in this way? People have shed tears of sympathy because of My hardship on earth, and have railed at the injustice of My misfortune. Yet who has ever truly known My heart? Who can ever perceive My feelings? Man once had a profound affection toward Me, and once often longed for Me in his dreams—but how could the people on earth understand My will in heaven? Though people once perceived My feelings of sorrow, who has ever had sympathy for My afflictions as a fellow sufferer? Could it be that the conscience of people on earth can move and change My sorrowful heart? Are the people on earth unable to tell Me of the unspeakable hardship within their hearts? The spirits and the Spirit once depended on each other, but because of the barriers of the flesh, people's brains "lost control." I once reminded people to come before Me—but My calls did not cause people to fulfill what I asked; they merely looked into the sky, eyes filled with tears, as if they bore unspeakable hardship, as if there was something standing in their way. Thus, they clasped their hands and bowed down beneath heaven in supplication to Me. Because I am merciful, I bestow My blessings among man, and in the blink of an eye, the moment of My personal advent among man arrives—yet man has long since forgotten his oath to Heaven. Is this not the very disobedience of man? Why does man always suffer from “amnesia”? Have I stabbed him? Have I struck down his body? I tell man of the feelings within My heart, and why does he always avoid Me? In people’s memories, it is as if they’ve lost something and it is nowhere to be found, but also as if their memories are inaccurate. Thus, people always suffer forgetfulness in their lives, and the days of the lives of all mankind are in disarray. Yet no one administers this, people do nothing but trample over each other, and murder each other, which has led to the state of disastrous defeat today, and caused all beneath the universe to collapse into the filthy water and mire, without any chance of salvation.

When I came among all people was the very moment when people became loyal to Me. At this time, the great red dragon also began to lay its murderous hands on people. I accepted the “invitation,” and brought the “letter of invitation” from man as I came to “sit at a banquet table” among man. When they saw Me, people paid Me no heed, for I did not adorn Myself with opulent clothes and had brought only My “identity card” to sit at table with man. There was no expensive make-up upon My face, no crown upon My head, and I wore but a pair of ordinary home-made shoes upon My feet. What disappointed people most was the lack of lipstick upon My mouth. Furthermore, I did not speak polite words, and My tongue was not the pen of a ready writer; instead, each of My words pierced the innermost heart of man, which gave people a much more “favorable” impression of My mouth. The foregoing was sufficient for people to give Me “special treatment,” and thus they treated Me as a fellow villager from the countryside who was without insight or wisdom. Yet when everyone handed over “gifts of money,” people still did not regard Me as honorable, but merely came before Me without any respect, dragging their heels, short of temper. When My hand reached out, they were immediately astonished, they knelt down, and they let out great shouts. They collected up all My “monetary gifts.” Because the amount was great, they instantly thought Me a millionaire and tore the ragged clothes from My body without My consent, replacing them with new clothes—yet this did not make Me happy. Because I was not accustomed to such an easy life, and despised this “first-class” treatment, because I was born of the holy house, and, it can be said, because I was born into “poverty,” I was not used to a life of luxury in which I was waited on hand and foot. I wish only that people can understand the feelings in My heart, that they can endure a little hardship in order to accept the uncomfortable truths from My mouth.

Because I have never been able to talk of theory, or capable of using people's secrets of socializing in order to associate with them, and because I am incapable of tailoring My words according to people's countenance or their psychology, people have always loathed Me, have believed Me to be unworthy of interaction, and have said that I have a sharp tongue and always hurt people. Yet I have no choice: I once studied the psychology of man, once imitated the life philosophy of man, and once went to "language college" to learn the language of man, so that I might master the means by which people talk, and speak as befits their countenance—but although I expended much effort, and visited many "experts," it all came to nothing. Never has there been anything of humanity in Me. For all these years, My efforts have never yielded the slightest effect, I have never had the slightest faculty in the language of man. Thus, the words of man that "hard work pays off" are "reflected" by Me, and as a result, these words come to an end on earth. Without people realizing it, this aphorism has been disproved by the God from heaven, sufficiently verifying that such words are untenable. Thus I apologize to man, but there is nothing to be done—who made Me so "stupid"? I am incapable of learning the language of man, of becoming proficient in life philosophy, of socializing with people. I only advise people to be forbearing, to suppress the anger within their hearts, to not hurt themselves because of Me. Who made us interact with each other? Who made us meet at this moment? Who made us have shared ideals?

My disposition runs throughout all of My words, yet people are incapable of grasping it in My words. They merely split hairs about what I say—and what use is that? Can their conceptions about Me make them perfect? Could the things on earth accomplish My will? I kept trying to teach people how to speak My words, but it was as if man was tongue-tied, and he was never able to learn how to speak My words as I would wish. I taught him mouth-to-mouth, yet he has never been able to learn. Only after this did I make a new discovery: How could the people on earth speak the words of heaven? Does this not violate the laws of nature? But, because of people's zeal and inquisitiveness toward Me, I embarked on another part of work on man. I have never shamed man because of his deficiencies, but instead provide to man in accordance with what he lacks. It is only because of this that people have a somewhat favorable impression of Me, and I use this opportunity to gather people together once again, that they might enjoy another part of My riches. At this moment, people are once more immersed in happiness, cheers and laughter drifting around the rosy clouds in the sky. I open up man's heart, and man immediately has new vitality, and he is unwilling to hide from Me anymore, for he has sampled the sweet taste of honey, and so he brings out all of his junk to be exchanged—as if I have become a garbage collection point, or a waste management station. Thus, after seeing the “advertisements” that have been posted, people come before Me and take part eagerly, for they seem to think they can acquire a few “souvenirs,” thus they each come to believe in order to partake in the events I have set out. At this moment they are not fearful of losses, because the “capital” of these activities is not great, and so they dare to risk participation. If there were no souvenirs to be gained from taking part, people would leave the arena and ask for their money back, and would also work out the “interest” I owed them. It is because today's living standards have increased, reaching a “modest level of prosperity” and achieving “modernization,” with the “senior cadre” personally “going to the countryside” to arrange work, that people's faith has immediately multiplied many times—and because their “constitution” is becoming better and better, they look upon Me with admiration, and are willing to engage with Me in order to gain My trust.

THE THIRTY-SECOND UTTERANCE

When people gather together with Me, My heart is filled with joy. Immediately, I bestow the blessings in My hand among man, that people can convene with Me, and not be enemies who disobey Me but friends who are compatible with Me. Thus, I am also heartfelt toward man. In My work, man is seen as a member of a high-level organization, so I pay more attention to him, for he has always been the object of My work. I have established My place in people's hearts, so that their hearts may look up to Me—yet they remain totally ignorant of why I do this, and do nothing but wait. Although there is a place I have established in people's hearts, they do not require that I reside there. Instead, they wait for the “Holy One” in their hearts to suddenly arrive. Because My identity is too lowly, I do not match up to people's demands and am thus eliminated by them. Because what they want is the "Me" that is high and mighty—whereas when I came, I did not appear in this way to man, so they kept looking off into the distance, waiting for the one in their hearts. When I came before people, they rejected Me in front of the masses. I could only stand to one side, waiting for man's "verdict," watching to see what people would end up doing with Me, this deficient "product." I do not look at people's scars, but at the part of them that is unscarred, and from this I am gratified. In people's eyes, I am but a "little star" that has descended from the sky, I am merely the least in heaven, and My arrival on earth today was commissioned by God. As a result, people have come up with more interpretations of the words "Me" and "God," deeply fearful of conflating God with Me. Because My image bears nothing of the appearance of God, people all believe that I am a servant who is not of God's family, and say that this is not the image of God. Perhaps there are people who have seen God—but because of My lack of insight on earth, God has never "appeared" to Me. Perhaps I have too little "faith," and so people see Me as lowly. People imagine that if one really is God, then he will surely be proficient in the language of man, for God is the Creator. But the facts are precisely the opposite: Not only am I inexpert in the language of man, but there are times when I can't even "provide" for his "deficiencies." As a result, I feel a little "guilty," for I do not act as people "demand," but merely prepare the materials and work in accordance with what they "lack." I do not ask much of man, yet people believe otherwise. Thus, their "humility" is revealed in their every move. They are always liable to walk before Me leading the way for Me, profoundly afraid that I will get lost, terrified that I will wander into the ancient forests deep within the mountains. As a result, people have always led Me onward, deeply fearful that I will walk into the dungeon. I have a somewhat "favorable impression" of people's faith, for they have toiled for Me without thought for food or sleep, to the extent that their labors for Me have left them sleepless day and night and even white-haired—which is enough to show that their faith has "transcended" the universes, and "surpassed" the apostles and prophets throughout the ages.

I do not clap with glee because of people's great skill, nor do I look upon them coldly because of their shortcomings. I merely do that which is within My hands, I do not give anyone special treatment, but simply work according to My plan. Yet people are unknowing of My will and keep praying for things from Me, as if the riches I have bestowed upon them are incapable of meeting their requirements, as if demand outstrips supply. But in today's age, people all sense there is "inflation"—and as a result, their hands are full of what I have given them to enjoy. It is because of this that they grow weary of Me, and so their lives are filled with chaos, and they are ignorant of what they should and should not eat. Some even clutch the things I have given them to enjoy, watching them closely. Because people used to suffer from famine, and it is no easy thing for them to have come by the enjoyments of today, they are all "endlessly grateful," and there has been some change in their attitude toward Me. They keep crying before Me; because I have given them so much, before Me they keep taking My hand and making "sounds of gratitude." I move above the universes, and as I walk I observe the people of the entire universe. Amongst the throngs of people on earth, never have there been any who are suitable for My work or who truly love Me. Thus, at this moment I sigh in dismay, and people immediately disperse, to assemble no more, deeply fearful that I will "catch them all in one net." I use this chance to come among man, to do My work—work which is fitting—among these dispersed people, selecting those who are suitable in whom to work. I wish not to "detain" people amid My chastisement, never to escape. I simply do the work that I must. I have come to ask for man's "help"; because My management lacks the deeds of man, it is not possible to successfully complete My work, which prevents My work from proceeding effectively. I hope only that people have the resolve to cooperate with Me. I do not ask that they cook Me nice food, or arrange somewhere suitable for Me to lay My head, or make Me pretty clothes—I have not the slightest regard for these things. When people can understand My will and advance with Me, side by side, I will be satisfied in My heart.

Who on the earth has ever received Me with their heart? Who has ever loved Me with their heart? People's love is always diluted, even I "don't know" why their love cannot be exsiccated and undiluted. Thus, there are also many "mysteries" contained within man. Among created beings, man is seen as the one who is "miraculous" and "unfathomable," and so he has "qualifications" before Me, as if he is of equal status with Me—but he sees nothing strange about this "status" of his. In this, it is not that I do not allow people to stand in this position and enjoy it, but that I wish for them to have a sense of propriety, for them to not think too highly of themselves; there is a distance between heaven and earth, to say nothing of that between God and man. Is there not an even greater distance between them? On earth, man and I are “in the same boat,” and we “weather the storm together.” My identity does not exempt Me from experiencing the hardship of the human world, and it is because of this that today I have fallen into this circumstance. Never have I had a place to peacefully reside on earth, which is why people say, “the Son of man has never had a place to lay His head.” As a result, people have also cried tears of compassion for Me and put aside several tens of yuan for a “relief fund” for Me. Only because of this do I have a place of rest; if it were not for people’s “help,” who knows where I would have ended up!

When My work ends, no longer shall I seek this “financial relief” from man; instead, I shall perform My inherent function, and shall bring down all of the “things of My house” to people for their enjoyment. Today, everyone is tested amid My trials. When My hand formally arrives among man, people will no longer look upon Me with admiring eyes, but will treat Me with hatred, and at this moment their hearts will immediately be gouged out by Me to serve as a sample. I scrutinize man’s heart beneath a “microscope”—there is no true love for Me there. For years, people have been deceiving Me and fooling Me—it turns out both their left atrium and right ventricle contain the venom of hate toward Me, and no wonder, then, that I have such an attitude toward them. And yet they remain utterly ignorant of this, nor do they even acknowledge it. When I show them the results of My investigation, still they do not awaken; it is as if, in their minds, these are all matters of the past, and ought not to be brought up again today. Thus, people just look upon the “laboratory results” with indifference. They hand the spreadsheet back and stride off. Furthermore, they say things like, “These aren’t important, they don’t have any effect on my health.” They give a small smile of contempt, and then there is a slight threatening look in their eyes, as if implying that I shouldn’t be so ingenuous, that I must be more perfunctory. It is as if My revelation of their inner secrets has broken the “laws” of man, and so they become more hateful toward Me. Only then do I see the source of people’s hate. This is because when I am watching, their blood is flowing, and after passing through the arteries in their bodies it enters the heart, and only at this time do I have a new “discovery.” Yet people think nothing of this. They’re completely careless, they give no thought to what they gain or lose, which is enough to show their spirit of “selfless” devotion. They give no consideration to the state of their own health, and “rush about” for Me. This is also their “faithfulness,” and what is “commendable” about them, so I once more send a letter of “praise” to them, that they may be made happy by this. But when they read this “letter,” they immediately feel a little irked, for all that they do has been rejected by My silent letter. Always have I directed people as they act, yet it seems they abhor My words; thus, as soon as I open My mouth, they squeeze their eyes shut and clap their hands over their ears. They do not look upon Me with respect because of My love, but have ever hated Me, for I pointed out their deficiencies, exposing all the goods in their possession, and thus they made a loss in their business, with their means of living gone. As such, their hate for Me increases thereafter.

THE THIRTY-THIRD UTTERANCE

In My house, there were once those who extolled My holy name, who worked tirelessly so that My glory on earth would fill the firmament. Because of this, I was overjoyed, My heart was filled with delight—yet who could work in My stead, forgoing sleep night and day? Man’s resolve before Me gives Me pleasure, but his rebelliousness provokes My anger, and thus, because man can never abide by his duty, My sorrow for him grows greater. Why are people always incapable of devoting themselves to Me? Why do they always try to bargain with Me? Am I the general manager of a trade center? Why is it that I wholeheartedly fulfill what people demand of Me, yet what I ask of man comes to nothing? Could it be that I am not proficient in the ways of business, but man is? Why do people always deceive Me with smooth talk and flattery? Why do people always come bearing “gifts,” asking for a back way in? Is this what I have taught man to do? Why do people do such things quickly and cleanly? Why are people always motivated to deceive Me? When I am among man, people look upon Me as a created being; when I am in the third heaven, they regard Me as the Almighty, who holds dominion over all things; when I am in the firmament, they see Me as the Spirit that fills all things. In sum, there is no suitable place for Me in people's hearts. It is as if I am an uninvited guest, people loathe Me, and thus when I pick up a ticket and take My seat, they drive Me out, and say that there is nowhere for Me to sit here, that I've come to the wrong place, and so I have no choice but to storm off. I resolve to engage with man no more, for people are too small-minded, their magnanimity is too meager. I will eat at the same table as them no longer, I will pass no more time with them on earth. But when I speak, people are astonished, they are afraid I will depart, and so they keep detaining Me. Seeing their affectations, I immediately feel somewhat gloomy and forlorn in My heart. People are afraid I'll leave them, and thus when I part ways with them, the sound of crying immediately fills the land, and people's faces are covered in tears. I wipe away their tears, I lift them up once more, and they gaze at Me, their pleading eyes seemingly begging Me not to go, and because of their "sincerity" I am with them. Yet who can understand the pain within My heart? Who is mindful of My unspeakable things? In people's eyes, it is as if I am without emotions, and so we have always been from two different families. How could they see the feeling of sorrow within My heart? People only covet their own pleasures, and they are not mindful of My will, because, up until the present, people have remained ignorant of the purpose of My management plan, and so today they still make silent pleas—and of what benefit is this?

When I live among man, I hold a certain place in people's hearts; because I have appeared in the flesh, and people live in the old flesh, they always treat Me with the flesh. Because people possess only flesh, and have no further adjuncts, they have given "all they have" to Me. Yet they know nothing, they merely "offer their devotion" before Me. What I reap is worthless trash—yet people do not think so. When I compare the "gifts" they have given to My things, people instantly recognize My preciousness, and only then do they see My immeasurability. I do not feel proud because of their praise, but continue to appear to man, that people might all know Me fully. When I show My entirety to them, they look upon Me with wide eyes, standing before Me motionless, like a pillar of salt. And when I behold their oddness I can hardly stop Myself from laughing. Because they are reaching out to ask for things from Me, I give them the things in My hand, and they hold them to their breast, cherishing them like a newborn baby, a motion they do but momentarily. When I change the environment in which they reside, they immediately toss the “baby” to one side and run off with their heads in their hands. In people’s eyes, I am the assistance that is present regardless of time or place, it is as if I am a waiter who comes as soon as he is called. Thus, people have always “looked up” to Me, as if I am possessed of limitless power to fight catastrophe, and so they have always held My hand, leading Me on travels across the land, that all things may see that they have a Ruler, so that none dare to deceive them. I have long since seen through people’s trick of the “fox assuming the majesty of the tiger,” for they’re all “hanging out their shingles,” wishing to profit through trickery. I have long since seen through their insidious, malicious scheme, and it is merely that I do not wish to hurt our relationship. I do not make trouble out of nothing—there’s no value or importance in that. I merely do the work that I must in view of people’s weaknesses; if not, I would turn them to ashes and allow them to exist no longer. But the work I do has meaning, and so I do not chastise man lightly. It is for this reason that people have always given free rein to their flesh. They do not observe My will, but have ever deceived Me before My judgment seat. People are so brave: When all the torture devices threaten them, they don’t waver in the least. Before the facts, they remain incapable of coming up providing any facts, and do nothing but stubbornly resist Me. When I ask that they bring out all that is filthy, they still show Me two empty hands—and how could others not use this as an “exemplar”? It is because people’s faith is so great that they are “admirable.”

I have embarked upon My work across the universe; the people of the universe suddenly awaken, and move around a core, which is My work, and when I “travel” within them, all escape Satan’s bondage, and are not tormented amid Satan’s affliction. Because of the arrival of My day, people are filled with happiness, the sorrow within their hearts vanishes, the clouds of sadness in the sky turn to oxygen in the air and float there, and at this moment, I enjoy the happiness of togetherness with man. Man’s actions give Me something to savor, and thus I am no longer aggrieved. And, accompanying the arrival of My day, things with life on earth regain the root of their existence, all things upon the earth come alive again, and they take Me as the fundament of their existence, for I cause all things to shine forth with life, and so, too, do I cause them to silently disappear. Thus, all things await the commands from My mouth, and are pleased by that which I do and say. Among all things, I am the Most High—yet I also live among all people, the deeds of man manifestations of My creation of heaven and earth. When people give great praise before Me, I am exalted among all things, and thus the flowers on earth grow more beautiful beneath the hot sun, the grass becomes more verdant, and the clouds in the sky seem more blue. Because of My voice, people run in hither and thither; today the faces of the people in My kingdom are filled with joy, and their life grows. I work among all My chosen people, and do not allow My work to be tainted with human ideas, for I personally carry out My own work. When I work, the heavens and earth and everything in them change and are renewed, and when I complete My work, man is completely renewed, he no longer lives in distress because of what I ask, for the sounds of happiness can be heard across the earth, and I take this opportunity to bestow among man the blessings I give unto him. When I am the King of the kingdom, people fear Me, yet when I am the King among man, and live among man, people find no joy in Me, for their conceptions of Me are too grievous, such that they are so deeply embedded as to be difficult to remove. Because of man's manifestation, I do My work, which is appropriate, and when I rise high into the sky and unleash My wrath upon man, people's various opinions toward Me immediately turn to ashes. I ask that they speak several more of their conceptions toward Me, but they are dumbstruck, as if they have nothing, and as if they are humble. The more I live in people's conceptions, the more they come to love Me, and the more I live outside of people's conceptions, the more they eschew Me, and they have more opinions about Me, for, from when I created the world until today, I have always lived in people's conceptions. When I come among man today, I dispel all people's conceptions, and so people simply refuse—yet I have suitable methods by which to deal with their conceptions. People should not be worried or anxious; I shall save all mankind by My own methods, making all people love Me, and allowing them to enjoy My blessings in heaven.

THE THIRTY-FOURTH UTTERANCE

I once invited man as a guest to My house, yet he ran hither and thither because of My calls—as if, rather than inviting him as a guest, I had brought him to the execution ground. Thus, My house is left empty, for man has always shunned Me, and has always been on his guard against Me. This has left Me with no means of carrying out part of My work, which is to say, it is such that I have taken back the feast I have prepared for him, for man is unwilling to enjoy this feast, and so I shall not force him to. Yet man suddenly finds himself beset by hunger, so he comes knocking on My door asking for My help—and seeing him in such dire straits, how could I not save him? Thus, I once more lay the feast for man, that he may enjoy it, and only then does he feel how admirable I am, and thus he comes to depend on Me. And because of My attitude toward him, he gradually comes to love Me “without reservations,” and no longer suspects that I will send him into the “land of cremation,” for this is not My will. And so, only after seeing My heart does man truly depend on Me, which shows just how “cautious” he is. Yet I am not wary of man because of his deceit, but move the hearts of people with My warm embrace. Is this not what I am doing at present? Is this not what is manifested in people in the present stage? Why are they capable of doing such things? Why are they possessed of such a sentiment? Is it because they truly know Me? Because they really have boundless love for Me? I do not force anyone to love Me, but merely give them the free will to make their own choice; in this, I do not interfere, nor help them make choices about their fate. People set their resolve before Me, they brought it before Me for Me to inspect, and when I pulled open the bag containing “man’s resolve,” I saw things jumbled within. Yet the things inside were quite “bounteous,” and people looked at Me with wide eyes, deeply afraid that I would pluck out their resolve. But because of man’s weakness, I did not make a judgment at the very start, and instead closed the bag and continued to do the work I ought to. Man, however, does not enter My guidance in the wake of My work, but continues to concern himself with whether his resolve has been praised by Me. I have done so much work, spoken so many words, but to date, man remains incapable of grasping My will, and thus his every bewildering action leaves “My head spinning.” Why is he always incapable of grasping My will, and does things rashly as he pleases? Has his brain suffered a shock? Could it be that he doesn't understand the words I speak? Why does he always act with his eyes looking straight ahead, but is incapable of beating a path and setting an exemplar for the people of the future? Was there anyone to set an exemplar before Peter? Was it not under My guidance that Peter survived? Why are the people of today incapable of this? Why, after having an exemplar to follow, are they still unable to satisfy My will? This shows that man still has no trust in Me, which is what has led to the miserable circumstances of today.

I delight in observing the little birds flying in the sky. Though they have not set their resolve before Me, and have no words to "provide" to Me, they find enjoyment in the world I have given unto them. Man, however, is incapable of this, and his face is full of melancholy—could it be that I owe him an unpayable debt? Why is his face always streaked with tears? I admire the lilies blooming in the hills. The flowers and grass stretch across the slopes, but the lilies add luster to My glory on earth before the arrival of spring—can man achieve this much? Could he testify to Me on earth prior to My return? Could he dedicate himself for the sake of My name in the country of the great red dragon? It is as if My utterances are suffused with requirements toward man—he loathes Me as a result of these requirements; because his body is too weak, and he is fundamentally incapable of attaining what I ask, he fears My words. When I open My mouth, I see the people on earth fleeing in every direction, as if trying to escape famine. When I cover My face, when I turn My body, people are immediately stricken by panic, they don't know what to do, for they fear My departure; in their conceptions, the day I leave is the day upon which disaster descends from heaven, the day I leave is the day on which their punishment begins. Yet what I do is precisely the opposite of man's conceptions, I have never acted according to the conceptions of man, never allowed his conceptions to be consonant with Me. The time I act is precisely when man is laid bare. In other words, My actions cannot be measured by human conceptions. From the time of creation until today, no one has ever discovered a "new continent" in the things I do, no one has ever grasped the laws by which I act, no one has ever opened up a new way out. Thus, today, people remain incapable of entering onto the right track—which is precisely what they lack, and what they ought to enter into. From the time of creation until today, I have never before embarked upon such an enterprise, I have merely added several new pieces to My work in the last days. Yet even under such obvious circumstances, people are still incapable of grasping My will—is this precisely not what they lack?

After I enter into the new work, I have new requirements of man. For man, it is as if the requirements of the past have had no effect, which is why he forgets them. What is the new means by which I work? What do I ask of man? People themselves are able to measure whether what they did in the past was in accordance with My will, whether their actions were within the bounds of what I asked. There is no need for Me to inspect everything individually; they have a grasp of their own stature, and so in their minds, they are clear about how far they can act, and there is no need for Me to tell them explicitly. When I speak, perhaps, some people will stumble; thus, I have avoided speaking this part of My words to prevent people from becoming weak as a result. Is this not of greater benefit to man's pursuit? Is it not of greater benefit to man's progress? Who does not wish to forget their past, and strive onward? Because of My "thoughtlessness," I am ignorant of whether people understand that the means by which I speak has already entered a new realm. In addition, because My work is too "busy," I have not had time to enquire whether people understand the tone by which I speak. Thus, I ask only that people are more understanding toward Me. Because My work is so "busy," I am unable to personally visit the bases of My work to direct people, and so I have "little understanding" of them. In sum, whatever else, I have now begun leading man to formally enter into a new start, and into a new method. In all My utterances, people have seen that there is drollness, humor, and a particularly strong tone of mockery in what I say. Thus, the harmony between man and I is disrupted unwittingly, causing a dense covering of clouds upon people's faces. I am, however, not constrained by this, but continue My work, for all that I say and do is a necessary part of My plan, all that is spoken from My mouth helps man, and nothing I do is trivial, but edifying to all people. It is because man is lacking that I let loose and keep on speaking. Some people, perhaps, are desperately waiting for Me to make new requirements of them. If so, then I satisfy their needs. But there's one thing I must remind you: When I speak, I hope that people gain more insight, I hope that they become more discerning, so that they can gain more from My words and thus fulfill My requirements. Previously, in the churches, people's focus was on being dealt with and broken. Eating and drinking My words was upon the foundation of understanding their aims and source—but today is unlike the past, people are utterly incapable of grasping the source of My utterances, and thus they have no chance of being dealt with and broken by Me, for they put all their effort into eating and drinking My words. But even under these circumstances, they remain incapable of satisfying My demands, and so I make new demands of them: I ask that they enter trials together with Me, that they enter chastisement. Yet let Me remind you of one thing: This is not putting man to death, but what is required by My work, for, in the current stage, My words are too incomprehensible to man, and man is incapable of cooperating with Me—there’s nothing to be done! I can but make man enter into the new method together with Me. What else is there to do? Because of man’s deficiencies, I too must enter the stream that man enters into—am I not the One who shall make people complete? Am I not the One who set out this plan? Though the other requirement is not difficult, it is not secondary to the first. My work among the group of people of the last days is an unprecedented enterprise, and thus, so that My glory may fill the cosmos, all people suffer the last hardship for Me. Do you understand My will? This is the final requirement I make of man, which is to say, I hope that all people can bear strong, resounding testimony to Me before the great red dragon, that they can offer themselves up for Me a final time, and fulfill My requirements one last instance. Can you truly do this? You were incapable of satisfying My heart in the past—could you break this pattern in the final instance? I give people the chance to reflect, I let them ponder carefully before finally giving Me an answer—is it wrong to do this? I wait for man’s response, I await his “letter of reply”—do you have the faith to fulfill My requirements?

THE THIRTY-FIFTH UTTERANCE

I have begun carrying out My work among humans, allowing them to live in the same stream with Me. I will complete My work while still among them, for they are the objects that I manage in My entire management plan—and it is My wish for them to become masters of all things. I therefore continue to walk among humans. As humans and I enter the current era, I feel quite at ease, because My pace has quickened. How can these humans keep up? I have done much work on apathetic and dull-witted people, and yet they have gained next to nothing because they do not cherish and love Me. I have dwelled among all people and observed move by them both above ground and below. All those categorized as “humans” are resisting Me, as if “resisting Me” were in their job descriptions. It seems that if they did not carry out this work, then they would be like a vagrant orphan, adopted by no one. However, I do not sentence people arbitrarily based on their actions and behavior. Rather, I support and provide for them in accordance with their stature. Because humans are the protagonists of My entire management plan, I devote more guidance to those in this role of “humanity” so that they may play it wholeheartedly and to the best of their ability, and so that this play which I am directing will become a complete success. This is My supplication to humankind. Could it be that without this prayer, they will be unable to play their part as well as they can? I can accomplish what people ask of Me, but they cannot accomplish what I ask of them? It cannot be said that I oppress humans by might. This is My final request: I am imploring them in all earnestness and sincerity. Are they truly unable to do what I ask? I have been giving to people for many years, yet have received nothing in return. Who has ever given Me anything? Are My blood, sweat, and tears simply like clouds in the mountains? I have given people “vaccinations” many times, and told them that My requirements of them were not exacting. Why, then, do people constantly avoid Me? Is it because I will treat them like baby chicks, to be killed as soon as they are caught? Am I really that brutal and inhumane? Humans always measure Me by their own conceptions. Do their conceptions of Me correspond to the reality of^[a] Me in heaven? I do not consider people’s conceptions to be objects for My enjoyment. Rather, I see their hearts as things to be appreciated. However, I do feel quite fed up with their consciences, because according to them, I Myself do not possess one. I therefore have developed further opinions on that topic. However, I refuse to criticize their consciences directly; rather, I continue to guide them patiently and systematically. After all, humans are weak, and unable to carry out any work.

a. The original text omits “reality of.”

Today, I officially took a step into the realm of boundless chastisement, and am enjoying it alongside humankind. I am also directing them by hand, and they are well-behaved under My direction; no one dares to oppose Me. All are under My guidance, doing the duties I have assigned, because this is in their “job descriptions.” Among all things in heaven and under heaven—who dares not submit to My plans? Who is not in My grasp? Who does not utter praise and extolment for My words and My work? Humans admire My deeds and actions, so they dedicate themselves to the stream of My work because of My every little move. Who can break away? Who can pull away from the work I have arranged? Due to My administrative decree, humans are compelled to stay; without it, they would all have sneaked back from the “front line” and become “deserters.” Who is unafraid of death? Are people truly willing to sacrifice themselves? I do not impose on anyone, because I gained a thorough understanding of human nature long ago. Thus, I have always been undertaking projects that people have never done before. Because no one could carry out My work, I have set foot upon the battleground in person to engage in a struggle of life and death with Satan. Nowadays, Satan is rampant to the extreme. Why do I not take this opportunity to show off the focus of My work in order to reveal My power? As I have said before, I use Satan’s ruse as My foil; is this not the best opportunity? Only now do I reveal a gratified smile, for I have achieved My goal. I will no longer run around and ask humans for “help.” I have stopped bustling about, and no longer live the life of a vagrant. From now on, I will live in peace. Humans likewise will be safe and sound, for My day has come. On earth I have led the busy life of a man, a life in which many injustices seem to have occurred. In humans’ eyes, I have shared their joys and sorrows, as well as their adversities. Like humans, I, too, have lived on earth and under heaven. They have therefore always seen Me as a created being. Because humans have not seen the Me in heaven, they have never spent much effort on Me. However, given today’s situation, people have no choice but to admit that I am the Master of their fate and the speaker orating from the clouds. Humans therefore have touched their heads to the ground before Me in worship. Is this not the proof of My triumphant return? Is this not a portrayal of My victory over all hostile forces? People have all had premonitions that the world is coming to an end, and that humanity will undergo a great cleansing. However, they cannot in truth consciously carry out what I ask of them, so they have no choice but to weep under My chastisement. What can be done? Who told these humans to be disobedient? Who told them to enter into the final age? Why were they born as humans into this pre-apocalyptic world? Everything is arranged by Me personally. Who can complain?

Ever since the world's creation, I have roved among humans, keeping company with them in their earthly existence. In previous generations, however, not a single person was ever chosen by Me; everyone was turned down by My silence. This is because those people in the past did not serve Me with single-minded devotion; I therefore did not love them exclusively, either. They had taken Satan's "presents" and then turned around and offered them to Me; in doing so, was this not slanderous against Me? While such offerings were being made, I did not reveal My disgust; rather, I tried to turn their scheme to My own use by adding these "presents" to the materials being used in My management. Later, once they had been processed by machine, I would burn off all the resulting waste. Although this current generation of humans have not offered Me many "presents," I do not reproach them for it. These people have always been destitute and empty-handed; thus, having observed the reality of their situation, I have never subjected them to any unreasonable demands after I came to the human world. Rather, after giving them "materials," I have simply sought the "finished product" that I want, for this is the only thing achievable by humans. I have spent so many years in hardship, learning what it means to live as a human, before coming up with an appropriate request. Had I not experienced human life, how could I understand the matters they find difficult to discuss? Nevertheless, humans do not see it this way; they just say I am the all-powerful, supernatural God Himself. Is this not precisely the conception all humans have had throughout history and even up to today? I said that on earth, there is no one who can truly know Me one hundred percent. This remark has its implications; this is not just empty talk. I have experienced and observed this Myself, so I have an understanding of the details. Had I not come down to the human world, who would have a chance to know Me? Who could listen to My words in person? Who could see My figure among them? Since ancient times, I had always remained hidden in the clouds. I predicted early on that I would come down to the human world in the last days to serve as their exemplar. This is why nowadays people are fortunate enough to broaden their horizons. Is this not a kindness I have bestowed upon them? Could it be that they will not understand My grace at all? Why are humans so insensitive and dull-witted? Having come so far, why have they still not awoken? I have been in this world for many years, but who knows Me? No wonder I chastise people. It seems that they are the objects on which to put My authority to use; it seems that they are bullets in My gun which, once I have fired it, will all escape. This is their imagination. I have always respected humans; I have never arbitrarily exploited or traded them like slaves. This is because I cannot leave them, nor can they leave Me. Thus, a life and death bond has formed between us. I always cherish and love humans. Although that sentiment has never been mutual, they have always looked to Me, which is the reason I continue to spend efforts on them. I love people like My own treasure, because they are the “capital” of My management on earth; I therefore will certainly not eliminate them. My will toward humans will never change. Can they truly trust in My oath? How can they satisfy Me? This is the task for all humankind; it is the “homework” I have left for them. It is My hope that they will all work hard to complete it.

THE THIRTY-SIXTH UTTERANCE

Everything is arranged by My hand. Who dares to do as they please? Who can easily change it? People float about in the air, moving as the dust moves, their faces begrimed, making them repulsive from head to toe. I watch from among the clouds with a heavy heart: Why has man, who was once full of vitality, changed into this appearance? And why is he unaware of this, and insensible to this? Why does he “let himself go” and allow himself to become covered in filth? Such is his lack of love and respect for himself. Why does man always avoid what I ask? Am I really cruel and inhumane toward him? Am I truly arbitrary and unreasonable? So why do people always look at Me with glaring eyes? Why do they always hate Me? Have I brought them to the end of the road? Man has never discovered anything in My chastisement, for he does nothing but grasp the yoke around his neck with both hands, both eyes fixed on Me, as if keeping an eye on an enemy—and only at this moment do I sense how emaciated he is. It is because of this that I say none has ever stood firm amid trials. Is man's stature not precisely thus? Does he need Me to tell him the figures for his "measurements"? Man's "height" is no greater than that of a little worm wriggling along the ground, and his "chest" is but the same width as a snake's. In this, I am not belittling man—are these not the exact figures of his stature? Have I degraded man? Man is like a frolicking child. There are even times when he plays with animals, yet he remains happy; and he is like a cat, living a life without care or worry. Maybe it is because of the direction of the Spirit, or the role of the God in heaven, that I feel profoundly weary of the extravagant lifestyles of people on earth. Because of the life of man—which is like that of a parasite—My "interest" in the words "human life" has increased somewhat, and so I have become a little more "reverential" toward human life. For it would seem that only man is capable of creating a life that has meaning, whereas I am incapable of this. So I can but retreat to the "mountains," for I am not able to experience and observe the hardship among man. Yet man forces Me to—I've no choice! I can but obey the arrangements of man, summarizing experience together with him and undergoing human life alongside him. In heaven, I once toured the whole city, and beneath heaven, I once toured all countries. Yet no one ever discovered Me, they merely heard the sound of My movement when I was moving around. In people's eyes, I come and go without trace. It is as if I've become an invisible idol in their hearts, yet people don't believe so. Could it be that all of this is not facts confessed by the mouth of man? At this point, who does not acknowledge that they should be chastised? Could people still hold their heads high before concrete proof?

I do a business deal among man, I wipe away all of his impurity and unrighteousness, and thus "process" him so that he may be after My own heart. Yet man's cooperation is indispensable to this stage of work, for he is always leaping and jumping about like a fish that has just been caught. So, to prevent any accidents, I killed all the fish that had been caught, after which the fish became obedient, and had not the slightest complaint. When I need man, he is always hidden. It is as if he's never seen astonishing scenes, as if he was born in the countryside and knows nothing of city matters. I add My wisdom to the parts of man that are lacking, and cause him to know Me; because man is too poor, I personally come among man and give him "the path to riches," making him open his eyes. In this, am I not saving him? Is this not My compassion for man? Is love giving unconditionally? Is chastisement only hate? I have explained to man from different perspectives, but he treats this as but words and doctrines. It is as if My utterances are second-grade goods, which are sold as write-offs in the hands of man. Thus, when I tell people that a great storm is coming to engulf the mountain village, no one thinks anything of it, only a few of them move their homes, their hearts doubtful. The rest do not move, as if indifferent, as if I am a swallow from the sky—they understand nothing of what I say. Only when the mountains topple and the earth is rent asunder do people think of My words, only then are they awoken from their dreams, but the time has already come, they are engulfed in the great flood, their corpses floating on the surface of the water. Seeing the misery in the world, I let out a sigh for man's misfortune. I expended much time, and paid a great price, for the sake of man's fate. In people's minds, I have no tear ducts—but I, this “freak” without tear ducts, have cried many tears for man. Man, however, knows nothing of this, he merely plays with the toys in his hands in the earth, as if I don't exist. Thus, in today's circumstances, people remain callous and dull-witted, they are still “frozen” in the basements, as if they are still lying in a cave. Seeing man's actions, My only choice is to leave ...

In people's eyes, I have done much that is good for man, and thus they look upon Me as a role model for the present age. Yet never have they regarded Me as the Ruler of man's fate and the Creator of all things. It is as if they do not understand Me. Although people once cried “Long live the understanding,” no one has spent much time analyzing the word “understanding,” showing that people have no desire to love Me. In today's times, people have never treasured Me, I have no place in their hearts. Could they show a true love for Me in the days of suffering to come? Man's righteousness remains something without form, something that cannot be seen or touched. What I want is man's heart, for in the human body the heart is what's most precious. Are My deeds not fit to be repaid with man's heart? Why do people not give Me their hearts? Why do they always hug them to their own breasts, unwilling to let them go? Can the heart of man ensure peace and happiness throughout people's lives? Why, when I ask things of people, do they always grab a handful of dust from the ground and fling it at Me? Is this man's crafty scheme? It is as if they are trying to trick a passerby who has nowhere to go, enticing them back to their home, where they turn nasty and murder them. People have also wanted to do such things to Me. It is as if they're an executioner who will kill someone without blinking an eye, as if they are the king of devils, for whom it is second nature to kill people. But now people come before Me, still wishing to employ such means—yet they have their plans, and I have My countermeasures. Even though people do not love Me, how could I not make My countermeasures public to man at this time? I have infinite, immeasurable skill in handling man; every part of him is personally handled by Me, and personally processed by Me. Ultimately, I shall make man endure the pain to part from what he loves, and make him submit to My arrangements, and at that time, what will people have to complain about? Is all that I do not for the sake of man? In times gone by, I never told man of the steps of My work—but today, in a time that is unlike the past, because the content of My work is different, I have told people of My work in advance to prevent them falling down as a result of this. Is this not the vaccination that I have injected into man? For whatever reason, people have never seriously considered My words; it is as if there is hunger in their bellies and they are not picky about what they eat, which has weakened their stomachs. But people take their “healthy constitution” as capital and take no notice of the “doctor’s” admonishments. Seeing their imperviousness, I find Myself concerned for man. Because people are too small, and have yet to experience human life, they have no fear; in their hearts, the words “human life” don’t exist, they have no regard for them, and merely despise My words, as if I have become a rambling old lady. In sum, whatever the case, I hope that people can understand My heart, for I have no desire to send man into the land of death. I hope that man can understand what My mood is at this very moment, and be considerate of the burden I carry precisely this time.

THE THIRTY-SEVENTH UTTERANCE

Throughout the ages, all the work I have done—every stage of that work—has contained My appropriate methods of work. It is because of this that My beloved people have become more and more pure, and more and more suitable for My use. For the same reason, however, the unfortunate thing is that as My methods of work increase, the number of people decreases, which causes people to sink into contemplation. Of course, My work today is no exception and most people are once again caught up in contemplation, so because of changes to My methods, there are a portion of people who will withdraw. It may be described this way: This was predestined by Me, but not done by Me. From the time of creation up to now, so many people have fallen and so many have lost their way due to the methods of My work, but I do not care about what people are like, whether they feel I am not affectionate or whether they feel I am too cruel, and no matter if people's understanding is correct or not, I avoid providing an explanation. Let us first have fellowship on the main point of this discussion so that everyone may have a thorough understanding, and so they can avoid any inexplicable suffering. I will not compel people to suffer in silence like a mute. Instead, I will describe everything clearly so people will not complain to Me, and one day all people will utter true praise in the midst of chastisement. Will that work? Does that meet people's requirements?

In the prologue to the era of chastisement, I shall first tell people the general meaning behind the "era" so that they do not offend Me. Namely, I will make the arrangement for My work, which shall be changed by no one, and I will absolutely not forgive anyone who alters it but will condemn them. Will you remember that? That is all forewarning. In the new methods all people must first understand that the first and foremost thing to achieve is to have an understanding of their own actual conditions. Before having gained a particular understanding of oneself, no one will be allowed to speak carelessly in the church, and I shall surely chastise those who go against this. From this day forward, all apostles shall be listed in the churches and forbidden from running all over the place; that bore little fruit. They all seemed to fulfill their duties but they were actually deceiving Me. Regardless of what the past was like, today it all passes away and must not be brought up again. Henceforth, the term "apostle" shall be abolished and never used again, so all people may come down from their positions and know themselves. This is of course for their salvation. A "position" is not a crown, it is merely a term of address. Do you understand My meaning? Those who lead the churches will still live the church life within their own churches, and of course, this is not a rigid rule. When necessary they may visit churches in coordination with other former apostles. The most crucial thing is that the fellowship of the churches must be increased unless no members of the churches are actually living the life of the church.

Nonetheless, I must emphasize that you must all unite to know yourselves and rebel against the great red dragon. This is My intention. It is not important how much people speak, but rather it is crucial that all My people be able to come together as one, which is the only way to truly bear witness. In the past, everyone said they understood themselves, but I've uttered countless words, and how much have you understood of yourselves? The higher one's position, the harder it is for them to put aside themselves. Furthermore, the greater one's hopes, the more they will suffer during chastisement. This is My salvation of mankind—do you understand? Don't just take this at face value. Doing so is too shallow and has no value; do you understand the underlying meaning? If people in the church are truly able to understand themselves, this demonstrates that this type of person truly loves Me. It's like the saying, "If you don't break bread with the people you will not understand their hardships." How do you understand these words? In the end, I will make all people gain understanding of themselves during chastisement, and have them sing and laugh during chastisement. Will you truly have the faith to satisfy Me? So what should you do in your practice? From now on, the affairs of each church will be handled by the appropriate persons in that church, and apostles will just live the life of the church. That's called "experiencing life." Do you understand?

Before chastisement has officially come upon mankind, I shall first do the "work of greeting" on people so that in the end they may all satisfy Me. Even for those who will withdraw, they must suffer and finish their testimony before leaving, otherwise I will not forgive them. This shows My disposition of intolerance of people's offenses, and My disposition of accomplishing what I say. Thereby, it fulfills the words from My mouth "I mean what I say, and what I mean shall be accomplished, and what I accomplish shall last forever." As the words leave My mouth, so does My Spirit begin His work. Who would dare to willfully play with the "toy" held in their hands? People must deferentially and obediently accept My chastisement, and who could escape it? Could there be another road but Me? Today I have allowed you to be upon the earth, and you cheer. Tomorrow I shall allow you into heaven and you will praise. The day after that, I shall have you below the ground where you will be chastised. Aren't these all requirements of My work? Who does not suffer misfortune, and who does not receive blessings for the sake of My requirements? Could you be the exception? As My people upon the earth, what should you do for My requirements, for My will? Can it be that you praise My holy name with your mouth but in your heart detest Me? Doing work for Me, satisfying My heart, as well as understanding yourself and rebelling against the great red dragon are no easy tasks and you must pay the price to do so. When I say “price” what is your understanding of it? I won’t discuss it now as I do not give direct answers to people. Instead, I allow all of them to mull it over themselves, and afterward, use their actions and behavior to actually answer My questions. Are you able to do that?

THE THIRTY-EIGHTH UTTERANCE

Throughout mankind’s experience there has not been My figure, nor has there been the leadership of My words, and so I have always avoided man at a distance and then I departed from them. I despise mankind’s disobedience. I do not know why. It seems I have hated man since the beginning, and yet I feel deep sympathy for them. And so man looks upon Me with two hearts, for I love man, and I also hate man. Who among them shows true understanding of My love? And who can understand My hate? In My eyes, man is a dead thing, devoid of life, as if they were clay statues standing among all things. At times, man’s disobedience inspires My anger for them. When I lived among men, they would give a thin smile when I arrived suddenly, because they were always consciously seeking Me, as if I were playing with them on earth. They never took Me seriously, and so because of their attitude toward Me I had no choice but to “retire” from the “agency” of mankind. Still, I want to announce that although I have “retired,” My “pension” cannot be lacking by a single penny. Because of My “seniority” in the “agency” of mankind, I continue to demand payment from them, payment which I am owed. Although man has left Me, how could they escape My grasp? I loosened My grip on them to a certain extent, allowing them to indulge in their fleshly desires, and so they dared to be unbridled, without restraint, and it can be seen that they did not truly love Me, as they lived in the flesh. Could it be that true love is to be gained from flesh? Could it be that all I ask of man is the “love” of the flesh? If this were truly the case, then what value would man have? They are all worthless trash! Was it not for My enduring “supernatural power,” I would have left man long ago—why even bother staying with them and accepting man’s “bullying”? But I endured. I wanted to get to the bottom of the business of man. Once I have finished My work on the earth I will ascend high into the sky to judge the “master” of all things; this is My primary work, for I already despise man so much. Who would not hate his enemy? Who would not exterminate his enemy? In heaven, Satan is My enemy, on earth, man is My foe. Because of the union between the heaven and earth, nine generations of theirs should be considered guilty by association, and none will be pardoned. Who told them to resist Me? Who told them to disobey Me? Why is it that man cannot be disentangled from their old nature? Why is it that their flesh is always multiplying within them? All of this is evidence of My judgment of man. Who dares not succumb to the facts? Who dares say My judgment is colored by emotion? I am different from man, so I have departed from them, for I simply am not human.

Everything I do is for a reason; when man “reveals” the “truth” to Me, I escort them to the “execution ground,” as mankind’s guilt is enough to merit My chastisement. And so I do not chastise people blindly; rather, My chastisement upon them always fits the truth of their sins. Otherwise mankind would never bow down and admit their guilt to Me because of their rebelliousness. People all reluctantly bow their heads because of the current situation, but their hearts remain unconvinced. I give people “barium” to drink, and so their organs inside of them appear clear before a “lens”; the filth and impurity within man’s belly remains uneradicated. Various kinds of filth flow through their veins, and so the poison within them grows. Since man has lived like this for so long they have grown accustomed to it and do not find it strange. As a result, the germs within them mature, becoming their nature, and everyone lives under their domination. This is why people are like wild horses, running about all over the place. However, they never fully concede this but just nod their heads to show that they are “convinced.” The truth is that man doesn’t take My word to heart. If they took My word as a remedy, then they would “follow the doctor’s orders,” and allow the remedy to cure the sickness inside of them. However, in My heart, the way they behave cannot fulfill this wish, and so I can only “bite the bullet,” and continue speaking to them. Whether they listen or not, I am only doing My duty. Man is not willing to enjoy My blessings and would undergo the torment of hell, so I can do nothing more than to accede to their request. However, so that My name and My Spirit are not shamed in hell, I will first discipline them and then “submit” to their wishes, and make it so they can experience “whole-hearted joy.” I am not willing to allow man to shame Me under My own banner anytime or anywhere, which is why I discipline them time and time again. Without the constraint of the stern words I speak, how could man still be standing before Me today? Don’t people refrain from sin only because they fear I will go away? Is it not true that they do not complain only because they fear chastisement? Whose will is only for the sake of My plan? People all think that I am divinity that lacks “quality of intellect,” but who can understand that I am able to see through everything in humanity? It is precisely as the people say, “Why hit a nail with a sledgehammer?” Man “loves” Me, not because their love for Me is inborn, but because they fear chastisement. Who among men was born loving Me? Who treats Me as if I were their own heart? And so I sum this up with a maxim for the human world: Among men, there are none who love Me.

As I want to bring My work on earth to an end, I have hastened the pace of My work this way lest man be flung far from Me, so far that they fall into the boundless ocean. It is because I have told them the reality of things in advance that they are somewhat on guard. If not for this, who would raise the sails when about to be faced with harsh wind and waves? People are all doing the work of vigilance. It is as though I have become a “robber” in their eyes. They fear that I will take from them all the things in their homes, and so they all push against their “doors” with all the strength they can muster, deathly afraid that I will break in suddenly. When I see them behave like cowardly rats, I leave in silence. In man’s imagination, it seems an “apocalypse” is coming to the world, and so they all flee in disarray, scared out of their wits. It is only then that I can see the ghosts wandering the earth. I cannot help but laugh, and amidst the sound of My laughter man is surprised and terrified. It is then that I realize the truth, and so I hold back My smile, and look over the earth no longer, instead returning to My original plan. No longer will I regard man as a model that serves as specimen for My research, because they are nothing more than scraps. Once I discard them, they no longer have any use—they are bits of waste. At this time, I will obliterate them and cast them into the fire. In the mind of man, My judgment, majesty, and wrath contain My mercy and lovingkindness. But little do they know that I have long overlooked their weaknesses, and that I long ago retracted My mercy and lovingkindness, and that is why they are in the state they are in now. No man can know Me, nor can they understand My words or see My face, nor can they make sense of My will. Is this not the current state of man? Then how can one say I have mercy or lovingkindness? I do not care for their weaknesses, and I do not take into consideration their inadequacies. Is this still My mercy and lovingkindness? And still My love for them? People all believe that I filter My speech for the sake of convention, and so they do not believe the words I speak. But who understands "Since this is a different era My mercy and lovingkindness are not present now; yet I am always God who does as He says"? I am amongst mankind, and in people's minds they see Me as the Most High, and so man believes that I love to speak through My wisdom. Thus, man always takes My word with a grain of salt. But who can comprehend the rules behind My speech? Who can grasp the origins of My words? Who can fathom what I actually want to accomplish? Who can see through the details of the conclusion of My management plan? Who can become a confidant to Me? Of all things, who other than Me can understand what exactly I'm doing? And who can know My ultimate purpose?

THE THIRTY-NINTH UTTERANCE

Each day I move above the universes, observing all the things created by My hand. Above the heavens is My place of rest, and beneath them is the land in which I move. I rule everything among all that there is, I command everything among all things, causing all there is to follow the course of nature and to submit to the command of nature. Because I despise those who are disobedient, and loathe those who oppose Me and do not fall into rank, I shall make everything submit beneath My arrangements, without resistance, I shall make all within the universe orderly. Who still dares to resist Me as they please? Who dares not obey the arrangements of My hand? How could man have any "interest" in rebelling against Me? I shall bring people before their "ancestors," shall make their ancestors lead them back to their families, and they shall not be allowed to rebel against their ancestors and return to My side. Such is My plan. Today, My Spirit moves across the earth, assigning numbers for all kinds of people, marking different signs on every sort of person, so that their ancestors can successfully guide them back to their families and I need not continue “worrying” about them, which is too bothersome; thus, I also divide the labor, and distribute the efforts. This is part of My plan, and can be disrupted by no man. I shall select suitable representatives from all that there is to manage all things, bringing about the orderly submission of all before Me. I frequently wander above the heavens, and often walk beneath them. Watching the great world in which people come and go, observing mankind, densely packed upon the earth, and seeing the birds and the beasts that live upon the planet, I can’t help but feel emotional in My heart. Because, at the time of the creation, I made all things, and the entirety of everything performs its duty in its own place under My arrangements, I laugh from up high, and when all things beneath the heavens hear the sound of My laughter, they are immediately inspired, for at this moment My great enterprise is completed. I add the wisdom of heaven within man, causing him to represent Me among all things, for I created man in order for him to be My representative, not defying Me but praising Me in the depths of his heart. And who is able to achieve these simple words? Why does man always keep his heart for himself? Is his heart not for Me? It is not that I ask things of man unconditionally, but that he has always belonged to Me. How could I casually give away to others the things that belong to Me? How could I give “clothing” I have made to someone else to wear? In people’s eyes, it is as if I have lost My mind, suffering from a mental illness, and understand nothing of human ways, it is as if I am an imbecile. And so, people always look upon Me as a naïf, but they never truly love Me. Because all that man does is in order to deliberately fool Me, I eradicate all mankind in a fit of wrath. Among all the things I created, only mankind is always trying to come up with ways to trick Me, and it is because of this that I say that man is “ruler” of all things.

Today, I cast all people into the “great furnace” to be refined. I stand up high watching closely as people burn in the fire and, forced by the flames, people offer forth the facts. This is one of the means by which I work. If it were not thus, people would profess themselves to be “humble,” and no one would be willing to be the first to open their mouths to speak of their own experiences, but all would just look at each other. This is precisely the crystallization of My wisdom, for I predestined the matters of today before the ages. Thus, people unwittingly enter the furnace, as if they have been led there by a rope, as if they have grown numb. None can escape the onslaught of the blaze, they “attack” each other, they “rush about in rejoice,” still fretting about their own destiny in the furnace, deeply afraid that they will be burnt to death. When I stir up the fire, it instantly grows, surging into the sky, and the flames frequently stick to My robes, as if trying to pull them into the furnace. People watch Me with wide eyes. Straight away, I follow the fire into the furnace, and at this moment, the flames grow, and people cry out. I wander amidst the blaze. The flames abound, but they have no intention of harming Me, and I hand over the robes upon My body to the flames once again—yet they keep their distance from Me. Only then do people clearly see My true face by the light of the flames. Because they are amidst the scorching of the furnace, they flee in all directions because of My face, and the furnace immediately begins to “boil.” All who are in the flames behold the Son of man, who is refined in the blaze. Though the clothes on His body are ordinary, they are of the utmost beauty; though the shoes upon His feet are unremarkable, they provoke great envy; a fiery luster radiates from His face, His eyes glitter, and it seems that it is because of the light in His eyes that people see His true face clearly. People are awestruck, and they see a white garment upon His body, and His hair, white as wool, hangs down to His shoulders. Notably, a gold girdle about His breast shines with a blinding light, while the shoes upon His feet are even more impressive. And because the shoes worn by the Son of man remain amidst the fire, people believe them wondrous. Only during bursts of pain do people behold the mouth of the Son of man. Although they are amidst the refinement of fire, they do not understand any words from the mouth of the Son of man, and thus, at this moment, they hear nothing more of the pleasing voice of the Son of man, but see a sharp sword contained within His mouth, and He says no more, but His sword hurts man. Besieged by the flames, people endure pain. Because of their curiosity, they continue to look upon the Son of man’s extraordinary appearance, and only at this moment do they discover that the seven stars in His hand have disappeared. Because the Son of man is in the furnace, and not upon earth, the seven stars in His hand are taken away, for they are but a metaphor. At this moment, they are no longer mentioned, but allocated to the various parts of the Son of man. In people's memories, the existence of the seven stars brings discomfort. Today, I no longer make things hard for man, I take away the seven stars from the Son of man, and combine all parts of the Son of man into a whole. Only at this moment does man see My entire appearance. No more will people separate My Spirit from My flesh, for I have ascended from earth to upon high. People have beheld My true face, they no longer break Me apart, and I no longer endure the vilification of man. Because I walk into the great furnace alongside man, he still relies on Me, he senses My existence in his consciousness. Thus, all that is pure gold gradually amasses with Me amidst the burning of fire, which is the very moment when each is classed according to kind. I categorize each type of "metal," causing them all to return to their families, and only now do all things begin to be rejuvenated ...

It is because man is so tainted that I throw him into the furnace to be burnt. Yet he is not eradicated by the flames, but refined, that I might take pleasure in him—for what I want is something made of pure gold, without impurities, not dirty, contaminated things. People don't understand My mood, so before climbing on the "operating table" they are beset by anxiety, as if, after dissecting them, I'm going to murder them there and then as they lie on the operating table. I understand people's mood, and thus I seem to be a member of mankind. I have great compassion for man's "misfortune," and I don't know why man has "fallen ill." If he were healthy, and without deformity, what need would there be to pay a price, and to spend time upon the operating table? But the facts cannot be retracted—who told man to pay no attention to "food hygiene"? Who told him to pay no attention to being healthy? Today, what other means do I have? To show My compassion for man, I enter the "operating room" together with him—and who told Me to love man? Thus, I personally pick up the "surgeon's knife" and begin to "operate" on man to prevent any sequelae. Because of My loyalty to man, people shed tears amidst the pain to show their gratitude to Me. People believe that I value righteousness, that I shall lend a hand when My "friends" are in difficulty, and people are even more grateful for My kindness, and say they will send Me "gifts" when the illness is cured—but I pay no heed to their expression, and instead focus on operating on man. Because of man's physical weakness, under the effect of knife he screws shut his eyes and lies shocked on the operating table—yet I take no notice, I simply continue to do the work in My hands. When the operation has finished, people have escaped from the “tiger’s jaws.” I nourish them with rich nutrients, and though they don’t know it, the nutrients within them gradually increase. Then I smile at them, and they only see My true face clearly after they have recovered their health, and so they love Me more, they take Me as their father—and is this not the connection between heaven and earth?

THE FORTIETH UTTERANCE

People fixate upon My every move, as if I am about to bring down the heavens, and they are always bewildered by My doings, as if My deeds are utterly unfathomable to them. Thus, they take their cue from Me in all they do, deeply afraid that they will offend Heaven and be cast into the “world of mortals.” I do not try to get a hold on people, but make their deficiencies the target of My work. At this moment, they are very happy, and come to rely on Me. When I give to man, people love Me as they love their own lives, but when I ask for things from them, they shun Me. Why is this? Can’t they even put the “fairness and reasonableness” of the world of man into practice? Why do I make such demands of people over and over again? Is it really the case that I have nothing? People treat Me like a beggar. When I ask for things from them, they hold up their “leftovers” before Me for Me to “enjoy,” and even say they’re taking special care of Me. I look at their ugly faces and oddities, and I once again depart from man. Under such circumstances, people remain uncomprehending, and once more take back the things I have denied them, awaiting My return. I have expended much time, and paid a great price, for the sake of man—but at this time, for an unknown reason, people’s consciences remain ever incapable of performing their original function. As a result, I list their persistent doubts among the “words of mystery,” to serve as “reference” for future generations, because these are the “scientific research results” born of people’s “hard work”; how could I casually delete them? Wouldn’t this be “letting down” people’s good intentions? For I do, after all, have a conscience, I do not engage in crafty, conniving acts with man—are My deeds not thus? Is this not the “fairness and reasonableness” spoken of by man? Among man, I have worked unceasingly up to the present. With the arrival of times like today, people still don’t know Me, they still treat Me like a stranger, and even, because I have taken them to a “dead end,” grow more hateful toward Me. At this time, the love in their hearts has long since disappeared without a trace. I’m not exaggerating, much less am I belittling man. I can love man for eternity, and I can also hate him for eternity, and this will never change, for I have perseverance. Yet man is not possessed of this perseverance, he always blows hot and cold toward Me, he always only pays a little attention to Me when I open My mouth, and when I shut My mouth and say nothing, he soon becomes lost among the waves of the big world. Thus, I condense this into another aphorism: People lack perseverance, and thus they are incapable of fulfilling My heart.

Whilst people are dreaming, I travel the countries of the world sprinkling the “odor of death” in My hands among man. All people immediately leave behind vitality and enter the next tier of human life. Amongst mankind, no longer can any living things be seen, corpses are scattered everywhere, things that are filled with vitality immediately disappear without a trace, and the suffocating smell of corpses pervades the land. I immediately cover My face and depart from man, for I am beginning the next step of work, giving those who have come alive a place to live and causing all people to live in an ideal land. This is the blessed land—a land without sorrow or sighs—that I prepared for man. The water gushing from the valley springs is pristine, clear enough to see the bottom, it flows without cease and never runs dry, people live in harmony with God, the birds sing, and amidst the gentle breeze and warm sun, heaven and earth are both at rest. Today, here, the corpses of all people lie about in disarray. Without people knowing, I release the pestilence in My hands, and the bodies of man decay, leaving not a trace of flesh from head to toe, and I go far away from man. Never again will I congregate with man, never again will I come among man, for the final stage of My entire management has come to an end, and I will not create mankind again, will not pay any heed to man again. After reading the words from My mouth, people all lose hope, for they don’t want to die—but who does not “die” for the sake of “coming alive”? When I tell people I lack the magic to make them come alive, they burst out crying in pain; indeed, although I am the Creator, I only have the power to make people die, and lack the capability to make them come alive. In this, I apologize to man. Thus, I told man in advance that “I owe him an unpayable debt”—yet he thought I was being polite. Today, with the advent of the facts, I still say this. I won’t betray the facts when I speak. In their conceptions, people believe there are many means by which I speak, and so they always clutch the words I give them whilst hoping for something else. Are these not the erroneous motivations of man? It is under these circumstances that I dare to “boldly” say that man does not truly love Me. I would not turn My back on conscience and distort the facts, for I would not take people into their ideal land; in the end, when My work finishes, I shall lead them to the land of death. So people had best not complain about Me—isn’t it because people “love” Me? Isn’t it because their desire for blessings is too strong? If people didn’t want to seek blessings, how could there be this “misfortune”? Because of people’s “loyalty” toward Me, because they have followed Me for many years, working hard despite never making any contribution, I reveal to them a little of what’s going on in the secret chamber: Given that, today, My work has yet to reach a certain point and people have yet to be cast into the fiery pit, I advise them to leave as soon as they can—all who remain will likely suffer misfortune and little luck in the end, they still won’t be able to avoid death. I open wide the “door to riches” for them; whosoever is willing to leave should hit the road as soon as they can—if they wait until the arrival of chastisement, it will be too late. These words are not mockery—they are true facts. My words are uttered to man in good conscience, and if you don’t go now, when will you? Are people truly able to trust in My words?

I’ve never given much thought to the fate of man; I simply follow My own will, unconstrained by people. How could I withdraw My hand because of their fears? Throughout the whole of My management plan, never have I made any extra arrangements for the experiences of man. I merely act according to My original plan. In the past, people “offered up” themselves for Me and I was neither hot nor cold toward them. Today, they have “sacrificed” themselves for Me, and I remain neither hot nor cold toward them. I do not forget Myself because people sacrifice their lives for Me, nor am I overcome with tremendous joy, but continue to send them to the execution ground in accordance with My plan. I pay no heed to their attitude during confession—how could My frosty, cold heart be touched by the hearts of man? Am I one of the emotional animals among mankind? Many times have I reminded people that I am without emotion, but they merely smile, believing I'm only being polite. I have said that "I am ignorant of the life philosophies of the world of man," but people have never thought so, and said that the means by which I speak are so many. Because of the constraints of this conception of man, I know not with what tone, and by what means, to speak to people—and so, with no other choice, I can but bluntly speak with the tone of telling them. What else can I do? The means by which people speak are so many—they say "I do not rely on emotions but practice righteousness," which is the kind of slogan they have cried for many years, but they are unable to act in accordance with their words, their words are empty—so I say that people lack the ability for "their words and accomplishments occur simultaneously." In their hearts, people believe that acting thus is emulating Me—yet I have no interest in their emulation, I'm sick and tired of it. Why do people always turn against the One who feeds them? Have I given man too little? Why do people always secretly worship Satan behind My back? It is as if they work for Me and the monthly salary I give them is insufficient to cover their living costs, because of which they look for another job outside working hours in order to double their wages—for people's expenditure is too great, and they don't seem to know how to get by. If it were really thus, I'd ask them to leave My "factory." Long ago I explained to man that working for Me doesn't involve any special treatment: Without exception, I treat people fairly and reasonably, adopting a system of "work hard gain more, work less gain less, do no work gain nothing." When I speak, I hold nothing back; if anyone believes My "factory rules" to be too strict, they should get out immediately, I'll pay for their "traveling expenses." I'm "lenient" in My handling of such people, I do not force them to stay. Among these innumerable people, could I not find a "worker" who is after My own heart? People shouldn't underestimate Me! If people still disobey Me and want to seek "employment" elsewhere, I won't force them—I'd welcome it, I have no choice! Is it not because I have too many "rules and regulations"?

THE FORTY-FIRST UTTERANCE

I once took on a great undertaking among men, but they did not notice, and so I had to use My word to reveal it to them. And yet, man still could not understand My words, and remained ignorant of the objective of My plan. And so because of the deficiencies and shortcomings of man, they did things to interrupt My management, and unclean spirits took the opportunity to manifest, making mankind their victims, until they were tortured by the unclean spirits and became defiled all over. It was at this time that I saw man's intent and purpose. I sighed from the mist: Why must man always act for his own interests? Are My chastisements not meant to make them perfect? Am I trying to discourage them? The language of man is very beautiful, and soft, and yet the actions of men are extremely terrible. Why is it that My requirements of man always come to nothing? Is it as if I were asking a dog to climb a tree? Am I trying to create trouble out of nothing? As I carry out My entire management plan, I have created various "experimental plots," however due to poor terrain, and due to too many years without sunlight, the terrain is constantly changing, causing it to break down, and so in My memory, I have forsaken countless plots of this type. And still now, much of the terrain continues to change. If someday the earth really changes to another type, I will readily cast it aside—is that not the stage I am currently at in My work? But man doesn't have the slightest sense of this. They are only being chastised under My guidance. Why bother? Am I a God who came in order to chastise man? In the heavens, I once planned that once I was among men, I would unify with them, so that all those I love could be close to Me with nothing to divide us. However, at the present, in the circumstances of today, not only are we not in contact, what's more, they keep their distance from Me because of My chastisement. I do not weep for their absence. What can be done? Men are all performers who go along with the group. I could let men slip from My grasp, and even more so I will be able to let them return to My factory from foreign lands. At this time, what complaints could they have? What can man do to Me? Are men not easily swayed? And yet, I do not harm man for this fault, but rather give them My nutrition. Who made them act powerless? Who made them lack nutrition? I move the cold hearts of man with My warm embrace, who else can do such a thing? Why have I expanded this work among men? Can man truly understand My heart?

Among all of the people I have chosen, I have engaged in trade, and so there is always a coming and going of men in My home, in an unending flow. They all engage in various formalities in My place, as if they were discussing business with Me, so much so that My work is so busy that at times I don't have the chance to handle all of the squabbles of men. I urge men not to be a thorn in My side, and to steer their own ships rather than constantly relying on Me. They must not always act like children in My home; what benefit is that? My work is great business. It is not some neighborhood store, or little shop. Men always fail to understand My frame of mind, apparently deliberately jesting. It would seem man loves to loaf around like a child, never considering serious business, and so many fail to fulfill the "homework" I lay out for them. And so how dare these men show their face to the "teacher"? Why is it they never attend to their duties? What kind of thing is the heart of man? Even now I am unclear. Why is it the hearts of men are always changing? Like a day in June, from time to time the scorching sun is ruthless, other times the clouds are dark and dense, and others the fierce wind howls. So why is it men are unable to learn from their experiences? Perhaps this is an exaggeration. Men don't know to bring an umbrella during the rainy season, so due to their ignorance they have been soaked by the sudden appearance of rain from the heavens countless times, as if I were deliberately teasing them and they were always being assaulted by the heaven's rain. Or perhaps it is that I am too "cruel," making everyone absent-minded and thus scatterbrained, constantly at a loss for what to do. No man has ever truly grasped the purpose or significance of My work. So they all do the work of causing themselves trouble, and chastising themselves. Could it be that I am deliberately chastising them? Why do men make trouble for themselves? Why do they always walk right into the trap? Why don't they negotiate with Me, but instead find work for themselves? Could it be that I am giving mankind so little?

I published My first work among all men, and as My work made people admire it too much, they were all careful in their study of it, and through this attentive study they had much to gain. It seems My work is like a convoluted, amazing novel, like a romantic prose poem, like the talks of a political program, like a complicated mix of economic common sense. As My work is so rich, there are many differing opinions on it, and no one can provide a summary of the preface of My work.

Although man has “outstanding” knowledge and talent, just this work of Mine is enough to baffle all the heroes. While men say “blood may flow, tears may be shed, but one must not hang one’s head,” they are unconsciously hanging their heads, in expression of their surrender to My work. Man has summarized what he learned through his experiences, saying that^[a] it is as if My work is a heavenly book that has dropped from the sky, but I urge man not to be oversensitive. In My view, what I have said is all very conventional; however, I hope that from The Encyclopedia of Life in My work, people are able to find the way of livelihood, and from Man’s Destination, they may find the meaning of life, and from The Secrets of the Heavens, they may find My will, and from The Path of Mankind, they can discover the art of living. Would this not be even better? I do not force man; for those who are not interested in My work, I will give them a “refund” on My book, plus a “service charge.” I do not make man act reluctantly. As the author of this book, My only hope is that readers will love My work, but what people enjoy is always different. And so I urge men not to compromise their future prospects for the sake of saving face. If that was the case, how could I, kindhearted as I am, bear such great disgrace? If you love My work, I hope that you will relay to Me your own precious suggestions, so that I can improve My writing, and thus through man’s faults improve the content of My writing. This benefits both the author and the reader, does it not? I don’t know if this can be considered correct. Perhaps in this way I can enhance My writing ability, and strengthen our companionship. On the whole, I hope that all may cooperate with My work, without interruption, so that My word may be dispersed to every family and home, and so that all of people on earth can live amid My word. This is My goal. I hope that through The Chapter on Life in My words all men may have something to gain, such as life maxims, or the knowledge of^[b] the faults among mankind, or what it is I require of man, or the “secrets” of the people of the kingdom today. However, I urge men to take a look at The Scandals of Man Today; this can be beneficial to all. You may as well also read The Latest Secret, which can be even more beneficial for people’s lives. There’s also Hot Topics—isn’t this even more beneficial for people’s lives? There is no harm in using My advice, and seeing if it has any effect, and relating to Me how you feel after you've read it, so that I may prescribe the correct medicine, which in the end can completely eradicate the illnesses of mankind. I don't know how My suggestions will work, but I hope that you can use them as a reference. What do you think?

THE FORTY-SECOND UTTERANCE

As soon as the new work begins, all people have a new entry, and they advance with Me hand-in-hand, we walk on the great road of the kingdom together, and there is great intimacy between man and Me. To show My feelings, to display My attitude toward man, I have always spoken to man. Part of these words, however, may hurt people, while some of them may be of great help to them, and so I advise people to listen more closely to what comes from My mouth. My utterances might not be elegant and refined, but they are all the words from the bottom of My heart. Because man was originally My friend, I have continued to carry out My work among man, and man, too, does his utmost to cooperate with Me, deeply afraid of interrupting My work. At this moment, My heart is filled with great delight, for I have gained a portion of people, and so My "business" is no longer in a slump, it is no longer empty words, and My "franchise market" is no longer performing sluggishly. People are sensible after all, they are all willing to "dedicate themselves" for My name and My glory, and in this way My "franchise department" gains some new "goods," and so in the spiritual realm many "customers" come to buy My "goods." Only at this moment do I gain glory, only then are the words spoken from My mouth no longer empty words. I have been triumphant, and have returned in victory, and all people celebrate Me. To show its admiration for Me, to show that it yields beneath My knees, at this moment the great red dragon also comes to "celebrate," and I am glorified in this. From the time of creation until today, I have fought many victorious battles, and have done many admirable things. Many people once celebrated Me, and offered praise to Me, and danced for Me. Although these were stirring scenes, and unforgettable, I never showed My smile, for I had yet to conquer man, and was merely doing part of the work similar to the creation. Today is unlike the past. I give a smile upon the throne, I have conquered man, and people all bow down in worship before Me. The people of today are not those of the past. When has My work not been for the sake of the present? When has it not been for My glory? For the sake of a brighter tomorrow, I shall make plain all of My work in man many times over, so that all of My glory may “rest” in man, who was created. I shall take this as the principle of My work. Those who are willing to cooperate with Me, rise up and work hard so that more of My glory may fill the firmament. Now is the time to make the most of one's talents. All those who are beneath the care and protection of My love have the chance to put their abilities to use here, in My place, and I shall maneuver all things to “turn” for My work. The birds flying in the sky are My glory in the sky, the seas upon the earth are My doings upon the earth, the master of all things is My manifestation among all things, and I employ all that there is upon the earth as the capital for My management, causing all things to multiply, flourish, and burst with life.

At the time of creation, I had already determined that My work on earth would come to a complete end in the final age. When My work ends is the very time that all of My doings shall be made manifest in the firmament. I shall make the people on earth acknowledge My doings, and before the “judgment seat,” My deeds shall be proven, so that they are acknowledged among people across the earth, who shall yield. Thus, afterward, I shall embark upon an enterprise never before carried out in ages past. From today onward, I shall make plain My deeds step-by-step, so that My wisdom, My wondrousness, and My unfathomability shall be acknowledged and proven in every sphere of society. In particular, before all the ruling parties on earth there shall be even greater acknowledgment of My deeds, such that My doings shall be judged by “judges,” and “defended” by “lawyers,” and thus My doings shall be acknowledged, causing all people to lower their heads and yield. From this time onward, My actions shall be recognized by every sphere of society, and this will be the moment when I gain all glory on earth. At such time, I shall appear to man and no longer be hidden. At present, My deeds have yet to reach their climax. My work is progressing onward, and when it reaches its zenith is when it shall finish. I shall completely conquer the people of all nations, I shall cause ferocious beasts to become tame as lambs before Me, and shall cause the great red dragon to submit before Me like the people on earth. I shall defeat all My enemies in heaven, and shall cause all of My adversaries on earth to be conquered. This is My plan, and the wondrousness of My deeds. Man can only live under the influence of nature beneath My guidance—he cannot make his own decisions! Who can escape My hand? I have categorized all of nature, causing it to exist amid laws, and it is only because of this that there are such laws as the warmth of spring and coolness of autumn upon earth. The reason why the flowers on earth wither in winter and blossom in summer is because of the wondrousness of My hand, the reason why the geese fly south in winter is because I adjust the temperature, and the reason why the seas roar is because I want to drown the things upon the surface. What is not arranged by Me? From this moment onward, man’s “natural economics” are entirely vanquished by My words, and people no longer eradicate My presence because of the existence of “natural laws.” Who will ever again deny the existence of the Ruler of all things? In heaven, I am Head; among all things, I am the Lord; and among all people, I am foremost. Who dares easily cover this with “paint”? Could falsehoods disrupt the existence of the truth? At this precious opportunity, I once again begin the work in My hands, no longer suffering man’s interference, keeping the machines turning.

I have added various “seasonings” among My words, and thus it is as if I am man’s senior chef. Although people don’t know what seasoning has been added, they relish the taste; holding the “plate,” they all savor the “dishes” I have prepared. I don’t know why, people always want to eat more of the dishes that I personally prepare. It is as if they look too highly upon Me, as if they see Me as the highest of all condiments, and have no regard for others at all. Because I have too much self-respect, I wish not to smash others’ “iron rice bowl” for My own reasons. Thus, I take the chance to step back from the kitchen and allow others the chance to distinguish themselves. Only in this way is My heart steadfast; I don’t want to make people look up to Me and look down on others, that’s not right. What is the value of having a place in people’s hearts? Am I really that boorish and unreasonable? Am I really willing to sit in a position? If so, then why do I embark on such a great enterprise? I wish not to struggle for fame and fortune against others, I disdain earthly fame and fortune, this is not what I pursue. I do not see man as a role model, I do not fight or snatch, but make a living by relying on My “craft,” and do not commit unconscionable acts. Thus, when I walk around the earth, I act first and ask for “payment for handiwork” later—only this is the fairness and reasonableness spoken of by man, there’s no exaggeration in this, it is not in the least bit reduced, I speak as per the original meaning of the facts. I walk back and forth among man, searching for those who are fair and reasonable, yet there has been no effect. And because people love to bargain, the price is either too high or too low, and so I am still doing the duty in My hands. Today, I still don’t know why man does not abide by his duty, why he does not know how great his stature is. People don’t even know whether it is several grams or several liang.^[a] And thus, they still deceive Me. It is as if all of My work has been in vain, as if My words are but an echo in the great mountains, and no one has ever perceived the roots of My words and utterances. And so I use this as the foundation to sum up the third aphorism: People do not know Me, for they do not see Me. It is as if, having eaten My words, people drink some medicine to aid digestion, and because the side effects of the medicine are so strong, they suffer memory loss, and so My words become what is forgotten, the place where I am becomes the corner they forget, and because of this I sigh. Why have I done so much work, yet there is no proof of it in people? Have I not put in enough effort? Or is it because I have not grasped what man needs? I’ve run out of ideas in this, My only choice is to use My administrative decrees to conquer all people. I shall no longer be a loving mother, but shall manage all mankind as a stern father!

THE FORTY-THIRD UTTERANCE

Perhaps it is only on account of My administrative decrees that people have taken a great “interest” in My words. Were they not governed by My administrative decrees, they would all be howling like tigers that have just been disturbed. Daily I wander above the clouds, watching the humanity that covers the earth as they bustle about, a. The “liang” is a Chinese weight measurement, one liang is 50 grams.

restrained by Me by means of My administrative decrees. This is the only way to keep the human race in an orderly state, and so I have perpetuated My administrative decrees. From this time forth, those on earth receive all manner of chastisements on account of My administrative decrees, and as these chastisements descend on them all humanity sets up a loud clamor and flees in every direction. At this moment, the nations of the earth immediately perish, the boundaries between nation and nation cease to exist, place is no longer divided from place, and there is nothing to sunder man from man. I begin to do the “ideological work” in the midst of humanity, so that people may coexist peacefully one with another, no longer fighting, and, as I build bridges and establish connections in mankind’s midst, people become united. I shall fill the empyrean with the manifestations of My working, so that everything on earth falls prostrate under My power, implementing My plan for “global unity” and bringing this one wish of Mine to fruition, and so that humanity will no longer “roam about” on the face of the earth but find a suitable destination without delay. I take thought for the human race in every way, making it so that all mankind will soon come to live in a land of peace and happiness, so that the days of their lives will no longer be sad and desolate, and so that My plan will not come to naught upon the earth. Because man exists there, I shall build My nation upon the earth, for a part of the manifestation of My glory is upon the earth. In heaven above, I shall set My cities to rights and so make everything new both above and below. I shall render all that exists both above and below heaven into one unity, so that all things on earth will be united with all that is in heaven. This is My plan, it is what I shall accomplish in the final age—let no one interfere with this part of My work! Extending My work into the nations of the Gentiles is the last part of My work on earth. No one is able to fathom the work that I shall do, and so people are completely befuddled. And because I am busily occupied by My work on earth, people take the opportunity to “play around.” To keep them from being too unruly, I have first placed them under My chastisement to endure the discipline of the lake of fire. This is one step in My work, and I shall use the might of the lake of fire to accomplish this work of Mine, otherwise it would be impossible to carry out My work. I shall cause human beings throughout the universe to submit before My throne, dividing them into different categories according to My judgment, classifying them according to these categories, and further sorting them into their families, so that the whole of humanity will cease to disobey Me, falling instead into a neat and orderly arrangement according to the categories that I have named—let no one move about at random! Above and below the universe, I have wrought new work; above and below the universe, all humanity falls dazed and dumbstruck by My sudden appearance, their horizons exploded as never before by My open appearance. Is not today exactly like this?

I have taken the first stride and initiated the first part of My work among all nations and all peoples. I shall not disrupt My plan to begin anew: The order of work among the Gentile nations has been established in accordance with the procedures of My work in heaven. When all human beings lift up their eyes to look upon My every gesture and action, that is when I cast a fog upon the world. Men's eyes dimmed at once, they are unable to make out any direction, like sheep in a desert waste, and, when the gale starts howling, their cries are drowned by the howling wind. Amid the waves of the wind, human forms can faintly be seen, but no human voice can be heard—even though men are shouting at the top of their voice, the effort is futile. At this time, humanity weeps and wails loudly, hoping that a savior will suddenly drop out of the sky to lead them out of the boundless desert. But, no matter how great their faith, the savior remains immovable, and man's hopes are dashed: The fire of faith that has been lit is blown out by the gale from the desert, and man lies prostrate in a barren and uninhabited place, nevermore to raise up a blazing torch, and falls senseless into a coma.... Seizing the moment, I cause an oasis to appear before man's eyes. But, while his heart may be overjoyed, man's body is too frail to respond, lying limp in every extremity; even though he sees the beautiful fruits growing in the oasis, he lacks the strength to pluck them, because man's "internal resources" have all been consumed till there's nothing left of them. I take the things man needs and offer them to him, but all he does is flash a fleeting smile, his face completely cheerless: Every jot of humanity's strength has disappeared without a trace, vanishing upon the moving air. For this reason, man's face is entirely without expression, only a single ray of affection radiating from his bloodshot eyes, with the gentle benevolence like that of a mother watching over her child. From time to time, man's dry, cracked lips make a pulsating motion, as if about to speak but lacking the strength to do so. I give man some water, but all he does is shake his head. From these erratic and unpredictable actions, I learn that man has already lost all hope in his own self, and is only watching Me with a look of supplication in his eyes, as if pleading for something. But, ignorant of the customs and mores of mankind, I am bewildered by humanity's facial expressions and actions. It is only at this moment that I suddenly discover that the days of man's existence are fast drawing to a close, and I turn a sympathetic gaze toward him. And it is only at this moment that man shows a smile of pleasure, nodding his head at Me, as if he's settled up his every wish. Humanity is no longer sad; on earth, people complain no more of life's emptiness, and desist from all dealings with "life." Thenceforth, there will be no more sighs on earth, and the days that the human race will live shall be filled with delight....

I shall dispose of man's affairs properly before going about My own work, lest humanity keep on intruding upon My work. Man's affairs are not My main theme, the affairs of humankind are too inconsequential. Because man's capacity is too narrow—it appears that humanity is unwilling to show mercy even to an ant, or that ants are mankind's enemies—there is always a ruckus going on among men. Listening to the ruckus that men make, I depart once more and give their tales no further heed. In humanity's eyes, I am a "resident's committee," specializing in the resolution of "family disputes" among "residents." When people come before Me, they invariably bring personal reasons with them and, with overbearing eagerness, recount their own "uncommon experiences," adding commentary of their own as they go along. I look at humanity's extraordinary demeanor: Their faces are covered with dust—a dust that, under the "irrigation" of sweat, loses its "independence" as it instantly forms a compound with the sweat, so that men's faces become further "enriched," like the sand on a beach at the seaside, on which footprints can occasionally be seen. Their hair resembles that of specters of the dead, devoid of luster, standing straight up like bits of straw stuck into a globe. Because his temper is too hot, to the point where he's worked himself into a towering rage, his face sporadically gives off "steam," like the "roiling" of sweat. Scrutinizing him closely, I see that man's face is covered with "flames" like a blazing sun, which is why there are clouds of hot gas rising from it, and I really worry that his anger might burn his face up, although he himself pays no mind. At this juncture, I urge man to dampen his temper down a little, for what good does this do? Why be like this? On account of being angry, the stalks of straw on the surface of this "globe" are practically burnt up by the sun's flames; in circumstances like this, even the "moon" turns red. I urge man to moderate his temper—it's important to safeguard his health. But man does not listen to My advice; rather, he keeps on "lodging complaints" with Me—what use is it? Surely it is not that My bounty is insufficient for humanity's enjoyment? Or that he refuses what I give him? In a sudden fit of anger, I flip the table over, at which man no longer dares to narrate any more exciting episodes from his story and, fearful lest I lead him into a "detention center" to cool his heels for a few days, he takes the opportunity afforded by My tantrum to slip away. Otherwise, man would never be willing to give things a rest, but would keep rattling off his own spiel—I'm fed up at the very sound of it. Why is it that humanity is so complicated in their heart of hearts? Could it be that I have put too many "spare parts" into man's makeup? Why does he always put on a show in front of Me? Surely it isn't that I am a "consultant" for the resolution of "civil disputes"? Did I ask man to come to Me? Surely I am not a county magistrate? Why is it that the affairs among people are always reported before Me? My hope is that man will see fit to take charge of his own self and not intrude upon Me, because I have too much work to do.

THE FORTY-FOURTH UTTERANCE

People treat My work as an adjunct, they do not forgo food or sleep for its sake, and so I have no choice but to make fitting demands of man as befits his attitude toward Me. I recall that I once gave man much grace and many blessings, but after snatching these things he immediately left. It was as if I was unconsciously giving them to him. And so, man has always loved Me amid his own conceptions. I want man to truly love Me, but today, people still dilly-dally, unable to give their true love to Me. In their imagination, they believe that if they give their true love to Me, they'll be left with nothing. When I object, their whole bodies tremble—yet they remain unwilling to give their true love to Me. It is as if they are waiting for something, and so they look ahead, never telling Me what's really going on. It is like a sticker has been stuck over their mouths, so they never speak openly. Before man, it seems, I have become a cutthroat capitalist. People are always afraid of Me: At the sight of Me, they immediately disappear without a trace, terrified of what I'll ask them about their circumstances. I do not know the reason why people are capable of a sincere love of their "fellow villagers," but are unable to love Me, who am upstanding in spirit. Because of this I sigh: Why do people always release their love in the world of man? Why can't I taste the love of man? Is it because I am not one of mankind? People always treat Me like a savage in the mountains. It is as if I lack what makes up a normal person, and so before Me people always affect a high moral tone. They often drag Me before them to rebuke Me, telling Me off as they would a child of preschool age; because, in people's memories, I am someone who is irrational and uneducated, they always play the part of the educator before Me. I do not chastise people for their failings, but give them suitable assistance, allowing them to receive regular "economic aid." Because man has always lived amid catastrophe and finds it difficult to escape, and amidst this disaster he has always called out to Me, I punctually deliver "grain supplies" into his hands, allowing all people to live in the great family of the new era, and experience the warmth of the great family. When I observe the work among man, I discover man's many defects, and as a result I give man help. Even at this time, there is still exceptional poverty among man, and thus I have bestowed suitable care upon "impoverished areas," lifting them from poverty. This is the means by which I work, allowing all people to enjoy My grace as much as they can.

The people on earth unconsciously suffer chastisement, and so I open My great hand and pull them to My side, allowing them the good fortune to enjoy My grace on earth. On earth, what is not empty and without value? I walk among all places in the world of man, and though there are plenty of famous monuments and pleasing natural scenery, everywhere I go has long since become bereft of vitality. Only then do I sense the gloominess and desolation on earth: Upon earth, life has long since disappeared, there is only the odor of death, and thus I have ever called upon man to hurry up and leave this land of affliction. All that I see is redolent of emptiness. I take the chance to hurl the life in My hand toward those whom I have selected; suddenly, there is a patch of green upon the land. People are willing to enjoy the things of vitality upon the earth, but I find no pleasure in this; people always cherish the things upon the earth, and never see their emptiness, such that, having reached this point today, still they do not understand why no life exists upon the earth. Today, as I walk amongst the universe, people are able to enjoy the grace of the place where I am, and they take this as capital, never pursuing the source of life. They all use what I give as capital, yet none of them tries to perform the original function of vitality. They don't know how to use or develop natural resources, and thus they are left destitute. I reside among man, I live among man, yet today man still does not know Me. Though people have given Me much help as a result of My being so far from home, it is as if I have yet to establish the right friendship with man, and thus I still feel the unfairness of the world of man; in My eyes, mankind, after all, is empty, and there is no treasure of any value among man. I don't know what view people have of human life, but in sum, My own is inseparable from the word "empty." I hope people don't think badly of Me because of this—that's just how I am, I'm forthright, I don't try and be polite. However, I'd advise people to pay closer attention to what I think, for My words, after all, are of help to them. I do not know what understanding people have of "emptiness." My hope is that they spend a little effort on this work. They'd do well to actually experience human life, and see if they can find any valuable "minerals" in it. I'm not trying to dampen people's positivity, I just want them to gain some knowledge in My words. I always rush about for the sake of human matters, but even having reached this point today, people still haven't spoken a word of thanks, as if they're too busy, and have forgotten this. Even today, I still don't understand what effect man's rushing about all day has had. Up till today I still don't have a place in people's hearts, and so once again fall into deep thought. I have begun setting to the work of researching "why people do not have a heart that truly loves Me": I shall lift man onto the "operating table," I shall dissect his heart, and look at what is blocking the way in his heart and stopping him from truly loving Me. Under the effect of "knife," people squeeze their eyes shut, waiting for Me to begin, for at this time, they have completely yielded; in their hearts I find many other adulterations. In their hearts, chief among these are people's own things. Although they may have but a few things outside their bodies, those within their bodies are innumerable. It is as if man's heart is a great big storage box, full of riches, everything people would ever need. Only then do I understand why people never pay Me any regard: It's because they have great self-sufficiency—what need have they of My help? So I depart from man, for people have no need of My help; why should I put on a brave face and make them hate Me?

Who knows why, but I have always been willing to speak amongst man—it's as if I can't help Myself. And thus, people look upon Me as worthless, they always treat Me as something without value, they don't treat Me as something to be respected. They don't cherish Me, and they drag Me home at any time and then again throw Me out, "exposing" Me before the public. I have the utmost loathing for man's ignoble behavior, and thus I baldly say that man is without conscience. But people are intransigent, they take their "swords and spears" and do battle with Me, saying that My words are at odds with actual conditions, saying that I vilify them—but I do not wreak retribution upon them as a result of their violent behavior. I merely use My truths to win people over, to make them feel ashamed of themselves, after which they silently retreat. I do not compete with man, for there is no benefit in that. I will abide by My duty, and I hope that man can also abide by his duty, and not act against Me. Wouldn't it be better to get along peacefully like this? Why hurt our relationship? We've gotten along all these years—what need is there to cause trouble for both of us? Wouldn't that be of no benefit to either of our reputations? Ours is a years-long "old friendship," an "old acquaintance"—what need is there to part on acrimonious terms? Is there benefit to this? I hope people pay attention to the impact, that they know what's good for them. My attitude toward man today is sufficient for a life's discussion by man—why do people always fail to recognize My kindness? Is it because they lack the powers of expression? Do they lack the sufficient vocabulary? Why are they always lost for words? Who is ignorant of how I conduct Myself? People are perfectly aware of My doings. It's just they always like to take advantage of others, so they're never willing to put aside their own interests; if a single word touches upon their own interests, they refuse to let up until they've gained the upper hand—and what's the point in that? Instead of competing over how much they can give, people compete over how much they can get. Though there is no enjoyment in their status, they cherish it very much, and even regard it as a priceless treasure—and so they'd rather endure My chastisement than give up the blessings of status. People think too highly of themselves, and thus are never willing to put themselves aside. Perhaps there are some small inaccuracies in My evaluation of man, or maybe it fits just right—but in sum, My hope is that people take this as a warning.

THE FORTY-FIFTH UTTERANCE

I once chose the fine goods to remain in My house, so that within it there would be unparalleled riches, and it would be thus adorned, from which I gained enjoyment. But because of man's attitude toward Me, and because of people's motivations, I had no choice but to put this work aside and do other work. I shall use man's motivations to accomplish My work, I shall maneuver all things to serve Me, and cause My house to no longer be gloomy and forlorn as a result. I once watched among man: All that was of flesh and blood was in a stupor, not a single thing experienced the blessing of My existence. People live amid blessings but don't know how blessed they are. If My blessings toward mankind had not existed unto today, who among mankind would have made it to the present and not perished? That man lives is My blessing, and it means he lives amid My blessings, because he originally had nothing, because he was originally without the capital to live between heaven and earth; today I continue to help man, and only because of this does man stand before Me, lucky enough to escape death. People have summed up the secrets of man's existence, but no one has ever perceived that this is My blessing. As a result, all people curse the injustice within the world, they all complain about Me because of the unhappiness in their lives. If not for My blessings, who would have seen today? People all complain about Me because they are unable to live amidst comfort. If man's life was bright and breezy, if the warm "spring gust" was sent into the heart of man, causing unsurpassed pleasantness in his whole body, leaving him without the slightest pain, then who among man would die complaining? I have great difficulty gaining man's absolute sincerity, for people have too many crafty schemes—enough, quite simply, to make one's head spin. But when I raise objections to them, they give Me the cold shoulder, they pay no attention to Me, for My objections have touched their souls, leaving them incapable of being edified from head to toe, and thus people loathe My existence, for I always love to “torment” them. Because of My words, people sing and dance, because of My words, they lower their heads in silence, and because of My words, they burst out weeping. In My words, people despair, in My words, they gain the light for survival, because of My words, they toss and turn, sleepless day and night, and because of My words, they rush about all over the place. My words plunge people into Hades, then they plunge them into chastisement—but, without realizing it, people also enjoy My blessings. Is this achievable by man? Could it come in return for people’s tireless efforts? Who can escape the orchestrations of My words? Thus, because of man’s failings, I bestow My words upon mankind, causing man’s deficiencies to be nourished because of My words, bringing unparalleled riches to the life of mankind.

I often scrutinize people’s words and actions. In their behavior and facial expressions, I have discovered many “mysteries.” In people’s interactions with others, “secret recipes” practically take pride of place—and thus, when I engage with man, what I gain is the “secret recipes of human interaction,” which shows that man does not love Me. I often reprimand man because of his failings, yet I am incapable of gaining his trust. Man is unwilling to let Me slay him, for in the “secret recipes of human interaction” of man, never has it been discovered that man has suffered a fatal disaster—he has merely suffered a few setbacks during times of misfortune. People cry out because of My words, and their pleas always contain grievances about My heartlessness. It is as if they are all searching for My true “love” of man—but how could they find My love in My stern words? As a result, they always lose hope because of My words. It is as if, as soon as they read My words, they behold the “grim reaper,” and thus tremble with fear. This makes Me unhappy: Why are the people of the flesh, who live amid death, always afraid of death? Are man and death bitter enemies? Why does the fear of death always cause distress in people? Throughout the “exceptional” experiences of their lives, do they only experience a little of death? Why, in what they say, do people always complain about Me? Thus, I summarize the fourth aphorism for human life: People are only the slightest bit obedient toward Me, and thus they always hate Me. Because of man’s hate, I often leave. Why must I subject Myself to this? Why must I always provoke loathing in people? Since people do not welcome My existence, why must I put on a brave face and live in the house of man? I have no choice but to take My “luggage” and leave man. But people can’t bear to let Me go, they never want to let Me leave, they wail and sob, deeply afraid that I will depart, and they will thus lose what they depend on to live. Seeing their imploring gaze, My heart softens. Amidst the seas of the world, who is capable of loving Me? Man is covered in filthy water, engulfed by the force of the sea. I loathe man’s disobedience, yet I also feel compassion for all mankind’s misfortune—for man, after all, is still a victim. How can I cast man into the waters when he is weak and powerless? Am I so cruel as to kick him when he’s down? Is My heart so ruthless? It is because of My attitude toward mankind that man enters this age alongside Me, it is because of this that he has passed these exceptional days and nights together with Me. Today, people are in an agony of joy, they have a greater sense of My affection, and they love Me with great vigor, because there is vitality in their lives, and they cease to be prodigal sons wandering to the ends of the earth.

In My days living with man, people rely on Me, and because I am considerate of man in all things, and meticulous in My care for him, people always live in My warm embrace, enduring none of the blowing wind, driving rain, or burning sun; people live amidst happiness, and treat Me as a loving mother. People are like flowers in a greenhouse, utterly incapable of withstanding the onslaught of “natural disasters,” ever incapable of standing firm. Thus I place them amidst the trials of howling seas, and they can’t help but ceaselessly “waver,” they have practically no power to resist—and because their stature is too lacking and their bodies are too weak, I feel a sense of burden. Thus, without realizing it, people are subjected to My trials, because they are too fragile, and unable to stand the howling winds and burning sun. Is this not My work of the present? Why, when faced with My trials, do people always burst into tears? Am I doing them an injustice? Am I deliberately slaying them? Why does the state of man that is lovable die, never to be resurrected? People always grab Me and don’t let go; because they have never been capable of living on their own, they have always allowed themselves to be led by My hand, deeply afraid of being taken away by someone else. Are their whole lives not guided by Me? During their tumultuous lives, as they cross peak and vale, they have experienced much tumult—did this not come from My hand? Why are people never able to understand My heart? Why are My good intentions always misunderstood by them? Why can My work not be embarked upon successfully on earth? Because of man's weakness, I have always shunned man, which fills Me with sorrow: Why can't My next step of work be carried out in man? Thus, I fall silent, carefully weighing him up: Why am I ever constrained by man's defects? Why are there always obstructions to My work? Today, I have yet to find a full answer in man, for man always blows hot and cold, he is never normal, he either hates Me to his bones, or has the utmost love for Me. I, the normal God Himself, can't stand such torment from man. Because people are always mentally abnormal, I am seemingly a little fearful of man, and so watching his every move makes Me think of his abnormality. I have unintentionally discovered the mystery in man: It turns out there is a mastermind behind him; as a result, people are always bold and confident, as if they've done something justified. Thus, people always pretend to be an adult and sweet-talk the "little child." Watching man's charade, I can't help but grow incensed: Why are people so unloving and disrespectful of themselves? Why don't they know themselves? Have My words passed away? Are My words the enemy of man? Why, when they read My words, do people grow resentful toward Me? Why do people always add their own thoughts to My words? Am I too unreasonable toward man? All people should think hard about this, about what is contained within My words.

THE FORTY-SIXTH UTTERANCE

I don't know how well people are doing in making My words the basis of their existence. I have always felt anxious for man's fate, but people don't seem to have any sense of this—and as a result, they have never paid any heed to My doings, and have never developed any adoration because of My attitude toward man. It is as if they shed emotion long ago to satisfy My heart. Faced with such circumstances, I once more fall silent. Why are My words not worthy of people's consideration, of further entry? Is it because I "have no reality" and I am trying to get a hold on people? Why do people always give Me "special treatment"? Am I an invalid who is in his own special ward? Why, when things have reached the point they have today, do people still look at Me differently? Is there a fault in My attitude toward man? Today, I have begun new work above the universes. I have given the people on earth a new beginning, and asked them all to move out from My house. And because people always like to indulge themselves, I advise them to be self-aware, and to not always disturb My work. In the “guesthouse” that I have opened, nothing inspires My loathing more than man, because people always cause trouble for Me and disappoint Me. Their behavior brings shame upon Me and I have never been able to hold My head high. Thus, I calmly speak with them, asking that they leave My house as soon as possible and stop eating My food for free. If they wish to remain, then they must undergo suffering and endure My chastening. In their minds, I am totally unaware and ignorant of their doings, and thus they have always stood tall before Me, without any sign of falling, merely pretending to be human to make up the numbers. When I make demands of people, they’re astonished: They had never thought that God, who has been good-natured and kind for so many years, could say such words, words that are heartless and unjustified, and so they are speechless. At such times, I see that the hate for Me in people’s hearts has grown once more, because they have again begun the work of complaining. They always accuse earth and imprecate Heaven. Yet in their words, I find nothing that curses themselves because their love of themselves is so great. Thus I sum up the meaning of human life: Because people love themselves too much, their whole lives are anguished and empty, and they suffer self-inflicted destruction throughout because of their hate for Me.

Though there is untold “love” for Me in the words of man, when I take these words to the “laboratory” for testing and observe them under the microscope, all that is contained within them is revealed with utter clarity. At this moment, I come among man once more to let them take a look at their “medical records,” to make them sincerely convinced. When people see them, their faces are filled with sadness, they feel regret in their hearts—and they’re even so anxious that they’re itching to forsake their evil ways and return to the right path in order to make Me happy. Seeing their resolution, I am extremely delighted, I am overcome with joy: “On earth, who but man could share joy and sorrow with Me? Is man not the only one?” Yet when I leave, people tear up their medical records and throw them to the floor before strutting off. In the days since then, I have seen little in people’s actions that is after My own heart. Yet their resolutions before Me have accumulated considerably, and, looking upon their resolutions, I feel disgusted, for in them there is nothing that can be held up for My enjoyment, they are too tainted. Seeing My disregard for their resolution, people grow cold. Afterward, only rarely do they submit an “application” because man’s heart has never been praised before Me and it has only ever been rejected by Me—no longer is there any spiritual support in people’s lives, and so their zeal disappears, and no more do I feel that the weather is “scorching hot.” People suffer much throughout their lives, to the extent that, with the arrival of the situation today, they are so tormented by Me that they hover between life and death; as a result, the light from their faces dims, and they lose their “liveliness,” for they have all “grown up.” I cannot bear to see people’s piteous state when they are refined during chastisement—yet who can remedy man’s miserable circumstances? Who can save man from the miserable human life? Why have people never been able to extricate themselves from the abyss of the sea of affliction? Do I entrap people deliberately? People have never understood My mood, and so I lament to the universe that among all things in heaven and on earth, nothing has ever perceived My heart, nothing truly loves Me. Even today, I still don’t know why people are incapable of loving Me. They can give their hearts to Me, they are able to sacrifice their destiny for Me, but why can’t they give their love to Me? Do they not possess what I ask for? People are able to love everything apart from Me—so why can’t they love Me? Why is their love always hidden? Why, as they have stood before Me up until today, have I never seen their love? Is this something they lack? Am I deliberately making things difficult for people? Do they still have scruples in their hearts? Are they afraid of loving the wrong person, and being unable to remedy themselves? In people there are countless unfathomable mysteries, and thus I am always “timid and afraid” before man.

Today, at the time of advancing toward the gate of the kingdom, all people start forging ahead—but when they arrive before the gate, I close the gate, I shut people outside, and demand that they show their entry passes. Such an odd move is nothing like what people were expecting, and they’re all astonished. Why has the gate—which has always been wide open—suddenly been shut tight today? People stamp their feet and pace about. They imagine that they can wangle their way in, but when they hand Me their false entry passes, I cast them into the pit of fire there and then—and, seeing their own “painstaking efforts” in flames, they lose hope. They clutch their heads, crying, watching the beautiful scenes within the kingdom but unable to enter. Yet I do not let them in because of their piteous state—who may upset My plan as they please? Are the blessings of the future given in exchange for people's zeal? Does the meaning of human existence lie in entering My kingdom as one pleases? Am I so lowly? If not for My harsh words, would people not have entered the kingdom long ago? Thus, people always hate Me because of all the bother My existence causes them. If I didn't exist, they would be able to enjoy the blessings of the kingdom during the present day—and what need would there be to endure this suffering? And so I tell people they'd be better off leaving, that they should take advantage of how well things are going in the present to find a way out for themselves; they should take advantage of the present, while they're still young, to learn some skills. If they don't, in the future it will be too late. In My house, no one has ever received blessings. I tell people to hurry up and leave, to not stick to living in "poverty"; in the future it will be too late for regrets. Don't be too hard on yourself; why bother? Yet I also tell people that when they fail to gain blessings, no one may complain about Me. I have no time to waste My words on man. I hope that this sticks in people's minds, that they don't forget it—these words are the uncomfortable truth from Me. I have long since lost faith in man, I have long since lost hope in people, for they lack ambition, they have never been able to give Me a heart that loves God, and always give Me their motivations instead. I have said much to man, and since people still ignore My advice today, I tell them of My view to prevent them misunderstanding My heart in the future; whether they live or die in the times to come is their business, I have no control over this. I hope they find their own path to survival, and I am powerless in this. Since man does not truly love Me, we simply part ways; in future, no longer will there be any words between us, no longer will we have anything to talk about, we will not interfere with each other, we will each go our own way, people must not come looking for Me, never again will I ask for man's help. This is something that's between us, and we've spoken without equivocation to prevent there being any issues in the future. Doesn't this make things easier? We each go our own way and have nothing to do with each other—what's wrong with that? I hope people give this some consideration.

THE FORTY-SEVENTH UTTERANCE

In order to make mankind mature in life and make mankind and Me able to achieve results in our common ideal, I have always indulged mankind, allowing them to gain nourishment and sustenance from My word and to receive all of My abundance from it. I have never given mankind cause for embarrassment, but man never considers My feelings. This is because mankind is unfeeling and “despises” all things apart from Me. Due to mankind’s shortcomings, I quite sympathize with them and thus have spared no effort for them, so that they may enjoy all the abundance of the earth to their hearts’ content for their time on earth. I do not treat man unfairly and in consideration of people having followed Me for many years, I have developed a tender heart for them. It’s as if I cannot bear to put My hands upon them to do My work. So, I watch scrawny people who love Me as they love themselves and in My heart there is always an inexplicable feeling of pain, but who would breach convention because of this? Who would disturb themselves because of this? Nonetheless, I have bestowed all of My bounty to mankind so that they may enjoy it to the fullest, and I have not mistreated mankind on this issue. This is why mankind still sees My compassionate and benevolent face. I have always endured and waited. When mankind enjoys to their satisfaction and becomes bored, I shall begin to “satisfy” their requests and allow all mankind to escape their empty lives, and then I will no longer have dealings with people again. Upon the earth, I had previously swallowed up humanity with seawater, I had controlled them with famines, I had threatened them with plagues of insects, and I had used heavy rains to “water” them, but man never felt the emptiness of life. Now man still does not understand the significance of living on the earth. Could it be that living in My presence is the most profoundly significant aspect of human life? Does living in Me allow one to escape the threat of disaster? How many fleshly bodies on earth have lived in the freedom of the enjoyment of the self? Who has escaped the emptiness of living in the flesh? And who would know it? From My creation of mankind up to now, no one has lived a most significant life on earth, and so man has always idled away a life of utter insignificance, but none are willing to escape this predicament and none are willing to shun their empty and weary lives. In mankind’s experience, none of those who live in the flesh have escaped the customs of the world of man, even though they capitalize on enjoying Me. Instead, they have always just let nature take its course and deceived themselves.

When I have fully ended mankind's existence, there will be no one left to endure the persecution from earth, and then My great work can be said to be fully accomplished. In the last days when I am incarnate, what I wish to accomplish in My work is to allow mankind to understand the emptiness of living in the fleshly body, and thereby I shall extinguish the flesh. Afterward, there will be no people upon the earth, no one will ever again cry about the emptiness of the earth, no one will speak again of the difficulties of the flesh, no one will complain again that I am unfair, and all people and things shall enter into rest. Thereafter, no one will be rushing about, nor will they search here and there on the earth because people will have found a suitable destination for themselves. At that time, they will wear a smile upon their faces. I will then ask nothing more of man and have no further dispute with them; there will be no more treaty between us. I exist upon the earth and mankind lives upon the earth; I live and reside with them. Mankind feels the enjoyment of My presence; therefore mankind is unwilling to leave without reason, and instead, they would rather that I just stay for a little longer. How could I stand to see the scenes of misery pervasive on the earth while not lifting a finger to help? I am not of the earth. It is through patience that I remain on earth to this day, though I do so with reluctance. Were it not for mankind's endless beseeching, I would have left long ago. Nowadays mankind is able to take care of themselves and they do not need My assistance because they have matured and they do not need Me to feed them. Therefore I am planning to hold a victory celebration with mankind, after which I shall bid them farewell, so that they will be aware of this. Of course, parting on bad terms would not be a good thing because there are no grievances between us. Therefore the friendship between us shall be everlasting. I hope that after we part ways My "inheritance" to humanity may be continued. Do not forget about the teachings I provided during My life, do not do those things that would bring disgrace to My name, and keep My word in mind. I hope that humanity will try their best to satisfy Me when I have left. I hope that humanity will use My word as a foundation for their lives. Do not disappoint Me because My heart has always been concerned with mankind and I have always been attached to them. Humanity and I once assembled together and we enjoyed on earth the same blessings that are in heaven. I lived together with mankind and resided with them, mankind always loved Me, and I always loved them; we had an affinity for one another. When I recall My time together with mankind, I remember our days being filled with laughter and joy, and moreover, there were quarrels. Nonetheless, the love between us was established on this basis and our dealings with one another were never severed. Amidst our many years of contact, mankind has left a profound impression upon Me and I have given mankind many things to enjoy, for which mankind has always expressed great gratitude. Now, our meeting is unlike anything before; who could miss this moment of our parting? Mankind has profound affection for Me, and I have endless love for them, but what can be done about that? Who would dare to go against the requirements of the heavenly Father? I will return to My abode, where I will complete another part of My work. Perhaps we will have a chance to meet again. It is My hope that mankind will not feel too sorrowful and that they shall satisfy Me on earth; My Spirit in heaven shall often confer grace upon them.

Since the time of creation, I have prophesied that in the last days I shall make a group of people who are of one mind with Me. I have foretold that after establishing an exemplar on earth in the last days, I will return to My abode. When all of mankind has satisfied Me, they will have achieved My requirements, and I will no longer require anything from them. Instead, mankind and I will tell each other stories of our old days and after that we shall part company. I begin to do this work and allow mankind to prepare themselves mentally. I will let all mankind understand My intentions so that they will not misunderstand Me or think that I am cruel or heartless, which is not My intent. Does mankind love Me yet refuse to let Me have a suitable resting place? Is mankind unwilling to beseech the heavenly Father for My sake? Hasn't man shed tears of sympathy with Me? Has mankind not helped in accomplishing a prompt meeting of Us the Father and Son? Why are they unwilling now? My ministry upon the earth has been fulfilled and after parting ways with mankind I will still continue to assist mankind, is it not good? In order for My work to be more effective and so that it will be mutually beneficial, we must part although it is painful to do. Our tears will fall silently and I will no longer reproach mankind. In the past, I have said many things that pricked the very heart of mankind, causing them to shed tears of grief. For that, I hereby apologize to mankind and ask for mankind's forgiveness; do not envy and hate Me for everything I have said was for the good of mankind. So I hope that mankind will understand My heart. In former times we had our disputes, but looking back, we both benefited. Through these disputes God and mankind have had a bridge of friendship develop between them, isn't that the fruit of our collaborative efforts? We should all enjoy this. I ask man to forgive My previous "mistakes" and the transgressions of mankind shall also be forgotten. As long as man is able to return My love in the future, then that will give comfort to My Spirit in heaven. I do not know what mankind's resolution is in this regard, or whether or not man is willing to fulfill My final request. I am not asking anything else of mankind, only that they love Me and that is enough. Can this be done? Let all the unpleasant things that happened between us be in the past, let there always be love between us. I have given mankind so much love and mankind has paid such a heavy cost to love Me. So I hope that mankind treasures the singular and pure love between us so that our love will extend all over the human world and be passed down forever. When we meet again, let us still be linked in love so that our love may continue on for eternity and be praised and told by all people. This would satisfy Me and I would show My smiling face to mankind. I hope that man will remember all that I have entrusted to them.

APPENDIX:

INTERPRETATIONS OF THE MYSTERIES OF GOD'S WORDS

INTERPRETATION OF THE FIRST UTTERANCE

Just as God said, “None can grasp the root of My words, or the purpose behind them.” If it weren’t for the guidance of the Spirit of God, if it weren’t for the advent of His words, all would perish under His chastisement. Why does God test man for so long? And for as long as five months? This is the focal point of our fellowship as well as a central point in God’s wisdom. We can assume this: Were it not for this trial, and without God attacking, killing, and hacking away at the corrupt humanity, if the building of the church continued until today, then what would that accomplish? So in the first line of His speech, God gets straight to the point and explains the desired effect of these months’ work, and it is painfully accurate! It goes to show the wisdom of God’s deeds over this period of time: teaching the people to learn submission and sincere dedication through the trial, as well as how to better understand God through painful refinement. The more despair people experience, the more they are able to understand themselves. And to tell the truth, the more painful refinement they face, the more they can understand their own corruption, and in doing so they even learn that they are not worthy of being a service-doer for God, and rendering this kind of service is being elevated by Him. And so once this is achieved, once man has depleted himself, God utters the words of mercy, not hidden but in plain sight. It is clear that after several months, God’s new^[a] approach of work starts today; this is plain for all to see. In the past, God often said “it is not easy to earn the right to be called My people,” so as He has fulfilled these words in the people who are referred to as service-doers, all may see God can be trusted without any error. All of what God says will come true to varying degrees, and His words are not in the least bit empty.

When all of man is distraught and aggrieved, these words from God hit home with all who find themselves hopeless, reviving them. In order to eliminate further doubt, God added that “although they are referred to as My people, this title is not at all inferior to being called My ‘sons.’” Here one can see that only God can protect His own authority, and when the people have read it they believe more strongly that this is not a way of working, but fact. Furthermore, so that people's visions are not murky, in His new approach all people's identities are made clear. From this, one can see the wisdom of God. This way people can better understand that God can see through the hearts of men; just like puppets, all they do and all they think are manipulated by God. This is absolute.

Back to the beginning, what God said first was that the first step of His work, "purifying the church," has been completed. "The situation is not what it once was, and My work has entered a new starting point." From this statement, one can see that God's work has entered a new starting point, and soon after He pointed out the blueprints for the next step of His work to us—after finishing the building of the church, the life of the Age of Kingdom will begin. "For it is now no longer the era of church building, but rather the era in which the kingdom is successfully built." In addition, He has expressed that as the people are still on the earth, their assemblies will continue to be referred to as the church, and in this way the unrealistic realization of the kingdom of people's imaginations is avoided. Next, I'll have fellowship on the issue of visions.

Now is the era of kingdom building and the end of church building; and yet, why is it all assemblies will still be called the church? Formerly the church was referred to as the precursor to the kingdom; without the church there could be no kingdom. The Age of Kingdom begins with God performing His ministry in the flesh, and the Age of Kingdom is brought about by God incarnate. What He brings is the Age of Kingdom, not the official descent of the kingdom. This is not difficult to imagine; the people spoken of are people of the Age of Kingdom, not the people of the kingdom itself. Thus, it makes sense that assemblies on earth would still be referred to as the church. In the past, He acted through His normal humanity, and was not witnessed as God Himself, so the Age of Kingdom hadn't yet started among man; that is, as I have said, My Spirit had not yet officially begun to work in My incarnate flesh. Now that God Himself has been witnessed, the kingdom is realized among man. This signifies that I will begin to work through divinity, and so those who can appreciate My words and My deeds in divinity are known as My people of the Age of Kingdom, and so this is how the term "My people" arises. In this stage, I primarily work and speak through My divinity. Man cannot interfere, nor can he disrupt

My plan. Once God's word has reached a certain point, His name is witnessed, and His trials of mankind commence. This is the greatest example of God's wisdom. This lays a firm foundation and sets down roots for the beginning of the next step as well as the end of the last step. Man had no way of knowing that; this is the meeting point of the first and second portions of the era of judgment. Without a few months of refinement of man, I was unable to work through My divinity. These months of refinement open the way for the next step of My work. The end of these few months' work is a sign of going deeper into the next phase of work. If one truly understands the words of God, one may grasp that He is using these months to start the next step of His work so that it may be more fruitful. The obstruction of My humanity has created a barrier for the next step of My work, so through these months of painful refinement, both sides are edified and benefit from that. It is only now that man begins to treasure My form of address. And so with the turn of His pen, when God said He would no longer call man "service-doer," but rather "His people," all of them were overcome with joy. This was man's Achilles' heel. God had captured it.

In order to further convince all of mankind and to point out the impurities within some people's devotion, God has gone further to point out mankind's various ugly features, and in this way has fulfilled His words like the following: "How many truly love Me? Who is not acting out of consideration for their own futures? Who has never complained during their trials?" From these words, men can see their own disobedience, disloyalty and lack of filial piety, and thus see God's mercy and love following all of those who seek Him every step of the way. This can be seen from these words: "When a portion of man is on the brink of retreat, when all who hope for Me to change My manner of speech lose hope, I utter the words of salvation, and bring all who truly love Me back to My kingdom, before My throne." Here, the phrase "those who truly love Me," and the rhetorical question "How many truly love Me?" aren't in conflict. It indicates that those who are true have impurities. It is not as if God knows nothing. Since God can see the innermost hearts of men, the word "true" is used sarcastically in reference to the corrupt mankind, so that all of man can better see their indebtedness to God, take more blame, as well as understand the fact that the resentment in their hearts comes entirely from Satan. People are surprised when they see the word "devotion." They think: How many times have I railed against Heaven and earth? And how many times have I wanted to leave, but because I feared God's administrative decrees I just got by and went along with the crowd, waiting for God to sort it out? If it turned out there was truly no hope, then I would gradually back out. Now God calls us His devoted people, so does this mean God really can see through the innermost hearts of men? It wasn't until the very end that God pointed out the inner states of various kinds of people in order to avoid this type of misunderstanding. This made mankind who was first suspicious in their hearts but happy in their words enter a state of conviction in heart, words, and eyes. In this way, man's impression of God's word has grown more profound, and accordingly man has grown more fearful, more reverent, and has gained a better understanding of God. Finally, to alleviate man's fear of the future, God said: "But as the past is the past, and now is the present, there is no need to long for the past any longer, or to worry about the future." This type of urgent, harmonious, yet terse manner of speaking has an even greater effect, allowing all who read His words to see the light once more in their despair, then see God's wisdom and deeds, then gain the title of "God's people," after that eliminate the doubts in their hearts, and then learn to know themselves from their various internal states. These states appear in turn, both sorrow and grief, and happiness and joy. God has captured a lifelike outline of people in these words. It is vivid to the point of perfection, something man cannot achieve. It truly exposes the secrets deepest in the heart of man. Is this something that man could do?

Even more important is the passage below, in which God directly reveals to man His administrative decree. And this is the most important part: "Among men, those who go against reality and do not do things according to My guidance will not come to a good end, and will only bring trouble upon themselves. Of everything that occurs in the universe, there is nothing that I do not have the final say in." Is this not the administrative decree of God? It goes to show that there are countless examples of those who act against this administrative decree. Furthermore, it warns everyone not to think of their own destiny. If one wishes to escape God's orchestration, the consequences will be dire beyond imagining. Thus, it makes all those who experience enlightenment and illumination in these words better able to understand God's administrative decree as well as understand that His majesty must not be offended, thereby becoming more experienced and staid, verdant like a weathered pine that defies the threat of the bitter cold, continuing to add to nature's thriving green vitality. This statement makes most people feel dizzyingly bewildered, as if they have wandered into some sort of maze; this is because the content of God's words changes relatively quickly, so nine out of ten people enter into a labyrinth when they attempt to understand their own corrupt dispositions. For the sake of working more smoothly, eliminating man's doubts, and so that all may further believe in God's faithfulness, He emphasizes at the end of that passage: "Each and every one of those who truly loves Me shall return before My throne." Thus, all those who have undergone months of His work are alleviated of their sorrow in an instant; their hearts, which had felt as if they were suspended in midair, return home like a stone falling to solid ground; they no longer worry about their fate, and believe that God will no longer speak empty words. As men are self-righteous, there is not a single one who does not believe that they display the utmost of devotion toward God; this is why God deliberately emphasizes "truly"—it is to achieve greater outcomes. This is to pave the way and lay the foundation for the next step in His work.

INTERPRETATION OF THE THIRD UTTERANCE

Today is no longer the Age of Grace, nor the age of mercy, but the Age of Kingdom in which the people of God are revealed, the age in which God does things directly through divinity. Thus, in this passage of God's words, God leads all those who accept His words into the spiritual realm. In the opening paragraph, He makes these preparations in advance, and if one possesses the knowledge of God's words, they will follow the vine to get the melon, and shall directly grasp what God wishes to achieve in His people. Before, people were tested through the title "service-doers," and today, after they have been subjected to the trial, their training officially begins. In addition, people must have a greater knowledge of God's work based on the foundation of the words of the past, and must look upon the words and the person, and the Spirit and the person, as one inseparable whole—as one mouth, one heart, one action, and one source. This requirement is the highest requirement that God has made of man since the creation. From this can be seen that God wishes to expend part of His efforts on His people, that He wishes to display some signs and wonders in them, and, more importantly, that He wishes to make all people obey the entirety of God's work and words. In one regard, God Himself upholds His testimony, and in another, He has made requirements of His people, and has directly issued forth God's administrative decrees to the masses: Thus, since you are called My people, things are not as they used to be; you should listen to and obey the utterances of My Spirit, closely follow My work, and may not separate My Spirit and My flesh, for We are inherently one, and are not apart. In this, to prevent people from neglecting God incarnate, there is once again an emphasis on "for We are inherently one, and are not apart"; because such neglect is man's failing, this is once more listed in God's administrative decrees. Next, God informs people of the consequences of offending God's administrative decrees, without hiding anything, by saying, "they shall suffer loss, and will only be able to drink from their own bitter cup." Because man is weak, after hearing these words he can't help but become more wary of God in his heart, for the "bitter cup" is enough to make people ponder a while. People have many interpretations of this "bitter cup" of which God speaks: being judged by words or expelled from the kingdom, or being isolated for a period of time, or having one's flesh corrupted by Satan and possessed by evil spirits, or being forsaken by the Spirit of God, or having one's flesh terminated and consigned to Hades. These interpretations are what can be achieved by people's brains, and so in their imagination, people are incapable of going beyond them. But God's thoughts are unlike those of man; that is to say, the "bitter cup" does not refer to any of the above, but to the extent of people's knowledge of God after receiving God's dealing. To put this more clearly, when someone arbitrarily separates the Spirit of God and His words, or separates the words and the person, or the Spirit and the flesh with which He clothes Himself, this person is not only incapable of knowing God in God's words, but is also a little suspicious of God—after which they become blinded at every turn. It is not as people imagine that they are directly cut off; rather, they gradually fall into God's chastisement—which is to say, they descend into great catastrophes, and no one can be compatible with them, as if they have been possessed by evil spirits, and as if they're a headless fly, butting against things wherever they go. Despite this, they are still incapable of leaving. In their hearts, things are indescribably hard, as if there is unspeakable suffering in their hearts—yet they cannot open their mouths, and they spend all day in a trance, unable to feel God. It is under these circumstances that God’s administrative decrees threaten them, so that they do not dare to leave the church despite having no enjoyment—this is what’s called an “internal and external attack,” and is terribly hard for people to endure. What has been said here is different from people’s conceptions—and that is because, under those circumstances, they still know to seek God, and this happens when God turns His back on them, and what’s more important is that, just like an unbeliever, they are totally incapable of feeling God. God does not save such people directly; when their bitter cup is emptied out, that is the time when their last day has arrived. But at this moment, they still seek God’s will, wishing to enjoy just a little bit more—but this time is different from the past, unless there are special circumstances.

Following this, God also explains the positive aspects to all, and thus they once more gain life—for, in times past, God said that the service-doers had no life, but today God has suddenly talks of “the life contained within.” Only with talk of life do people know that there can still be the life of God within them. In this way, their love of God increases by several increments, and they gain a greater knowledge of God’s love and mercy. Thus, after beholding these words, all people repent their previous mistakes, and secretly shed tears of contrition. Most, too, quietly make up their minds that they must satisfy God. Sometimes, God’s words pierce people’s inmost heart, making it hard for people to accept them, and difficult for people to be at peace. Sometimes, God’s words are sincere and earnest, and warm people’s hearts, such that after people have read them, it is like when a lamb sees its mother again after many years of being lost. Tears fill their eyes, they are overcome with emotion, and they’re itching to throw themselves into God’s embrace, wracked with sobs, setting free the indescribable pain that has been in their hearts for many years so as to show their loyalty to God. Due to the several months of test, they’ve become a little oversensitive, as if they’ve just suffered a great trauma, like an invalid that has been bedbound for years. To make them adamant in their belief in God’s words, many times does God stress the following: “So that the next step of My work may proceed smoothly and without hindrance, I employ the refinement of words to test all those who are in My house.” Here, God says “test all those who are in My house”; a close reading of these words tells that when people are acting as service-doers, they are still people within God's house. Moreover, these words emphasize God's truthfulness toward the title "the people of God," bringing people a measure of relief in their hearts. And so why does God repeatedly point out the many manifestations in people after they have read God's words, or when "the people of God" has yet to be revealed? Is it only to show that God is the God who looks deep into man's heart? This is only part of the reason—and here, it is only of secondary importance. God does so in order to make all people utterly convinced, in order that every person might, from God's words, know of their own inadequacies and know of their own previous deficiencies with regard to life, and, more importantly, in order to lay the foundation for the next step of work. People can only strive to know God and pursue to emulate God based upon the foundation of knowing themselves. Because of these words, people change from being negative and passive to positive and proactive, and this plants the roots for the second part of God's work. It can be said that, with this step of work as the foundation, the second part of God's work becomes a pushover, requiring but the slightest of efforts. Thus, when people expel the sadness within their hearts and become positive and proactive, God makes the most of this opportunity to make other requirements of His people: "My words are released and expressed at any time or place, and so, too, should you know yourselves before Me at all times. For today is, after all, unlike what came before, and you can no longer accomplish whatever you wish. Instead, you must, under the guidance of My words, be capable of subduing your body, you must use My words as a mainstay, and must not act recklessly." In this, God primarily stresses "My words"; in the past, too, He referred to "My words" many times, and thus, each person can't help but turn some of their attention to this. Thus is indicated the core of the next step of God's work: All people shall turn their attention to God's words, and may not have any other loves. All must cherish the words spoken from God's mouth, and not toy with them, and thus will be ended the previous circumstances in the church, when one person would read God's words and many would say amen and be obedient. At that time, people did not know the words of God, but took them as a weapon with which to defend themselves. To reverse this, God on earth makes new, higher demands of man. To stop people from becoming negative and passive after seeing God's high standards and stringent requirements, God encourages people many times by saying: "Since things have come as far as today, you need not feel too aggrieved and regretful about your deeds and actions of the past. My magnanimity is as boundless as the seas and the sky—could it be that the extent of man’s action and knowledge of Me is not as familiar to Me as the back of My own hand?” These earnest and sincere words suddenly open up people’s minds, and immediately take them from despair to the love for God, to being positive and proactive, for God speaks by seizing hold of the weakness within people’s hearts. Without being aware of it, people always feel ashamed before God because of their past actions, and they express remorse over and over again. Thus, God reveals these words especially naturally and normally, so that people do not feel that God’s words are stiff and lifeless, but both stern and soft, and vivid and lifelike.

From the creation until today, God has silently arranged everything for man from the spiritual world, and never described the truth of the spiritual world to man. Yet, today, God suddenly outlines the battle that rages within it, which naturally leaves people scratching their heads, increases their sense that God is profound and unfathomable, and makes it even harder for them to locate the source of God’s words. It can be said that the embattled state of the spiritual world brings all people into the spirit. This is the first crucial part of the work of the future, and is the clue by which people may enter the spiritual realm. From this can be seen that the next step of God’s work is mainly targeted at the spirit, the primary aim of which is to give all people greater knowledge of the miraculous deeds of the Spirit of God within the flesh, thus giving all those who are loyal to God a greater knowledge of the foolishness of Satan and the nature of Satan. Although they were not born in the spiritual realm, they feel as if they have beheld Satan, and once they have this feeling, God immediately changes to another means of speaking—and once people have attained this way of thinking, God asks: “Why am I training you with such urgency? Why do I tell you the facts of the spiritual world? Why do I remind and exhort you time and time again?” And so on—a whole series of questions that provoke many questions in people’s brains: Why does God speak in this tone? Why does He speak of the matters of the spiritual world, and not of His demands of people during the time of the building of the church? Why does God not strike at people’s conceptions by revealing mysteries? Simply by being a little more thoughtful, people acquire a little knowledge of the steps of God’s work, and thus, when they encounter temptations in the future, there is born in them a real sense of loathing toward Satan. And even when they encounter trials in the future, they are still able to know God and detest Satan more profoundly, and thus curse Satan.

At the end, God's will is entirely revealed to man: "allowing each of My words to take root, blossom and yield fruit within your spirits, and more importantly, to bear more fruit. That's because what I ask for is not bright, lush flowers, but bounteous fruit—fruit, what's more, that does not go bad." Of God's repeated demands of His people, this is the most comprehensive of them all, it is the center point, and is put forward in a straightforward manner. I have transitioned from working in normal humanity to working in full divinity; thus, in the past, in My plain-spoken words, there was no need for Me to add any further explanations, and most people were able to understand the meaning of My words. The result was that, back then, all that was required was for people to know My words and be capable of speaking of reality. This step, however, is hugely different. My divinity has completely taken over, and left no room for the humanity to play a part. Thus, if those among My people wish to understand the true meaning of My words, they have the utmost difficulty. Only through My utterances can they gain enlightenment and illumination, and if it is not through this channel, any thoughts of grasping the aim of My words are but idle daydreams. When all people have a greater knowledge of Me after accepting My utterances is the time when My people live Me out, it is the time when My work in the flesh is completed, and the time when My divinity is entirely lived out in the flesh. At this moment, all people will try to know Me in the flesh, and will truly be able to say that God appears in the flesh, and this will be the fruit. This is further evidence that God has grown tired of the building of the church—that is, "Although the flowers in a greenhouse are as innumerable as the stars, and draw all the tourists, once they have wilted, they become as tattered as the deceitful schemes of Satan, and no one shows any interest in them." Although God also personally worked during the time of the building of the church, because He is the God who is always new and never old, He has no nostalgia for matters of the past. To stop people thinking back upon the past, He employed the words "they become as tattered as the deceitful schemes of Satan," which shows that God does not abide by doctrine. Some people may misinterpret God's will, and ask: Why, since it is work done by God Himself, did He say "once they have wilted, no one shows any interest in them"? These words give people a revelation. What's most important is that they allow all people to have a new, and correct, starting point, and only then will they be able to satisfy God's will. Ultimately, the people of God shall be able to give God praise that is true, not forced, and which comes from their hearts. This is what's at the heart of God's 6,000-year management plan. That is, it is the crystallization of this 6,000-year management plan: letting all people know the significance of God's incarnation—letting them practically know God become flesh, which is to say, the deeds of God in the flesh—so that they deny the vague God, and know the God who is of today and also yesterday, and, more than that, of tomorrow, who has really and actually existed from everlasting to everlasting. Only then shall God enter rest!

INTERPRETATION OF THE FOURTH UTTERANCE

To stop all people having their heads turned and getting carried away after their transition from negative to positive, in the last passage of God's utterance, once God has spoken of His highest requirements of His people—once God has told people of His will in this stage of His management plan—God gives them the opportunity to ponder His words, to help them make up their minds to satisfy God's will in the end. When people's conditions are positive, God immediately begins to ask people questions about the other side of the issue. He asks a string of questions that are difficult for people to figure out: "Was your love for Me tainted by impurity? Was your loyalty to Me pure and wholehearted? Was your knowledge of Me true? How much of a place did I hold within your hearts?" And so on. In the first half of this paragraph, with the exception of two reprimands, the remainder is all questions. In particular, "Have My utterances struck you at your Achilles' heel?" is a very fitting question, and one that truly strikes at the most secret things in the depths of people's hearts, causing them to unconsciously ask themselves: Am I truly loyal in my love of God? In their hearts, people unconsciously recall their past experiences in serving: They were consumed by self-forgiveness, self-righteousness, self-importance, self-satisfaction, complacency, and pride. They were like a big fish caught in a net—and after falling into these nets, it was not easy for them to free themselves. And furthermore, they were frequently unrestrained, they often deceived God's normal humanity, and put themselves first in all they did. Prior to being called "service-doers," they were like a newborn tiger cub, filled with energy. Though they somewhat focused their attention on life, sometimes they only went through the motions; like a slave, they were perfunctory toward God. During the time of being exposed as service-doers, they were negative, they fell behind, they were filled with sorrow, they complained about God, they hung their heads in dejection, and so on. Each step of their own wonderful, touching stories lingers in their minds. It even becomes difficult for them to sleep, and they spend the daytime in a stupor. They seem to have been eliminated a second time by God, fallen into Hades, and are incapable of escaping. Though God did nothing more than pose a few difficult questions in the first paragraph, read closely, they show that God's aim is more than just to ask these questions for their own sakes; in them is contained a deeper level of meaning, one that must be explained in greater detail.

Why did God once say that today, after all, is today, and since yesterday has already passed, there is no point in nostalgia—whereas in the first sentence here, He asks people questions, and makes them think back to the past? Have a think: Why does God ask that people not be nostalgic about the past, but also think back on it? Could there be a mistake in God's words? Could the source of these words be wrong? Naturally, those who pay no attention to God's words would not ask such profound questions. But for the moment, there's no need to speak of this. First, let Me explain the "why" above. Of course, everybody is aware that God has said He does not speak empty words. If words are uttered from God's mouth, then there is an aim and significance to them—and this touches upon the heart of the issue. People's biggest failing is their inability to change their evil ways and the intractability of their old nature. To allow all people to know themselves more thoroughly and realistically, God first leads them in thinking back upon the past, in order that they may reflect upon themselves more deeply, and thus come to know that not a single one of God's words is empty, and that all of God's words are fulfilled in different people to different degrees. In the past, the way God dealt with people gave them a little knowledge of God and made their sincerity toward God a little more heartfelt. The word "God" occupies but 0.1 percent in people and their hearts. Achieving this much shows God has carried out a tremendous amount of salvation. It is fair to say that God's accomplishment of this much in this group of people—a group that is exploited by the great red dragon and possessed by Satan—is such that they dare not do as they please. That is because it is impossible for God to occupy one hundred percent of the hearts of those who have been possessed by Satan. To increase people's knowledge of God during the next step, God compares the conditions of the service-doers of the past with that of God's people of today, thus creating a clear contrast that increases people's sense of shame. Just as God said, there is "nowhere to hide your shame."

So, why did I say that God is not merely asking questions for their own sakes? A close reading from start to finish shows that, though the questions posed by God are somewhat penetrating, they all refer to the extent of people's loyalty toward God and knowledge of God; they refer, in other words, to people's actual conditions, which are pitiable, and difficult for them to open up about. From this can be seen that people's stature is too meager, that their knowledge of God is too superficial, and their loyalty toward Him too tainted and impure. As God said, almost all people fish in murky waters and are only there to make up the numbers. When God says "Do you truly believe that you are unqualified to be My people?" the true meaning of these words is that among all people, none are fit to be God's people. But in order to achieve a greater effect, God uses the method of asking questions. This method is far more effective than the words of the past, which ruthlessly attacked, hacked, and killed people, to the point of piercing their hearts. Suppose God had directly said something dull and insipid like "You are not loyal to Me, and your loyalty is tainted, I do not hold an absolute place in your hearts.... I'm going to leave you no place to hide from yourselves, for none of you are sufficient to be My people." You might compare the two: Their content is the same, but the tone of each is different. Using questions is much more effective. Thus, the wise God employs the first tone, which shows the artistry with which He speaks. This is unachievable by man, and so no wonder that God said, "People are but utensils that are used by Me, the only difference between them is that some are lowly, and some are precious."

Continue reading. God's words come thick and fast, barely giving people the chance to take a breath, for God does not go easy on man at all. When people feel the utmost regret, God once more warns them: "If you are completely oblivious to the questions above, then this shows that you are fishing in murky waters, that you are only there to make up the numbers, and at the time preordained by Me, you will surely be eliminated and cast into the bottomless pit for a second time. These are My words of warning, and any who take them lightly will be struck by My judgment, and, at the appointed time, will be assailed by disaster.” Reading such words, people can’t help but think of when they were cast into the bottomless pit: Threatened by catastrophe, governed by God’s administrative decrees, their own end awaiting them, for a long time feeling distressed, depressed, ill at ease, unable to speak of the melancholy within their hearts to anyone—compared to this, they were better off having their flesh purged.... Thinking this, they can’t help but feel distressed. Thinking of how they were in the past, how they are today, and how they will be tomorrow, the sorrow in their hearts grows, they unconsciously begin to shiver, and thus they become more fearful of God’s administrative decrees. As it occurs to them that the term “God’s people” might also be a means of speaking, the cheer in their hearts immediately turns to distress. God is using their fatal weakness to strike at them, and at this point, He is beginning the next step of His work, constantly provoking people’s minds, and increasing their sense that God’s deeds are unfathomable, that God is unreachable, that God is holy and pure, and that they are not fit to be one of God’s people. As a result, they redouble their efforts to improve themselves, not daring to fall behind.

Next, to teach people a lesson, and make them know themselves, revere God, and fear God, God begins His new plan: “From the time of creation until today, many people have disobeyed My words and thus been cast out and eliminated from My stream of recovery; ultimately, their bodies perish and their spirits are cast into Hades, and even today they are still subjected to grievous punishment. Many people have followed My words, but they have gone against My enlightenment and illumination ... and some....” These are real examples. In these words, God not only gives all God’s people a real warning to make them know of God’s deeds throughout the ages, but also provides an oblique depiction of part of what is happening in the spiritual world. This allows people to know that nothing good can come of their disobedience toward God. They will become an everlasting mark of shame, and they will become the embodiment of Satan, and a copy of Satan. In God’s heart, this aspect of meaning is of secondary importance, for these words have already left people trembling and at a loss. The positive side of this is that, as people tremble with fear, they also acquire some details of the spiritual world—but only some, so I must provide a little explanation. From the gate of the spiritual world it can be seen that there are all kinds of spirits. Some, however, are in Hades, some are in hell, some are in the lake of fire, and some are in the bottomless pit. I have something to add here. Superficially speaking, these spirits can be divided according to place; specifically speaking, however, some are directly dealt with by God’s chastisement, and some are in the bondage of Satan, which is used by God. More specifically, their chastisement differs according to the severity of their circumstances. At this point, let Me explain a little more. Those who are directly chastised by God’s hand have no spirit on earth, which means they have no chance of being reborn. The spirits under the domain of Satan—the enemies of which God speaks when He says “become My enemies”—are connected to earthly matters. The various evil spirits on earth are all the enemies of God, the servants of Satan, and their reason for existence^[a] is serving to set off the deeds of God. Thus, God says, “These people have not only been taken captive by Satan, but have become eternal sinners and become My enemies, and they directly oppose Me.” Next, God tells people of the end of this kind of spirit: “Such people are the objects of My judgment at the height of My wrath.” God also clarifies their present conditions: “today they are still blind, still within the dark dungeons.”

To show people the truthfulness of God’s words, God uses a real example as proof (the case of Paul of which He speaks) so that His warning leaves a deeper impression on people. To stop people from treating what is said about Paul as a story, and to prevent them from thinking of themselves as bystanders—and, furthermore, to stop them from going about boasting of the things that happened thousands of years ago that they learned from God, God does not concentrate on Paul’s experiences throughout his life. Instead, God focuses on the consequences and end for Paul, the reason why Paul opposed God, and how Paul ended up as he did. What God focuses on is stressing His denial of the glorious hopes of Paul in the end, and directly laying bare his situation in the spiritual realm: “Paul is directly chastised by God.” Because people are numb and they are incapable of grasping anything of God’s words, God adds an explanation (the next part of the

a. The original text omits “for existence.”

utterance), and begins speaking of the issue of another area: “whoever opposes Me (by opposing not only My flesh but more importantly, My words and My Spirit), receives My judgment in their flesh.” Although, superficially speaking, these words seem unrelated to the ones above, and there doesn’t appear to be any correlation between the two, don’t panic: God has His own aims; the simple words of “the example above proves that” organically combine two seemingly unrelated issues—which is the ingeniousness of God’s words. Thus, people are enlightened through the account of Paul, and so, because of the connection between the text above and below, their pursuit of knowing God is increased through the lesson of Paul, which is precisely the effect God wished to achieve in speaking those words. Next, God speaks some words that provide assistance and enlightenment for people’s entry into life. There is no need for Me to go into that. You will feel that they’re easy to understand. What I must explain, however, is when God says, “when I worked in normal humanity, most people had already measured themselves against My wrath and majesty, and already knew a little of My wisdom and disposition. Today, I speak and act directly in divinity, and there are still some people who will see My wrath and judgment with their own eyes; moreover, the main work of the second part of the era of judgment is to make all of My people know My deeds in the flesh directly, and to make all of you behold My disposition directly.” These few words conclude God’s work in normal humanity and officially commence the second part of God’s work of the era of judgment, which is carried out in divinity, and foretell the end of a portion of people. At this point, it is worth explaining that God did not tell people that this was the second part of the era of judgment when they became God’s people. Instead, only after telling people of God’s will and the aims that God wishes to achieve during this period, and of God’s final step of work on earth does He explain that this is the second part of the era of judgment. Needless to say, there is also God’s wisdom in this. When people have just got up from their sickbeds, the only thing they care about is whether or not they’re going to die, or whether or not their illness can be banished from them. They pay no heed to whether they will put on weight, or whether they dress up in the right clothes. Thus, it is only when people completely believe they are one of God’s people that God speaks of His requirements, step-by-step, and tells people what the era it is today. That is because people only have the energy to concentrate on the steps of God’s management a few days after they have recovered, and so this is the most suitable time to tell them. Only after people understand do they start to analyze: Since this is the second part of the era of judgment, God's requirements have become stricter, and I have become one of God's people. It is right to analyze thus, it is attainable by man, and so God employs this method of speaking.

Once people understand a little, God once more enters the spiritual realm to speak, and so they once more fall into the ambush. During this series of questions, everyone scratches their heads, confused, not knowing where God's will lies, not knowing which of God's questions to answer, and, moreover, not knowing what language to use to reply to God's questions. One wonders whether to laugh or cry. To people, these words seem as if they might contain very profound mysteries—but the facts are precisely the opposite. I may as well add a little explanation for you here. It'll give your brain a rest, you'll feel^[a] it's something simple that doesn't require a lot of thought. In fact, though there are many words, they contain only one aim of God: gaining people's loyalty through these questions. But it's not expedient to say this directly, so God once again employs questions. The tone, however, is especially soft, much unlike at the beginning. Though they are being questioned by God, this kind of contrast brings people a measure of relief. You might as well read each question one by one; were these things not often referred to in the past? In these few questions, there is rich content. Some are a description of people's mentality: "Are you willing to enjoy a life on earth which is akin to that in heaven?" Some are people's "warrior's oath" before God: "Are you truly able to allow yourselves to be put to death by Me, and led by Me, like a sheep?" And some of them are God's requirements of man: "If I did not speak directly, could you forsake everything around you and allow yourself to be used by Me? Is this not the reality that I require? ..." Or God's exhortations and reassurances for man: "Yet I ask that you no longer be weighed down by misgivings, that you be proactive in your entry and grasp the most profound depths of My words. This will prevent you misunderstanding My words, and being unclear as to My meaning, and thus violating My administrative decrees." Finally, God talks of His hopes for man: "I hope that you grasp My intentions for you in My words. Think no more of your own prospects, and act as you have resolved before Me that all should be at the mercy of God." The final question has profound meaning. It is thought-provoking, it impresses itself on people's hearts and is difficult to forget, ceaselessly ringing out like a bell hanging by their ears ...

The above are a few words of explanation for you to use as reference.

INTERPRETATION OF THE FIFTH UTTERANCE

When God makes demands of humanity that are difficult for them to explain, and when His words strike directly into the human heart and people offer up their sincere hearts for Him to enjoy, then God gives people the chance to ponder, make a resolution, and seek out a path for practice. In this way, all those who are His people will once again, with fists clenched in determination, offer their whole being up to God. Some, perhaps, might draw up a plan and set up a daily schedule, as they prepare to stir themselves and get to work, dedicating their portion of energy to God's plan of management, in order to bring glory upon this plan and speed up its conclusion. And, just as people are caught up in this psychological state, holding these things closely in their minds as they go about their chores, as they talk, and as they work, God, quickly following up on this, begins to speak again: "When My Spirit gives voice, it expresses the whole of My disposition. Are you clear on this?" The more determined a human being is, the more desperately he will yearn to grasp God's will and the more earnestly he will yearn for God to make demands of him; and so God will give people what they want, taking advantage of this opportunity to impart His words, long held in readiness, to the innermost recesses of their being. Although these words may seem a bit harsh or gruff, to humanity they are sweet beyond compare. Straight away, the heart blossoms with joy, as if humanity were in heaven, or had been transported to another realm, a veritable paradise of the imagination, where the affairs of the outside world no longer impinge upon humanity. In order that people will not, as they were in the habit of doing in the past, speak from the outside and act from the outside, and so fail to lay down proper roots: in order to circumvent

this eventuality, when what people desire in their hearts has been achieved, and moreover when they prepare to go to work with passionate enthusiasm, God still adapts His way of speaking to their psychological state, and, summarily and without holding back, confutes all the ardor and religious ceremony within their hearts. As God has said: “Have you truly seen the importance that lies herein?” Whether before or after a human being sets his resolve upon something, he does not put great importance upon knowing God in His actions or in His words, but rather keeps on pondering the question: “What can I do for God? That’s the key issue!” This is why God says: “And you have the nerve to call yourselves My people to My face—you have no sense of shame, still less any reason!” As soon as God has spoken these words, people immediately come to their realization, and as though sustaining an electric shock, they hasten to withdraw their hands into the safety of their bosoms, fearful of provoking God’s wrath a second time. In addition to this, God has also said: “Sooner or later, people like this will be expelled from My house. Don’t you come the old soldier with Me, thinking that you have stood for My testimony!” Hearing words like these, people are even more afraid, as they would be if they had sighted a lion. They know full well in their hearts. They are, on the one hand, concerned not to be eaten by the lion while on the other feeling at a loss where to escape. At this moment, the plan inside the human heart vanishes without a trace, utterly and completely. Through God’s words, I feel as if I can see every single aspect of humanity’s shamefulness: Drooping head and hangdog demeanor, like a candidate who’s failed the college entrance exam, his lofty ideals, happy family, bright future, and so on and so forth, all turned—along with the Four Modernizations by the Year 2000—into empty talk, creating an imaginary scenario in a science fiction film. This is to exchange passive for active elements, making people, in the midst of their passivity, stand up in the place God has assigned them. Exceptionally important is the fact that human beings are deeply afraid of losing this appellation, and so they cling for dear life to their own badges of office, fearful that someone might wrest them away. When humanity is in this frame of mind, God does not worry that they will become passive, and so He accordingly changes His words of judgment to words of interrogation. Not only does He give people a chance to catch their breath, but He also gives them a chance to take the aspirations they have had before now and sort them out for future reference: What is unsuitable can be modified. This is because God has not yet begun His work—this is a piece of good fortune in the midst of great misfortune—and, moreover, does not condemn them. So let me continue to give Him all my devotion!

Next, you must not, on account of your fear, set aside God's words. Take a look to see whether God has any new demands. Sure enough, you will discover this kind of demand: "From this time forth, in all things you must enter into the reality of practice; merely flapping your gums, as you used to do, will no longer get you by." Herein is also manifest God's wisdom. God has always safeguarded His own witness, and when the reality of the words of the past has reached its conclusion, no one whatsoever is able to fathom the knowledge of "the reality of practice." This is sufficient to prove the truth of what God said "I undertake to do the work Myself." It has to do with the true meaning of the work in divinity, and also has to do with the reason why humankind, after reaching a new point of beginning, is nevertheless still incapable of fathoming the true meaning of God's words. This is because, in the past, the great majority of people would stick to the reality in God's words, whereas today they have no clue about the reality of practice, but understand only the superficial aspects of these words without understanding their essence. Even more importantly, it is because today, in the building of the kingdom, no one is permitted to interfere, but only to obey God's bidding like automatons. Remember this well! Every time God brings up the past, He begins to speak about the actual situation of today; this is a form of speaking that creates a striking contrast between what comes before and what comes after, and for this reason is able to achieve even better fruits, enabling people to set the present side by side with the past, and in this way avoid getting the distinction between the two muddled up. This is one facet of God's wisdom, and its purpose is to attain the fruits of the work. After this, God once again reveals humanity's ugliness, in order that humanity shall never forget to eat and drink God's words every day, and even more importantly so that they shall daily know themselves and take this as the lesson that they must learn every day.

When He finishes speaking these words, God has achieved the effects at which He originally purposed. And so, without paying any further heed to whether or not humanity has understood Him, He brushes past this in a few sentences, because Satan's work has nothing to do with humanity—of this humanity has no clue. Now, leaving behind the world of the spirit, look further at how God makes His demands of humanity: “Resting in My abode, I observe closely: All the people on earth bustle about, ‘traveling around the world’ and rushing back and forth, all for the sake of their destiny, their future. But not a single one has energy to spare for building My kingdom, not even so much as the strength one might use in drawing breath.” After exchanging these conventionalities with mankind, God still pays them no heed, but continues to speak from the perspective of the Spirit, and, through these words, reveals the general circumstances of the life of the human race in its entirety. It is clear to see, from “traveling around the world” and “rushing back and forth,” that human life is devoid of content. Were it not for the omnipotent salvation of God, those born into the down-and-out extended family of China’s imperial line would even more live a whole lifetime in vain and they might as well fall into Hades and hell as come into the world. Under the domination of the great red dragon, they have, unbeknownst to themselves, offended against God and so, naturally and again unknowingly, fallen under God’s chastisement. For this reason, God has taken “rescued from tribulation” and “ingrates” and put them together contrastively, that human beings may more clearly know themselves, creating from this a foil to His saving grace. Doesn’t this make for an even more efficacious result? Of course, it goes without My having to say so explicitly, people can, from the content of God’s speaking, infer an element of reproach, and again, an element of salvation and appeal, and yet again, a slight intimation of sadness. Reading these words, people begin unconsciously to feel a hesitant kind of compunction in their hearts, and cannot help shedding tears.... But God will not be restrained on account of a few sorrowful feelings, nor will He, on account of the corruption of the whole human race, abandon His work in disciplining His people and making demands of them. Because of this, His topics straight away touch on circumstances such as those of today, and moreover He proclaims to humanity the majesty of His administrative decrees, so that His plan keeps on going forward. This is why, following upon this with all due speed and striking while the iron is hot, God promulgates at this critical juncture a constitution for the times, a constitution that must be read with careful attention to every clause before humanity can understand God’s will. There is no need to go into this further now—they must simply read more attentively.

Today, you—this group of people here—are the only ones who can truly see God's words. Even so, in knowing God, the people of today have fallen far behind any single person in ages past. From this it is sufficiently clear the extent of the effort Satan has invested on people over these several thousand years, and the extent to which it has corrupted mankind, which is so great that, even though God has spoken so many words, humanity still neither understands nor knows God, but instead dares to rise up and oppose Him publicly. And so God often holds up the men of past ages as a comparison for the people of today, to give the latter, insensate and demented as they are, a realistic point of reference. Because human beings have no knowledge of God, and because they lack genuine faith in Him, God has adjudged humanity to be lacking in qualifications and reason, and so He has, again and again, shown people tolerance and given them salvation. A battle is fought along these lines in the realm of the spirit: It is the vain hope of Satan to corrupt mankind to a certain degree, make the world foul and evil, and so drag man down into the mire and destroy God's plan. But God's plan is not to make all of humanity into people who know Him, but rather to choose a part to represent the whole, leaving the rest as waste products, as defective goods, to be thrown onto the rubbish heap. And so, although from Satan's point of view taking possession of a few individuals seems an excellent opportunity of destroying God's plan, what could such a dunce as it know about God's intention? This is why God said, long ago, "I have covered My face to avoid looking at this world." We do know a little bit about this, and God does not ask that human beings be capable of doing anything, rather that they recognize what He does as miraculous and unfathomable and hold Him in reverence in their hearts. If, as man imagines, God were to chastise him without regard for the circumstances, then the entire world would long since have perished. Wouldn't this have meant falling right into Satan's trap? And so God only uses His words to attain the fruits that He has in mind; seldom is there the advent of facts. Is this not an instance of what He said: "If I did not take pity on your lack of qualifications, reason, and insights, then all of you would perish in the midst of My chastisement, wiped out from existence. But until My work on earth is finished, I will remain lenient to mankind"?

INTERPRETATION OF THE SIXTH UTTERANCE

Humanity is struck dumb at God's utterances as they realize that God has worked a great deed in the realm of the spirit, something of which man is incapable and that only God Himself can accomplish. For this reason, God once again puts forward words of leniency to humankind. When people's hearts are filled with contradictions, wondering: "God is a God without mercy or love, but rather a God dedicated to striking down humanity; so why should He show us clemency? Could it be that God has once again shifted into a method?" at the moment this notion, this thought takes shape inside their minds, they struggle against it with all their might. Nevertheless, after God's work has progressed for another length of time, the Holy Spirit has undertaken a great working within the church, and every single human being has set to work to perform his function, then at that time all humanity has entered upon this method of God's. This is because no one can see any imperfection in what God says and does, and as for what God will actually do next, no one can know or even guess at it. As God has said with His own mouth: "Of all the people living under heaven, is there anyone who is not within the palm of My hand? Is there anyone who does not act according to My direction?" But I offer you a bit of advice: In matters that you do not completely understand, do not, anyone of you, either speak or act. What I have just said is not to squelch your enthusiasm, but to encourage you to follow God's direction in your actions. On no account should you, because of what I said about "imperfections," lose heart or fall into doubt: My purpose is chiefly to remind you to pay attention to God's words. When God says: "In matters within the spirit, you should be delicately sensitive; to My words, you should be carefully attentive. You should aim for the state in which you see My Spirit and My fleshly self, My words and My fleshly self, as one indivisible whole, so that all of humanity will be able to satisfy Me in My presence," reading these words, humanity is, once again, dumbstruck. What they saw yesterday was a word of warning, was an instance of God's clemency, but today the talk has turned suddenly to matters within the spirit—what in the world does this mean? Why does God keep changing His manner of speaking? And why is all this to be regarded as one indivisible whole? Could it be that God's words lack reality? Ruminating upon these words, one realizes this: When God's Spirit and flesh are separate, then that flesh is a physical body with the attributes of a physical body, in other words, what people call a walking corpse. The incarnate flesh originates in the Spirit: He is the incarnation of the Spirit, that is, the Word become flesh. In other words, God Himself lives within the flesh. From this one can see wherein lies the grave mistake of trying to separate the Spirit from the man. For this reason, even though He is called "man," He does not belong to the human race, and has no human attributes: This is the man in which God clothes Himself, this is the man that God approves. Within the words is embodied God's Spirit, and the words of God are directly revealed in the flesh. This makes it all the more clear that God lives in the flesh and is a more practical God, from which it is proven that God exists, thus bringing to an end the age of humanity's rebellion against God. Then, having instructed humanity about the path leading to knowledge of God, God changes the subject again, and takes up another aspect of the problem.

"I have trodden the universe with My feet, stretching out My gaze over its entire expanse, and I have walked in the midst of all mankind, tasting the sweet, sour, bitter, and pungent flavors of human experience." This statement, notwithstanding its simplicity, is far from easy to comprehend. Although the subject has changed, in essence it remains the same: It still enables humanity to know Him in His incarnate flesh. Why does God say that He has tasted the sweet, sour, bitter, and pungent flavors of human experience? Why does He say that He has walked in the midst of all mankind? God is Spirit, but He is also a man incarnate. The Spirit, not bound by the limitations of the man, can tread all over the universe, encompassing the cosmos in a sweeping glance. From this one can see that the Spirit of God fills the cosmic expanse and covers the earth from pole to pole; there is no place that has not been laid out by His hands, no place that does not bear the trace of His footsteps. Even though the Spirit, becoming flesh, is born as a man, He does not, on account of His existence as a Spirit, cease to need all the things that men need, but rather, like an ordinary man, eats food, wears clothes, sleeps, and resides in a dwelling place, doing everything that an ordinary man does. At the same time, the inner essence being different, He is not the same as what one usually speaks of as a man. Though He endures all of the sufferings of mankind, He does not on that account abandon the Spirit; though He enjoys blessing, He does not on that account forget the Spirit. The Spirit and the man are conjoined in silent rapport; the two cannot be sundered, and have never been sundered. Because the man is the incarnation of the Spirit, and comes from the Spirit, from the Spirit that has a form, so the Spirit that inheres in the flesh is not transcendent, that is, He cannot do extraordinary things, which is to say, this Spirit cannot leave the physical body, for if He did, God's act in becoming flesh would lose all its meaning. Only when the Spirit is fully expressed in the physical body can humanity be made to know the practical God Himself, and only then is God's will fulfilled. It is only after God presents the Spirit and the flesh separately to humanity that He points out man's blindness and disobedience: "but man never truly recognized Me, nor did he notice Me as I walked abroad." On the one hand, God says that, unbeknownst to the world, He hides Himself in a body of flesh, never doing anything supernatural for men to see; on the other, He complains against humanity for not knowing Him. There is, however, no contradiction in this. In fact, viewed in its details, it is not difficult to see that there are two sides to the way in which God achieves His aims. Now, if God were to perform supernatural signs and wonders, then, without having to undertake any great work, He would simply curse a man to death with His own mouth, the man would die on the spot, and in this way every human being would be convinced; but this would not achieve the aim of God in becoming flesh. If God were truly to do this, humanity would never be able, with their conscious minds, to believe in His existence, would never be able truly to believe, and moreover would mistake the devil for God. Even more importantly, humanity would never know God's disposition: Is this not one aspect of the meaning of God's being in the flesh? If humanity is incapable of knowing God, then it will always be a vague God, a supernatural God, who holds sway in the human realm: Would this not be a case of man's notions taking possession of man? Or, to restate this more plainly, would not Satan, the devil, be holding sway? "Why do I say I take back My power? Why do I say that the incarnation has too many meanings?" The moment God becomes flesh, this is when He takes back His power; it is also when His divinity comes forth directly to do His work. Step by step, every human being comes to know the practical God, and because of this the place held by Satan in the human heart is completely suppressed while God's place is augmented. Formerly, the God that existed in men's minds was perceived as a satanic image, a God that was intangible, invisible, and yet one believed this God not only to exist but also to be capable of performing all manner of supernatural signs and wonders and revealing all manner of mysteries, such as the hideousness of the demon-possessed. This is sufficient to prove that the God in men's minds is not an image of God but rather the image of a being other than God. God says that He wants to take up a place occupying 0.1 percent of the human heart, and that this is the highest standard that He demands of humanity. Not only is there a superficial side to this statement; there is also a realistic side. If it were not explained in this way, people would consider the demands that God makes of them as being too low, as though God understood too little about them. Is this not human psychology?

If one takes the above and puts it together with the example of Peter below, they will find that Peter was indeed the man who knew God best, because he was able to turn his back on the vague God and pursue knowledge of the practical God. Why did God make a special point of noting that his parents were devils who opposed God? From this it is proven that Peter was not pursuing the God in his own heart, and that his parents represent the vague God: This is God's intent in raising the example of Peter's parents. The great majority of people pay no particular regard to this fact, concentrating their attention instead on the prayers of Peter, to the point where some even keep Peter's prayers constantly in their mouths and on their minds, but without ever thinking to contrast the vague God with Peter's knowledge. Why did Peter turn against his parents and seek to know God? Why did he integrate the lessons learned from those who had failed in the past in order to spur himself on to greater effort? Why did he assimilate the faith and love of all those who had loved God throughout the ages? Peter understood that everything positive originates from God—it comes straight from God without undergoing any processing by Satan. From this one can see that the One he knew was the practical God and not a supernatural God. Why does God say that Peter paid special attention to assimilating the faith and the love of all those who loved God throughout the ages? From this one can see that the chief reason why men have failed throughout the ages is that they only possessed faith and love but did not know the practical God, and so their belief continued to be vague. Why does God only mention Job's faith many times without once saying that he knew God, and moreover call him Peter's inferior? From Job's words, "I have heard of you by the hearing of the ear: but now my eye sees you,” one can see that Job possessed only faith but no knowledge. Reading the statement, “With the counterexample of his parents to serve as a foil, this enabled him all the more readily to recognize My love and mercy,” most people will be prompted to raise a host of questions: Why is it that Peter knows God only when set off against a counterexample, but not directly? Why is it that he knows only mercy and love, but other things are not mentioned? It is only when one recognizes the unreality of the vague God that one becomes able to pursue the knowledge of the practical God. The aim of this utterance is to lead people to eradicate the vague God from their hearts. If humanity had always known God’s true face, from the beginning of creation down to the present day, then they would not have become thoroughly familiar with Satan’s ways, as is known from the proverb, “One doesn’t notice level ground until one has crossed a mountain,” which makes sufficiently clear God’s meaning in speaking these words. Because He wishes to lead people to comprehend more deeply the truth of the example He has raised, God places deliberate emphasis on mercy and love, proving that the age in which Peter lived was the Age of Grace. Viewed from another perspective, this reveals all the more vividly the hideous countenance of the devil, who only entraps and corrupts humanity, and thereby sets off, in even starker contrast, God’s love and mercy.

God also outlines the facts about Peter’s trials and furthermore describes their actual circumstance, so that people might better discern the following: that God does not only have mercy and love, but He has also majesty and wrath, and that those who live in peace are not necessarily living in the midst of God’s blessing. Moreover, telling people about Peter’s experiences following his trials demonstrates even more clearly the veracity of these words of Job: “Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?” This is sufficient to show that Peter had arrived at an unprecedented knowledge of God, something that no one in any preceding age had ever attained: This was what Peter gained when he assimilated the faith and love of all those who had loved God throughout the ages and integrated the lessons of past failures in order to encourage himself. For this reason, anyone who attains real knowledge of God is called a “fruit,” and Peter is one among these. In Peter’s prayers to God one can see the real knowledge of God that he gained through his trials, but the one small flaw is that he was unable fully to fathom God’s will. This is why, building upon the foundation of the knowledge of God attained by Peter, God has set forth a demand of “occupying only 0.1 percent of the human heart.” Taking into consideration the fact that even Peter, the man who knew God best, was unable accurately to grasp God’s will, it can only be concluded that humanity is simply not equipped with an organ for knowing God, because Satan has already corrupted man to such an extent, and this leads all people to know the essence of humanity. These two preconditions—that humanity lacks an organ for knowing God and has moreover been permeated by Satan through and through—provide a setting to show off God’s great power, for God, merely through the expenditure of words and without even having to undertake any kind of work, has taken up a certain position in the human heart. Why is it that arriving at 0.1 percent means arriving at the fulfillment of God’s will? To explain this in terms of the fact that God did not endow man with the organ in question: If, in the absence of this organ, humanity were to arrive at a hundred percent of knowledge, then God’s every movement and action would become an open book to man, and, given man’s inherent nature, he would instantly rebel against God, rising up to oppose Him publicly (this is the way Satan fell). And so God never underestimates man. This is because He has already thoroughly dissected man, so that He knows everything with crystal clarity even down to how much water is mixed in with his blood: How much the more clearly He understands man’s apparent nature? God never commits errors, and moreover, in making His utterances, He chooses His words with considerable precision. For this reason, the fact that Peter was inaccurate in grasping at God’s will does not contradict the fact that he is also the one man who knew God best, and what is more the two are completely unrelated. It was not in order to focus people’s attention on Peter that God raised his example. Why should Peter be able to attain knowledge of God if even someone like Job could not? Why would He say that a man is capable of achieving it and yet also say that it is due to God’s great power? Is it really the case that the innate endowment of humanity is good? People do not find it easy to grasp this point—no one would know its inner meaning unless I explained it. The aim of these words is to enable human beings to arrive at some form of perception, from which they will gain confidence to cooperate with God. Only in this way can God, supported by man’s efforts to cooperate with Him, take action: This is the actual situation in the realm of the spirit, something that humanity is completely unable to fathom. To do away with the position that Satan occupies in the human heart and thenceforth enable God to take possession, this is called repelling Satan's attack; only when this is done can it be said that Christ has descended onto the earth, and only then can it be said that the kingdoms of the world have become Christ's kingdom.

Here it is mentioned that Peter has been an exemplar and a model for mankind for thousands of years. This is not merely for the sake of expounding the fact that he is an exemplar and a model: These words are a reflection of the actual scene of a battle in the spiritual realm. All this time Satan has been working on man, in the vain hope of swallowing up humanity and thereby causing God to destroy the world and lose His witness. But God said: "I will first create a model so that I may take up the smallest position within the human heart. At this stage, humanity neither pleases nor fully knows Me; nevertheless, relying on My great power, man will become able to submit to Me wholly and cease to rebel against Me, and I will use this example to vanquish Satan, that is to say, I will use My position consisting of 0.1 percent to repress all the forces that Satan has been wielding over man." And so, today, God has raised the example of Peter that he may serve the whole of mankind as a pattern to follow. Putting this together with the opening passage, one can see the veracity of what God said about the actual situation in the realm of the spirit: "Things are not now as they once were: I am going to do things that, since the beginning of creation, the world has never seen, I am going to speak words that, throughout the ages, men have never heard, because I ask that all humanity come to know Me in the flesh." From this one can see, what God spoke about He has begun upon today. Human beings can only see things as they appear on the outside and not the actual situation within the realm of the spirit. For this reason, God said in a direct and straightforward manner: "These are steps in My management, about which humanity has not the faintest inkling. Even when I speak of them openly, man is still so befuddled in his mind that it is impossible to articulate them to him in every detail. Herein lies man's abject lowliness, does it not?" There are unspoken words inside these words, explaining that a battle has taken place in the spiritual realm, as alluded to above.

Outlining Peter's story still did not fully attain God's will, so God made the following demand in relation to the events in Peter's life: "Throughout the universe and the limitless expanses of the firmament, the myriad things of creation, the myriad things on earth, and the myriad things in heaven are each and every one consecrating their whole strength for the sake of My last stage of work. Surely you do not wish to remain spectators on the sidelines, driven hither and yon by Satan's forces?" Witnessing Peter's knowledge was profoundly enlightening for humanity, and so, in order to achieve even better fruits, God allows humanity to see the consequences of wanton unrestraint and ignorance of Him, and moreover tells humanity—one more time and with greater precision—about the actual circumstances of the battle in the realm of the spirit. It is only in this way that mankind can become more cautious in safeguarding themselves against being captured by Satan; further, it makes clear that, this time, if they fall, they will not receive salvation from God again as they did this time. Taken together, these several warnings, in deepening humanity's impression of God's words, have made people cherish His mercy more dearly and hold His words of warning more closely, thus truly arriving at God's aim of saving mankind.

ON THE LIFE OF PETER

Peter is an exemplar that God introduced to mankind, and he is a well-known personage. Why is it that such a humble man was set up as an exemplar by God and has been praised by later generations? Of course, it need not be mentioned that this is inseparable from his expression and his resolve of love for God. As for where Peter's heart of love for God was expressed and what his lifetime of experiences was actually like, we must return to the Age of Grace to take another look at the customs of the time, to see the Peter of that age.

Peter was born into an average Jewish household of farmers. His parents supported the entire family by farming, and he was the eldest of the children; he had four brothers and sisters. Of course this isn't the main part of the story to tell—Peter is just our main character. When he was five years old, his parents started to teach him to read. At that time the Jewish people were quite erudite—they were very advanced in the areas such as agriculture, industry, and commerce. Under the influence of that kind of social environment, Peter's parents had both received higher education. Even though they were from the countryside, they had a quite rich body of knowledge, comparable to an average university student today. It's clear that being born into such excellent social conditions was Peter's good fortune. He was very bright and picked up new things easily. After he started school, in his lessons he was able to draw inferences from other things without seeming to expend any effort. His parents were proud of having such a smart son, so they made every effort to allow him to go to school, hoping that he could get ahead, and would be able to secure some sort of official post in the society of the time. Without realizing it, Peter developed an interest in God, so when he was fourteen and in high school, he became fed up with the curriculum of Ancient Greek Culture he was studying, and he particularly despised the fictional people and things in ancient Greek history. From that time on, Peter, who had just entered the springtime of his youth, began to investigate human life and to come into contact with society. He did not repay the pains his parents took with conscience because he clearly saw that people were all living within a space of fooling themselves, and they were all living within meaningless lives, ruining their own lives for the sake of fighting for fame and fortune. The reason he saw this was largely related to the social environment he was in. The more knowledge people have, the more complex interpersonal relationships are, and the more complex people's internal worlds are, thus the more of a void there is where people are. Under these circumstances, Peter started making inquiries all over the place in his free time, and religious figures accounted for the majority of those who he inquired with. It seemed that he had a vague feeling in his heart that all of the inscrutable things in the human world could be clarified in the religious world, so he frequented a chapel near his home to attend worship services. His parents did not know about this, and before long Peter, who always had excellent conduct and academics, began to hate going to school. Under the supervision of his parents he barely finished high school. He swam ashore from the ocean of knowledge, took a deep breath, and from then on no one educated or restricted him.

After he finished school he began to read all sorts of books, but at the age of seventeen, he was still lacking social experience. After he graduated and left school, he supported himself by farming while also making as much time as he could to read books and attend religious worship services. His parents, who had been full of hope for him frequently cursed Heaven over this "rebellious son." But in spite of this, his heart which hungered and thirsted for righteousness could not be stopped. He suffered no small number of setbacks in his experiences, but he had a voracious heart, so he sprung up like grass after a rain. Before long he was “fortunate” to encounter high-level people in the religious world, and because his heart of longing was so strong, he was in contact with those people more and more frequently and he spent nearly all of his time among them. Just when he was immersed in the happiness of his satisfaction, he suddenly discovered that among those people, the majority had faith in word only but none of them were dedicated in their hearts. With his upright, simple heart, how could Peter withstand such a blow? He discovered that nearly all the people he dealt with were beasts in human attire—they were animals with human countenances. At that time Peter was very naive, so on several occasions he pleaded with them from the heart, but how could the wily, cunning religious figures possibly listen to the entreaties of a young man full of vim and vigor? It was at that time that Peter felt the true emptiness of human life, and as he took his first step toward the stage of life, he failed.... One year later, he moved out of the chapel and began his own independent life.

After 18-year-old Peter suffered one setback, he became much more mature and sophisticated. All of his youthful naiveté just disappeared, and all of the youthful innocence and artlessness that he possessed was mercilessly smothered by that setback. From then on he began a life as a fisherman. After that, one could see that there were people on his fishing boat who were listening to what he was preaching; he was fishing for a living and preaching all over the place. Everyone he preached to was mesmerized by his sermons because what he spoke of was very much in line with the hearts of the common people at that time. People were all deeply moved by his honesty, and he often taught people to deal with others from the heart and to call on the Master of the heavens and earth and all things in everything, and to not ignore their consciences and do those unpresentable things, but to satisfy the God that they love in their hearts in all things.... People were often deeply moved after listening to his sermons. They were all inspired by him and would often weep bitterly. At the time, everyone who followed him had deep admiration for him. They were all destitute, and because of societal influences at the time, of course he had few followers; he was also subject to the persecution from the religious world in the society of that time. For this reason he was constantly moving around, and he lived a solitary life for two years. He gained quite a bit of insight in those two years of extraordinary experiences, and he learned a great deal of things he hadn't known before. Peter was then an entirely different person from who he had been at the age of 14—it seemed they had nothing in common. Over those two years he encountered all kinds of people and he saw all sorts of truths about society; from then on he gradually rid himself of every kind of ritual from the religious world. Because of the trend in the Holy Spirit's work at that time, he was deeply impacted. At that time Jesus had also been working for a number of years, so his work was also impacted by the work of the Holy Spirit at that time, however, he had not yet encountered Jesus. For that reason, when he was preaching, he gained many things that generations of saints had never had. Of course, at that time he was marginally aware of Jesus but he had never had a chance to meet Him face-to-face. He only hoped and thirsted in his heart to see that heavenly figure born of the Holy Spirit.

He was fishing on his boat during twilight one evening (near the shore of the Sea of Galilee mentioned at that time), and although he had a fishing rod in his hands, he had other things on his mind. The dusk light illuminated the surface of the water like a pool of blood in the expanse of the ocean. The light reflected on Peter's young, yet calm and steady face, as if he were deep in thought. At that moment a breeze came up, and he suddenly felt that his life was lonely, and thus suddenly he experienced a feeling of desolation. The water in the sea reflected the light wave after wave, and it was evident that he did not have the heart to fish. Just as he was lost in his thoughts of all sorts of things, he suddenly heard someone behind him say: "Jewish Simon, son of Jonah, the days of your life are lonely. Will you follow Me?" When Peter heard this he was shocked, and he dropped the fishing rod in his hands, and it soon sank to the bottom of the water. Peter rushed to turn around, and he saw a man standing in his boat. He looked Him up and down: His hair, draped to His shoulders, was slightly golden yellow in the sunlight and His clothing was gray. He was of medium height and His attire was entirely that of a Jewish man. In the light of twilight, His gray clothing looked slightly black, and His face appeared to have a bit of a sheen. Peter sought to see Jesus multiple times but each time was unable to do so. At that moment he believed in his spirit that that man was certainly the holy One in his heart, so he bowed down in his boat: "Could it be that You are the Lord who has come to preach the gospel of the kingdom of heaven? I have heard of Your experiences but I have never seen You. I have wanted to follow You, but I could not find You.” Jesus had already walked to the hold of his boat and had quietly sat down. He said:^[a] “Get up and sit next to Me. I have come to seek those who truly love Me, and to spread the gospel of the kingdom of heaven. I am going everywhere to seek those who are of one heart with Me. Are you willing?” Peter replied: “I must follow he who is sent by the heavenly Father. I must acknowledge he who is chosen by the Holy Spirit. As I love the heavenly Father, how could I not be willing to follow?” Although the religious conceptions within Peter’s words were quite strong, Jesus smiled and nodded His head with satisfaction. At that moment, a feeling of fatherly love for Peter grew inside of Him.

Peter followed Jesus for a number of years and he saw many things in Jesus that people do not have. After following Him for a year, he was chosen as the head of the twelve disciples by Jesus. (Of course this was a matter of Jesus’ heart, and people were completely unable to see it.) Jesus’ every move acted as an exemplar for him in his life, and Jesus’ sermons were particularly engraved in his heart. He was very considerate of and dedicated to Jesus, and he never had complaints of Jesus. This is why he became Jesus’ faithful companion everywhere He went. Peter observed Jesus’ teachings, His gentle words, and what He ate, wore, His daily life, and His travels. He followed Jesus’ example in every way. He was not self-righteous, but he cast off all of his previous outdated things and followed Jesus’ example in word and deed. It was then that he felt that the heavens and earth and all things were within the hands of the Almighty, and for this reason he did not have his own choice, but he drew in everything that Jesus was to act as his exemplar. He could see from his life that Jesus was not self-righteous in what He did, nor did He brag about Himself, but instead, He moved people with love. In different situations Peter could see what Jesus was. That is why everything in Jesus became the object that Peter modeled himself after. In his experiences, he felt Jesus’ loveliness more and more. He said something like this: “I searched for the Almighty in the universe and I saw the wonders of the heavens and earth and all things, and I thus had a deep sense of the loveliness of the Almighty. But I never had genuine love in my heart, and I never saw the loveliness of the Almighty with my own eyes. Today, in the eyes of the Almighty, I have been looked upon with favor by Him and I have finally felt God's loveliness, and finally discovered that for God, it is not just creating all things that would make mankind love Him. In my daily life I have found His infinite loveliness; how could it possibly be limited just to this situation today?" As time passed, many lovable things were also found in Peter. He was very obedient to Jesus, and of course he suffered quite a few setbacks. When Jesus took him to various places for preaching, he always humbled himself and listened to Jesus' sermons. He never became arrogant because of his years of following. After Jesus told him that the reason He had come was to be crucified to finish His work, he was frequently very sad and would weep alone in secret. However, that "unfortunate" day arrived. After Jesus was arrested, Peter wept alone on his fishing boat and prayed a great deal for this, but in his heart he knew that it was the will of God the Father and no one could change it. He was constantly sorrowful and weeping because of the effect of love—of course, this is a human weakness, so when he knew that Jesus would be nailed to the cross, he asked Jesus: "After You leave will You return to be among us and look over us? Will we still be able to see You?" Although these words were quite naive, and they were also full of human notions, Jesus knew the taste of Peter's suffering, so through His love He was considerate of his weakness: "Peter, I have loved you. Do you know that? Although there is no reason in what you say, the Father has promised that after My resurrection, I will appear to mankind for 40 days. Don't you believe that My Spirit will frequently bestow grace upon you?" After that Peter had a little bit of comfort, but he always felt there was a drawback in what was otherwise perfect. So, after Jesus was resurrected, He appeared to him openly for the first time, but in order to prevent Peter from continuing to hold onto his notions, Jesus declined the lavish meal that Peter had prepared for Him and disappeared in the blink of an eye. At that moment Peter finally had a deeper understanding of Jesus, and loved the Lord Jesus even more. After His resurrection, Jesus frequently appeared to Peter. After 40 days when He ascended to heaven, He appeared to Peter three times. Every time He appeared was when the work of the Holy Spirit was about to be completed and new work was about to be begun.

Peter made a living by fishing throughout his entire life, but even more so, he lived for preaching. In his later years, he wrote the first and second epistles of Peter, and he wrote several letters to the Philadelphia church of that time. People at the time were very moved by him. He never lectured people based on his own credentials, but he provided them with suitable supply of life. In his life, he never forgot Jesus' teachings during His lifetime—he remained inspired. When he was following Jesus he resolved to repay Jesus' love with his death and that he would follow Jesus' example in all things. Jesus promised him this, so when he was 53 years old (over 20 years after departing from Jesus), Jesus appeared to him to realize his resolve. In the seven years following that, Peter spent his life on knowing himself. One day seven years later, he was crucified upside down, ending his extraordinary life.

INTERPRETATION OF THE EIGHTH UTTERANCE

When God speaks His word from the perspective of the Spirit, His tone is directed at all mankind. When God speaks His word from the perspective of man, His tone is directed at all who follow the leadership of His Spirit. When God speaks His word from the perspective of the third person (what people refer to as an observer), He is directly showing His word to people so that people will see Him as a commentator, and it seems that from His mouth come forth boundless things that man does not know, things that man cannot fathom. Isn't that right? When God speaks His word from the perspective of the Spirit it astonishes all of humanity: "Man's love of Me is too meager and his faith in Me is pitifully small. If the brunt of My words was not directed at man's weaknesses, he would boast and exaggerate, and would pontificate and concoct high-sounding theories, as if he was omniscient and all-knowing about matters upon the earth." These words not only reveal man's true colors and reveal God's position in the hearts of men, but they also lay bare the entire life of mankind. Each person believes that they are extraordinary and they actually don't even know there is a word called "God" so they concoct high-sounding theories. However, this "concocting high-sounding theories" is not "speaking" in the sense that people understand it. Instead, it means that humanity has been corrupted by Satan such that everything they do disobeys God and directly opposes God, and that the very essence of what man does comes from Satan and it is in opposition to God, is an act of independence, and it runs counter to God's will. This is why God says that men all concoct high-sounding theories. Why does God say that the brunt of His words is directed at man's weaknesses? Because in accordance with God's intention, if He did not reveal the things hidden in the inner world of man's heart, then no man would submit, and therefore they would not understand themselves, and they would not hold God in reverence. This is to say that if man's intentions are not laid bare, then man will dare to do anything, perhaps even direct curses at Heaven or at God. These are man's weaknesses, so God says this: "My footsteps tread across all corners of the universe world in perpetual search of those who are after My own heart and fit for My use." This statement, in conjunction with what is later said about the salute of the kingdom formally ringing out, serves to show that God's Spirit is engaged in new work on earth; it's just that mankind's physical eyes do not see it. Since it is said that the Spirit is on earth doing new work, the entire universe world also undergoes momentous change: Not only do God's sons and God's people begin to accept the witnessing of God's incarnation, moreover, every denomination, every sect, every walk of life, and every place, to varying degrees, accept it as well. It is a great movement of the universe world in the spiritual realm. It shakes the entire religious world to its core, which is part of the meaning of the "earthquake" that was mentioned in the past. Next, the angels begin their formal work and the people of Israel return to their home country, never again to wander, and all those included start to accept shepherding. In contrast, the Egyptians begin to break away from the scope of My salvation, that is, to receive My chastisement (but that does not formally begin yet). So it is during this time of these contemporaneous great changes in the world that the salute of the kingdom formally rings out. This is what people have called, "the time when the sevenfold intensified Spirit begins to work." Each time God does the work of recovery, at these phases (or turns of events), all people have been unable to feel the work of the Holy Spirit. Therefore, God's words that "When man loses hope" ring true. Furthermore, at each of these transition phases when mankind loses hope, or when they feel this stream is wrong, God begins anew and takes the next step of His work. From the time of creation until now, God's doing the work of recovery and changing the methods by which He works is similar in this way. Even though most people, to varying degrees, can grasp some aspect of it, in the end they are nonetheless washed away by a torrent of water because their stature is too small; they are unable to grasp the steps of God's work and so they are eliminated. However, this is also God's method of purifying people, and this is God's judgment toward mankind's old notions. The more of a foundation people have, the greater their religious notions about God, which are difficult for them to set aside; they cling to old things and it is tough for them to accept new light. On the other hand, if one is standing, one must have some foundation, but most people have a problem putting their notions aside. This is especially true for their notions about the God incarnate of today, which is clear and easy to see.

In this day's utterance, God talked a lot about visions, which I won't go into detail here, but the main thing He said was about how the foundation for building the kingdom is the building of the church. To be more specific, in the period of the building of the church the main goal was to make people convinced in heart and by word despite not having known God incarnate with their own eyes. Even though they held faith in their hearts, they did not know God incarnate because at that stage He was indistinguishable from a person. In the Age of Kingdom, all must show conviction in their hearts, their speech, and their eyes. From here, it is clear that in order for all to show conviction in their hearts, their speech, and their eyes, they must be allowed to know the God living in the flesh with their physical eyes. This cannot be accomplished in a situation where people are compelled to do something because they have no other option or where people have a casual belief. Instead, people will be convinced in heart and by word through understanding. Therefore, at this stage of construction there is no beating or killing. Instead, it allows people to receive enlightenment through God's word, and through this they may pursue and explore so that they will subconsciously come to know God incarnate. So as for God, this stage of work is much easier, lets nature take its course and does not run counter to mankind. It will, in the end, allow man to naturally come to know God, so don't be worried or become anxious. When God said, "the battle of the spiritual realm is made plain directly among all My people," He meant that when people get on the right track and start to know God, it includes not only each person being tempted within by Satan, but that they may also be tempted by Satan in the church itself. However, this is the only road so no one should be alarmed. Satan's temptation may come in several forms: Someone may give the cold shoulder to or abandon what God says, and he might say negative things to dampen other people's positivity, however, he usually doesn't rope in other people; these things are difficult for people to discern. The main reason for this is: He might still be proactive in attending meetings, but he is unclear regarding visions. If the church does not guard against him, then the entire church could be swayed by his negativity into responding tepidly to God, thereby not paying attention to God's word and this would be falling right into Satan's temptation. He may not directly rebel against God, but because he can't figure out God's word and he doesn't know God, he may complain or have resentment build in his heart. He may say that God has abandoned him so he is incapable of receiving enlightenment and illumination. He may wish to leave, but a quiet feeling of fear dwells within him and he might say that God's work isn't from God but is instead the work of evil spirits.

Why does God mention Peter so often? And why does He say that even Job does not come close to him? This not only allows people to pay attention to Peter's deeds, but also allows them to set aside all of the examples they have in their hearts, and even the example of Job—who had the greatest faith—should also be set aside. Only through this can there be a better result wherein people are able to cast aside everything to imitate Peter, and thereby come a step closer in knowing God. God introduced people to the way of practice that Peter took to knowing God, the goal of which was to give people a point of reference. God then goes on to predict one of the ways that Satan will tempt people when He says, "But if you are cold and uncaring toward My words, then you undoubtedly oppose Me. This is fact." Within these words, God foretells the crafty schemes Satan will try to use and He alerts people to consider it a warning. Even though not everyone will be cold toward God's word, nonetheless some people will be taken captive by this temptation, so at the end God says again with emphasis, "If you do not know My words, do not accept them, and do not put them into practice, then you will inevitably become the object of My chastisement! You will surely become a victim of Satan!" This is God's counsel to mankind, but in the end, as God foretold, a portion of people will become victims of Satan.

INTERPRETATION OF THE NINTH UTTERANCE

In people's imagination, God is God, and man is man. God does not speak the language of man, nor can man speak the language of God, and to God, man's demands of Him are a piece of cake, whereas God's requirements of man are unattainable and unthinkable to man. The fact, however, is precisely the opposite: God only asks "0.1 percent" of man. This is not only astonishing to everyone, but also makes them feel very much bewildered, as if they're all at sea. It is only thanks to the enlightenment of God, and the grace of God, that people gain a little knowledge of God's will. But on March 1, all people were once again left bewildered and scratching their heads. God asked that His people be gleaming snow, not drifting clouds. So what does this "gleaming snow" refer to? And what does "drifting clouds" indicate? At this point, God is deliberately saying nothing of the inner meaning of these words. This plunges people into confusion, and thus increases their faith as they seek—for it is a specific requirement of God's people, and not something else, and so everyone finds themselves spontaneously spending more time thinking about these unfathomable words. As a result, various ideas sprout in their brains, drifting snowflakes flash before their eyes, and drifting clouds in the sky immediately appear in their minds. Why does God ask that His people be as gleaming snow, and not as drifting clouds? What is the true meaning here? What are these words specifically referring to? "Gleaming snow" not only makes the landscape look pretty, but is also good for farmland—it is good at killing bacteria. After a heavy snowfall, all the bacteria are covered by the gleaming snow, and the whole space immediately becomes brimming with life. Likewise, the people of God must not only know God incarnate, but also subdue themselves upon the fact of God's incarnation, and thus live out normal humanity. This is how snow makes the landscape look pretty; ultimately, the maturity of God's people shall bring an end to the great red dragon, establishing God's kingdom on earth, spreading and glorifying God's holy name, so that the whole of the kingdom on earth is filled with God's righteousness, shines forth the radiance of God, and sparkles with the glory of God, and everywhere there are scenes of peace and contentment, happiness and fulfillment, and ever-renewed beauty. The various plagues that exist at the present time—the corrupt satanic dispositions, such as unrighteousness, crookedness and deceitfulness, evil desires and so on—are all eradicated, and thus heaven and earth are both renewed. This is the true meaning of “after a heavy snowfall.” Those who are drifting clouds are like the kind of people who follow the herd spoken of by God; if there is the temptation of Satan, or the trials of God, they will immediately drift away, to exist no longer. Not even their essence will survive, having vanished long ago. If people are drifting clouds, they are not only incapable of living out the image of God, but also bring shame upon God’s name, for such people are in danger of being snatched away at any time or place, they are the food that Satan consumes, and when Satan takes them captive, they will betray God and serve Satan. This clearly brings shame upon God’s name, it is what God resents most of all, and they are God’s enemies. Thus, they are both without the substance of normal people and without any actual use value. It is because of this that God makes such requirements of His people. But after understanding something of these words, people are at a loss for what to do next, for the topic of God’s words has turned to God Himself, which puts them in a difficult position: “Because I came from the holy land, not like the lotus, which has only a name and no substance because it came from the mire and not the holy land.” Why, after speaking of His requirements toward His people, does God describe the birth of God Himself? Could it be that there is a connection between the two? Indeed, there is an inherent connection between them—if not, God would not speak thus to people. Amongst the green leaves, the lotus sways back and forth in the gentle breeze. It is pleasing to the eye and greatly cherished. People simply can’t get enough of it, and are itching to swim in the water to pick a stem and get a closer look. Yet God says the lotus comes from the mire, and has only a name and no substance. It appears that God attaches no importance to lotuses, and from His words can be clearly seen that He has some loathing toward them. Throughout the ages, many have poured praise on lotuses because they emerge unstained from the filth, to the point that they are almost beyond compare, indescribably wonderful. But in God’s eyes, lotuses are worthless—which is precisely the difference between God and man. This is enough to show the distance between God and man, one that is as great as that between the top of the sky and the bottom of the earth. Because a lotus comes from the mire, the nutrients it requires all come from there. It’s just that the lotus is able to disguise itself, and thus provide a feast for the eyes. Many people see only the lotus' beautiful exterior, but none of them see that the life within the lotus is filthy and impure. Thus, God says that it has only a name and no substance—which is totally correct and true. And isn't this precisely what God's people are like today? They only obey and believe in God externally. Before God, they curry favor and parade themselves to make God satisfied with them; inside, however, they are stuffed with the corrupt satanic disposition, their bellies filled with impurities. Thus, God poses questions to man, asking whether his loyalty to God is tainted with impurities, whether it is pure and wholehearted. When they were service-doers, many people praised God in their mouths but cursed Him in their hearts. In their mouths, they were obedient to God, but in their hearts, they disobeyed God. Their mouths uttered negative words, and in their hearts they hid opposition to God. There were even those whose actions were coordinated: They released obscenities with their mouths and gesticulated with their hands, utterly dissolute, giving a vivid and lifelike expression of the true face of the great red dragon. They are truly worthy of being called the spawn of the great red dragon. But today, they stand in the place of loyal service-doers and act like God's loyal people—how shameless! It's no wonder; they came from the mire, so they can't help but show their true colors. Because God is holy and pure, and real and actual, His flesh comes from the Spirit. This is definite, and beyond doubt. Not only being able to bear testimony to God Himself, but also being able to completely carry out God's will: this is one side of God's substance. That the flesh comes from the Spirit with an image means that the flesh with which the Spirit clothes Himself is essentially different to the flesh of man, and this difference primarily lies in their spirit. What the Spirit with an image refers to is how, as a result of being covered by normal humanity, the divinity is able to work normally within, which is not the least bit supernatural, and is not limited by humanity. The "image of the Spirit" refers to complete divinity, and is not limited by humanity. As such, God's inherent disposition and true image can be completely lived out in the incarnate flesh, which is not only normal and stable, but with majesty and wrath. The first incarnate flesh could only present the God of people's conceptions, that is, He was only able to perform the signs and wonders and speak prophecy. Thus, He did not completely live out the reality of God, and so was not the embodiment of the Spirit with an image; He was but the direct appearance of divinity. And because He transcended normal humanity, He was not called the complete practical God Himself, but had a little of the vague God in heaven about Him, He was the God of people's conceptions. This is the essential difference between the two incarnate fleshs.

From the highest point in the universe, God watches over man's every move, over all that people say and do. Even every innermost thought of theirs He observes with absolute clarity, not overlooking it—and so God's words cut right to people's hearts, striking at their every thought, and His words are astute and without error. "Although man knows My Spirit, he also offends My Spirit. My words lay bare the ugly face of all people, and lay bare the innermost thoughts of all people, and cause all upon earth to fall down in the midst of My scrutiny." From this can be seen that, although God's requirements of man are not high, people are still unable to endure the scrutiny of God's Spirit. "But though man falls down, his heart does not dare to stray far from Me. Among the creatures, who does not come to love Me because of My deeds?" This is even more indicative of God's full wisdom and omnipotence, and thus reveals all that God's people thought when they were in the position of service-doers: Although, following a "trade" that ended in failure, the "hundreds of thousands" or "millions" in their heads came to nothing, because of God's administrative decrees, and because of God's majesty and wrath, even though they hung their heads in sorrow, they still served God amid negativity, all of their practices of the past became but empty talk, and totally forgotten; instead they did the things at will that made them and everybody else happy to keep themselves entertained, in order to pass or idle away the time.... This was what was really going on among man. Thus, God opens up to man and says: "Who does not yearn for Me as a result of My words? In whom are not born feelings of devotion because of My love?" To tell the truth, people are all willing to accept God's words, and there is not one of them who does not like to read the words of God—it's just that they are unable to put God's words into practice because they are hindered by their natures. After reading God's words, many people can't bear to be apart from God's words, and the love for God wells up within them. Thus, God once again curses Satan, and once more exposes its ugly face. "The era in which Satan runs riot and is madly despotic" is also the very age that God begins His official, great work on earth. Next, He begins the work of annihilating the world. Which is to say, the more that Satan runs riot, the closer the day of God comes, and so the more God speaks of Satan's wantonness, thus is shown that the day on which God annihilates the world draws closer. Such is God's proclamation to Satan.

Why did God repeatedly say "... and, behind My back, they engage in those 'laudable' dirty dealings. Do you think the flesh, with which I clothe Myself, knows nothing of your actions, your behavior, and your words?" He didn't just say such words one or two times—why is that? Once people have been comforted by God, and are aware of God's sorrow for man, it is easy for them to forget the past as they struggle onward. But God is not the least bit lenient toward man: He keeps going after people's thoughts. Thus He asks people many times to know themselves, to cease their debauchery, to no longer engage in those "laudable" dirty dealings, and to never again deceive God in the flesh. Although people's natures do not change, there is benefit in reminding them a few times. After this, God speaks from the perspective of man to reveal the mysteries in him: "Many years have I endured the wind and the rain, and so too have I experienced the bitterness of the human world, yet upon closer reflection, no amount of suffering can make man of flesh lose hope in Me, much less can any sweetness cause man of flesh to become cold, downhearted, or dismissive toward Me. Is man's love for Me really limited to either no pain or no sweetness?" "All beneath the sun is empty," these words indeed have inner meaning. Thus God is saying that nothing can make man lose hope in Him or grow cold toward Him. If people do not love God, they may as well be dead; if they do not love God, then their suffering is in vain, and their blessings are empty, and added to their sins. Because not a single person truly loves God, thus He says, "Is man's love for Me really limited to either no pain or no sweetness?" In the world of man, how could anyone exist without pain or sweetness? Time and time again, God says, "Not a single man has ever truly seen My face and has ever truly heard My voice, for man does not truly know Me." God says that man does not truly know Him, yet why does He ask that man know Him? Isn't this a contradiction? Every one of God's words has a certain aim. Because man has grown callous, God employs the principle of doing 100% of His work in man in order to ultimately achieve 0.1 percent in man's heart. Such is the method by which God works, and God must act thus in order to achieve His aims. This is also precisely the wisdom of God's words. Have you grasped this?

God says "When I reveal My mysteries directly and make plain My will in the flesh, you take no notice; you listen to the sound, but do not understand the meaning. I am overcome with sadness. Although I am in the flesh, I am unable to do the work of the ministry of the flesh.” In one regard, these words make people, because of their callousness, take the initiative to cooperate with God; in another regard, God reveals the true face of His divinity in the flesh. Because people’s stature is too small, the revelation of divinity during the period that God is in the flesh is only according to man’s abilities of acceptance. During this stage of work, most people remain incapable of full acceptance, which sufficiently shows how poor their abilities of acceptance are. Thus, the divinity does not entirely perform its original function when working; this is but a small part. This shows that in the work of the future, the divinity will gradually be revealed according to the state of man’s recovery. The divinity, however, does not grow gradually, but is what the incarnate God essentially has, and is unlike the stature of man.

There was an aim and meaning to God’s creation of man, and thus God said, “If man were destroyed by My wrath, what would be the significance of My creation of the heavens and earth?” After man was corrupted, God planned the gaining of a portion of people for His enjoyment; it is not the case that all people are to be destroyed, or that they will be eradicated at the slightest violation of God’s administrative decrees. This is not the will of God. As God said, that would be meaningless. It is precisely because of this “meaninglessness” that God’s wisdom is made plain. Is there not greater significance in God speaking and working by many means in order to chastise, judge, and strike at all people, ultimately selecting those who truly love Him? And it is precisely this way that God’s deeds are revealed, and so the creation of man becomes more meaningful. Thus, most of God’s words float past; this is in order to achieve an aim, and only this is the reality of some of His words.

THE FIRST UTTERANCE

What I ask you to do is not the vague and empty theory that I speak of, nor is it unimaginable by the brain of man or unachievable by the flesh of man. Who is capable of complete loyalty within My house?

And who can offer up their all within My kingdom? If not for the revelation of My will, would you take it upon yourselves to fulfill My heart? No one has ever understood My heart, and no one has ever perceived My will. Who has ever seen My face or heard My voice? Did Peter? Or Paul? Or John? Or Jacob? Who has ever been clothed by Me, or possessed by Me, or used by Me? Though the first time I became flesh was in divinity, the flesh in which I clothed Myself knew not the sufferings of man, because I was not incarnated in an image, and so it couldn't be said that the flesh fully carried out My will. Only when My divinity is able to do as I would do and speak as I would speak in a person of normal humanity, without hindrance or obstruction, can it be said that My will is carried out in the flesh. Because the normal humanity is able to shield the divinity, thus is achieved My aim of being humble and hidden. During the stage of work in the flesh, although the divinity acts directly, such actions are not easy for people to see, which is merely because of the life and actions of normal humanity. This incarnation cannot fast for 40 days like the first incarnation, but He works and speaks normally, and although He reveals mysteries, He is very normal; His voice is not, as people imagine, like thunder, His face does not sparkle with light, and the heavens do not tremble when He walks. If that were the case, then in this there would be none of My wisdom, and it would be incapable of shaming and defeating Satan.

When I display My divinity beneath the shield of normal humanity, I am glorified to the fullest, My great work is accomplished, and nothing presents any difficulties. This is because the aim of My incarnation is chiefly to allow all those who believe in Me to behold the deeds of My divinity in the flesh, and to see the practical God Himself, thus dispelling the invisible and intangible God's place in people's hearts. Because I eat, clothe Myself, sleep, dwell, and act like a normal person, because I speak and laugh as a normal person, and have the needs of a normal person, and also possess the substance of full divinity, I am called "the practical God." This is not abstract, and it is easy to understand; in it can be seen in which part the core of My work lies, and in which phase of work My focus is. Revealing My divinity through normal humanity is the core aim of My incarnation. It is not hard to see that the center of My work is in the second part of the era of judgment.

In Me, there has never been human life or human flavor. Human life has never held a place in Me, and has never suppressed the revelation of My divinity. Thus, the more One expresses My voice in heaven and the will of My Spirit, the more He can shame Satan, and so the easier it becomes to carry out My will in normal humanity. This alone has defeated Satan, and Satan has already been utterly shamed. Although I am hidden, this does not impede the utterances and actions of My divinity—which is enough to show that I have been victorious, and have been completely glorified. Because My work in the flesh is without hindrance, and because the practical God now has a place in people's hearts and has set down roots in their hearts, it is fully proven that Satan has been defeated by Me. And because Satan is incapable of doing any more among man, and it is difficult to instill the quality of Satan in man's flesh, My will proceeds without hindrance. The content of My work is, chiefly, to cause all people to behold My wondrous deeds and see My true face: I am not beyond reach, I do not tower into the sky, I am not formless and amorphous. I am not invisible like air, nor am I like a floating cloud, easily blown away; instead, though I live among man, and experience the sweetness, sourness, bitterness, and fieriness among man, My flesh is fundamentally different to that of man. Most people have difficulty engaging with Me, yet most also yearn to engage with Me. It is as if there are huge, unfathomable mysteries in the incarnate God. Because of the direct revelation of divinity, and because of the shield of human appearance, people keep a respectful distance from Me, believing that I am a merciful and loving God, yet also fearful of My majesty and wrath. Thus, in their hearts, they wish to speak in earnest with Me, yet they cannot do as they wish—what their hearts desire, their strength lacks. Such are the states of everyone in this circumstance—and the more people are like this, the greater the proof of the revelation of various aspects of My disposition, thus achieving the aim of people knowing of God. But this is secondary; what's key is making people know My wondrous deeds from the doings of My flesh, causing them to know the substance of God: I am not, as people imagine, abnormal and supernatural; instead, I am the practical God who is normal in all things. "My" place in people's conceptions is dispelled, and they come to know Me in reality. Only then do I take My true place in people's minds.

Before all people, I have not only never done anything supernatural that has been cherished by people, but am also extremely ordinary and normal; I deliberately do not allow people to see anything that has the flavor of God in My incarnate flesh. But because of My words, people are utterly conquered, and submit to My testimony. Only thus do people come to know, without misgivings, the Me in the flesh upon the foundation of fully believing that God does indeed exist. In this way, people's knowledge of Me becomes more real, more clear, and is not in the least bit tainted by their good behavior; all is the result of My divinity acting directly, giving people a greater knowledge of My divinity, for only divinity is the true face of God and inherent attribute of God—people should see this. What I want are words, deeds, and actions that are in divinity—I care not for words and actions in humanity. My aim is to live and act in divinity—I wish not to take root and sprout in humanity, I wish not to reside in humanity. Do you understand what I'm saying? Even though I am a guest in humanity, I do not want this; I act in complete divinity, and only in this way can people better understand My true face.

INTERPRETATION OF THE TENTH UTTERANCE

During the time of church building, God barely mentioned kingdom building. Even when He did make mention, He did so in the language of the time of church building. Once the Age of Kingdom came, God wrote off some methods and the concerns of the time of church building with a single stroke and never again said even a single word with regard to it. This is precisely the fundamental meaning of "God Himself" who is always new and never old. As well as things might have been done in the past, insofar as they are part of a bygone era, God groups such things as coming in the time before Christ, while the present day is known as the time "after Christ."^[a] In this regard, the building of the church can be viewed as a necessary predecessor to the building of the kingdom. It laid the foundation for God to wield His sovereign power in the kingdom. Today, the work of church building is but a shadow in the face of the building of the kingdom, which is the primary focus of God's work on earth. God prepared all the details of His work before the work of church building was completed, and when the time was right, He set right upon His work.

Footnotes:

a. "After Christ" means "AD (Addo Domini)."

As such, God spoke thusly, “The Age of Kingdom is, after all, different from times past. It does not concern what man does. Instead, I personally carry out My work after descending upon the earth—work that human beings can neither conceive nor accomplish.” Indeed, this work must be carried out by God personally—no human is capable of such work, they just aren’t up to it. Other than God, who could carry out such great work among men? Who else is capable of tormenting the whole of mankind half to death? Could men possibly arrange such work? Why is it that He says, “I personally carry out My work after descending upon the earth”? Could God’s Spirit have truly disappeared from all of space? “I personally carry out My work after descending upon the earth,” refers both to the fact that God’s Spirit is incarnated in the flesh to do work, and to the fact that God’s Spirit is clearly working through humankind. By personally carrying out His work, God allows many people to see God Himself with their naked eyes, so that they needn’t search carefully in their spirits. Furthermore, it allows for all of man to see the workings of the Spirit with their own eyes and shows them that there is an essential difference between the flesh of man and that of God. Simultaneously, throughout all of space and the universe world, the Spirit of God is still at work. All those people who are enlightened, having accepted God’s name, see how the Spirit of God works and, thereby, become even more acquainted with the incarnation of God. As such, only if God’s divinity works directly, that is God’s Spirit is able to work without the slightest interference, can man become acquainted with the practical God Himself. This is the essence of kingdom building.

How many times has God been incarnated in the flesh? Could it be several times? Why is it that God has remarked many times, “I once descended into the world of men and experienced and observed their suffering, but without fulfilling the purpose of My incarnation”? Is it that God has been incarnated several times, but has never once been known by man? That is not what is meant by this statement. The first time God was incarnated, His aim was actually not for man to know Him. Instead, He carried out His work and then disappeared without anyone noticing or having even the opportunity to know Him. He didn’t allow man to fully know Him and also did not completely possess the significance of incarnation, so He could not be said to be fully incarnated. In the first incarnation, He merely used a fleshly body free of a sinful nature to carry out that work—the work having been completed, there was no need of further mention. As for those men who have been used by God throughout the ages, such instances are even less worthy of being called incarnation. Today, only He who is the practical God Himself, who has the outward appearance of normal humanity concealing a complete divinity inward, and whose aim is to allow man to know Him can be fully called incarnation. The meaning of God's first visit to this world comprises only one aspect of the significance of what is called incarnation today—this visit by no means possessed the full meaning of what is now called incarnation. This is why God said, "without fulfilling the significance of incarnation." "Experience and observation of man's suffering" refers to God's Spirit and the two incarnations, thus God said, "When the building of the kingdom gets under way, My incarnate flesh formally begins to perform the ministry; that is, the King of the kingdom formally takes up His sovereign power." Though the construction of the church was a testimony to God's name, the work had not yet formally begun—only today can it be said to be kingdom building. All that was done previously was just a foretaste, it wasn't the real thing. Even though it was said that the kingdom had been entered into, no work was yet being done within it. Only today, now that work is being done within God's divinity and God has formally begun His work has man finally entered into the kingdom. Thus, "the descent of the kingdom into the human world, far from being merely a matter of words and appearances, is one of actual reality; this is one aspect of the meaning of 'the reality of practice.'" This excerpt is an apt summary of the above exposition. Having provided this description, God moves on to characterize the general state of mankind, leaving man in a state of constant busyness. "Throughout the world, all humanity lies within My love, My compassion, but so does all humanity lie under My judgment, and likewise under My trial." Man's life is governed according to certain principles and rules, which God has set in place. These principles and rules are as follows: There will be times of happiness, moments of frustration and moreover, times of the refinement of hardships to endure. Thus, no man will live a life of pure happiness or pure suffering. Every life will have its ups and downs. Throughout all of mankind, not only is God's love and compassion apparent, so is His judgment and the whole of His disposition. It can be said thusly: Men all live through God's trial, do they not? Throughout this vast world, all of mankind labors busily in the work of finding their own way. They are not sure what role they play and some even damage or forfeit their lives for the sake of their fate. Even Job was no exception to the rule: Living through God's trial, he nonetheless carried on seeking his own way. No man is capable of standing fast through God's trials. Because of his greed or his human nature, no man is fully satisfied with his current condition, and no man may stand fast through the trials: Every man crumbles under God's judgment. If God were still to be so serious with man, if He were still to hold such exacting demands of man, it would be just as God said: "the entire human race would topple under My burning gaze."

Despite the fact that construction of the kingdom has formally begun, the salute to the kingdom has yet to formally ring out—now it is but a prophecy of what is to come. When the people have all been made complete and all the nations of earth become Christ's kingdom, then will be the time when the seven thunders peal. The current day is a stride forth in the direction of that stage, the charge has been unleashed on the coming time. This is God's plan—in the near future it will be realized. However, God has already accomplished all which He has said. Thus, it is clear that the nations of earth are but castles in the sand trembling as high tide nears: The last day is imminent and the great red dragon will topple under God's word. To ensure that God's plan is carried out successfully, the angels of heaven have descended upon earth, doing their utmost to satisfy God. The incarnate God Himself has deployed to the field of battle to wage war on the enemy. Wherever the incarnation appears, so the enemy is destroyed from that place. China is the first to be annihilated, to be laid to waste by the hand of God. God gives absolutely no quarter to China. Proof of the great red dragon's progressive collapse can be seen in the continued maturation of the people. This can be obviously seen by anyone. The maturation of the people is a sign of the enemy's demise. This is a bit of an explanation of what is meant by "do battle." Thus, God reminded the people on numerous occasions to give beautiful testimonies to God to undo the status of notions, the great red dragon's ugliness in the hearts of men. God uses such reminders to enliven man's faith and, in so doing, achieves attainments in His work. This is because God has said, "What is man capable of doing? Is it not rather that I do it Myself?" All of mankind is as such. Not only are they incapable, they are also easily discouraged and disappointed. For this reason, they are incapable of knowing God. God not only revives man's faith, in secret He is also constantly imbuing man with strength.

Next, God began speaking to the entire universe. Not only did God commence His new work in China, throughout the universe He began doing the new work of today. In this stage of the work, because God wants to reveal all of His deeds throughout the earth so that all of mankind who has betrayed Him will come again to bow down in submission before His throne, thus within God's judgment there is still God's compassion and love. God uses current events throughout the world to shake the hearts of men, stirring them to seek God so that they may stream to Him. Thus God says, "This is one of the ways in which I work, and is without doubt an act of salvation for man, and what I extend to him is still a kind of love." God exposes man's true nature with an accuracy that is penetrating, unparalleled, and effortless. This leaves man hiding his face in shame, utterly humiliated. Every time God speaks, in some way He always points out some aspect of man's wretchedness so that, at his ease, man does not forget to know himself and does not think of knowing himself as an old task. Knowing man's nature, if God were to not point out his faults for just one moment, man could become dissolute and arrogant. Thus, today God says, "Humanity—far from treasuring the names that I have conferred upon you, so many of you, at the title 'service-doers,' nurse resentment in your hearts, and so many, at the title 'My people,' breed love in your hearts. Do not try to fool Me—My eyes see and penetrate all!" As soon as man sees this statement, he immediately feels uncomfortable. He feels that his past actions were far too immature—just the kind of dirty-dealing that offends God. He has recently wanted to satisfy God, but while he is more than willing, he lacks the power and doesn't know what he ought to do. Unwittingly, he is imbued with a renewed resolve. This is the effect of reading these words when one is at ease.

On the one hand, God says Satan is insane in the extreme, while on the other hand He also says most humans do not change their old nature. From this, it is clear that Satan's actions are manifested through man. Thus, God often reminds man not to be dissolute, lest he be devoured by Satan. This is not only prophesying that some men will rebel, it is further an alarm bell ringing out to warn all men to set aside the past with haste and seek that of the present day. No man wishes to be possessed by demons or overcome by evil spirits, so God's word is even more so a warning and admonishment to them. However, when most people move to the polar opposite extreme, attaching great importance to God's every last word, God in turn says, "The majority of people are waiting for Me to reveal even more mysteries for them to feast their eyes upon. And yet, should you come to understand all the mysteries of heaven, what could you do with that knowledge? Would it increase your love for Me? Would it inflame your love for Me?" From this it is clear that man does not use God's word to know God and love God, but rather to increase the stores of his "little storehouse." So, God's use of the phrase "feast their eyes upon" to describe man's extremism reflects how man's love of God is still not entirely pure. If God did not unveil the mysteries, man would not lay much importance on His words, but would rather just give them a fleeting look—just a glance, a glimpse. They wouldn't take the time to really reflect upon and mull over His words. Most people don't truly cherish God's word. They don't go to great lengths to eat and drink His words, but rather skim over them perfunctorily. Why does God speak now in a different way than time's past? Why is it all inscrutable language? For instance, "crown" in "I would never casually crown people with these labels," "purest gold" in "Is there anyone who can receive into himself the purest gold of which My words are made up," His previous mention of "processing" in "without passing through any processing by Satan" and other such phrases. Man does not understand why God speaks this way. They don't get why He speaks in such a jocular, humorous and provocative manner. This is precisely a manifestation of the purpose of God's speech. From the very beginning until now, man has always been incapable of comprehending God's word and it has seemed as though God's word was indeed quite grave and stern. By adding the slightest strain of humor—adding a few quips here and there—He is able to lighten the mood with His word and allow man to relax their muscles somewhat. In so doing, He is able to achieve an even greater effect, compelling man to all ponder over God's word.

INTERPRETATION OF THE ELEVENTH UTTERANCE

To man's naked eye, there appears to be no change in God's utterances during this period, which is because people are incapable of grasping the laws by which God speaks, and do not understand the context of His words. After reading the words of God, people don't believe there to be any new mysteries in these words; thus, they are incapable of leading lives that are extraordinarily fresh, and instead live lives that are stagnant and lifeless. But in God's utterances, we see that there is a deeper level of meaning, one that is both unfathomable and unreachable to man. Today, for man to be fortunate enough to read such words of God is the greatest of all blessings. If no one were to read these words, man would forever remain arrogant, self-righteous, unknowing of himself, and unaware of just how many failings he has. After reading the profound, unfathomable words of God, people secretly admire them, and there is true conviction in their hearts, untainted by falsehood; their hearts become the real deal, not counterfeit goods. This is what really happens in people's hearts. Everyone has their own story in their heart. It's as if they're saying to themselves: Most likely this was spoken by God Himself—if not God, who else could utter such words? Why can't I speak them? Why am I incapable of doing such work? It appears the incarnate God of which God speaks truly is real, and is God Himself! I will doubt no more. Otherwise, it may well be that when the hand of God arrives, it will be too late for regrets! ... This is what most people think in their hearts. It is fair to say that, from when God began to speak until today, all people would have fallen away without the support of God's words. Why is it said that all of this work is done by God Himself, and not by man? If God did not use words to support the life of the church, everyone would disappear without trace. Is this not the power of God? Is this truly man's eloquence? Is this man's singular talents? Absolutely not! Without dissection, no one would know what blood type runs through their veins, they would be unaware of how many hearts they have, or how many brains, and they would all think they know God. Do they not know that there is still opposition contained within their knowledge? Little wonder that God says, "Every person in mankind should accept the observation of My Spirit, should closely scrutinize their every word and action, and, moreover, should look upon My wondrous deeds." From this it can be seen that God's words are not aimless and without basis. God has never treated any man unfairly; even Job, with all his faith, wasn't let off—he was also dissected, and left with nowhere to hide from his shame. And that's to say nothing of the people of today. Thus, God then immediately asks: "How do you feel at the time of the kingdom's arrival on earth?" God's question matters little, but it leaves people perplexed: What do we feel? We still don't know when the kingdom will arrive, so how could we talk of feelings? What's more, we don't have a clue. If I had to feel something, it would be "astonished," and nothing else. In fact, this question is not the aim of God's words. Above all, "When My sons and people stream to My throne, I formally commence judgment before the great white throne," this single sentence summarizes the developments of the entire spiritual realm. No one knows what God wants to do in the spiritual realm during this time, and only after God utters these words is there a slight awakening in people. Because there are different steps to God's work, God's work throughout the universe also varies. During this time, God chiefly saves the sons and the people of God, which is to say, shepherded by the angels, the sons and the people of God begin to accept being dealt with and broken, they officially begin to dispel their thoughts and conceptions, and say goodbye to the ways of the world; in other words, the "judgment before the great white throne" spoken of by God officially begins. Because it is the judgment of God, God must utter His voice—and although the content varies, the aim is always the same. Today, judging from the tone with which God speaks, it seems that His words are directed at a certain group of people. In fact, above all, these words address the nature of all mankind. They cut directly to man's spinal cord, they do not spare man's feelings, and they reveal the entirety of his essence, leaving nothing out, not letting anything through. Starting from today, God officially reveals the true face of man, and thus "releases the voice of My Spirit to the entire universe." The effect that is ultimately achieved is "Through My words, I will wash clean all the people and things among all that is in heaven and on earth, so that the land is no longer filthy and licentious, but is a holy kingdom." These words present the future of the kingdom, which is entirely of Christ's kingdom, just as God said, "All is good fruit, all are diligent farmers." Naturally, this will occur throughout the universe, and is not just limited to China.

It is only when God begins to speak and act that people have a little knowledge of Him in their conceptions. In the beginning, this knowledge exists only in their conceptions, but as time goes by, people begin to feel that their own thoughts are increasingly futile and inappropriate; thus, they come to believe all that God says, to the extent that they "create a place for the practical God in their consciousness." It is only in their consciousness that people have a place for the practical

God. In reality, however, they do not know God, and speak nothing but empty words. Yet compared to the past, they have made tremendous progress—although they are still a long way away from the practical God Himself. Why does God always say, “Each day I walk among the unceasing flow of people, and each day I operate within every person”? The more God says such things, the more people can compare them to the actions of the practical God Himself of today, and so they can better know the practical God in reality. Because God's words are spoken from the perspective of the flesh, and uttered using the language of humanity, people are able to appreciate the words of God by measuring them against material things, and thereby a greater effect is achieved. In addition, time and time again God speaks of the image of the “Me” in people's hearts and the “Me” in reality, which makes people more willing to purge the image of God in their hearts, and thus willing to know and engage with the practical God Himself. This is the wisdom of God's words. The more God says such things, the greater the benefit to people's knowledge of God, and thus God says, “If I did not become flesh, man would never know Me, and even if he came to know Me, wouldn't such knowledge still be a conception?” Indeed, if people were required to know God according to their own conceptions, it would be easy for them, they would be relaxed and happy, and thus God would be forever vague, and not practical in people's hearts, which would prove that Satan, and not God, holds dominion over the whole universe; thus, God's words that “I have taken back My power” would forever remain empty.

When divinity begins to act directly is also the time that the kingdom officially descends to the world of man. But what is said here is that the kingdom descends among man, not that the kingdom takes form among man—and thus what is spoken of today is the construction of the kingdom, and not how it takes form. Why does God always say that “All things fall silent”? Could it be that all things stop still? Could it be that great mountains really fall silent? So why do people have no sense of this? Could it be that God's word is wrong? Or is God exaggerating? Because everything that God does is carried out within a certain environment, no one is aware of it, or capable of perceiving it with their own eyes, and all that people can do is listen to God speak. Because of the majesty with which God acts, when God arrives, it's as if there has been a tremendous change in heaven and on earth; and to God, it appears that all are watching this moment. Today, the facts have yet to arrive. People have merely learned a little from part of the literal meaning of God's words. The true meaning awaits the time when they purge themselves of their conceptions; only then will they become aware of what God incarnate is doing on earth and in heaven today. In the people of God in China there is not only the venom of the great red dragon. So, too, is the nature of the great red dragon revealed more abundantly, and more clearly, in them. But God does not speak of this directly, merely mentioning a little about the venom of the great red dragon. In this way, He does not expose man's scars directly, which is more beneficial to man's progress. The spawn of the great red dragon don't like to be called the descendants of the great red dragon in front of others. It's as if the words "great red dragon" bring shame upon them; none of them are willing to speak of these words, and thus God only says, "this stage of My work is primarily focused on you, and this is one aspect of the significance of My incarnation in China." More precisely, God has chiefly come to conquer the archetypal representatives of the spawn of the great red dragon, which is the significance of God's incarnation in China.

"When I personally come among man, the angels simultaneously begin the work of shepherding." In fact, it is not taken literally that God's Spirit only arrives in the world of man when the angels commence their work among all peoples. Instead, these two pieces of work—work of divinity and the shepherding of the angels—are carried out simultaneously. Next, God talks a little about the shepherding of the angels. When He says that "all the sons and people not only receive trials and shepherding, but are also able to behold, with their own eyes, the occurrence of all kinds of visions," most people have abundant imaginings about the word "visions." Visions refer to the supernatural happenings in people's imaginations. But the content of the work remains the knowledge of the practical God Himself. Visions are the means by which angels work. They may give people feelings or dreams, allowing them to perceive the existence of the angels. But the angels remain invisible to man. The method by which they work among the sons and the people of God is to directly enlighten and illuminate them, added to which is the dealing with and breaking of them. Rarely do they give sermons. Naturally, communion between people is the exception; this is what's happening in countries outside of China. Contained within God's words is the revelation of the living circumstances of all mankind—naturally, this is primarily directed at the spawn of the great red dragon. Of the various states of all mankind, God selects those which are representative to serve as models. Thus, God's words strip people naked, and they know no shame, or else have no time to hide from the shining light, and are beaten at their own game. The many manners of man are a plethora of images, which God has painted from ancient times until today, and which He shall paint from today until tomorrow. All He paints is the ugliness of man: Some weep in the darkness, seemingly grieving for the sight lost from their eyes, some laugh, some are buffeted by great waves, some walk upon undulating mountain roads, some search amid the vast wilderness, quivering with fear, like a bird startled by the mere twang of a bow-string, deeply fearful of being eaten by wild animals in the mountains. In God's hands, these many ugly manners become touching, lifelike tableaux, most of them too horrible to look at, or else enough to make people's hair stand on end and leave them bewildered and confused. In God's eyes, all that is manifested in man is nothing but ugliness, and even though it might provoke compassion, it is still ugliness. The locus of man's difference from God is that man's weakness lies in his tendency to show kindness toward others. God, however, has always been the same to man, which means that He has always had the same attitude. He is not always as kindly as people imagine, like an experienced mother whose children are always at the forefront of her mind. In reality, if God did not want to employ an array of methods to conquer the great red dragon, there is no way He would submit to such humiliation, allowing Himself to be subjected to the limitations of man. According to God's nature, all that people do and say provokes God's wrath, and they ought to be chastised. In God's eyes, not one of them is up to standard, and each is the target of God's attacks. Because of the principles of God's work in China, and, moreover, because of the nature of the great red dragon, added to which is the fact that China is the country of the great red dragon, and the land in which God incarnate resides, God must swallow His anger and conquer all of the spawn of the great red dragon; yet He shall always detest the spawn of the great red dragon, that is, He will always detest all that comes from the great red dragon—and this will never change.

No one has ever been aware of any of God's actions, nor have His actions ever been looked upon by anything. When God returned to Zion, for example, who was aware of this? Thus, words such as "I quietly come among man, and I softly depart. Has anyone ever seen Me?” show that man does indeed lack the faculties to accept the happenings of the spiritual realm. In the past, God said that “the sun is fiery, the moon is lustrous” during His return to Zion. Because people are still preoccupied with God’s return to Zion—because they have yet to let it go—God directly utters the words “the sun is fiery, and the moon is lustrous” to conform with people’s conceptions. As a result, when people’s conceptions are struck by God’s words, they behold that God’s actions are so wondrous, and see that His words are profound and unfathomable, and indecipherable to all; thus, they put this matter completely aside, and feel a little clarity in their spirits, as if God has already returned to Zion, and so people pay no great attention to this matter. From then on, they accept God’s words with one heart and one mind, and no longer fret that catastrophe will befall after God’s return to Zion. Only then is it easy for people to accept God’s words, focusing the entirety of their attention on God’s words, leaving them without the desire to consider anything else.

THE SECOND UTTERANCE

When people behold the practical God, when they personally live their lives with, walk side-by-side with, and reside with God Himself, they put aside the curiosity that has been in their hearts for so many years. The knowledge of God previously spoken of is only the first step; although people have knowledge of God, there remain many persistent doubts in their hearts: Where did God come from? Does God eat? Is God greatly different from ordinary people? For God, is dealing with all people a cinch, mere child’s play? Is all that is spoken from God’s mouth the mysteries of heaven? Is all that He says higher than that of all created beings? Does light shine from God’s eyes? And so on—this is what people’s conceptions are capable of. These things are what you should understand and enter into before all else. In people’s conceptions, the incarnate God is still a vague God. If not through practical knowledge, people would never be able to understand Me, and would never behold My deeds in their experiences. It is only because I became flesh that people are unable to understand My will. If I had not become flesh, and were still in heaven, still in the spiritual realm, then people would “know” Me, they would bow down and worship Me, and talk of their “knowledge” of Me through their experiences—but what would be the use of such knowledge? What would be its value as reference? Could the knowledge that comes from people’s conceptions be real? I do not want the knowledge of people’s brains—I want practical knowledge.

My will is revealed among you at all times, and at all times is there My illumination and enlightenment. And when I act directly in divinity, it is not filtered through the brain, there is no need to add “seasoning”—this is a direct act of divinity. What are people capable of? Has all from the time of creation until today not been personally carried out by Me? In the past, I talked of the sevenfold intensified Spirit, but no one was able to understand His substance—even when they were aware of it, they were incapable of complete understanding. When I work in humanity governed by divinity, because this work is carried out in circumstances that people believe to be not supernatural but normal, it is referred to as the work of the Holy Spirit. When I work directly in divinity, because I am unconstrained by people’s conceptions, and am not subject to the limits of the “supernatural” in their conceptions, this work has an immediate effect, it goes to the heart of the matter, it gets straight to the point. As a result, this step of work is purer, it is twice as fast, people’s knowledge has accelerated, and My words increase, causing all people to rush to catch up. Because the effect is different, because the means, the nature, and the content of My work are not the same—and, furthermore, because I have officially begun to work in the flesh, in view of the foregoing, this step of work is referred to as the work of the sevenfold intensified Spirit. It is not something abstract. Following changes in^[a] the means by which I work in you, and following the arrival of the kingdom, the sevenfold intensified Spirit begins to work, and this work constantly goes deeper and becomes more intense. When all people behold God and they all see that the Spirit of God is among man, the full significance of My incarnation is made clear. There is no need to summarize—people know this naturally.

Considering many respects—the methods by which I work, the steps of My work, the tone of My words today, and so on—only what comes from My mouth now are “the utterances of the sevenfold Spirit.”

a. The original text omits “changes in.”

Though I also spoke in the past, that was during the stage of building the church. It was like the preface and index in a novel, and was without the substance; only the utterances of today can be called the substance of the utterances of the sevenfold Spirit. “The utterances of the sevenfold Spirit” refers to the utterances that come from the throne, which is to say, they are uttered directly in divinity. The moment when My utterances turned to revealing the mysteries of heaven was the moment when I spoke directly in divinity. In other words, unconstrained by humanity, I directly revealed all of the mysteries and circumstances of the spiritual realm. Why do I say that I was previously subject to the limits of humanity? This requires explanation. In people’s eyes, no one is capable of revealing the mysteries of heaven; if not for God Himself, no one else on earth could know of these mysteries. Thus, I address people’s conceptions and say that in the past I did not reveal any mysteries because I was subject to the limits of humanity. More specifically, however, this is not the case: The content of My words differs as My work differs, and thus, when I began to perform My ministry in divinity, I revealed mysteries; in the past, I had to work in circumstances that all people viewed as normal, and the words that I spoke were capable of being achieved in people’s conceptions. When I began to reveal mysteries, not one of these was attainable by people’s conceptions—they were unlike human thinking. So, I officially began to turn to speaking in divinity, and these were the utterances of the sevenfold Spirit. Though the words of the past were utterances from the throne, they were spoken upon the basis of what was attainable by people, and thus were not uttered directly in divinity—as a result of which they were not the utterances of the sevenfold Spirit.

INTERPRETATION OF THE TWELFTH UTTERANCE

When all people take heed, when all things are renewed and revived, when every person submits to God without qualms, and is willing to shoulder the heavy responsibility of God’s burden—this is when the eastern lightning issues forth, illuminating all from the East to the West, terrifying all of earth with the arrival of this light; and at this moment, God once again begins His new life. Which is to say, at this moment God begins the new work on earth, proclaiming to people of the entire universe that “When lightning issues forth from the East—which is also precisely the moment that I begin to speak—at the moment the lightning comes forth, the whole empyrean is illuminated, and all the stars begin to transform.” So, when is the time that lightning issues forth from the East? When the heavens darken and the earth grows dim is also when God hides His face from the world, and the very moment when all beneath the heavens is about to be beset by a mighty storm. At this time, all people are stricken by panic, fearful of the thunder, afraid of the brilliance of the lightning, and even more terrified of the onslaught of the deluge, such that most of them shut their eyes and wait for God to unleash His wrath and strike them down. And as various states come to pass, the eastern lightning issues forth immediately. Which is to say, in the world's East, from when testimony to God Himself begins, to when He begins to work, to when divinity begins to wield sovereign power across the earth—this is the glowing shaft of the eastern lightning, which has ever shone out to the whole universe. When the countries on earth become the kingdom of Christ is when the whole universe is illuminated. Now is the time when the eastern lightning issues forth: God incarnate begins to work, and, furthermore, speaks directly in divinity. It can be said that when God begins to speak on earth is when the eastern lightning comes forth. More precisely, when living water flows from the throne—when the utterances from the throne begin—is precisely when the utterances of the sevenfold Spirit formally begin. At this time, the eastern lightning begins to come forth, and because of the difference in time, the degree of illumination also varies, and there is, too, a limit to the scope of radiance. But as God's work moves, as His plan changes—as the work on the sons and people of God varies—the lightning increasingly performs its inherent function, such that all throughout the universe is illuminated, and no dregs or dross remain. This is the crystallization of God's 6,000-year management plan, and the very fruit enjoyed by God. “The stars” does not refer to the stars in the sky, but to all the sons and people of God who work for God. Because they bear testimony to God in God's kingdom, and represent God in God's kingdom, and because they are creatures, they are called “the stars.” The changes that occur refer to changes in identity and status: They change from people on earth to people of the kingdom, and, furthermore, God is with them, and God's glory is in them. As a result, they wield sovereign power in God's stead, and the venom and impurities in them are cleansed because of God's work, ultimately making them fit for use by God and after God's heart—which is one aspect of these words' meaning. When the shaft of light from God illuminates all the land, all things in heaven and on earth will change to varying degrees, and the stars in the sky will also change, the sun and moon will be renewed, and the people on earth will be subsequently renewed—which is all the work done by God between heaven and earth, and of no surprise.

When God saves people—which, naturally, does not include those who are not the chosen ones—is the very time that God cleanses and judges people, and all people weep bitterly, or fall stricken upon their beds, or are struck down and plunged into the hell of death because of God's words. It is only thanks to God's utterances that they begin to know themselves. If not, theirs would be the eyes of a toad—looking up, none convinced, none of them knowing themselves, ignorant of how many stones they weigh. People are truly corrupted by Satan to a point. It is precisely because of God's omnipotence that the ugly face of man is depicted so vividly, causing man, after reading it, to compare it to his own true face. People all know that how many brain cells they have in their heads seems crystal clear to God, to say nothing of their ugly faces or innermost thoughts. In the words "It seems as though the entire human race is subjected to a proper cleaning and sorting out. Under the glow of this shaft of light from the East, all of mankind is revealed in their original form, eyes dazzled, stymied in confusion" can be seen that one day, when God's work ends, all mankind will have been judged by God. No one will be able to escape, God will handle the people of all mankind one by one, not overlooking a single one of them, and only then shall God's heart be satisfied. And so, God says, "Again, they are like unto animals fleeing from My light for refuge in mountain caves; yet, not one among them can be effaced from within My light." People are lowly and inferior animals. Living in the hands of Satan, it is as if they have taken refuge in ancient forests deep within the mountains—but because all things cannot escape the incineration by God's flames, even whilst under the "protection" of the forces of Satan, how could they be forgotten by God? When they accept the arrival of God's words, the various bizarre forms and grotesque states of all people are depicted by God's pen; God speaks as befits the needs and mentality of man. Thus, to people, God appears well-versed in psychology. It is as if God is a psychologist, but also as if God is a doctor of internal medicine—no wonder He has such an understanding of man, who is “complex.” The more people think this, the greater their sense of God’s preciousness, and the more they feel that God is profound and unfathomable. It is as if, between man and God, there is an uncrossable celestial boundary, but also as if the two regard each from each bank of the Chu River,^[a] neither able to do nothing more than watch the other. Which is to say, the people on earth only look at God with their eyes, they have never had the chance to study Him closely, and all that they have is a feeling of attachment. In their hearts, they always have a sense that God is lovely, but because God is so “heartless and unfeeling,” they’ve never had the chance to speak of the anguish in their hearts before Him. They’re like a beautiful young wife before her husband—who, because of the probity of her husband, has never had the opportunity to divulge her true feelings. People are self-despising wretches, and so, because of their fragility, because of their lack of self-respect, My hate of man unconsciously increases somewhat, and the fury in My heart bursts forth. In My mind, it is as if I have suffered a trauma. I have long since lost hope in man, but because “Once again, My day is pressing close upon the human race, once again arousing the human race, giving humanity a point from which to make a new beginning,” I once again summon the courage to conquer all mankind, to capture and defeat the great red dragon. God’s original intention was as follows: to do nothing more than conquer the spawn of the great red dragon in China; only this could be considered the defeat of the great red dragon, the vanquish of the great red dragon, and only this would be sufficient to prove that God reigns as King across the earth, proving the accomplishment of God’s great enterprise, and that God has a new beginning on earth, and is glorified on earth. Because of the final beautiful scene, God can’t help but express the passion in His heart: “My heart beats and, following the rhythms of My heartbeat, the mountains leap for joy, the waters dance with joy, and the waves, keeping time, beat upon the rocky reefs. It is difficult to express what is in My heart.” From this can be seen that what was planned by God is what God has already accomplished, that it was predetermined by God, and is precisely what God makes people experience and behold. The prospect of the kingdom is beautiful, the King of the kingdom is the victor, from head to toe there is not a trace of flesh and blood, all of Him is sacred. His whole body glows with sacred glory, utterly untainted by human ideas, His entire body, from top to bottom, brims with righteousness and the aura of heaven, and exudes a captivating fragrance. Like the beloved in Song of Songs, He is yet more beautiful than all the saints, higher than the ancient saints, He is the exemplar among all people, and incomparable to man; people are not fit to look upon Him directly. No one can attain God's glorious countenance, God's appearance, or God's image, no one can compete, and no one can easily praise them with their mouths.

God's words have no end, like water gushing from a spring they will never run dry, and thus no one can fathom the mysteries of God's management plan—yet to God, such mysteries are endless. Using different means and language, God has spoken several times of His renewal and transformation of the whole universe, each time more profound than the last: "I want all unclean things to burn up into ashes under My gaze, I want all the sons of disobedience to disappear from before My eyes, never more to linger on in existence." Why does God repeatedly say such things? Is He not fearful people will grow weary of them? People merely grope amidst God's words, wishing to know God this way, but never remembering to examine themselves. Thus, God employs this means to remind them, to make them know themselves, so that from themselves they can come to know the disobedience of man, and thus eradicate their disobedience before God. Reading that God wishes to "clean and sort out," their mood grows anxious at once, and their muscles, too, seem to stop moving. They immediately return before God to criticize themselves, and so come to know God. After this—after they make up their minds—God uses the opportunity to show them the essence of the great red dragon; thus, people engage with the spiritual realm directly, and because of the part played by their resolve, their minds also begin to play a role, which increases the sentiment between man and God—which is of greater benefit to God's work in the flesh. In this way, people unconsciously wish to look back on times gone by: In the past, for years people believed in the vague God, for years, they were never set free in their hearts, they were incapable of great enjoyment, and although they believed in God, there was no order to their lives. It was as if there was no difference with before they were believers, their lives still felt empty and hopeless, it was as if their belief at that time was a kind of entanglement, and as if they would have been better off not believing. Since they beheld the practical God Himself of today, it is as if heaven and earth have been renewed; their lives have become radiant, they are no longer without hope, and because of the arrival of the practical God, they feel steadfast in their hearts and peaceful within their spirits. No longer do they chase the wind and clutch at shadows in all they do, no more is their pursuit aimless and no more are they flailing about. The life of today is even more beautiful, people have unexpectedly entered the kingdom and become one of God's people, and afterward.... In their hearts, the more people think, the greater the sweetness, the more they think, the happier they are, and the more they are inspired to love God. Thus, without them realizing it, the friendship between God and man is enhanced. People love God more, and know God more, and God's work in man becomes increasingly easy, and it no longer forces or compels people, but follows the course of nature, and man performs his own unique function—only then will they gradually be able to know God. Only this is God's wisdom—it does not entail the slightest effort, and it is brought to bear as befits man's nature. Thus, at this moment God says, "At the time of My incarnation in the human world, mankind arrived unwittingly at this day with the help of My guiding hand, came unwittingly to know Me. But, as for how to walk the path that lies ahead, no one has any inkling, no one is aware, and still less does anyone have a clue as to the direction in which that path will take him. Only with the Almighty watching over him will anyone be able to walk the path to the end; only guided by the lightning in the East will anyone be able to cross over the threshold leading to My kingdom." Is this not a summary of what I have described in man's heart above? Herein lies the secret of God's words. The thoughts in man's heart are what is spoken by God's mouth, and what is spoken by God's mouth is wished for by man, and this is precisely what God is most adept at in exposing man's heart; if not, how could all be sincerely convinced? Is this not the effect God wishes to achieve in conquering the great red dragon?

In fact, as was God's original intention, the meaning of many of His words does not lie in their superficial meaning. In many of His words, God is simply deliberately changing people's conceptions and diverting their attention. God does not attach any importance to these words, and thus many words are not worthy of explanation. When man's conquest by God's words has arrived at the point it has today, people's strength has reached a certain point, and so God subsequently utters more words of warning—the constitution He issues forth to the people of God: "Although the human beings that populate the earth are as numerous as the stars, I know them all as clearly as I see the palm of My own hand. And, though the human beings that 'love' Me are also as innumerable as the sands of the sea, only a few are chosen by Me: only those that pursue the bright light, who are apart from those who 'love' Me." Indeed, there are many who say they love God, but there are few who love Him in their hearts—which, it would seem, can be known clearly even with eyes closed. This is the actual situation of the entire world of those who believe in God. In this, we see that now God has turned to the work of expunging people, which shows that what God wants, and what satisfies God, is not the church of today, but the kingdom after the expunging. At this moment, He further gives a warning to all the "dangerous goods": Unless God does not act, as soon as God begins to act, these people shall be wiped from the kingdom. God never does things perfunctorily, He always acts according to the principle of "one is one and two is two," and if there are those He does not wish to look upon, He does everything possible to wipe them away to stop them from causing trouble in the future. This is called "taking out the rubbish and thoroughly cleaning." When God announces the administrative decrees to man is the very moment that He presents His miraculous deeds and all that is within Him, and thus He subsequently says: "There are wild beasts without number in the mountains, but they are all as tame as sheep before Me; unfathomable mysteries lie underneath the ocean, but they present themselves to Me as clearly as all things upon the face of the earth; in the empyrean above are realms that man can never reach, yet I walk about freely in those inaccessible realms." God's meaning is this: Although the heart of man is deceitful above all things, and seemingly as endlessly mysterious as the hell of people's conceptions, God knows man's actual states like the back of His hand. Among all things, man is an animal more fierce and brutal than a wild beast, yet God has conquered man to the point that none dare to rise up and resist. In fact, as is God's meaning, what people think in their hearts is more complex than all things among all things, it is unfathomable, yet God has no regard for man's heart, He merely treats it as a little worm before His eyes; with a word from His mouth, He conquers it, at any time He wishes, He strikes it down, with the slightest movement of His hand, He chastises it, and He condemns it at will.

Today, all people exist amid darkness, but because of God's arrival, people come to know the substance of the light as a result of having seen God, and throughout the world it is as if a great black pot has been upturned over the earth; no one can draw a breath, they all want to reverse the situation, yet no one has ever lifted off the black pot. It is only because of God's incarnation that people's eyes have suddenly been opened, and they have beheld the practical God, and thus, God asks them with a questioning tone: "Man has never recognized Me in the light, but has only seen Me in the world of darkness. Are you not in exactly the same situation today? It was at the climax of the great red dragon's rampages that I formally put on the flesh to do My work." God does not hide what's going on in the spiritual realm, nor does He hide what's happening in the heart of man, and thus He repeatedly reminds people: "I do this not only to enable My people to know the incarnate God, but also in order to cleanse My people. Due to the severity of My administrative decrees, a great majority of people are still in danger of being eliminated by Me. Unless you make every effort to deal with yourself, to subdue your own body, unless you do this, you will assuredly become an object that I despise and reject, to be cast down into hell, just as Paul received chastisement from My hands, from which there was no escape." The more God says such things, the more people are cautious of their own footsteps, and the more they are fearful of God's administrative decrees, and only then can God's authority be brought to bear and His majesty made plain. Here, Paul is once again mentioned in order to make people understand God's will: They must not be those who are chastised by God, but be those who are mindful of God's will. Only this can make people, amidst their fear, look back upon the past inability of their resolve before God to completely satisfy God, which gives them even greater regret, and gives them more knowledge of the practical God, and thus only then can they have no doubts about God's words.

"It is not merely that man does not know Me in My flesh; even worse, he has failed to understand his own self that resides in a fleshly body. How many years has it been, and all this time human beings have deceived Me, treating Me as a guest from outside? How many times...?" These "How many times" list the reality of man's opposition to God, showing people real examples of chastisement; this is proof of sin, and no one can refute it again. All people use God like some everyday item, as if He is some household essential that they can use as they wish. No one cherishes God, no one has tried to know the fineness of God, and the glorious countenance of God, much less does anyone intentionally submit to God. Nor has anyone ever looked upon God as something beloved in their heart; they all drag Him over when they need Him, and toss Him to one side and ignore Him when they don't. It is as if, to man, God is a puppet, one that man may manipulate at will, and make demands of howsoever he wishes or desires. But God says, "If, during the period of My incarnation, I had not cared for man's frailty, then all of humanity would, solely on account of My incarnation, have been frightened out of their wits and, as a result, fallen into Hades," which shows just how great the significance of God's incarnation is: In the flesh, He has come to conquer mankind, instead of destroying all mankind from the spiritual realm. Thus, when the Word became flesh, nobody knew. If God were not caring of man's frailty, when He became flesh and heaven and earth were turned upside down, all people would have been annihilated. Because it is in people's nature to like the new and hate the old, and they often forget the bad times when things are going well, and none of them know how blessed they are, thus God repeatedly reminds them that they must treasure how hard fought today is; for the sake of tomorrow, they must treasure today even more, and must not, like an animal, climb upon high and not recognize the master, and not be ignorant of the blessings they live among. Thus, they become well-behaved, no longer are they boastful or arrogant, and they come to know that it is not the case that man's nature is good, but that God's mercy and love has come upon man; they fear chastisement, and so dare do nothing more.

INTERPRETATION OF THE THIRTEENTH UTTERANCE

God hates all the descendants of the great red dragon, and He hates the great red dragon even more. This is the root of the wrath within God's heart. It seems that God wants to cast all things that belong to the great red dragon into the lake of fire and brimstone to thoroughly incinerate them. There are times that it even seems that God wants to extend His hand to personally wipe it out—only that could erase the hatred in His heart. Every single person in the house of the great red dragon is a beast who is lacking in humanity, which is why God strongly suppressed His anger to say the following: "Among all My people, and among all My sons, that is, among the ones that I have chosen out of the whole human race, you belong to the lowest group." God has begun a decisive battle with the great red dragon in its own country, and when His plan comes to fruition He will destroy it, no longer allowing it to corrupt mankind or ravage their souls. Not a day goes by that God doesn't call out to His people who are slumbering to save them, but they are all in a state of sluggishness as if they had taken sleeping pills. If He does not rouse them for even a moment they return to their state of sleep, with no awareness. It seems that all of His people are two-thirds paralyzed. They don't know their own needs or their own deficiencies, or even what they should wear or what they should eat. It shows that the great red dragon has put forth a great deal of effort to corrupt people. Its ugliness extends throughout every region of China. It has even made people vexed and unwilling to stay any longer in this decadent, vulgar country. What God hates most is the essence of the great red dragon, which is why He reminds people in His wrath every single day, and people live under the eye of His wrath every day. Even so, the majority of people still don't know to seek God, but they just sit there watching and wait to be hand-fed. Even if they were starving to death they wouldn't be willing to go find their own food. People's consciences were long ago corrupted by Satan and changed in essence to become cold-heartedness. No wonder God said: "Had I not prompted you, you would still not have awakened, but would have remained as if in a frozen state, and again, as if in a state of hibernation." It's as if people were like animals in hibernation who were passing the winter and did not ask to eat or drink; this is precisely the current condition of God's people, which is why God only requires people to know God incarnate Himself in the light. He has no requirement of people to change a great deal or for them to have great growth in their life. That would be enough to defeat the dirty, filthy great red dragon, thus better manifesting God's great power.

When people read God's words all they can understand is the literal meaning but they are incapable of understanding their spiritual significance. The three words of "the roiling waves" have stumped every one of the heroes. When God's wrath is displayed, aren't His words, His actions, and His disposition the roiling waves? When God judges all mankind, is this not a revealing of His wrath? Is this not when those roiling waves take effect? Who is it that is not living in the midst of the roiling waves due to man's corruption? That is, who does not live in the midst of God's wrath? When God wants to mete out catastrophe upon mankind, isn't what people see a "tumbling welter of dark clouds"? Among man, who is not fleeing from catastrophe? God's wrath pours down on people like a heavy rain and blows them about like a fierce wind. People are all purified through God's words as if they had been met with a swirling snowstorm. It is God's words that are most inscrutable to mankind. It is through His words that He created the world and also through His words that He leads and purifies all mankind. And in the end, He will restore the purity of the entire universe through His words. It can be seen in every part of His words that the existence of the Spirit of God is not hollow. It is only in God's words that people can see a bit of the way of survival. People can all treasure His words because they contain provision of life. The more man focuses on His words, the more issues He will present to man—this makes them completely at a loss and have no time to respond. God's repeated questioning is enough to make people ponder things for a period of time, let alone the rest of His words. In God, all is full and abundant and there is nothing lacking. However, people are not capable of enjoying much of it; they only know the superficial side of His words as if all they could see was the chicken skin but they couldn't eat the chicken meat. This shows that people's blessings are too limited and they are actually incapable of enjoying God. In people's notions they each hold a certain God within their hearts, which is why no one has any idea what a vague God is, or what the image of Satan is. So when God said "because what you believe in is merely Satan's image and has nothing whatever to do with God Himself," people were all dumbfounded that they had believed for so many years, but still hadn't realized that what they believed in was Satan and not God Himself. They felt a sudden void but they didn't know what to say. At that time they began to become confused again. Only by working this way can people better accept new light and thus deny the things of old. No matter how good they seem, they will not do. This is more beneficial for people to understand the practical God Himself and thus be able to rid themselves of the status that people's notions hold in their hearts and allow God Himself to occupy people. Only this way can the significance of the incarnation be achieved and can people know the practical God Himself with their physical eyes.

God has told people about the conditions of the spiritual world many times: "When Satan comes before Me, I do not recoil from its wild ferocity, nor am I frightened by its hideousness: I simply ignore it." What people have understood from this is only the situation in reality; they do not know the truth in the spiritual world. Because God has become flesh, Satan has employed all sorts of methods of accusation, wanting to attack God this way. However, God does not retreat because of this—He just speaks and works among mankind and allows people to know Him through His incarnate flesh. Satan is red-eyed with fury and has put forth a great deal of effort on God's people to make them negative, retreat, and even lose their way. But because of the effect of God's words Satan has failed, thus adding to its wantonness. This is why God has reminded everyone: "In your lives, there may come a day when you will meet with this kind of situation: Would you willingly allow yourselves to fall captive to Satan, or will you have Me obtain you?" Although people are not aware of the things that occur in the spiritual world, as soon as they hear these kinds of words from God they are cautious and afraid—this beats back Satan's attacks, which is adequate to show God's glory. Although they entered into a new method of working a long time ago, people still do not have clarity on life in the kingdom—even if they understand, they lack clarity. So after God issued a warning to people, He introduced the essence of life in the kingdom to them: "Life in the kingdom is the life of the people and God Himself." Since God Himself is incarnated, a life of the third heaven has been achieved here on earth. This is not only God's plan, but it is also accomplished by God. As time goes by people come to know God Himself more and more and thus are more able to taste life in heaven, because they have truly felt that God is on earth, that He is not a vague God in heaven. So, the life on earth is like that in heaven. The reality is that God becomes flesh and tastes the bitterness of the human world, and the more He is able to taste that bitterness in the flesh, the more it proves that He is the practical God Himself. This is why the following words are enough to prove the practicality of the God of today: "In My dwelling place, which is the place where I am hidden, nevertheless, in this My dwelling place, I have defeated all My enemies; in My dwelling place, I have gained real experience of living on earth; in My dwelling place, I am observing man's every word and action, and watching over and dictating to the whole of the human race.” Actually living in the flesh, actually experiencing human life in the flesh, actually understanding all of humanity from within the flesh, actually conquering mankind in the flesh, actually waging the decisive battle with the great red dragon in the flesh, and doing all of God’s work in the flesh—isn’t this precisely the existence of the practical God Himself? However, it is very rare that people can see the knack in these ordinary words of God. They just pass through them quickly and do not feel the preciousness or rarity of God’s words.

God’s words transition very well—the phrase “As mankind lies comatose” transitions the description of God Himself into a description of the state of all mankind. Here, “blasts of cold radiance” does not represent the lightning of the East, but it is God’s words, that is, His new method of working. Thus, in this all sorts of dynamics of people can be seen: After entering into the new method, they all lose their sense of direction, knowing not whence they come nor whither they are going. “Most people are struck by the laser-like beams” refers to the people eliminated through the new method, those who cannot withstand the trials or bear the refinement of sufferings and thus are thrown into the bottomless pit once again. God’s word exposes mankind to a certain degree—it seems that people are afraid when they see God’s words, and they dare not say anything just as if they saw the barrel of a gun pointed directly at their heart. However, they also feel that there are good things in God’s words. Their hearts are very conflicted and they don’t know what they should do, but because of their faith, all they do is steel themselves and dig deeper into His words for fear that God will abandon them. Just as God said: “who among mankind does not exist in this state? Who does not exist within My light? Even if you are strong, or supposing you are weak, how can you avoid the coming of My light?” If God uses someone, even if they are weak, God will still illuminate and enlighten them in His chastisement, so the more people read God’s words, the more they understand Him, the more reverence they have for Him, and the less they dare to be reckless. That people have made it here today is entirely because of God’s great power. It is because of the authority of His words, that is, it is due to the Spirit in His words that people have fear of God. The more God reveals the true face of mankind, the more in awe of Him they are, thus the more certain they are of the reality of His existence. This is God’s beacon on the path for mankind to understand God; this is the trail God has given them to follow. If you think about it carefully, is this not so?

INTERPRETATION OF THE FOURTEENTH UTTERANCE

Man has never learned anything from the word of God. Instead, man merely treasures the surface of God's word, but not knowing its true meaning. Therefore, although the majority of people are fond of the word of God, God says they do not actually treasure it. This is because in God's view, even though His word is a valuable thing, people have not tasted its true sweetness. Therefore, they can only "quench their thirst with thoughts of plums,"^[a] and thereby assuage their greedy hearts. Not only is God's Spirit at work among all people, there is also the enlightenment of God's word. It's just that people are too careless to be able to truly appreciate its essence. In man's mind, it is now the age of the kingdom being fully realized, but in reality this is not the case. Although what God prophesies is what He has accomplished, the actual kingdom has not yet fully arrived on the earth. Instead, along with changes in mankind, along with progress in work, and along with the lightning coming out of the East, that is, along with the deepening of God's word, the kingdom will gradually come about on earth, gradually but completely coming down to earth. The process of the coming of the kingdom is also the process of the divine work on earth. At the same time as this, God has started throughout the universe the work that has not been done in all the ages of history to reorganize the entire earth. For example, there are tremendous changes throughout the universe including changes in the State of Israel, the coup d'état in the United States of America, the changes in Egypt, the changes in the Soviet Union, and the overthrow of China. When the entire universe has settled down and been restored to normal, that is when God's work on earth will be completed; that is when the kingdom will come to earth. This is the true meaning of the words "When all the nations of the world are disrupted, that is precisely when My kingdom will be established and

a. This is a Chinese idiom.

shaped and also when I will be transfigured and turn to the entire universe.” God does not hide anything from mankind, He has continuously told people of all His richness, but they cannot figure out His meaning, they just accept His word like a fool. At this stage of work, man has learned the unfathomableness of God and moreover can appreciate how immense the task of understanding Him is; for this reason they have felt that believing in God is the most difficult thing to do. They are completely helpless—it is like teaching a pig to sing, or like a mouse stuck in a trap. Indeed, no matter how much power a person has or how masterful a person’s skill, or whether a person has limitless capabilities inside, when it comes to God’s word these things mean nothing. It is as if mankind is a pile of burnt paper ash in God’s eyes, completely devoid of any value, let alone any use. This is a perfect illustration of the true meaning of the words “I have become more and more concealed from humans and increasingly unfathomable to them.” From this it can be seen that God’s work follows a natural progression and is performed based on what the perceptual organs of humans can take in. When mankind’s nature is firm and unshaken, the words God speaks completely conform to their conceptions and it seems as if God and mankind’s conceptions are one in the same, without any difference at all. This makes people somewhat aware of God’s realness, but this is not the primary objective of God. God allows people to settle down before formally beginning His true work on earth. Therefore, during this beginning that is confusing for mankind, mankind realizes that their former ideas were incorrect and that God and man are as different as heaven and earth and not at all alike. Because God’s words can no longer be evaluated on the basis of human conceptions, man immediately begins to look at God in a new light, and thereupon they gaze at God in astonishment, as if the practical God is as unapproachable as the invisible and untouchable God, as if the flesh of God is only in the exterior and without His essence. People think that^[a] although He is the incarnation of the Spirit, He can convert into Spirit form and float away at any time. Therefore, people have developed a somewhat guarded mindset. At the mention of God, people dress Him up with their conceptions, saying He can ride on clouds and mist, can walk on water, can suddenly appear and vanish among humans, and some others have even more descriptive explanations. Because of mankind's ignorance and lack of insight, God said "when they believe they have resisted Me or offended My administrative decrees, I yet turn a blind eye."

When God reveals the ugly side and the internal world of mankind, He truly is always spot on correct, without the slightest bit of deviation. It can even be said that there is no error whatsoever. This is proof that utterly convinces people. Because of the principle of God's work, many of His words and deeds leave an impression that is impossible to erase, and people seem to have an even deeper understanding of Him, as if they discover things that are more precious in Him. "... in their memories, I am a God who shows mercy on men rather than chastises them, or I am God Himself who does not mean what He says. These are all imaginations born of human thought and not in accordance with the facts." Although mankind has never attached importance to the true face of God, they know "the lateral side of His disposition" like the back of their hand; they are always picking holes in God's words and actions. This is because mankind is always willing to pay attention to negative things, and ignore positive things, merely looking down upon the deeds of God. The more God says He humbly hides Himself in His dwelling place, the more mankind demands of Him. They say: "If God incarnate is observing man's every deed and experiencing human life, why is it the majority of the time God does not know of our actual situation? Does it mean that God is truly hidden?" Although God looks deep into the human heart, He still works according to the actual states of mankind, being neither vague nor supernatural. In order to completely get rid of the old disposition within mankind, God has spared no effort to speak from various perspectives: uncovering their true nature, pronouncing judgment on their disobedience; one moment saying He will deal with all people, and the next saying He will save a group of people; either placing requirements on mankind or warning them; alternately dissecting their innards, alternately providing treatment. Thus, under the guidance of God's word, it is as if mankind had traveled to every corner of the earth and entered a bounteous garden where each flower vies to be the most beautiful. Whatever God says mankind will enter into His word, just as if God were a magnet and anything with iron will be drawn to it. When they see the words "Humanity pays Me no heed, thus neither do I take them seriously. Humans pay no attention to Me, so neither do I need to exert effort on them. Is this not the best of both worlds?" all of God's people seem to have been knocked into the bottomless pit again, or struck at their vital point again, leaving them utterly shocked, and thus again they enter into My method of working.^[a] They are especially confused with regard to the words “If, as one of My people in the kingdom, you are unable to keep to your duty, you will be detested and rejected by Me!” Most people have been brought to heartbreaking tears: “I had a hard time climbing out of the bottomless pit, so I would have no hope at all if I am to fall into it again. I have gained nothing in the human world, undergoing all manner of difficulties and troubles in my life. In particular, after coming into the faith, I underwent abandonment from loved ones, persecution from families, slander from the worldly people, and I did not enjoy happiness of the world. If I again fall into the bottomless pit, would my life not be even more in vain?” (The more man thinks about this the more sorrowful they feel.) “All of my hopes have been entrusted into God’s hands. If God abandons me, I might as well die now.... Well, all is predestined by God, now I can only seek to love God, all else is secondary. Who made this my fate?” The more man thinks, the closer they are to God’s standards and the purpose of His words. In this way objective of His words is achieved. After man sees God’s words they all have an ideological struggle inside of them. Their only choice is to submit to the dictates of fate, and in this way the objective of God is achieved. The harsher God’s words are, the more complex the internal world of mankind becomes as a result. This is just like touching a wound; the harder it is touched the more it hurts, to the point that they hover between life and death and even lose the faith to survive. In this way, only when mankind suffers most and is in the depths of hopelessness can they give their true hearts over to God. The nature of mankind is that if even a shred of hope remains they will not go to God for help, but will adopt self-sufficient methods of natural survival. This is because the nature of mankind is self-righteous, and they look down on everyone. Therefore, God said: “not a single human being has been able to also love Me whilst in comfort. Not a single person has reached out in their time of peace and happiness that I might partake of their joy.” This is indeed disappointing: God created mankind, but when He comes to the human world they seek to resist Him, drive Him away from their territory, as if He were a wandering orphan, or a stateless person in the world. Nobody feels attached to God, nobody truly loves Him, nobody has welcomed His coming. Instead, when seeing the coming of God, their joyful faces become clouded in the blink of an eye, as if a sudden storm were on the way, as if God would take away the happiness of their family, as if God had never blessed mankind, but instead had only given mankind misfortune. Therefore, in the minds of mankind, God is not a boon to them, but One who always curses them; therefore, mankind does not pay heed to Him, they do not welcome Him, they always are cold toward Him, and this has never changed. Because mankind has these things in their heart, God says mankind is unreasonable and immoral, and that not even the feelings that humans are supposedly equipped with can be perceived in them. Mankind does not show any consideration for God's feelings, but uses so-called "righteousness" to deal with God. Mankind has been like this for many years and for this reason God has said their disposition has not changed. This goes to show that they have no more substance than a few feathers. It may be said that humans are worthless wretches because they do not treasure themselves. If they don't even love themselves, but trample on themselves, doesn't this show they are worthless? Mankind is like an immoral woman who plays games with herself and who gives herself willingly to others to be violated. But even so, they still do not know how lowly they are. They find pleasure in working for others, or in talking with others, putting themselves under the control of others; is this not truly the filthiness of mankind? Although I have not undergone a life among mankind, not having truly experienced human life, I have a very clear understanding of every move, every action, every word, and every deed of man. I am even able to expose mankind to their deepest shame, to the point that they no longer dare to show their own tricks and no longer dare to give way to their lust. Like a snail which retreats into its shell, they no longer dare to expose their own ugly state. Because mankind does not know themselves, their greatest flaw is to willingly parade their charms before others, parading their ugly countenance; this is something God detests most. Because relations between people are abnormal, and there are no normal interpersonal relationships between people, much less do they have a normal^[a] relationship with God. God has said so much, and in so doing His main objective is to occupy a place in the hearts of mankind, to make people get rid of all the idols in their hearts, so that God can wield power over all mankind and achieve His purpose of being on earth.

INTERPRETATION OF THE FIFTEENTH UTTERANCE

The greatest difference between God and man is that God's words always hit the nail on the head, and nothing is hidden. So this aspect of God's disposition can be seen in the first words of today. One aspect is that they expose man's true colors, and another aspect is that they openly reveal God's disposition. These are a couple of sources of how God's words are able to achieve results. However, people do not grasp this, they always just come to know themselves in God's words but have not "dissected" God. It's as if they are deeply afraid of offending Him, that God will kill them for their "seriousness." In fact, when most people eat and drink the word of God, it is from a negative aspect, not a positive aspect. It could be said that people have now begun to "focus on humility and obedience" under the guidance of His words. It can be seen from this that people have started to go to another extreme, from not paying attention to His words toward excessive attention to His words. Yet there has never been a person who has entered in from a positive aspect, and there has never been a person who has truly grasped God's goal in having man pay attention to His words. It is known from what God says that He doesn't need to personally experience the life of the church to be able to understand the actual states of all the people in the church, accurately and without error. Because a new method has just been entered into, all people have yet to fully throw off their negative elements; the scent of corpses still wafts throughout the church. It's as if people have just taken medicine and are still in a daze, and have not yet fully regained consciousness. It's as if they are still menaced by death, so that they are still in the midst of their terror and they cannot transcend themselves. "Man is a creature without self-knowledge": This statement is still said based on the method of church building. In the church, although everyone pays attention to God's words, their natures are still deeply ingrained and they are unable to extricate themselves. This is why God uses the speaking method from the last phase to judge people so that they accept the smiting of God's words while they are too full of themselves. Even though people underwent five months of refinement in the bottomless pit, their actual state is still one of not knowing God. They are still dissolute—they have just somewhat increased their guardedness toward God. Only in this step do people begin to enter into the way of knowing God's words, so when making a connection with the essence of God's words, it's not hard to see that the previous step of work paved the way for today, and only today is everything being normalized. People's fatal weakness is liking to separate God's Spirit from His fleshly self so that they can gain personal freedom, to avoid always being constrained. This is why God describes man as little birds flitting merrily about. This is the actual state of all of mankind. This is what makes it easiest to topple all people, what makes it easiest for them to get lost. It can be seen from this that the work Satan does in mankind is nothing more than this. The more Satan does this in people, the stricter God's requirements of them are. He requires people to pay attention to His words and Satan works hard to destroy it. God, however, has always reminded people to pay more attention to His words; this is the peak of the war of the spiritual world. It can be put this way: What God wants to do in man is just what Satan wants to destroy, and what Satan wants to destroy is expressed through man without being hidden at all. What God does in people has clear demonstrations—their conditions are getting better and better. Satan's destruction in mankind is also clearly represented—they are more and more depraved and their conditions are sinking lower and lower. If it's dire enough, they could be captured by Satan. This is the actual condition of the church that has been presented in God's words, and it is also the actual situation of the spiritual world. It is a reflection of the dynamics of the spiritual world. If people do not have the confidence to cooperate with God, they are in danger of being captured by Satan. This is a fact. If someone is truly able to fully offer up their heart for God to occupy, that is just as God has said: "before Me, he seems to be lying in My embrace, tasting the warmth of My embrace." This shows that God's requirements of mankind are not high—He just needs them to rise up and cooperate with Him. Isn't this an easy and happy thing? And just this one thing has stumped all of the heroes? It's as if the battlefield generals are made to sit around in a xiu lou^[a] doing embroidery—these “heroes” are immobilized by the difficulty and they don’t know what they should do.

In whatever aspect God’s requirements of mankind is greatest, it means that Satan’s attacks on mankind will be the most serious in that aspect, and the states of all people are revealed through this. “... which of you, standing before Me, would be as white as the driven snow, as unspotted as pure jade?” All people are still deceiving and concealing something from God; they are still carrying out their own unique shady business. They have not entirely given their hearts over to God’s hands to satisfy Him, but they want to gain His rewards through their own enthusiasm. When people have a delicious meal, they have God standing to one side, leaving Him at their mercy. When people have beautiful clothing, they just stand in front of the mirror enjoying their own beauty, and do not satisfy God from deep in their hearts. When they have standing, when they have luxurious enjoyments, they just sit in their status and begin to enjoy it, but they do not humble themselves because of God’s elevation. Instead, they stand in their high place using their high-sounding words and do not pay attention to God’s presence, nor do they pursue to know God’s preciousness. When people have an idol in their hearts or when their hearts have been seized by someone else, then they had already denied the presence of God, and it’s as if God is an interloper in their hearts. They deeply fear that God will steal away other people’s love for them and they’ll feel lonely. According to God’s intention, there would be nothing on earth that would make people ignore God; even the love between people would not be able to drive God away from that “love.” All earthly things are empty, even the feelings between people that cannot be seen or touched. Without the existence of God, all creatures would return to nothing. On earth, all people have their own things that they love, but there has never been a person who has made God’s words that thing that they love. This determines the degree of people’s understanding of God’s words. Although His words are harsh, people are not injured because they don’t genuinely pay attention to His words, instead they go look at it like a flower. They don’t treat it like fruit to taste themselves, so they do not know the essence of God’s words. “If human beings were genuinely able to see the sharpness of My sword, they would go scurrying like rats into their holes." Speaking based on the state of a normal person, after reading God's words they would be stunned, full of shame, and unable to face others. But now people are just the opposite—they use God's words as a weapon to strike blows against others. They really know no shame!

We have been brought into this state along with the words of God: "Within the kingdom, not only do utterances issue forth from My mouth, but My feet tread ceremoniously everywhere upon the ground." In the war between God and Satan, God is winning every step of the way. He is expanding His work on a large scale throughout the entire universe, and it could be said that His footprints are everywhere, and the signs of His victory can be seen everywhere. In Satan's schemes, it wants to destroy God's management by breaking countries apart, but God has utilized this to reorganize the entire universe, but not wipe it out. God does something new every day but people have not been aware of it. People do not pay attention to the dynamics of the spiritual world, so they are unable to see God's new work. "Within the cosmos, everything becomes new in the radiance of My glory, presenting a heartwarming aspect that ravishes the senses and lifts the spirits, as if man now exists in a heaven beyond the heavens, as conceived in the human imagination, unmolested by Satan, free from the assaults of enemies from outside." This foretells the joyful scene of the kingdom of Christ on earth, and it also introduces the situation of the third heaven to mankind: There is only the existence of holy things that belong to God without any of the assaults of Satan's forces. But what is most important is allowing people to see the circumstances of the work on earth of God Himself: Heaven is a new heaven, and following that the earth is also renewed. Because it is life under God's own guidance, people are all immeasurably happy. In people's awareness, Satan is mankind's prisoner and they are not at all timid or fearful because of its existence. Because of the direct instruction and guidance from the divine, Satan's schemes have all turned into nothing, which even proves that it no longer exists, that it has been obliterated by God's work. That is why it is said that man exists in a heaven beyond the heavens. What God said: "No disturbance has ever arisen, nor has the unity of the cosmos ever been broken," was regarding the condition of the spiritual world. It is the proof with which God proclaims victory to Satan, and it is the sign of God's final victory. No man can change

God's mind, and no one can know it. Although people have read God's words and they have examined it with seriousness, no matter what, they are unable to say what its essence is. For example, God said: "I execute flying leaps above the stars, and when the sun shoots forth its rays, I blot out their warmth, sending giant flurries of snowflakes as big as goose feathers drifting down from My hands. But when I change My mind, all the snow melts into a river. In a moment, spring has sprung everywhere beneath the skies, and emerald green transforms the entire landscape upon the earth." Although people are able to imagine these words in their minds, God's intention isn't so simple. When everyone under heaven is in a daze, God utters the voice of salvation, awakening people's hearts. But because all sorts of disasters are befalling, they feel the bleakness of the world so they all seek death and are in the frigid, icy caves. They are frozen by the chill of huge snowstorms to the point that they cannot survive because there is no warmth on the earth. It is because of people's corruption that people are killing each other more and more cruelly. And in the church, the majority of people will be swallowed up by the great red dragon in one gulp. After all trials have passed, Satan's disruptions will be removed. The entire world, in the midst of transformation, will thus be permeated by spring and warmth will cover the world. The world will be full of energy. These are all the steps of the entire management plan. The significance of the "night" that God spoke of refers to when Satan's madness reaches its peak, which will be during the night. Isn't that the current situation? Although people all survive under the guidance of God's light, they are undergoing the misery of the darkness of night. They will live eternally in the midst of a dark night if they cannot escape from Satan's bonds. Then take a look at the countries on earth: Because of the steps of God's work, the countries on earth are "running around," and they are all seeking their own suitable destination. Because God's day has not yet come, on earth all is still in a state of muddy turbulence. When God openly appears to the entire universe, His glory will fill Mount Zion and all things will be orderly and neat under the arrangement of His hands. God's words not only speak to today but also foretell tomorrow. Today is the foundation of tomorrow, so people in this current situation are unable to completely understand God's words. Only after His words have been fully fulfilled will they be able to understand them in their entirety.

God's Spirit fills up all of the space in the universe but He also works within all people. This way, in people's hearts it's as if God's figure is everywhere, and every place contains the work of His Spirit. Indeed, God's appearance in the flesh is to conquer these examples of Satan and in the end to obtain them. But while working in the flesh, the Spirit is also cooperating with the flesh to transform these people. It can be said that God's deeds extend throughout the entire world and that His Spirit fills the whole universe, but because of the steps of His work, those who do evil have not been punished, while those who do good have not been rewarded. So, His deeds have not been appreciated by all the people on earth. God is both above and within all things, and even more, He is among all people. This is sufficient to show the actual existence of God. Because He has not openly appeared to mankind, people have developed illusions such as: "As far as humanity is concerned, I seem to have real existence, and yet I seem also not to have being." Up until now, out of all those who believe in God, none are utterly, one hundred percent certain that God truly exists. They are all three parts doubt and two parts belief. This is the actual situation for mankind. People now are all in the following circumstance: They believe that there is a God, but they have not seen Him. Or, they do not believe that there is a God, but there are many difficulties that cannot be resolved by mankind. It seems there is always something entangling them that they cannot escape from. Even though they believe in God, it seems that they always feel a bit of vagueness. But if they don't believe, they would be afraid of losing out if it actually is true. This is their ambivalence.

"For the sake of My name, for the sake of My Spirit, for the sake of My whole plan of management—who is able to offer up all the strength in his body?" And He also said: "Today, when the kingdom is in the world of men, is the time that I have come in person into the world of men. Is there anyone who could, intrepidly, go into the battlefield in My behalf?" The goal of God's words is this: If it weren't for God in the flesh directly doing His divine work, or if it weren't for God incarnate but He worked through ministers, then God would never be able to conquer the great red dragon, and He would not be able to reign as King among mankind. Mankind would be unable to know God Himself in reality, so it would still be Satan's reign. Thus, this stage of work must be done personally through the incarnate flesh of God. If the flesh were changed then this stage of the plan could never be completed because the significance and the essence of different flesh is not the same. People can only understand the literal meaning of these words because God grasps the root. God said: “But, when all is said and done, there is no one who understands whether this is the working of the Spirit, or a function of the flesh. This one thing alone is sufficient for man to experience in minute detail through the course of a lifetime.” People have been continually corrupted by Satan for a number of years, and they lost perception of spiritual matters long ago. For this reason just one sentence of God’s words is like a feast for people’s eyes. Because of the distance between the Spirit and spirits, all those who believe in God have a sense of longing for Him, and are all willing to become closer and to pour out their hearts, yet they don’t dare to come into contact with Him, and they just remain in awe. This is the power of attraction of the Spirit. Because God is a God for people to love, and in Him there are infinite elements for them to love, people all love Him and they all want to confide in Him. In truth, everyone has a heart of love for God, it is just Satan’s disruption that has made numb, dull-witted, pitiful people unable to know God. This is why God spoke out mankind’s true feelings toward God: “Man has never despised Me in his heart’s innermost reaches; rather, he cleaves to Me in the depths of his spirit. ... My reality renders man at a loss, dumbfounded and perplexed, and yet he is willing to accept it all.” This is the actual condition deep in the hearts of those who believe in God. When people truly know God they will naturally have a different attitude toward Him, and they will be able to utter praises from deep in their hearts because of the role of the spirit. God is deep in the spirits of all people, but because of the corruption of Satan they have confused God with Satan. God today works from this very aspect, and this has been the focus of the battle of the spiritual world from start to finish.

INTERPRETATION OF THE SIXTEENTH UTTERANCE

To people, God is too great, too abundant, too wondrous, too unfathomable; in their eyes, God’s words rise upon high, and appear as a great masterpiece of the world. But because people have too many failings, and their minds are too simple, and, furthermore, because their abilities of acceptance are too meager, regardless of how clearly God speaks His words, they remain seated and unmoving, as if suffering from mental illness. When they're hungry, they don't understand that they must eat, when they're thirsty, they don't understand that they must drink; they just keep on shouting and screaming, as if there is indescribable hardship in the depths of their spirits, yet they are unable to talk about it. When God created mankind, His intention was for man to live in normal humanity and accept God's words as befits his instinct. But because, at the very beginning, man succumbed to the temptation of Satan, today he remains incapable of extricating himself, and is yet incapable of recognizing the deceitful schemes carried out by Satan over thousands of years, added to which he lacks the faculties to fully know God's words—all of this has led to the present situation. As things stand today, people still live in danger of Satan's temptation, and so remain incapable of the pure appreciation of God's words. In the dispositions of normal people there is no crookedness or deceitfulness, people have a normal relationship with each other, they do not stand alone, and their lives are neither mediocre nor decadent. So, too, is God exalted among all, His words permeate among man, people live in peace with one another and under the care and protection of God, the earth is filled with harmony, without the interference of Satan, and the glory of God holds the utmost importance among man. Such people are like angels: pure, vibrant, never complaining about God, and devoting all their efforts solely to God's glory on earth. Now is the time of the black night, all are groping about and searching, the pitch black night makes their hair stand on end, and they can't help but tremble; listening closely, the howls of gust after gust of northwesterly wind seem accompanied by the mournful sobs of man. People grieve and weep for their destiny. Why is it that they read God's words but are incapable of understanding them? It is as if their lives are on the verge of hopelessness, as if death is about to befall them, as if their last day is before their eyes. Such miserable circumstances are the very moment when the fragile angels call out to God, telling of their own hardship in one mournful cry after another. It is for this reason that the angels who work among the sons and the people of God will never again descend upon man; this is to prevent them being caught in the manipulation of Satan whilst in the flesh, unable to extricate themselves, and so they work only in the spiritual world that is invisible to man. Thus, when God says “when I ascend to the throne in man’s heart will be when My sons and people rule over the earth,” He is referring to when the angels on earth enjoy the blessing of service to God in heaven. Because man is the expression of the spirits of angels, God says that for man, being on earth is like being in heaven, him serving God on earth is like the angels serving God in heaven directly—and thus, during his days on earth, man enjoys the blessings of the third heaven. This is what is actually being said in these words.

There is so much meaning hidden in God’s words. “When the day comes, people will know Me in the depths of their hearts, and will remember Me in their thoughts” is directed at man’s spirit. Because of the frailty of the angels, they always depend on God in all things, and have always been attached to God and adored God. But because of Satan’s disturbance, they can’t help themselves, can’t control themselves, they wish to love God but are incapable of loving Him with all their hearts, and so they suffer pain. Only when God’s work reaches a certain point can these poor angels’ desire to truly love God come true, which is why God spoke those words. The nature of the angels is to love, cherish, and obey God, yet they have been incapable of achieving this on earth, and have had no choice but to endure until the present time. You might look upon the world of today: There is a God in the hearts of all people, but they are incapable of telling the difference between the true God and the false gods, and although they love this God of theirs, they are incapable of truly loving God, by which is meant they have no control of themselves. The ugly face of man revealed by God is the true face of Satan in the spiritual realm. Man was originally innocent, and without sin, and thus all of the corrupt, ugly manners of man are Satan’s actions in the spiritual realm, and are a faithful record of the developments of the spiritual realm. “Today, people have become qualified, and believe they can strut about in front of Me, and laugh and joke with Me without the slightest inhibition, and address Me as an equal. Still man does not know Me, still he believes that in essence we are about the same, that we are both of flesh and blood, and both dwell in the human world.” This is what Satan has done in man’s heart. Satan uses the conceptions and naked eyes of man to oppose God, yet without equivocation God tells man of these happenings in order that man might avoid catastrophe here. The mortal weakness of all people is that they only see “a body of flesh and blood, and do not perceive the Spirit of God.” This is the basis of one aspect of Satan's enticement of man. People believe that only the Spirit in this flesh can be called God. No one believes that today, the Spirit has become flesh and actually appeared before their eyes; people see God as two parts—"the clothing and the flesh"—and none look upon God as the incarnation of the Spirit, none see that the nature of the flesh is the disposition of God. In people's imagination, God is especially normal, but do they not know that hidden in this normality is one aspect of the profound significance of God?

When God began to cover the entire world, it became pitch black, and as people slept, God took this opportunity to descend among man, and officially commenced issuing the Spirit to all corners of the earth, embarking upon the work of saving mankind. It can be said that when God began to assume the image of the flesh, God personally worked on earth. Then the work of the Spirit began, and there officially commenced all work on earth. For two thousand years, the Spirit of God has worked throughout the universe. People neither know nor sense this, but during the last days, at the time when this age is soon to conclude, God has descended to earth to work in person. This is the blessing of those who were born during the last days, who are able to personally behold the image of God who lives in the flesh. "When the entire face of the deep was murky, among man I began to taste the bitterness of the world. My Spirit travels throughout the world and looks upon the hearts of all people, yet so, too, do I conquer mankind in My incarnate flesh." Such is the harmonious cooperation between God in heaven and God on earth. Ultimately, in their thoughts people will believe that the God on earth is the God in heaven, that the heavens and the earth and everything in them were created by the God on earth, that man is controlled by the God on earth, that the God on earth does the work in heaven on earth, and that the God in heaven has appeared in the flesh. This is the ultimate objective of God's work on earth, and so, this stage is the highest standard of work in the period of the flesh, and it is carried out in divinity, and causes all people to become sincerely convinced. The more people search for God in their conceptions, the more they feel that the God on earth is not real. Thus, God says that people search for God among empty words and doctrines. The more people know God in their conceptions, the more adept they become at speaking these words and doctrines, and the more admirable they become; the more people speak words and doctrines, the further they stray from God, and the more incapable they become of knowing the essence of man, and the more they disobey God, and the further they depart from God's requirements. God's requirements of man are not as supernatural as people imagine, yet never has anyone ever truly understood God's will, and thus God says, "people seek only in the boundless sky, or upon the rolling sea, or upon the placid lake, or among empty letters and doctrines." The more requirements God makes of man, the more people feel that God is unreachable, and the more they believe that God is great. Thus, in their consciousness, all of the words spoken from God's mouth are unattainable by man, leaving God no choice but to personally act; man, meanwhile, has not the slightest inclination to cooperate with God, and merely persists in bowing his head and confessing his sins, trying to be humble and obedient. As such, without realizing it, people enter into a new religion, into religious ceremony that is stricter than in the religious churches. This requires that people return to normal conditions through transforming their negative state into one that is positive; if not, man shall become ever more deeply ensnared.

Why does God focus on describing mountains and waters in His utterances of many times? Is there symbolic meaning in these words? God not only allows man to behold His deeds in His flesh, but also allows man to understand His powers in the firmament. In this way, at the same time as believing without doubt that this is God in the flesh, people also come to know the deeds of the practical God, and thus the God on earth is sent unto heaven, and the God in heaven is brought down to earth, only after which people are capable of more completely beholding all that God is and gaining a greater knowledge of the omnipotence of God. The more that God is able to conquer mankind in the flesh and transcend the flesh to travel across the entire universe, the more people are able to behold God's deeds upon the basis of beholding the practical God, and thus know the verity of God's work throughout the entire universe, that it is not fake but real, and so they come to know that the practical God of today is the embodiment of the Spirit, and not of the same kind of fleshly body as man. Thus, God says, "But when I unleash My wrath, the mountains are immediately torn asunder, the ground immediately begins to convulse, water immediately dries up, and man is immediately beset by disaster." When people read God's words, they associate them with the flesh of God, and thus, the work and words in the spiritual realm directly point to God in the flesh, which enhances the effectiveness. When God speaks, it is often from heaven to earth, and once more from earth to heaven, leaving all people incapable of grasping the motivations and origins of God's words. "When I am among the heavens, never have the stars been thrown into panic by My presence. Instead, they put their hearts into their work for Me." Such is the state of heaven. God methodically arranges everything in the third heaven, with all of the servants in service to God doing their own work for God. They have never done anything in disobedience to God, so they are not thrown into the panic spoken of by God, but instead put their hearts into their work, never is there any disarray, and thus all angels live in God's light. Meanwhile, because of their disobedience, and because they do not know God, the people on earth all live in darkness, and the more they oppose God, the more they live in darkness. When God says, "The brighter the heavens, the darker the world beneath," He is referring to how the day of God is drawing ever closer to all mankind. Thus, God's 6,000-year busyness in the third heaven will soon be concluded. All things on earth have entered the final chapter, and shall soon each be cut away from God's hand. The further people go into the time of the last days, the more they are able to taste the corruption in the world of man; and the further they go into the time of the last days, the more indulgent they are of their own flesh; there are even many who wish to reverse the miserable state of the world, yet they all lose hope amidst their sighs because of God's deeds. Thus, when people sense the warmth of spring, God covers their eyes, and so they float upon the rolling waves, not one of them capable of reaching the far-off lifeboat. Because people are inherently weak, God says there are none who can turn things around. When people lose hope, God begins to speak to the entire universe, He begins to save all mankind, and it is only after this that people are able to enjoy the new life that comes once things have been turned around. The people of today are at the stage of self-deception. Because the road before them is so desolate and indistinct, and their future is "limitless" and "without borders," the people of this age have no inclination to fight, and can only pass their days like a Hanhao bird.^[a] Never has a. The story of the Hanhao bird is very similar to Aesop's fable of the ant and the grasshopper. The Hanhao bird prefers to sleep instead of building a nest while the weather is warm—despite repeated warnings from his neighbor, a magpie. When winter arrives, the bird freezes to death.

there been anyone who has seriously pursued life, and pursued the knowledge of man's existence; instead, they await the day when the Savior in heaven suddenly descends to reverse the miserable state of the world, only after which will they be earnest in their attempts to live. Such is the true state of all mankind and the mentality of all people.

Today, God foretells man's future new life in light of his mentality during this time, which is the glimmer of light of which God speaks. What God foretells is that which shall ultimately be achieved by God, and is the fruits of God's victory over Satan. "I move above all men and am watching everywhere. Nothing ever looks old, and no person is as he used to be. I rest upon the throne, I recline across the whole universe...." This is the outcome of God's present work. All of God's chosen people return to their original form, because of which the angels, who have suffered for so many years, are released, just as God says, "the face like that of the holy one within man's heart." Because the angels work on earth and serve God on earth, and God's glory spreads across the world, the heaven is brought to earth, and the earth is lifted up to the heaven. Therefore, man is the link that connects heaven and earth; heaven and earth are no longer apart, no longer separated, but connected as one. Throughout the world, only God and man exist. There is no dust or dirt, and all things are renewed, like a little lamb lying in a green grassland beneath the sky, enjoying all of God's grace. And it is because of the arrival of this greenness that the breath of life shines forth, for God comes to the world to live alongside man for all eternity, just as it was said from God's mouth that "I can peacefully reside within Zion once again." This is the symbol of Satan's defeat, it is the day of God's rest, and this day shall be extolled and proclaimed by all people, and commemorated by all people. When God is at rest upon the throne is also when God concludes His work on earth, and is the very moment that all of God's mysteries are shown to man; God and man will be forever in harmony, never apart—these are the beautiful scenes of the kingdom!

In mysteries are hidden mysteries, and God's words are truly profound and unfathomable!

INTERPRETATION OF THE SEVENTEENTH UTTERANCE

In truth, all the words from God's mouth are things that humans do not know; they are all the language that people have not heard, so it can be put like this: God's words themselves are a mystery. Most people mistakenly believe that only things that people cannot achieve conceptually, the matters of heaven that God allows people to know about now, or the truth about what God does in the spiritual world are mysteries. This shows that people do not treat all of God's words equally, nor do they treasure them, but they focus on what they believe to be "mysteries." This proves that people don't know what God's words are or what mysteries are—they only read God's words from within their own notions. The reality is that there isn't a single person who truly loves God's words—the root of why it is said that "people are experts at deceiving Me" is right here. It certainly is not that God says people are devoid of any merit, or that they are utter messes. This is the actual situation of mankind. People themselves are not very clear on how much space God actually occupies in their hearts—only God Himself fully knows. So right now people are like suckling babies—they are completely unaware of why they drink milk and what they are surviving for. It is only their mother that understands their needs, will not let them starve to death, and will not let them eat themselves to death. God knows people's needs best, so at times His love is embodied in His words, at times His judgment is revealed in them, at times His words hurt the innermost hearts of people, and sometimes His words are very sincere and earnest. This allows people to feel His kindness and His accessibility, and that He is not the "imposing figure" that is imagined, one who cannot be touched, nor is He the "Son of Heaven" in people's minds, one who cannot be looked directly in the face, and He particularly is not the "executioner" that people imagine who slaughters the innocent. God's entire disposition is revealed in His work, the disposition of the God in the flesh today is still embodied through His work, so the ministry that God carries out is the ministry of words, not what He does or how He appears on the outside. In the end all people will gain edification from God's words and be made complete because of them. In their experiences, because of the guidance of God's words, they will gain a path for practice, and through the words from God's mouth people will know His entire disposition. Because of the words all of God's work will be fulfilled, people will come alive, and all enemies will be defeated. This is the primary work, and no one can ignore it. We may as well look at His words: "My voice rings out like thunder, illuminating all four quadrants and the whole earth, and in the midst of thunder and lightning, humanity is struck down. No man has ever stayed firm in the midst of thunder and lightning; Most men are terrified out of their wits at the coming of My light and know not what to do." When God opens His mouth words just come out. He accomplishes everything through words, and all things are transformed by His words, all people are renewed through His words. What does "thunder and lightning" refer to? And what does "light" refer to? There is not a single thing that can escape from God's words. He uses His words to lay bare people's minds and to depict their ugliness; He uses words to deal with people's old nature and to make all of His people complete. Isn't this the importance of God's words? In the entire universe, if there weren't the support and the bolstering of God's words, all of mankind would have been destroyed to the point of nonexistence long ago. This is a principle of what God does, and it's the working method for His six-thousand-year management plan. The importance of His words can be clearly seen through this. God's words directly pierce into the depths of mankind's souls. As soon as they see His words they are astounded and terror-stricken and flee hastily. They want to escape the reality of His words, which is why these "refugees" can be seen everywhere. Right after God's words are uttered people take to their heels. This is one aspect of the image of mankind's ugliness that God depicts. Right now, all people are gradually awakening from their stupor. It's as if all people before had developed a case of dementia, and now they see God's words and it's like they have lingering effects after the disease and are unable to regain their former state. This is the actual situation of all people, and it is also a true portrayal of this sentence: "many people, moved by this tenuous luminescence, are instantaneously roused from their illusions. Yet no one has ever realized that the day has come when My light descends upon the earth." This is why God said: "The great majority of men are dumbstruck by the sudden advent of the light." Putting it this way is perfectly appropriate. God's description of mankind doesn't leave room for even the tip of a needle—He truly has done this accurately and without error, which is why all people are fully convinced and without knowing it, their love for God has started to build up from deep within their hearts. Only this way does God's position in people's hearts become more and more genuine, and this is also one way that God works.

"The great majority of men are bewildered; they are wounded in the eyes and cast down into the mud by the light." Because they go against the will of God (that is, they resist God), that kind of person suffers chastisement because of their rebelliousness when God's words come; this is why it is said that they are wounded in the eyes by the light. This kind of person has already been given over to Satan, so when entering into the new work they do not have any enlightenment or illumination. All those who do not have the work of the Holy Spirit have been occupied by Satan, and deep in their hearts there is no place for God, thus it is said that they are "cast down into the mud." Those who are in this condition are all in a state of disarray. They cannot enter into the right track, they cannot recover normalcy, what they think in their minds is all contrary. All the people on earth have been corrupted by Satan to the extreme. They have no vitality and they are full of the odor of corpses. All people on earth are surviving in the midst of a plague of germs and no one can escape it. They are not willing to survive on earth, but they always feel that there is something greater that will happen to make people see it for themselves, so people all force themselves to continue living. People have had no strength in their hearts long ago, they just use their invisible hopes as a spiritual pillar, so they just hold their own heads acting like man, getting through their days on earth. It is as if all people are the sons of the devil incarnate. This is why God said: "the earth lies blanketed under chaos, making an unbearably sorry sight that, examined closely, assails one with an overwhelming melancholy." Because of the appearance of this situation God began "strewing the seeds of My Spirit" toward the entire universe, and He began to carry out His work of salvation on the whole earth. It is because of the furthering of this work that God began to rain down all sorts of disasters, thus saving hard-hearted humans. In the phases of God's work, the method of salvation is still through different kinds of disasters and all those who are numbered cannot escape them. Only in the end will a situation of "as serene as the third heaven: Here living things great and small coexist in harmony, never once engaging in 'conflicts of mouth and tongue'" be able to appear on earth. One aspect of God's work is to conquer all of mankind and gain the chosen people through His words. Another aspect is to conquer all sons of rebellion through various disasters. This is one part of God's large-scale work. It is only this way that the kingdom on earth that God wants can be fully achieved, and this is the part of God's work that is like fine gold.

God is always requiring that people understand the dynamics of heaven. Can they truly achieve that? The reality is that, based on people's present actual states, having been corrupted by Satan for over 5,900 years, they cannot compare to Peter and thus they simply cannot do it. This is one of the methods of God's work. He wouldn't have people passively wait, but He would have them actively seek. Only this way will God have the opportunity to work in people. This may as well be explained a little more, otherwise people will just have a superficial understanding. After God created mankind and gave them spirits, He enjoined them that if they didn't call out to God, then they would not be able to connect with His Spirit and thus the "satellite television" from heaven would not be received on earth. When God is no longer in people's spirits there is an empty seat left open for other things, and that's how Satan seizes the opportunity to get in. When people contact God with their hearts, Satan immediately goes into a panic and rushes to escape. Through mankind's cries God gives them what they need, but He does not "reside" within them at first. He just constantly gives them aid because of their cries and people gain hardiness from that internal strength so that Satan dare not come here to "play" at its will. This way, if people constantly connect with God's Spirit, Satan dare not come to disrupt. Without Satan's disruption, all of people's lives are normal and God has the opportunity to work within them without any obstructions. This way, what God wants to do can be achieved through humans. From this it can be known why God has always required people to increase their faith, and has also said: "I make suitable demands according to the stature of man. I have never put anyone in difficulties, nor have I ever 'squeezed out the blood' of anyone for My pleasure." Most people are baffled by God's requirements, saying, since people don't have that faculty and they have been irretrievably corrupted by Satan, why does God keep making requirements of them? Isn't God putting people in a difficult position? Seeing people's solemn faces, and then seeing their look of being so awkward, you can't help but laugh. People's various ugliness is most funny—at times they're like a child that loves to play, and at times they're like a little girl playing "mom." Sometimes they're like a dog eating a mouse. All of their ugly states are just ridiculously amusing, and often the more people cannot understand God's will, the more they are liable to get into trouble. This is why it can be seen from God's words, "Am I the God that merely imposes silence on creation?" how foolish people are, and it shows that no man can understand God's will. Even if He speaks out what His will is, they cannot be considerate of it. They only do the work of God based on human will, so how can they understand His will that way? "I go walking upon the earth, dispersing My fragrance everywhere, and in every place I leave behind My form. Each and every place reverberates with the sound of My voice. People everywhere linger nostalgically over the beautiful scenes of yesterday, for all humanity is remembering the past. ..." This will be the situation when the kingdom is formed. In fact, in several places God has prophesied the beauty of the realization of the kingdom, and if they are all combined, it's a complete picture of the kingdom. But people don't pay attention to it—they just watch it like a cartoon.

Because of the several thousand years of corruption by Satan, people have always lived in darkness, so they are not troubled by the darkness nor do they long for the light. This is what has led to this when the light has arrived today: "they are all averse to My coming, they all chase away the light from coming, as if I were man's enemy in heaven. Man greets Me with a defensive light in his eyes." Although most people love God with a genuine heart, He is still not satisfied and He still condemns mankind. This is baffling for people. Because people live in the darkness, their service of God is still done in the same way as in a condition of lacking light. That is, people all serve God using their own notions, and when God comes people are all within this kind of state and they are unable to serve God by accepting new light, but they use all of their own experience to serve Him. God does not gain enjoyment from mankind's "devotion," so the light cannot be praised by mankind in the darkness. This is why God said this—it absolutely is not contrary to reality, and it is not God mistreating mankind, nor is it Him wronging them. From the creation of the world until today, not a single person has truly tasted God's warmth—they have been on guard toward God, deeply fearing that God will strike them down, that He will annihilate them. So over these 6,000 years God has always used warmth in exchange for people's sincerity, and has always patiently guided them at every turn. This is because people are so weak, and they cannot fully know God's will, and they cannot wholeheartedly love

Him, for they can't help but be subject to Satan's manipulation. But even though this is the case, God is still tolerant, and when He tolerates this to a certain day, that is, when He renews the world, He will no longer look after people like a mother. Instead, He will give mankind their suitable retribution which is why after that there will be: "Corpses drift about on the ocean's surface," while "in the places empty of water, other men are still enjoying, amid laughter and song, the promises that I have vouchsafed unto them." This is the comparison between the destinations of those who are rewarded and those who are punished. "On the ocean's surface" refers to the bottomless pit of mankind's chastisement spoken of by God. It is Satan's final destination, and it is the "resting place" that God has prepared for all those who resist Him. God has always wanted mankind's genuine love, but without knowing it, people are still doing their own work. This is why, in all of His words, God has always made demands of people and He has pointed out their shortcomings as well as their path for practice, so that they can practice according to these words. God has also shed light on His own attitude for people: "But I have never casually taken up a single human life to play with as if it were a toy. I observe the heart's blood of man, and I understand the price that he has paid. As he stands before Me, I do not wish to take advantage of man's defenselessness to chastise him, nor to bestow upon him undesirable things. Instead, I have only provided for man, and given unto man, all this time." When people read these words from God, they immediately feel His warmth: Indeed, in the past I have paid a price for God but I have also treated Him perfunctorily, and at times I have complained to Him. God has always guided me with His words and He pays so much attention to my life, yet at times I play with it as if it were a toy. It really is uncalled for. God loves me so much, so why can I not strive hard enough? When they think of this, people really want to slap their own faces, or, in the case of some people, their noses even twitch and they cry out loud. God understands people's hearts and speaks accordingly, and these few words that are neither hard nor soft inspire people's love for God. Finally, God prophesied the change in His work at the time the kingdom is formed on earth: When God is on the earth, people will be able to be free from disasters and calamities and will be able to bask in grace, but when He begins the judgment of the great day, it will be when He appears among all people, and all of His work on earth will be fully completed. At that time, because the day has come, it will be just as it was said in the Bible: "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still." The unrighteous will return to chastisement, and the holy will return in front of the throne. Not a single person will be able to gain His accommodation, not even the sons and the people of the kingdom. It will all be God's righteousness, and it will all be the revealing of His disposition. He will not show solicitude for mankind's weaknesses a second time.

INTERPRETATION OF THE EIGHTEENTH UTTERANCE

All of God's words contain a portion of His disposition; His disposition can't be fully expressed in words, so this shows how much richness there is in Him. What people can see and touch is, after all, limited, as is people's ability. Although God's words are clear, people are unable to fully understand. Just like these words: "In a flash of lightning, every animal is revealed in its true form. So too, illuminated by My light, human beings have regained the sanctity they once possessed. Oh, that the corrupt world of the past has at last toppled over into the filthy water and, sinking below the surface, dissolved into mud!" All of God's words contain His being, and even though people are all aware of these words, they have never known their meaning. In the eyes of God, all those that resist Him are His enemy, that is, those belonging to evil spirits are animals. From this the actual situation of the church can be observed. Without undergoing people's lecturing or chastening, without going through people's direct expulsion or a portion of human methods or being pointed out by people, all men examine themselves under the illumination of God's words, and see very clearly under the perspective of a "microscope" how much sickness there really is inside of them. In God's words, every kind of spirit is classified and the original form of every spirit is revealed. The spirits of angels become more and more illuminated and enlightened, thus what God said, that they "have regained the sanctity they once possessed," is based on the final results achieved by God. Of course now it cannot yet be fully achieved—this is just a foretaste. God's will is seen through this and it shows that a great deal of people will fall in God's words and will be defeated in the process of all people gradually becoming saintly. The “dissolved into mud” mentioned here is not contradictory to God destroying the world with fire, and the “lightning” refers to God’s wrath. When God emits His great wrath, the entire world will experience all sorts of disasters as a result, like the rupturing of a volcano. Standing above the firmament, it can be seen that on the earth all sorts of calamities are closing in on all of mankind, day by day. Looking down from on high, the earth is like a variety of scenes before an earthquake. Fiery water is rushing everywhere, lava flows all over the place, mountains are shifting, and cold light glitters everywhere. The entire world has sunk into fire. This is the scene of God emitting His wrath, and it is the time of His judgment. All those who are of the flesh will be unable to escape. Thus wars between countries and conflicts between people will not be needed to destroy the entire world, but it will “consciously enjoy” the cradle of God’s chastisement. No one will be able to escape it and they will pass through this one by one. After that the entire universe will once again sparkle with holy radiance and all of mankind will once again begin a new life. And God will be at rest above the universe and will bless all of mankind every day. The heaven will not be unbearably desolate, but will recover the vitality it has not had since the creation of the world, and the “sixth day” will be when God begins a new life. God and man will all enter into rest and the universe will no longer be turbid or filthy, but it will gain renewal. This is why God said: “Earth is no longer still and silent, heaven no longer desolate and sad.” In the kingdom of heaven there has never been unrighteousness or human emotions, or any of mankind’s corrupt dispositions because Satan’s disturbance is not present. People are all able to understand God’s words, and life in heaven is a life full of joy. All those in heaven have wisdom and the dignity of God. Because of the differences between heaven and earth, the citizens of heaven are not called “people,” but they are called “spirits” by God. These two words have essential differences, and now those referred to as “people” have all been corrupted by Satan, while “spirits” have not. In the end, God will change all people on earth to have the attributes of the spirits in heaven and they will no longer undergo Satan’s disturbance. This is the true meaning of the words “My holiness has gone abroad throughout the universe.” “Earth in its primordial state belongs to heaven, and heaven is united with earth. Man is the cord uniting heaven and earth, and thanks to his sanctity, thanks to his renewal, heaven is no longer concealed from earth, and earth is no longer silent toward heaven.”

This is said in reference to people who have the spirits of angels, and at that point the angels will once again be able to peacefully coexist and regain their original state, and no longer be divided between the two realms of heaven and earth because of the flesh. The angels on earth will be able to communicate with the angels in heaven, people on earth will know the mysteries of heaven, and the angels in heaven will know the secrets of the human world. Heaven and earth will be united with no distance between them. This is the beauty of the realization of the kingdom. It is what God wants to complete, and it is also something that all humans and spirits long for. But those in the religious world know nothing of this. They are just waiting for Jesus the Savior on a white cloud to take their souls away, leaving the “garbage” everywhere on earth (garbage refers to corpses). Isn't this a notion of all humans? This is why God said: “The religious world—how could it not be destroyed by My authority on earth?” Because of the completion of God's people on earth the religious world will be overturned. This is the true meaning of the “authority” that God spoke of. God said: “Are there any who, in My day, disgrace My name? All human beings direct their reverential gaze toward Me, and in their hearts they secretly cry out to Me.” This is what He said about the consequences of the destruction of the religious world, which will all submit before God's throne because of His words and will no longer wait for the white cloud to come down or watch the sky, but will be conquered in front of God's throne. Thus, “in their hearts they secretly cry out to Me”—this is the outcome of the religious world, which will all be conquered by God, and only this is called God's almightiness—striking down the religious people, the most rebellious of mankind, so that they will never again hold onto their own notions, but they will know God.

Although God's words have repeatedly foretold the beauty of the kingdom, have spoken of its various aspects and described it from different perspectives, they still cannot fully express every condition of the Age of Kingdom because people's ability to receive is too lacking. All the words of His utterances have been spoken, but people have not looked at them through a lens, which has led to people still being unclear and not understanding, and even being muddled and confused. This is the greatest defect of the flesh. Although in their hearts, people want to love God, they resist Him because of the disturbance of Satan, so God has time and again touched people's numb and dull-witted hearts so that they may revive. All that God exposes is Satan's ugliness, so the harsher His words are, the more shamed Satan is, and the more people's hearts are able to not be bound, and the more people's love can be aroused. This is how God works. Because Satan has been exposed and because it has been seen through, it no longer dares to occupy people's hearts, and thus the angels are no longer disturbed. It is in this way that they love God with their whole heart and mind. It is only then that they show that their true colors are belonging to God and loving God. It is only through this path that they can achieve God's will. "Inside their hearts a place has been established for Me. No longer will I meet with aversion or renunciation among men, for My great work has already been accomplished, and is hindered no more." This is the connotation of what was described above. Because of Satan's disturbance, people aren't able to find the time to love God, they are always entangled by the things of the world, and they are deluded by Satan so that they are acting out of confusion. This is why God has said that mankind has "undergone so many of life's hardships, so many of injustices from the world, so many ups and downs of the world, but now they dwell in My light. Who does not weep at yesterday's injustices?" After people have heard these words they feel as if God is their partner in misery, is commiserating with them, and at that time is pouring out His troubles with man. They suddenly feel the pain of the human world and think: "Isn't that true—I've never enjoyed anything in the world. Since coming out of my mother's womb up until now I've experienced human life and I haven't gained anything, but I've suffered significantly. It's really empty! And now I am so corrupted by Satan! Oh! If not for God's salvation, when the time of my death comes wouldn't I have lived an entire lifetime in vain? Is there any meaning to human life? No wonder God said that everything under the sun is empty. If God didn't enlighten me today I would still be in the dark. It's so pitiful!" When they think of this they have some consideration in their heart: "If I cannot gain God's promise how can I continue to experience life?" Everyone who reads these words will have a good cry in prayer. This is human psychology. If you say that someone could read this and not have any response, that is simply impossible unless they have a mental disorder. God reveals the states of all kinds of people every day. Sometimes He vents grievances on their behalf. Sometimes He helps people overcome and get through a certain environment. Sometimes He points out people's transformations for them. Otherwise, people wouldn't know how large their lives were. Sometimes God points out people's experiences in reality, and sometimes He points out their inadequacies and flaws. Sometimes He makes new requirements of them, and sometimes He points out the degree of their understanding of Him. However, God has also said: "I have heard the words spoken from the heart by so many people, the accounts told by so many people about the painful experiences in the midst of suffering; I have seen so many, in the direst straits, unfailingly offer up their loyalty to Me, and watched so many, as they walked the rocky path, struggle to find a way out." This is a description of positive characters. In each episode of the "historical drama" there have been positive as well as negative characters, so after this, God has also revealed the ugliness of the negative characters. This way, it is only through the contrast of "traitors" that the unyielding loyalty and fearless courage of the "upright men" is revealed. In all people's lives there are negative factors and, without exception, positive factors. God reveals the truth about all people from these two aspects so that the traitors will lower their heads and admit their sins, and so that the upright men will continue to be loyal under encouragement. The implied meaning of God's words is very deep. At times, people are doubled over with laughter after reading them and at times, they hang their heads in silence. At times they reminisce, at times they cry bitterly and acknowledge their sins, at times they grope, and at times they seek. Overall, there are transformations in people's reactions because of the different backgrounds to God's words. When a person reads God's words, sometimes bystanders may even mistakenly believe that that person is a mental patient. You might take a look: "And so, contentious disputes are no more, and, following the words that issue forth from Me, the sundry 'weapons' of the modern age too are withdrawn." The word "weapons" is enough of a joke for you for an entire day, and without realizing it, when people think of "weapons" they will secretly have a laugh. Right? Could it be that you wouldn't laugh because of this?

When you laugh, do not forget to grasp God's requirements of mankind, and do not forget to see the actual circumstances of the church: "All mankind has returned to normal and embarked upon a new life. Existing in the new surroundings, a goodly number of people look around them, feeling as if they have entered into a brand-new world, and because of this they are not able to adapt to their present environment right away or get straight onto the right track.” These are the current actual circumstances of the church. Do not be too anxious to have all people immediately enter into the right track. Once the Holy Spirit’s work has progressed to a certain step, people will all enter into it without realizing it. When you grasp the essence of God’s words, you will know to what step His Spirit has worked. God’s will is: “I only administer, depending on his unrighteous deeds, a fitting measure of ‘education,’ the better to enable everyone to get onto the right track.” This is God’s method of speaking and working, and it is also mankind’s specific path of practice. After this, He pointed out another of mankind’s states for people: “If human beings are unwilling to enjoy the bliss that is in Me, all I can do is to go along with their desires and send them into the bottomless pit.” God spoke exhaustively and left people without a sliver of an opportunity to complain. This is precisely what is different between God and man. God is always speaking to man openly and freely. His sincerity can be seen in every one of His words, having people put themselves in His shoes and also having them be able to “put their heart on their sleeve” for God to see which color of the rainbow it is. God has never applauded any person’s faith or love, but He has always made requirements of people and exposed their ugliness. This shows what small “stature” people have and how lacking their “constitution” is. They need to get more “exercise” to make up for that, which is why God is always getting angry at people. One day when God has revealed the entire truth about mankind, people will be completed, and God will be at ease. People will no longer deceive God and He will no longer “educate” them. From then on people will be able to “live on their own,” but this is not the time. There is still a lot that is “counterfeit” in people so they need several rounds of examination and for more “checkpoints” to be set up so that mankind’s “taxes” can be paid at each of the checkpoints. If there are still counterfeit goods, then they will be confiscated and cannot be sold, and then that batch of smuggled goods will be destroyed. Isn’t that a good thing to do?

INTERPRETATION OF THE NINETEENTH UTTERANCE

It seems that in people's imagination, God is very lofty and unfathomable. It's as though God does not reside among men, as though He looks down on people because He is so lofty. God, however, smashes men's notions and eliminates them all, burying all their notions within "tombs" where they turn to ashes. God's attitude toward men's notions is similar to His attitude toward the dead, defining them at will. It is as though there are no responses from notions. So from the creation of the world to now, God has been doing this work and never stopped. Because of the flesh, men are corrupted by Satan, and because of Satan's actions on earth, men form all manner of notions through the course of their experiences. This is called "natural formation." This stage of work is the last part of God's work on earth, so the method of God's work has reached its peak, and He is intensifying His training of men so that they can be made complete in His final work, and God's will will finally be satisfied. Before, there was only the enlightenment and illumination of the Holy Spirit among men, but no words spoken by God Himself. When God spoke with His own voice, everybody was startled, and today His words are even more puzzling. The meaning of His words is even harder to figure out, and men seem to be in a state of bedazzlement, because fifty percent of His words come between quotation marks. "When I speak, man listens to My voice in rapt attention; but when I stop speaking, he starts again on his own 'enterprise.'" There is a word in that passage in quotes. The funnier God's words are, the more they can draw people in to read them. One aspect is that people are able to accept being dealt with when they are relaxed. The primary aspect is to prevent more people from being discouraged or disappointed because they don't understand God's words. This is a tactic in God's war with Satan. Only in this way will people be interested in God's words and still pay attention to them even when they are bewildered. But there is also great charm in all the words not surrounded by quotes, and so they are more noticeable and make people love God's words even more, allowing them to feel the sweetness of His words in their own hearts. As God's words come in a great variety of forms and are rich and diverse, and because there are no repetitions of nouns among the many words of God, in their third sense, people all believe God is always new and never old. For example: "I do not ask man to be a mere consumer, but ask him to be a producer capable of inflicting defeat on Satan." The words "consumer" and "producer" in that sentence have similar meanings to some words spoken in times previous, but God is not rigid. Rather, He makes man aware of His freshness, and thus treasure God's love. The humor in God's speech contains His judgment and His demands of man. As God's words all have objectives, all have meanings, His humor is not simply meant to lighten the atmosphere or to make men roar with laughter, or to simply relax their muscles. Rather, God's humor is intended to free man from five thousand years of bondage and to never be bound again, so that they are better able to accept God's words. God's method is "a spoonful of sugar helps the medicine go down"; He does not force bitter medicine down men's throats. There is bitterness within the sweet, and also sweetness within the bitter.

"When a faint glimmer of light begins to show in the East, all the people within the universe on that account turn their attention for the nonce toward the light in the East. No longer steeped in slumber, mankind goes to observe the source of the eastern light, but due to the limits of human power, no one is able to see the place whence the light originates." This is what's happening everywhere in the universe, not merely among the sons and the people of God. The religious circles and the unbelievers all experience this reaction. At the moment when God's light shines out, everybody's hearts change gradually, and they begin to unwittingly discover that living is meaningless, that human life is without value. Men do not pursue a future, think for tomorrow, or worry about tomorrow, but rather hold onto the idea that they should eat and drink more while they're still "young," that it will all have been worth it, and it will not have been in vain once the last day comes. Man has no desire to put the world in order. The vigor of mankind's love for the world was all stolen by the "devil," but nobody knows what the root is, and all they can do is run back and forth informing one another, because God's day has not yet come. One day, everyone will see the answers to all the unfathomable mysteries. This is the true meaning of God's words that "man will rouse from sleep and dream, and only then will he realize that My day is slowly coming into the world." When that time comes, all the people belonging to God will be like green leaves "waiting to consecrate their individual portion to Me at the time when I am on the earth." So many among God's people in China still relapse after God utters His voice, and so God says, “but, powerless to alter the accomplished fact, they can only wait for Me to pronounce sentence.” There will still be some among them to be eliminated—not all will remain unchanged. Rather, people can only be up to standards after undergoing testing, and will thus be issued “quality certificates”; otherwise they will become refuse on the scrap heap. God constantly points out the true state of man, so man increasingly feels the mysteriousness of God. “If He were not God, how would He be able to know our true state so well?” But because of men’s weakness, “In men’s hearts, I am neither high up, nor low down. As far as men are concerned, it is a matter of indifference whether I exist or not.” Is this not precisely the state of all people that best fits with reality? As far as men are concerned, God exists when they seek Him and does not exist when they do not seek Him. In other words, God exists in men’s hearts immediately when they need His help, but when they no longer need Him, He no longer exists. This is what is within men’s hearts. In reality, everybody on earth thinks this way, including all atheists, whose impression of God is also murky and abstract.

“Therefore, the mountains become boundaries between nations upon the land, the waters become barriers to keep people apart between the lands, and the air becomes that which flows from man to man in the space on earth.” This was the work that God did while creating the world. Mentioning this here is perplexing for people: Could it be that God wants to create another world? It is fair to say this: Every time God speaks, His words contain creation, management, and the destruction of the world; it’s just that sometimes it’s clear, and sometimes it’s ambiguous. All of God’s management is embodied in His words; the only problem is that men cannot distinguish them. God’s blessing to men makes their faith grow a hundredfold. From the outside, it seems as though God is making a promise to men, but in essence it is a yardstick for God’s demands of the people of His kingdom. He will keep those who comply, and those who do not comply will be swallowed up in the calamity that is cast down from heaven. “The thunder, rolling across the skies, strikes man down; the high mountains, as they topple, bury him; the wild beasts in their hunger raven him up; and the oceans, surging, close over his head. As humanity engages in fratricidal conflict, all men will seek their own destruction in the calamities arising from humanity’s midst.” This is the “special treatment” that will be meted out to those who do not meet standards, who will not be saved into the kingdom of God afterward. The more God says things like, “You will surely, under the guidance of My light, break through the stranglehold of the forces of darkness. You will surely not, in the midst of darkness, lose the light guiding you,” the more men become aware of their own respectability, and so they have more faith to seek new life. God provides to men as they ask of Him. Once God exposes them to a certain extent, He changes His manner of speech, and uses a tone of blessing to get the best results. Making demands of man this way yields more practical results. Because men are all willing to talk business with their counterparts—they are all experts in business—this is exactly what God is honing in on in saying this. So what is “Sinim”? God’s meaning here is not the kingdom on earth which is corrupted by Satan, but rather is an assembly of all the angels who came from God. The words “resolute and unwavering” imply that the angels will break through all of Satan’s forces and so Sinim will be established in the entire universe. So the real meaning of Sinim is an assembly of all the angels on earth; here it refers to those on earth. So the kingdom that exists later on earth will be called “Sinim,” and not the “kingdom.” There is no real meaning to the “kingdom” on earth, and it is in substance Sinim. So only upon linking it to the meaning of Sinim can one know the true meaning of the words “you will surely irradiate within the entire universe with My glory.” This demonstrates the grading of all people on earth in the future. The people of Sinim will all be kings governing all peoples on earth after they have suffered chastisement. Everything on earth will operate normally because of the management of the people of Sinim. This is nothing more than a rough sketch of the situation. All men will remain within the kingdom of God, meaning that they will be left within Sinim. Men on earth will be able to communicate with the angels. So, heaven and earth will be connected, or in other words, all men on earth will submit to and love God as the angels in heaven do. At that time, God will appear openly to all people on earth and allow them to see His true face with their naked eyes, and He will appear to men at any time.

INTERPRETATION OF THE TWENTIETH UTTERANCE

God created all mankind, and has led all mankind unto today. Thus, God knows all that happens among man: He knows the bitterness in the world of man, understands the sweetness in the world of man, and so each day He describes the life conditions of all mankind, and, moreover, deals with the weakness and corruption of all mankind. It is not God's will that all mankind be cast into the bottomless pit, or that the entirety of mankind be saved. There is always a principle to God's actions, yet no one is capable of grasping the laws of all that He does. When people become aware of God's majesty and wrath, God immediately changes the tone to mercy and love, but when people come to know God's mercy and love, He immediately changes the tone once more, making His words as hard to eat as if they were a live chicken. In all of God's words, never has the beginning been repeated, and never have any of His words been spoken according to the principle of the utterances of yesterday; even the tone is not the same, nor is there any connection in the content—all of which makes people feel even more bewildered. This is the wisdom of God, and the revelation of His disposition. He uses the tone and manner of His speech to disperse people's conceptions, in order to confuse Satan, stripping Satan of the opportunity to poison God's deeds. The wondrousness of God's actions causes people's minds to be left reeling by God's words. They are barely able to find their own front door, or don't even know when they're supposed to eat or rest, thus truly achieving "forgoing sleep and food to expend for God." Yet even at this point, God remains unsatisfied with the present circumstances, and is always angry with man, forcing him to bring forth his true heart. If not, at the slightest lenience from God, people would immediately "obey" and grow lax. This is the lowliness of man; he can't be coaxed, but must be beaten or dragged to get him moving. "Of all those I look upon, no one has ever sought Me deliberately and directly. They all come before Me at the urging of others, following the majority, and they are unwilling to pay the price or spend the time to enrich their lives." Such are the circumstances of all upon earth. Thus, without the work of the apostles or the leaders, all people would have long since scattered, and so, throughout the ages, there has been no lack of apostles and prophets.

In these utterances, God pays special attention to summarizing the life conditions of all mankind. Words like “Man’s life has not the slightest warmth, and is devoid of any human flavor or light—yet he has ever inured himself to it, abiding a lifetime bereft of worth in which he rushes about without achieving anything. In the blink of an eye, the day of death draws near, and man dies a bitter death” are all of this type. Why is it that God has guided mankind’s existence until today, and yet also reveals the emptiness of life in the world of man? And why does He describe the entire life of all people as “hurriedly arriving and hurriedly departing”? This, it can be said, is all God’s plan, it is all ordained by God, and as such, in another respect it reflects how God despises all except the life in divinity. Although God created all mankind, He has never truly taken pleasure in the life of all mankind, and so He merely allows mankind to exist under the corruption of Satan. After mankind has gone through this process, He will annihilate or save mankind, and thus man shall achieve a life on earth that is not empty. This is all part of God’s plan. And so, there is always a wish in man’s consciousness, which has led to no one gladly dying an innocent death—but the only ones who achieve this wish are the people of the last days. Today, people still live amid an irreversible emptiness and they still await that invisible wish: “When I cover My face with My hands, and press people beneath the ground, they immediately feel short of breath, and are barely able to survive. They all cry out to Me, terrified that I will destroy them, for they all wish to behold the day when I am glorified.” Such are the circumstances of all people today. They all live in a “vacuum,” without “oxygen,” which makes it hard for them to breathe. God uses the wish in man’s consciousness to support the survival of all mankind; if not, all would “leave home to become monks,” as a result of which mankind would become extinct, and come to an end. Thus, it is because of the promise God gave to man that man has survived until today. This is the truth, but man has never discovered this law, and thus he knows not why he is “deeply fearful that death will come upon him a second time.” Being human, no one has the courage to carry on living, yet neither has anyone ever had the courage to die, and thus God says that people “die a bitter death.” Such is the true situation among man. Perhaps, in their prospects, some people have faced setbacks and thought of death, but these thoughts have never come to fruition; perhaps, some have thought of death because of family conflicts, but are concerned for their beloved, and remain incapable of achieving their wish; and perhaps, some have thought of death because of blows to their marriage, but they are unwilling to go through with it. Thus, people die with grievances or everlasting regrets in their hearts. Such are the various states of all people. Looking out over the wide world of man, people come and go in an endless stream, and although they feel that they'd be happier dying than living whilst they still pay lip service, never has anyone set an example by dying and coming back, telling the living how to enjoy the joy of death. People are contemptible wretches: They have no shame or self-respect, and they always go back on their word. In His plan, God predestined a group of people who would enjoy His promise, and thus God says, "many have lived in the flesh, and many have died and been reborn on earth. Yet never have any of them had the opportunity to enjoy the blessings of the kingdom today." All who enjoy the blessings of the kingdom today have been predestined by God since He created the world. God arranged for these spirits to live in the flesh during the last days, and ultimately, God shall gain this group of people, and arrange for them to be in Sinim. Because, in substance, the spirits of these people are angels, God says "Has there really never been any trace of Me in the spirit of man?" In fact, when people live in the flesh, they remain ignorant of the affairs of the spiritual realm. From these simple words can be seen God's mood: The simple words of "man shoots Me a guarded look" express God's complex psychology. From the time of creation until today, in God's heart there has always been grief accompanied by wrath and judgment, for the people on earth are incapable of being mindful of God's will, just as God says, "Man is like a mountain savage." Yet God also says, "The day will come when man swims to My side from amid the mighty ocean, so that he might enjoy all the riches on earth and leave behind the risk of being swallowed by the sea." This is the accomplishment of God's will, and can also be described as an inevitable trend, and it symbolizes the accomplishment of God's work.

When the kingdom entirely descends on earth, all people shall recover their original likeness. Thus, God says, "I enjoy from atop My throne, I live among the stars. And the angels offer unto Me new songs and new dances. No longer does their own fragility cause tears to run down their faces. No longer do I hear, before Me, the sound of the angels weeping, and no longer does anyone complain of hardship to Me." This shows that the day upon which God gains complete glory is the day when man enjoys his rest; people no longer rush about as a result of Satan's disturbance, the world stops progressing onward, and people live in rest—for the myriad stars in the firmament are renewed, and the sun, moon, stars, and so on, and all the mountains and rivers in heaven and on the earth, are all changed. And because man has changed, and God has changed, so, too, will all things change. This is the ultimate aim of God's management plan, and that which shall finally be achieved. God's objective in speaking all these words is mainly for man to know Him. People do not understand God's administrative decrees. All that God does is orchestrated and arranged by God Himself, and God is unwilling to let anyone interfere; instead, He allows people to behold that all is arranged by Him and unachievable by man. Even though man can see it, or finds it hard to imagine, all is controlled by God alone, and God does not wish it to be tainted by the slightest human thought. God will surely not forgive any who partake, even just a little bit; God is the God who is jealous of man, and it seems the Spirit of God is particularly sensitive in this regard. Thus, whosoever has the slightest intention of interfering shall immediately be beset by God's consuming flames, turning them into ashes in the fire. God does not allow people to display their gifts however they please, for all who are gifted are without life; these supposed gifts only serve God, and originate from Satan, and thus are especially despised by God, who makes no concessions in this. Yet it is often people without life who are likely to partake in the work of God, and, what's more, their participation remains undiscovered, for it is disguised by their gifts. Throughout the ages, those who are gifted have never stood firm, for they are without life, and thus lack any powers of resistance. Thus, God says, "If I do not speak plainly, man will never come to his senses, and will unwittingly fall into My chastisement—for man does not know Me in My flesh." All those of flesh and blood are guided by God, yet also live in Satan's bondage, and so never have people had a normal relationship with one another, whether because of lust, or adoration, or the arrangements of their environment. Such abnormal relationships are what God detests most of all, and thus it is because of such relationships that words like "What I want are living creatures that are full of life, not corpses that have been steeped in death. Since I recline at the table of the kingdom, I will command all people on earth to receive My inspection" come from God's mouth. When God is above the entire universe, each day He observes every action of those of flesh and blood, and has never overlooked a single one of them. These are the deeds of God. And so, I urge all people to examine their own thoughts, ideas, and actions. I do not ask that you be a sign of shame to God, but a manifestation of God's glory, that in all of your actions, words, and lives, you do not become the butt of Satan's jokes. This is God's requirement of all people.

INTERPRETATION OF THE TWENTY-FIRST UTTERANCE

In God's eyes, people are like the animals in the animal world. They fight with each other, slaughter each other, and have extraordinary interactions with each other. In God's eyes, they are also like apes, scheming against one another regardless of age or gender. As such, all that the whole of mankind does and manifests has never been after God's heart. The time that God covers His face is precisely when people all over the world are tested. All people groan in pain, they all live under the threat of catastrophe, and not a single one of them has ever escaped from God's judgment. Actually, God's primary aim in becoming flesh is to judge man and condemn him in His flesh. In God's mind, it has long since been decided who, in accordance with their essence, shall be saved or destroyed, and this shall be gradually made plain during the final phase. As the days and months pass, people change and their original form is revealed. Whether there is a chicken or a duck in the egg is shown when it cracks open. The time when the egg breaks is the very time that the disasters on earth shall come to an end. From this it can be seen that, in order to know whether there is a "chicken" or a "duck" inside, the "egg" must be broken open. This is the plan in God's heart, and it must be accomplished.

"Poor, pitiable mankind! Why is it that man loves Me, but is unable to follow the intentions of My Spirit?" Because of this state of man, he must undergo being dealt with in order to satisfy God's will. And because of God's loathing for mankind, He has proclaimed many times: "O the rebels of all mankind! They must be destroyed beneath My feet, they must vanish amid My chastisement, and they must, on the day on which My great enterprise is completed, be cast out from among mankind, so that the whole of mankind knows their ugly face." God is speaking to all mankind in the flesh, and is also speaking to Satan in the spiritual realm, that is, above the entire universe. This is the will of God, and is what is to be achieved by God's 6,000-year plan.

In truth, God is especially normal, and there are some things that can only be accomplished if He carries them out in person and sees them with His own eyes. It is not as people imagine, God does not lie there whilst all goes as He wishes; this is the consequence of Satan's disturbance in people, which makes people unclear about God's true face. As such, during the final age, God has become flesh to openly reveal His reality to man, without hiding anything. Some descriptions of God's disposition are pure exaggeration, such as when it is said that God can annihilate the world with a single word or the slightest thought. As a result, most people say things like, Why is it that God is omnipotent, but cannot swallow Satan in a single mouthful? These words are absurd, and show that people still do not know God. For God to annihilate His enemies requires a process, yet it is true to say that God is all-victorious: God shall ultimately defeat His enemies. Just as when a strong country defeats a weak one, it must achieve victory itself, step-by-step, sometimes using force, sometimes using strategy. There is a process, but it cannot be said that, since the strong country has new-generation nuclear weapons and the weak country is far inferior, the weak country will give up without a fight. That is an absurd argument. It is fair to say that the strong country is sure to win and the weak country is sure to lose, but the strong country can only be said to have greater force when it personally invades the weak country. Thus, God has always said that man does not know Him. So, is what is said above one side of why man does not know God? Are these the conceptions of man? Why does God ask only that man know His reality, and personally become flesh as a result? Thus, most people devoutly worshiped Heaven, yet "Heaven has never been the slightest bit affected by the actions of man, and if My treatment of man were based on his every action, then the whole of mankind would live amid My chastisement."

God sees through to man's essence. In God's utterances, God seems so "tormented" by man that He has no interest in paying any more attention to man, nor the slightest hope in him; man, it would seem, is beyond salvation. "I have seen many people with tears coursing down their cheeks, and I have seen many people offer up their hearts in exchange for My riches. Despite such 'piousness,' I have never freely given My all to man as a result of his sudden urges, for man has never been gladly willing to devote himself before Me.” When God reveals man’s nature, man is ashamed of himself, but this is but superficial knowledge, and he is incapable of truly knowing his nature in God’s words; thus, most people do not understand God’s will, they cannot find a path for their life in God’s words, and so the more dull-witted they are, the more severely God mocks them. Thus, they unconsciously enter into the role of jester—and as a result, they come to know themselves as they are stabbed by the “soft sword.” God’s words appear to applaud man’s deeds, and to encourage man’s deeds—and yet people always feel that God is ridiculing them. And so, when they read God’s words, the muscles in their faces twitch from time to time, as if they are convulsing. This is the impurity of their consciences, and it is because of this that they twitch involuntarily. Their pain is the sort in which they want to laugh but can’t—nor can they cry, for people’s farcicalness is played on the remote control “VCR,” but they can’t switch it off, and can only endure. Though “focusing on God’s words” is preached during all co-worker meetings, who knows not the nature of the spawn of the great red dragon? Face-to-face, they’re as obedient as lambs, but when backs are turned they are as savage as wolves, which can be seen in God’s words that “many people genuinely love Me when I provide My words, yet do not cherish My words in their spirits, instead casually using them like public property and tossing them back to where they came from whenever they feel like it.” Why has God always exposed man? This shows that man’s old nature has never budged an inch. Like the Taishan Mountain, it stands tall in hundreds of millions of people’s hearts, but the day will come when Yu Gong moves that mountain, and this is the plan of God. In His utterances, there is not a moment when God does not make requirements of man, warn man, or point out man’s nature which is revealed in his life: “When man is distant from Me, and when he tests Me, I hide Myself from him among the clouds. As a result, he is unable to find any trace of Me, and lives only by the hand of the wicked, doing all that they ask.” In reality, people rarely have the opportunity to live in God’s presence, because they have too little desire to seek; as a result, although most people love God, they live under the hand of the evil one, and all that they do is directed by the evil one. If people truly lived in the light of God, seeking God at every moment of every day, there would be no need for God to speak like this, yes? When people put the texts aside, they immediately put God aside together with the book, and so they concern themselves with their own business, after which God disappears from their hearts. Yet when they pick up the book again, it suddenly occurs to them that they had put God to the back of their minds. Such is man's life "without memory." The more God speaks, the higher His words. When they reach their peak, all of the work is concluded, and as a result, God ceases His utterances. The principle by which God works is to conclude His work when it reaches its pinnacle; He does not continue working when it reaches its pinnacle, but abruptly stops. He never does work that is unnecessary.

INTERPRETATION OF THE TWENTY-SECOND AND TWENTY-THIRD UTTERANCES

Today, all are willing to grasp God's will and know God's disposition, yet none know the reason why they are incapable of following their wishes, they know not why their hearts always betray them, and why they are unable to achieve what they want to. As a result, they are once more beset by crushing desperation, yet they are also fearful. Unable to express these conflicting emotions, they can only hang their heads in sorrow and keep asking themselves: Could it be that God has not enlightened me? Could it be that God has secretly forsaken me? Perhaps everyone else is OK, and God has enlightened all of them except me. Why do I always feel disturbed when I read God's words, why can't I ever grasp anything? Though people's minds think these things, none dare to express them; they merely carry on struggling inside. In fact, no one but God is able to understand His words or grasp His true will. Yet God always asks that people grasp His will—isn't this like trying to drive a duck onto a perch? Is God ignorant of man's failings? This is the intersection of God's work, it is what people don't understand, and thus God says, "Man lives amid the light, yet he is unaware of the preciousness of the light. He is ignorant of the substance of the light, and of the source of the light, and, moreover, of to whom it belongs." According to God's words and what He asks of man, no one will survive, for there is nothing in man's flesh that is accepting of God's words, so if people are able to obey God's words, cherish and yearn for God's words, and apply the words in God's utterances that point to the states of man to their own conditions, and so know themselves, then this is the highest standard. When the kingdom is ultimately realized, those who live in the flesh shall still be incapable of grasping God's will, and will still require the personal guidance of God. It's just that people will be without Satan's interference, and shall possess the normal life of man, which is God's objective in defeating Satan, and is chiefly in order to recover the original essence of man, who was created by God. In God's mind, the "flesh" refers to the following: the inability to know God's essence, the inability to see the affairs of the spiritual realm, and, furthermore, the ability to be corrupted by Satan but also be directed by the Spirit of God. This is the substance of the flesh created by God. Naturally, it is also in order to avoid chaos caused by lack of order in the life of mankind. The more God speaks, and the more incisive His words become, the more people understand His words. People unconsciously change, and unconsciously live in the light, and thus "Because of the light, all people are growing, and have left the darkness." This is the beautiful scene of the kingdom, and is like what was often spoken in the past: "living in the light, departing from death." When Sinim is realized on earth—when the kingdom is realized—there will be no more war on earth, never again will there be famines, plagues, and earthquakes, people will stop producing weapons, all will live in peace and stability, and both people and countries will interact normally with each other. Yet the present bears no comparison to this. All beneath the heavens is in chaos, coups are gradually beginning to occur in each country. As God utters His voice people are gradually changing, and, internally, every country is slowly being torn apart. The steady foundations of Babylon begin to shake, like a castle reaching into the sky, and as God's will shifts, tremendous changes occur unnoticed in the world, and all manner of signs appear at any time, showing people that the last day of the world has arrived! This is God's plan, these are the steps by which He works, and each country will surely be torn to pieces, old Sodom will be annihilated a second time, and thus God says "The world is falling! Babylon is in paralysis!" No one but God Himself is capable of completely understanding this; there is, after all, a limit to people's awareness. For example, the ministers of internal affairs might know that the present circumstances are unstable and chaotic, but they are incapable of addressing them. They can only ride the current, hoping in their hearts for the day when they can hold their heads high, yearning that a day will come when the sun will once again rise in the east, shining across the land and turning around this miserable state of affairs. Little do they know, however, that when the sun rises a second time, it is not to restore the old order, but to bounce back, and bring about thorough change. Such is God's plan for the whole universe. He shall bring about a new world, but above all, He will first renew man. Today, bringing people into God's words is what's key, not just allowing them to enjoy the blessings of status. Moreover, as God says, "In the kingdom, I am King—but instead of treating Me as its King, man treats Me as the Savior that has descended from heaven. As a result, he longs for Me to give him alms, and does not pursue the knowledge of Me." Such are the true conditions of all people. Today, what's crucial is completely dispelling man's insatiable greed, thus allowing people to know God without asking for anything; no wonder, then, that God says, "So many have cried out before Me like a beggar; so many have opened their 'sacks' to Me and implored Me to give them food to survive." These various states point out people's greed, and they show that people do not love God but make demands of God, or else try to gain the things they long for. People have the nature of a hungry wolf, they are all cunning and greedy, and thus God makes requirements of them over and over again, forcing them to hand over the greediness in their hearts and love God with sincerity. In reality, to date, people have yet to give all of their hearts to God, they straddle two boats, sometimes depending on themselves, sometimes depending on God without completely relying on God. When God's work reaches a certain point, all people will live amid true love and faith, and God's will shall be fulfilled; thus, God's requirements are not high.

The angels are constantly moving among the sons and people of God, hurrying between heaven and earth and descending to the human world after returning to the spiritual realm each day. This is their duty, and thus each day the sons and people of God are shepherded, and their life gradually changes. On the day that God changes His form, the angels' work on earth shall officially end and they will return to the realm of heaven. Today, all the sons and people of God are in the same condition. As the seconds go by, all people are changing, and the sons and people of God are gradually becoming more mature. In comparison, all the rebels are also changing before the great red dragon: People are no longer loyal to the great red dragon, and devils no longer follow its arrangements. Instead, all "go about their own business, picking the route that suits them best.” Thus when God says, “How could the countries on earth not perish? How could the countries on earth not fall?” the heavens come pressing down in an instant.... It is as if there is an ominous feeling presaging the end of mankind. The various ominous signs prophesied here are precisely what is occurring in the country of the great red dragon, and none among those on earth are capable of escaping. Such is what is prophesied in God's words. In people's premonitions today, they feel that time is short, and they seem to feel that a disaster is about to befall them—yet they have no means of escape, and thus they are all without hope. God says, “As I decorate the ‘inner chamber’ of My kingdom day by day, no one has ever suddenly burst into My ‘workroom’ to disrupt My work.” In fact, the meaning of God's words does not only lie in making people know God in His words. Above all, they indicate that each day God arranges all manner of developments throughout the universe to serve the next part of His work. The reason why He says “No one has ever suddenly burst into My ‘workroom’ to disrupt My work” is because God works in divinity, and even though people might want to, they are incapable of partaking in His work. I would like to ask: Could you arrange all developments of the entire universe? Could you make the people on earth defy their ancestors? Could you maneuver people throughout the universe to serve God's will? Can you cause Satan to run riot? Can you make people feel that the world is desolate and empty? People are incapable of such things. In the past, when Satan's “skills” had yet to be fully brought to bear, Satan would always interfere in each stage of God's work; in this stage, Satan has run out of tricks, and thus God allows Satan to show its true colors in order that all people may know it. This is the truth of the words “No one has ever disrupted My work.”

Each day, the people of the churches read God's words, each day they are dissected upon the operating table. For example, mocking words such as “losing their position,” “being dismissed,” “their fears allayed and composure restored,” “abandonment,” devoid of “feeling” and so on leave them dumb with shame; it is as if no part of their entire body—from head to toe, from inside out—is approved of by God. Why do God's words strip people's lives so bare? Is God deliberately making things difficult for people? It is as if the faces of all people are smeared with mud that can't be washed off. Their heads bowed, each day they give an account of their sins as if they are scam artists. People have been corrupted by Satan to the extent that they lack a full awareness of their true states. But to God, Satan's venom is in every part of their bodies, even their bone marrow; as a result, the more profound God's revelations, the more fearful people become. Thus, all people can know Satan and see Satan in man, for they have been incapable of seeing Satan with their naked eyes. And since all has entered into reality, God exposes man's nature—which is to say, He exposes the image of Satan—and thus allows man to behold the real, tangible Satan, which is better able to help them know the practical God. God allows man to know Him in the flesh, and gives form to Satan, thus allowing man to know the real, tangible Satan in the flesh of all people. These various states are the manifestation of Satan's deeds. And so, it is fair to say that all those who are of the flesh are the embodiment of Satan's image. Because God is incompatible with His enemies, because they are hostile to each other, and are two different forces, demons are demons, God is God, they are as incompatible as fire and water, and are ever as separate as heaven and earth. When God created man, one kind of people were the spirits of the angels; one kind had no spirit, thus they were possessed by the spirits of demons, and so they are called demons. Ultimately, angels are angels, demons are demons—and God is God. This is what is meant by each classed according to kind, and so when the angels reign on earth and enjoy blessings, God returns to His dwelling place, and the rest—the enemies of God—are turned to ashes. In fact, outwardly, all people love God—but the root of it lies in their essence; how can those with the nature of angels escape God's hand and fall into the bottomless pit? And how can those with the nature of demons ever truly love God? In substance, these people do not truly love God, so how could they ever have the chance to enter the kingdom? All was arranged by God since the creation of the world, just as God says, "I advance amid wind and rain, and have spent year after year among man, and that is followed by the present day. Are these not the steps of My management plan? Who has ever added to My plan? Who can break away from the steps in My plan?" Having become flesh, God must experience the life of man, and is this not the real side of the practical God? God does not hide anything from man because of man's weakness; instead, He lays bare the truth to man, just as God says, "I have spent year after year among man." It is because God is God become flesh that He has passed year after year on earth; accordingly, only after undergoing all manner of processes can He be considered to have become flesh, only after which He becomes able to work in the divinity within the flesh. And then, only after revealing all mysteries will He change His form. This is an alternate explanation of “being non-supernatural,” and is directly instructed by God.

People must pass the test of each and every one of God's words, without perfunctoriness—this is God's commission!

INTERPRETATION OF THE TWENTY-FOURTH AND TWENTY-FIFTH UTTERANCES

Without a close reading, it is impossible to detect anything in the utterances of these two days; in fact, they should have been spoken in one day, yet God divided them across two days. That is to say, the utterances of these two days form a single whole, but to make it easier for people to accept them, God divided them across two days to give people a chance to breathe. Such is God's consideration for man. In all of God's work, all people perform their function and their duty in their own place. It is not just the people with the spirit of an angel who cooperate; those with the spirit of a demon also “cooperate,” as do all the spirits of Satan. In God's utterances are seen God's will and His requirements of man. The words “My chastisement comes upon all people, yet it also remains distant from all people. The whole life of every person is filled with love and hate toward Me” show that God uses chastisement to threaten all people, causing them to gain knowledge of Him. Because of the corruption of Satan and the frailty of the angels, God employs only words, and not administrative decrees, to chastise people. Since the time of creation until today, this has been the principle of God's work regarding the angels and all people. Because the angels are of God, one day they shall surely become the people of God's kingdom, and will be cared for and protected by God. All others, meanwhile, will also be classed according to kind, all of the various evil spirits of Satan will be chastised, and all who are without spirits will be ruled by the sons and people of God. Such is God's plan. Thus, God once said “Is the arrival of My day really the moment of man's death? Could I really destroy man at the time when My kingdom is formed?” Though these are two simple questions, they are God's arrangements for the destination of all mankind. When God arrives is the time when “people throughout the universe are nailed to the cross upside down.” This is the aim that God appears to all people, using chastisement to make them know the existence of God. Because the time that God descends upon earth is the final age, and the time when the countries on earth are at their most turbulent, thus God says “When I come down to earth, it is cloaked in darkness and man is ‘fast asleep.’” As such, today there are but a handful of people who are capable of knowing God incarnate, there are almost none. Because now is the final age, no one has ever truly known the practical God, and people only have a superficial knowledge of God. And it is because of this that people live amid the painful refinement. When people leave refinement is also when they begin to be chastised, it is the time when God appears to all people so that they might personally behold Him. Because of God incarnate, people fall into disaster, and are unable to extricate themselves—which is God’s punishment of the great red dragon, and His administrative decree. When the warmth of spring arrives and the flowers blossom, when all beneath the heavens is covered in green and all things on earth are in place, all people and things shall gradually enter into God’s chastisement, and at that time all of God’s work on earth will end. God shall no longer work or live on earth, for God’s great work will have been accomplished. Are people incapable of putting aside their flesh for this short time? What things can cleave the love between man and God? Who is able to pull apart the love between man and God? Is it parents, husbands, sisters, wives, or painful refinement? Can the feelings of conscience wipe away God’s image within man? Are people’s indebtedness and actions toward each other their own doing? Can they be remedied by man? Who is able to protect themselves? Are people able to provide for themselves? Who are the strong ones in life? Who is able to leave Me and live on their own? Time and time again, why does God ask that all people carry out the work of self-reflection? Why does God say, “whose hardship has been arranged by their own hand?”

At present, there is dark night throughout the universe, and people are numb and dull-witted, but the hour hands always tick onward, the minutes and seconds do not stop, and the revolutions of the earth, sun, and moon grow faster. In their feelings, people believe that the day is not far off, as if their last day is before their eyes. People ceaselessly prepare everything for their own time of death, so that it will serve a purpose at their death; if not, they would have lived in vain, and is that not regrettable? When God annihilates the world, He begins with changes in countries' domestic affairs, from which there occur coups; thus, God mobilizes the service of people throughout the universe. The land where the great red dragon lies coiled is a demonstration zone. Because, internally, it has been torn apart, its domestic affairs have been thrown into chaos, everyone does the work of self-defense, preparing to escape to the moon—but how could they escape the dominion of God's hand? Just as God said that people will “drink from their own bitter cup.” The time of domestic strife is precisely when God departs the earth; God will not continue to stay in the country of the great red dragon, and shall immediately end His work on earth. It can be said that time flies, and there is not much left. From the tone of God's words it can be seen that God has already spoken of the destination of all throughout the universe, that He has nothing else to say for the remainder. This is what God reveals to man. It is because of God's aim in creating man that He says “In My eyes, man is the ruler of all things. I have given him no small amount of authority, allowing him to manage all things on earth—the grass upon the mountains, the animals among the forests, and the fish in the water.” When God created man, He predestined that man would be the master of all things—yet man was corrupted by Satan, and so he cannot live as he would wish. This has led to the world of today, in which people are no different from beasts, and the mountains have mingled with the rivers, with the result that “His entire life is one of anguish, and rushing about, and fun added to emptiness.” Because there is no meaning to man's life, and because this was not God's aim in creating man, the whole world has become turbid. When God puts the entire universe in order, all people shall officially begin to experience human life, and only then will their lives start to have meaning. People will begin to make use of the authority given to them by God, they will officially appear before all things as their master, and they will accept God's guidance on earth, and will no longer disobey God but obey God. The people of today, however, are a long way off that. All they ever do is “line their pockets” through God, and so God asks a string of questions such as “Is the work I do upon man of no benefit to him?” If God did not ask these questions, nothing would happen; but when He asks such things, some people are unable to stand firm, for there is indebtedness in their consciences, and they are not purely for God, but for themselves. All of everything is empty; thus, these people and “the people of every sect, sphere of society, nation, and denomination all know the emptiness on earth, and they all seek Me and await My return.” All people yearn for God’s return so that He might bring an end to the empty old era, yet they also fear falling into disaster. The entire religious world will immediately be left desolate, and neglected by all; they lack reality, and they will realize that their belief in God is vague and abstract. People of every sphere of society shall also disperse, and every nation and denomination will begin to fall into turmoil. In sum, the regularity of all things shall be torn apart, all will lose its normality, and so, too, will people reveal their true faces. Thus God says, “Many are the times that I have cried out to man, yet has anyone ever felt compassion? Has anyone ever lived in humanity? Man may live in the flesh, but he is without humanity. Was he born in the animal kingdom?” Change is also occurring among man, and because of this change each is classed according to kind. This is God’s work during the last days, and the effect that is to be achieved by the work of the last days. The more clearly God speaks of man’s essence, thus is proven that the end of His work is coming closer, and furthermore that God is more hidden from people, which makes them feel more disconcerted. The less people observe God’s will, the less attention they pay to God’s work of the last days; this stops them from interrupting, and thus God does the work that He intends to do when no one is paying attention. This is one principle of God’s work throughout the ages. The less considerate He is of people’s weaknesses, thus is shown that God’s divinity is more apparent, and so the day of God draws closer.

INTERPRETATION OF THE TWENTY-SIXTH UTTERANCE

From all of the words spoken by God, it can be seen that the day of God draws closer with every passing day. It is as if this day is right before people’s eyes, as if it will arrive tomorrow. Thus, after reading God’s words, all people are struck with terror, and also have some sense of the world’s desolation. It is as if, as the leaves fall and the drizzle descends, all people have disappeared without trace, as if they have all been wiped from the earth. They all have an ominous feeling. Although they try hard, and wish to satisfy God’s intentions, all using every bit of strength they have to fulfill God's intentions so that God's will may proceed smoothly, without obstruction, such a sentiment is always mingled with a sense of ominousness. Take today's utterances: If they were broadcast to the masses, announced to the whole universe, then all people would bow down and weep, for in the words "I will watch over the whole earth, and, appearing in the East of the world with righteousness, majesty, wrath, and chastisement, I will reveal Myself to the myriad hosts of humanity!" all who understand the spiritual matters see that no one can escape God's chastisement, that all will follow their own kind after experiencing the suffering of chastisement. Truly, this is a step of God's work, and no one can change it. When God created the world, when He led mankind, He showed His wisdom and wondrousness, and only when He brings this era to an end do people behold His true righteousness, majesty, wrath, and chastisement. Furthermore, it is only through chastisement that they are able to see His righteousness, majesty, and wrath; this is a path that must be taken, just as, during the last days, God's incarnation is necessary, and indispensable. After proclaiming the end of all mankind, God shows to man the work that He does today. For example, God says, "The Israel of old has ceased to be, and today's Israel has risen up, erect and towering, in the world, has stood up in the hearts of all humanity. Today's Israel shall surely attain the source of existence through My people!" "Ah, hateful Egypt! ... How can you not exist within My chastisement?" God deliberately shows people the fruits gained by two antithetical countries from God's hands, in one sense referring to Israel, which is material, and in another pointing to all of God's chosen ones—which is to say, to how God's chosen ones change as Israel changes. When Israel has wholly returned to its original form, all of the chosen ones shall subsequently be made complete—which is to say, Israel is a meaningful symbol of those whom God loves. Egypt, meanwhile, is the convergence of the representatives of those whom God hates. The more decayed it becomes, the more corrupt those who are hated by God become—and Babylon subsequently falls. This forms a clear contrast. By proclaiming the ends of Israel and Egypt, God reveals the destination of all people; thus, when mentioning Israel, God also speaks of Egypt. From this can be seen that the day of Egypt's destruction is the date of the world's annihilation, the date upon which God chastises all people. This will happen soon; it is about to be accomplished by God, and is something that is totally invisible to man's naked eye, yet it is also indispensable, and unalterable by anyone. God says, “all those who stand against Me will surely be chastised by Me for eternity. For I am a jealous God, I will not lightly spare men for all that they have done.” Why does God speak in such absolute terms? And why has He personally become flesh in the nation of the great red dragon? From God’s words can be seen His aim: He has not come to save people, or to be compassionate toward them, or to care for them, or protect them—but to chastise all those who oppose Him. For God says, “None can escape My chastisement.” God lives in the flesh, and, furthermore, He is a normal person—yet He does not forgive people for their weakness in being unable to subjectively know Him; instead, because He is normal, He condemns people for all their sins, He makes all those who behold His flesh those who are chastised, and they thus become victims for those who do not belong to the people of the country of the great red dragon. But this is not one of the primary aims of God’s incarnation. God became flesh chiefly in order to do battle, in the flesh, with the great red dragon, and to bring shame upon it through battle. Because God’s great power is more evidenced by battling the great red dragon in the flesh than in the Spirit, God fights in the flesh to show His deeds and omnipotence. Because of God’s incarnation, innumerable people have been “innocently” condemned, countless people have been thrown into hell, and cast into chastisement, suffering in the flesh. This is the demonstration of God’s righteous disposition, and regardless of how those who oppose God change today, God’s upstanding disposition shall never change. Condemned once, people are condemned forever, and never able to rise again. Man’s disposition is incapable of being like God’s. Toward those who oppose God, people are by turns hot and cold, they waver left and right, they go up and down, they are incapable of staying the same throughout, sometimes hating them to their bones, sometimes holding them close; today’s circumstances have come about because people do not know God’s work. Why does God say words such as, “The angels are, after all, angels; God, after all, is God; the demons are, after all, demons; the unrighteous are still unrighteous; and the holy are still holy”? Can you not comprehend it? Could it be that God has misremembered? Thus, God says, “each according to their kind, men find their way unawares back into the bosom of their families.” From this can be seen that today, God has already classified all things into their families, so that it is no longer an “infinite world,” and people no longer eat from the same big pot, but perform their own duty in their own home, playing their own role. This was God's original plan at the creation of the world; after being classed according to kind, people would "each eat their own meal"—God would commence judgment. As a result, from God's mouth came these words: "I will restore the former state of creation, I will restore everything to the way it originally was, profoundly changing everything, so that everything will return into the bosom of My plan." This is precisely the aim of all God's work, and it is not hard to understand. God shall complete His work—could man stand in the way of His work? And could God rip up the covenant established between Him and man? Who can alter what is done by the Spirit of God? Could it be any among man?

In the past, people grasped that there was a law to God's words: As soon as God spoke, the facts were soon accomplished. There is no falsehood in this. Since God has said He shall chastise all people, and, furthermore, since He has issued the administrative decrees, it can be seen that God's work has been carried out to a certain point. The constitution that was issued forth to all people in the past was aimed at their lives and their attitude toward God. It did not get to the root; it did not say that it was based on God's predestination, but on man's behavior at that time. The administrative decrees of today are extraordinary, they speak of how "All of humanity will follow their own kind, and will receive chastisements varying with what they have done." Without a close reading, no problem can be found in this. Because it is only during the final age that God makes all things follow their own kind, after reading this most people remain puzzled and confused, they are still tepid, they do not see the urgency of the times, and so they do not take this as a warning. Why, at this point, are God's administrative decrees—which are announced to the whole universe—shown to man? Do these people represent all those throughout the universe? Could it be that, afterward, God further adds compassion toward these people? Have these people grown two heads? When God chastises the people of the entire universe, when all manner of catastrophes strike, as a result of these catastrophes, changes shall occur in the sun and moon, and when these catastrophes end, the sun and moon will have been altered—and this is called the transition. Suffice to say, the disasters of the future shall be grievous. Night might take the place of day, the sun might not appear for a year, there might be several months of searing heat, a waning moon might always face mankind, there might appear the bizarre state of the sun and moon rising together. Following several cyclical changes, ultimately, after the passing of time, they shall be renewed. God pays special attention to the arrangements of those who are of the devil. Thus, He deliberately says, "Of the human beings within the universe, all those belonging to the devil will be exterminated." When these "people" have yet to show their true colors, God always exploits their service; as a result, He pays no heed to their doings, He gives them no "reward" no matter how well they do, nor does He dock their "wages" no matter how badly they perform. As such, He disregards them, He gives them the cold shoulder. He does not suddenly change because of their "goodness," for regardless of the time or place, man's essence does not change, just like the covenant established between God and man, just like, as man says, "there will be no change even if the seas run dry and the rocks crumble." Thus, God simply classes those people and does not heed them easily. From the time of creation until today, never has the devil comported itself well. It has always interrupted, disturbed, and dissented. When God acts or speaks, it always tries to partake—but God takes no notice. At the mention of the devil, God's rage flows forth, insuppressible; because it is not of one with the Spirit, there is no connection, only distance and separation. Following the revelation of the seven seals, the state of the earth becomes increasingly compromised, all things "advance shoulder-to-shoulder with the seven seals," not falling behind in the slightest. Throughout God's words, people are viewed by God as stupefied, yet they have not awoken at all. To reach a higher point, to bring forth the strength of all people, and moreover, to conclude God's work at its peak, God asks people a string of questions, as if inflating their bellies, and thus He replenishes all people. Because these people have no real stature, based on the actual circumstances, those who are inflated are goods that are up to standard, and those who are not are useless trash. This is God's requirement of man, and the aim of the method by which He speaks. In particular, when God says "Could it be that I, when I am on earth, am not the same I that I am in heaven? Could it be that I, when I am in heaven, cannot come down onto the earth? Could it be that I, when I am on earth, am unworthy to be borne up to heaven?" these questions go even further in making people know God. From God's words they behold God's urgent will; people are incapable of attaining it, and God repeatedly adds conditions, thus reminding all people to know the heavenly God on earth, and to know the God who is in heaven but lives on earth.

From God's words can be seen the states of man: "All men spend effort on My words, undertaking investigations of their own into My outward semblance, but they all meet with failure, without any results to show, but instead are struck down by My words and dare not get up again." Who can understand God's sorrow? Who can comfort God's heart? Who is after God's heart in what God asks? When people produce no results, they deny themselves and are truly at the whim of God's orchestrations. Gradually, as they show their true heart, each follows their own kind, and it is thus seen that the essence of the angels is the pure obedience to God. And so, God says, "Humanity is exposed in their original form." When God's work reaches this step, all of God's work will have been completed. God appears to say nothing of His being an exemplar for His sons and people, instead focusing on making all people display their original form. Do you understand the true meaning of these words?

INTERPRETATION OF THE TWENTY-SEVENTH UTTERANCE

Today, God's words have reached their pinnacle, which is to say, the second part of the era of judgment has reached its peak. But it is not the highest peak. At this time, God's tone has changed, it is neither mocking nor humorous, and does not strike or curse; God has alleviated the tone of His words. Now, God begins to "wax nostalgic" with man. God is both continuing the work of the era of judgment and opening up the path of the next section of work, so that all sections of His work are entwined with each other. On the one hand, He speaks of "man's stubbornness and recidivism," and on the other, He says "In My joys and sorrows, My separation and being reunited with man"—both of which provoke a reaction in people's hearts, and move even the most callous of them. God's aim in saying these words is primarily to make all people fall down before God, without a whisper, at the very end, and only then "do My actions become apparent, letting everyone, in their own failure, come to know Me." The people of this period's knowledge of God remains entirely superficial, it is not true knowledge. Though they try as hard as they can, they are incapable of attaining God's will; today, God's words have reached their zenith, but people remain in the early stages, and are thus incapable of entering into the utterances of the here and now—which shows that God and man are as different as chalk and cheese. Based on this, when the words of God come to an end people will only be capable of attaining the lowest standards of God. This is the means by which God works in these people who have been utterly corrupted by the great red dragon, and God must work thus in order to achieve the optimal effect. The people of the churches pay a little more attention to God's words, but God's intention is that they might know God in His words—is there not a difference? However, as things stand, God is no longer mindful of man's weakness, and carries on speaking regardless of whether people are able to accept His words or not. As is His intention, when His words end will be when His work on earth is completed. But this work is unlike the past. When God's utterances come to an end, no one will know; when God's work comes to an end, no one will know; and when God's form changes, no one will know. Such is the wisdom of God. To avoid any accusations from Satan and any interference from hostile forces, God works without anyone knowing, and at this time there is no reaction among the people of earth. Though the signs of God's transfiguration were once spoken of, no one is able to perceive it, for man has forgotten this matter, and he pays no attention to it. And because of the attacks from both inside and out—the disasters of the external world and the burning and cleansing of God's words—people are no longer willing to toil for God, because they're too busy with their own business. When all people deny the knowledge and pursuit of the past, when all people have seen themselves clearly, they will fail and their own self will no longer have a place in their hearts. Only then will people sincerely long for the words of God, only then will God's words truly have a place in their hearts, and only then will these words have become the source of their existence—and at this moment, God's will shall have been fulfilled. But the people of today are a long way off that. Some of them have barely moved an inch, and thus God says this is “recidivism.”

All of God's words contain many questions. Why does God keep asking such questions? “Why can't they repent and be born again? Why are people forever willing to live in the swamp instead of a place free of mud? ...” In the past, God worked by means of directly pointing things out or direct exposure. But after people had suffered tremendous pain, God did not speak thus directly. On one hand, people see their own deficiencies in these questions, and on the other, they grasp the path to practice. Because people all like to enjoy the fruits of others' labor, God speaks as befits their requirements, providing them with topics to ponder, so that they can ponder them. This is one aspect of the significance of God's questions. Naturally, this is not the significance of some of His questions, for example: Could it be that I have mistreated them? Could it be that I have led them astray? Could it be that I lead them to hell? Questions like these point out the conceptions in the depths of people's hearts. Although their mouths don't say it, there is doubt within most of their hearts, and they believe that God's words portray them as good for nothing. Naturally, such people don't know themselves, but ultimately, they will admit defeat by God's words—this is inevitable. Following these questions, God also says "I will shatter all the nations, not to mention the families." When people accept the name of God, all nations will shake as a result, people will gradually change their mentality, and in families the relationships between father and son, mother and daughter or husband and wife shall cease to exist. What's more, the relationships between people in families will become ever more estranged; they will join the great family, and the regularity of the lives of almost all families shall be torn apart. And because of this, the concept of family in people's hearts will become increasingly hazy.

Why, in God's words of today, has so much been devoted to "waxing nostalgic" with people? Naturally, this is also in order to achieve a concrete effect: showing how God's heart is filled with anxiety. God says, "when I am sad, who can comfort Me with their hearts?" God says these words because His heart is overcome with grief. Because people are incapable of giving every care to God's will, and they are always dissolute, and can't hold themselves in check—they do as they please; because they are too lowly, and they always forgive themselves, and are not mindful of God's will. But because people have been corrupted by Satan right up until today, and are incapable of freeing themselves, God says: "how can they escape from the mouth of the ravenous wolf? How can they free themselves from its threat and temptation?" People live in the flesh—in the mouth of the ravenous wolf. Because of this, and because people have no self-awareness and are always indulging themselves and giving in to debauchery, God cannot help but feel anxious. The more God reminds people thus, the better they feel in their hearts, and the more they become willing to engage with God. Only then will man and God get along, without any separation or distance between them. Today, all mankind awaits the arrival of God's day, and so mankind has never moved forward. Yet God says: "When the Sun of righteousness appears, the East will be illuminated, and then it will illuminate the whole universe, reaching everyone." In other words, when God changes His form, the East will be illuminated first and the country of the East will be the first to be supplanted, after which the remaining countries shall be renewed from south to north. This is the order, and all will be in accordance with God's words, and once this phase has finished all people shall see. It is according to this order that God works. When they behold this day, people will be overjoyed. It can be seen from God's urgent intention that this day is not far off.

In the words of today, the second and third parts provoke tears of anguish in all those who love God. Their hearts are immediately shrouded in shadow, and from this time onward all people are filled with tremendous sorrow because of God's heart—only after God finishes His work on earth, they will feel at ease. This is the general trend. "Anger rises within My heart, accompanied by a surging feeling of sorrow. When My eyes behold people's deeds and their every word and action as filthy, My rage wells up, and in My heart there is a greater sense of the injustices of the human world, which makes Me more sorrowful; I long to end man's flesh right away. I know not why man is incapable of cleansing himself in the flesh, why man cannot love himself in the flesh. Could it be that the 'function' of the flesh is so great?" In God's words today, God has publicly disclosed all of the anxiety within His heart to man without holding anything back. When the angels of the third heaven play music and percussion for Him, God still feels attached to the people on earth, and it is because of this that He says "When the angels play music and percussion in praise to Me, I cannot help but have My sympathy evoked for man. I suddenly feel extremely sad in My heart, and it is difficult to rid Myself of this painful emotion." It is for this reason that God says the words: "I want to correct the injustices of the human world. I will do My work personally throughout the entire world, forbidding Satan from harming My people again, forbidding the enemy from doing whatever they please again. I will become King on earth and move My throne there, making all the enemy fall to the ground and confess their crimes before Me." God's sadness increases His hate toward devils, and thus He reveals their end to the masses in advance. This is the work of God. God has always wished to be reunited with all people and bring the old age to a close. All people throughout the universe are beginning to move—which is to say, all people beneath the cosmos are entering the guidance of God. As a result, their thoughts turn to revolting against their emperors. Before long, the people of the world will erupt into chaos and the heads of all countries will flee in every direction, ultimately being pushed onto the guillotine by their people. This is the final end of the kings of devils; ultimately, no one will be able to escape, all must pass through it. Today, those who are “clever” have begun to step back. Seeing that things aren’t looking good, they use this opportunity to back down and escape the hardship of catastrophe. But I say plainly, the work that God does during the last days is chiefly the chastisement of man, so how could these people be capable of escaping? Today is the first step. One day, all throughout the universe shall fall into the tumult of war, the people of earth will never again have leaders, the whole world will be like a pile of loose sand, governed by no one, and people will care only for their own lives, heedless of anyone else, for everything is controlled by God’s hand—which is why God says, “all the people split the nations according to My will.” The “trumpet of the angel” of which God speaks now is a sign, it is ringing the alarm bell for man, and when the trumpet sounds once again, the world’s last day will have arrived. At that time, God’s entire chastisement will befall earth in its entirety; this will be heartless judgment, and the official start of the times of chastisement. Among the Israelites, there will often be God’s voice to lead them through different environments, and so too will the angels appear to them. The Israelites will be made complete in just a few months, because they will not have to undergo the step of dispelling the great red dragon’s venom, it will be easy for them to enter onto the right track under various kinds of guidance. From the developments in Israel can be seen the state of the entire universe, and this shows just how quick the steps of God’s work are. “The time has come! I will put My work in motion, I will reign supreme among man!” In the past, God only reigned in heaven. Today, He reigns on earth; God has taken back all of His authority, and so it is foretold that all mankind shall never again have the normal human life, for God shall reorder heaven and earth, and no man is allowed to interfere. Thus, God often reminds man that “The time has come.” When the Israelites have all returned to their country—on the day that the country of Israel has been entirely recovered—God’s great work will be complete. Without anyone realizing, people across the universe will revolt, and countries throughout the universe will fall like the stars in heaven; in an instant, they will become a pile of rubble. And after dealing with them, God shall build the kingdom beloved of His heart.

INTERPRETATION OF THE TWENTY-EIGHTH UTTERANCE

People’s state is that the less they understand of God’s words, the more skeptical they are of God’s current means of working. But this has no effect on God’s work; when His words reach a certain point, people’s hearts will naturally come around. In their lives, everyone fixates upon God’s words, and they also begin to yearn for His words—and because of God’s continuous exposure, they begin to despise themselves. Yet God has also uttered many of the following type of words: “When he has thoroughly grasped all of My words, man’s stature is commensurate with My wishes, and his pleas are fruitful, and not in vain or futile; I bless the pleas of mankind that are sincere, and not a pretense.” In fact, people are incapable of completely grasping God’s words, they can merely grasp the surface. God merely uses these words to give them an objective to pursue, to make them feel that God does not do things lightly, but is serious about His work, and only then will they have the faith to pursue. And because all people only plead for their own sakes, not for the will of God, but God does not blow hot and cold, His words have always been directed at man’s nature. Although most people today plead, they are not sincere—it is just a pretense. The state of all people is that they “consider My mouth a cornucopia. All people wish to acquire something from My mouth. Whether it be the secrets of state, or the mysteries of heaven, or the dynamics of the spiritual world, or the destination of mankind.” Because of their curiosity, people are all willing to search for these things, and don’t wish to gain anything of the provision of life from God’s words. Thus God says, “Too much is lacking within man: He requires not just ‘nutritional supplements,’ but even more ‘mental support’ and a ‘spiritual supply.’” It is the conceptions in people that have led to the negativity of today, and it is because their physical eyes are too “feudal” that there is no vigor to what they say and do, and they are perfunctory and slapdash in all things. Are these not the conditions of people? Shouldn't people hurry up and rectify this, rather than carrying on as they are? What benefit does knowing the future have for man? Why do people have a reaction after reading some of God's words, but the remainder of His words have no effect? When God says, for example, "I provide a cure for man's sickness in order that better effects may be achieved, so that all may be restored to health, and so that, thanks to My cure, they may return to normality," how is it that these words have no effect in people? Is everything done by God not that which ought to be attained by man? God has work to do—why do people not have a path to walk? In this, do they not deviate from God? There is actually much work that people ought to do—for example, how much do they know of the "great red dragon" in the words "Do you truly hate the great red dragon"? God's words of "Why have I asked you so many times?" show that people are still ignorant of the nature of the great red dragon's, that they remain incapable of going deeper. Is this not the very work that man ought to do? How can it be said that man has no work? If that were the case, what would be the significance of God's incarnation? Is God being slapdash and perfunctory for the sake of going through the motions? Can the great red dragon be defeated in this way?

God says, "I have already begun, and I will commence the first step of My work of chastisement in the dwelling place of the great red dragon." These words are directed at the work in divinity; the people of today have already entered chastisement in advance, and thus God says this is the first step of His work. He is not making people endure the chastisement of disasters, but that of words. Because, when the tone of God's words changes, people become totally ignorant, after that they all enter chastisement. And once they have undergone chastisement, it is just as God says^[a] "Hence you will formally perform your duty, and will formally praise Me throughout the lands, forever and ever!" This is a step of God's work—it is His plan. Moreover, these people of God shall personally behold the methods by which the great red dragon is chastised, so catastrophe officially begins in their outer world. This is one of the means by which God saves people: Internally they are chastised, and externally catastrophe befalls—which is to say, God's

a. The original text omits "it is just as God says."

words are fulfilled. Thus, people would prefer to undergo chastisement over catastrophe, and it is because of this that they remain. On the one hand, this is the point that God's work has come to; on the other, it is so that people may all know God's disposition. Thus God says, "The time that My people enjoy Me is when the great red dragon is chastised. Causing the people of the great red dragon to rise up and revolt against it is My plan, and the method by which I make perfect My people, and is a great opportunity for all My people to grow in life." Why is it that God speaks these words yet they do not attract people's attention?

Countries are in great chaos, because God's rod has begun to play its role on earth. God's work can be seen in the state of the earth. When God says "the waters will roar, the mountains will topple, the great rivers will disintegrate," this is the rod's initial work on earth, with the result that "All households upon earth will be torn apart; no more will mother and son meet again, never again will there be the coming together of father and daughter. All that used to be on earth will be smashed by Me." Such will be the general state of families on earth. Naturally, it could not possibly be the state of all of them, but it is the state of most of them. On the other hand, it is referring to the circumstances experienced by the people of this stream in the future. It foretells that, once they have undergone the chastisement of words and the unbelievers have been subjected to catastrophe, there will no longer be familial relations among the people on earth; they will all be the people of Sinim, and will all be faithful in God's kingdom. Thus, gone will be the days of the reunion between husband and wife, no more will mother and son meet again, never again will there be the coming together of father and daughter. And so, the families of people on earth will be torn apart, ripped to pieces, and this will be the final work that God does in man. And because God shall spread this work throughout the universe, He takes the opportunity to clarify the word "emotion" for people, thus allowing them to see that God's will is to tear apart all people's families, and showing that God uses chastisement to resolve all the family disputes among mankind. If not, there would be no way of bringing the final part of God's work on earth to a close. The final part of God's words lays bare mankind's greatest weakness—they all live in emotion—and so God does not avoid a single one of them, and exposes the secrets hidden in the hearts of all mankind. Why is it so hard for people to separate themselves from emotion? Is it higher than the standards of conscience? Can conscience accomplish God's will? Can emotion help people through adversity? In God's eyes, emotion is His enemy—has this not been clearly stated in God's words?

INTERPRETATION OF THE TWENTY-NINTH UTTERANCE

Of the work done by people, some of it is carried out with direct instruction from God, but for part of it God does not provide overt instructions, sufficiently showing that what is done by God has, today, yet to be completely revealed—which is to say, much remains hidden and has yet to become public. But some things need to be made public, and there are some that need to leave people puzzled and confused; this is what is required by God's work. For example, God's arrival from heaven among man: how He arrived, at what second He arrived, or whether the heavens and earth and all things underwent changes or not—these things require people to be confused. This is also based on actual circumstances, for human flesh itself is incapable of directly entering the spiritual realm. Thus, even if God clearly states how He came from heaven to earth, or when He says, "On the day that all things were resurrected, I came among man, and I have spent wonderful days and nights with him," such words are like someone talking to a tree trunk—there is not the slightest reaction, because people are ignorant of the steps of God's work. Even when they are truly aware, they believe that God flew down to earth from heaven like a fairy and was reborn among man. This is what's attained by the thoughts of man. It is because the essence of man is that he is unable to understand the substance of God, and is unable to understand the reality of the spiritual realm. By their essence alone, people would be incapable of acting as an exemplar for others, because people are inherently the same, and not different. Thus, asking that people set an example for others to follow or serve as an exemplar becomes a bubble, it becomes steam rising from water. Whereas when God says, "he gains some knowledge of what I have and am," these words are merely addressed at the manifestation of the work God does in the flesh; in other words, they are directed at God's true face—divinity, which primarily refers to His divine disposition. That is to say, people are asked to understand things such as why God works in this way, what things are to be accomplished by God's words, what God wishes to achieve on earth, what He wishes to gain among man, the methods by which God speaks, and what God's attitude toward man is. It can be said that there is nothing boast-worthy in man, that is, there is nothing in him that can set an example for others to follow.

It is precisely because of the normalness of God in the flesh, because of the dissimilarity of God in heaven and God in the flesh, who does not seem to be born of God in heaven, that God says, "Many years have I passed among man, yet he has always remained unaware, and has never known Me." God also says, "When My footsteps tread across the ends of the universe, man will begin to reflect upon himself, and all people will come to Me and bow down before Me and worship Me. This will be the day of My glorification, the day of My return, and also the day of My departure." Only this is the day when God's true face is shown to man. Yet God does not delay His work as a result, and He simply does the work that ought to be done. When He judges, He condemns according to people's attitude toward God in the flesh. This is one of the main threads of God's utterances during this period. For example, God says, "I have formally embarked, throughout the entire universe, upon the finale of My management plan. From this moment onward, any who are not cautious are liable to be plunged amid merciless chastisement at any moment." This is the content of God's plan, and it is neither odd nor strange, but all the step of the work. The people and sons of God abroad, meanwhile, are judged by God according to all that they do in the churches, and thus God says, "As I work, all angels embark upon the decisive battle with Me and resolve to fulfill My wishes in the final stage, so that the people on earth yield before Me like the angels, and have no desire to oppose Me, and do nothing that rebels against Me. These are the dynamics of My work throughout the universe." This is the difference in the work God carries out throughout the earth; He employs different measures according to who they are directed at. Today, the people of the churches all have a yearning heart, and they have begun to eat and drink the words of God—which is enough to show that God's work is approaching its end. Looking down from the sky is akin to once more looking upon dreary scenes of withered branches and fallen leaves, of loess blown by the autumn wind, it feels like an apocalypse is about to occur among man, as if all is about to be turned to desolation. Maybe it is because of the sensitivity of the Spirit, there is always a sense of unhappiness in the heart, with a sliver of tranquil comfort, yet this is also mixed with some sorrow. This may be the depiction of God's words that "man is awakening, everything on earth is in order, and the days of survival of the earth are no more, for I have arrived!" People may become somewhat negative after hearing these words, or they may be a little disappointed with God's work, or they may focus much on the feeling in their spirit. But prior to the completion of His work on earth, God could not possibly be so foolish as to give people such an illusion. If you truly have such feelings, then it shows you pay too much attention to your feelings, that you are someone who does as they please, and does not love God; it shows that such people focus on the supernatural too much, and pay no heed to God at all. Because of the hand of God, no matter how people try to get away, they are incapable of escaping this circumstance. Who can escape the hand of God? When have your status and circumstances not been arranged by God? Whether you suffer or are blessed, how could you sneak away from the hand of God? This is not a human matter, it is entirely God's need—who would not obey because of this?

"I will use chastisement to spread My work among the Gentiles, which is to say, I will use force against all those who are Gentiles. Naturally, this work will be carried out at the same time as My work among the chosen ones." With the utterance of these words, God embarks upon this work throughout the universe, and it is a step of God's work, which has already progressed to this point; no one can turn things around. Catastrophe will solve one portion of mankind, causing them to perish with the world. When the universe is officially chastised, God officially appears to all peoples. And because of His appearance, people are chastised. What's more, God also said, "When I formally open the scroll is when people throughout the universe are chastised, when people all over the world are subjected to trials." From this can be seen clearly that the content of the seven seals is the content of the chastisement, which is to say, there is catastrophe in the seven seals. Thus, today, the seven seals have yet to be opened; the "trials" referred to here are the chastisement suffered by man, and amidst this chastisement a group of people will be gained who officially accept the "certificate" issued by God, and thus they will be the people in God's kingdom. These are the origins of the sons and people of God, and today they have yet to be decided, and are merely laying the foundation for future experiences. If someone has the true life, they will be able to stand firm during trials, and if they are without the life, then this sufficiently proves that God's work has had no effect on them, that they fish in troubled waters, and do not focus on God's words. Because this is the work of the last days, which is to bring this age to an end instead of carrying on the work, thus God says, "In other words, it is the life that man has never experienced from the time of creation until the present day, and so I say that I do work that has never been done before," and He also says, "Because My day draws near to all mankind, because it does not appear distant, but is right before man's eyes." In times past, God personally destroyed several cities, yet none of them were razed in the same way as in the final time. Although, in the past, God destroyed Sodom, the Sodom of today is not to be treated as in times past—it is not to be destroyed directly, but to be first conquered and then judged, and, ultimately, subjected to everlasting punishment. These are the steps of the work, and in the end, the Sodom of today shall be annihilated in the same sequence as the past destruction of the world—which is God's plan. The day on which God appears is the day of official condemnation of it, and it is not to save it by means of His appearance. Thus, God says, "I appear to the holy kingdom, and hide Myself from the land of filth." Because the Sodom of today is impure, God does not truly appear to it, but uses this means to chastise it—have you not seen this clearly? It can be said that no one on earth is capable of seeing God's true face. God has never appeared to man, and no one knows in which level of heaven God is. This is what has allowed the people of today to be in this circumstance. If they were to behold the face of God, that would surely be the time in which their end is revealed, the time when each is classed according to kind. Today, the words in divinity are directly shown to people, which foretells that the last days of mankind have arrived, and will not last for much longer. This is one of the signs of people's subjection to trials at the time when God appears to all people. Thus, although people enjoy God's words, they always have an ominous feeling, as if a great calamity is about to befall them. The people of today are like sparrows in frozen lands, on whom it is as if death forces a debt and leaves them with no way to survive. Because of the debt of death owed by man, people all feel that their last days have arrived. This is what is happening in the hearts of people across the universe, and although it is not revealed on their faces, what is in their hearts is incapable of hiding from My eyes—this is the reality of man. Perhaps, many of the words are somewhat poorly chosen—but it is these very words that are sufficient to show the problem. Every one of the words spoken from God's mouth shall be fulfilled, whether they be of the past or the present; they shall make the facts appear before people, a feast for their eyes, at which time they will become dazzled and confused. Have you still not clearly seen what age it is today?

INTERPRETATION OF THE THIRTIETH UTTERANCE

Some people may have a little insight into God's words, but none of them trust their feelings; they are deeply afraid of falling into negativity. Thus, they have always alternated between joy and sorrow. It is fair to say that the lives of all people are filled with grief; to take this a step further, there is refinement in the daily lives of all people, yet I can say that no one gains any release in their spirits each day, and it is as if three great mountains are pressing down on their heads. Not one of their lives are happy and joyous all the time—and even when they are a little happy, they are simply trying to keep up appearances. In their hearts, people always have a sense of something unfinished. Thus, they are not steadfast in their hearts; in life, things feel empty and unfair, and when it comes to the belief in God, they are busy and are short on time, or else they don't have the time to eat and drink God's words, or are incapable of eating and drinking God's words. Not one of them is at peace, and lucid, and steadfast in their hearts. It is as if they have always lived beneath an overcast sky, as if they live in a space without oxygen, and this has led to the confusion in their lives. God always speaks straight to people's weaknesses, He always strikes them at their Achilles' heel—have you not clearly seen the tone with which He has spoken throughout? God has never given people the opportunity to repent, and He makes all people live on the “moon” without oxygen. From the beginning until today, the surface of God's words has exposed the nature of man, yet no one has clearly seen the substance of these words. It appears that by exposing the essence of man, people come to know themselves and thus come to know God, yet this is not the path in substance. The tone and greater depth of God's words show a clear difference between God and man. In their feelings, this makes people unconsciously believe that God is unreachable and unapproachable; God brings everything out into the open, and it seems that no one is capable of returning the relationship between God and man to how it used to be. It is not hard to see that the aim of all God's utterances is to use words to topple all people, thereby accomplishing His work. This is a step of God's work. Yet this is not what people believe in their minds. They believe that God's work is approaching its climax, that it is approaching its most discernible effect so as to conquer the great red dragon, which is to say, making the churches thrive, and no one having conceptions about God incarnate, or else all people knowing God. Yet let us read what God says: "In people's minds, God is God, and is not easily engaged with, while man is man, and should not easily become dissolute ... and as a result, they are always humble and patient before Me; they are incapable of being compatible with Me, for they have too many conceptions." From this can be seen that, regardless of what God says or what man does, people are totally incapable of knowing God; because of the role played by their essence, no matter what, they are, at the end of the day, incapable of knowing God. Thus, God's work will end when people see themselves as the sons of hell. There is no need for God to unleash His wrath on people, or to condemn them directly, or to ultimately sentence them to death in order to conclude His entire management. He merely shoots the breeze at His own pace, as if the completion of His work is incidental, something accomplished in His spare time without the slightest effort. From the outside, there appears to be some urgency to God's work—yet God hasn't done anything, He does nothing but speak. The work among the churches is not of the same great scale as in times gone by: God does not add people, or expel them, or lay them bare—such work is too trivial. It seems as if God is of no mind to do such work. He merely says a little of what He ought to, after which He turns around and disappears without trace—which, naturally, is the scene of the completion of His utterances. And when this moment arrives, all people shall awake from their slumber. Mankind has slumbered for thousands of years, he has been in a sopor throughout. And for many years, people have been rushing hither and thither in their dreams, and they even cry out in their dreams, incapable of speaking of the injustice within their hearts. Thus, they "feel a little melancholy in their hearts"—but when they awaken, they shall discover the true facts, and exclaim: "So this is what's going on!" Thus it is said that "Today, most people are still fast asleep. Only when the kingdom anthem sounds do they open their sleepy eyes and feel a little melancholy in their hearts.”

No one's spirit has ever been liberated, never has anyone's spirit been carefree and happy. When God's work is completely finished, people's spirits will be liberated, for each will have been classed according to kind, and thus they will all be steadfast in their hearts. It is as if people are on some far-flung voyage and their hearts become steadfast when they return home. Upon arriving home, people will no longer feel that the world is empty and unfair, but will live in peace in their homes. Such will be the circumstances among all mankind. Thus, God says that people “have never been able to free themselves from Satan's bondage.” No one is able to extricate themselves from this state whilst in the flesh. For the moment, let us put aside what God says about the various actual states of man, and talk only of the mysteries that God has yet to reveal to man. “... countless times have people looked at Me with mocking eyes, as if My body were covered in thorns and loathsome to them, and thus people abhor Me, and believe that I am without worth.” Contrariwise, in substance, man's true colors are revealed in God's words: He is covered in quills, there is nothing pleasing about him, and thus God's hatred for man increases, for man is nothing but a spine-covered hedgehog that has nothing enjoyable about it. Superficially, these words appear to describe man's conceptions toward God^[a]—but in reality, God is painting a picture of man based on his “image.” These words are God's delineation of man, and it is as if God has sprayed a fixative upon the image of man; thus, man's image stands tall throughout the universe, and even astonishes people. From when He began to speak, God has been positioning His forces for a great battle with man. He is like a university algebra professor laying out the facts for man, and what is proved by the facts that He lists—the evidence and counter evidence—makes all people utterly convinced. This is the aim of all God's words, and it is because of this that God casually tosses these mystifying words at man: “I am, in sum, utterly without value in man's heart, I am a dispensable household item.” After reading these words, people can't help but say a prayer in their hearts, and they come to know their indebtedness to God, which makes them condemn themselves, makes them believe that man ought to die, and is without the slightest worth. God says, “it is because of this that I find Myself in the situation I am in today,” which, when connected to the actual circumstances of today, causes people to condemn themselves. Is this not fact? If you were made to know yourself, could words like “I truly should die!” come from your mouth? Such are the true circumstances of man, and this is not worth thinking about too much—it is merely a fitting example.

In one sense, when God begs for man’s forgiveness and tolerance, people see that God is making fun of them, and in another sense, they also behold their own rebelliousness—they are just waiting for God to exert Himself to the utmost for man. Besides, speaking of people’s conceptions, God says He is not proficient in the life philosophy or the language of man. Thus, in one regard this makes people compare these words to the practical God, and in another, they see God’s intention in His words—God is mocking them, for they understand that God is revealing the true face of man, and He is not really telling people about the true circumstances of God. The inherent meaning of God’s words is suffused with mockery, ridicule, laughter, and hatred toward man. It is as if, in all he does, man is perverting the law and taking bribes; people are whores, and when God opens His mouth to speak, they tremble in terror, profoundly afraid that the truth about them will be thoroughly exposed, leaving them too ashamed to face anybody. But facts are facts. God does not cease His utterances because of man’s “repentance”; the more unspeakably ashamed and embarrassed beyond words people become, the more God fixes His burning gaze upon their faces. The words from His mouth lay all of man’s ugly deeds on the table—only this is being just and impartial, only this is called Qingtian,^[a] only this is judgment from the highest court of the people. Thus, when people read God’s words, they are suddenly struck by a heart attack, their blood pressure rises, it is as if they are suffering from coronary heart disease, as if a cerebral hemorrhage is about to send them back to the western paradise to meet with their ancestors—this is the reaction when they read God’s words. Man is made infirm by years of hard labor, he is sick inside and out, all of him is ill, from his heart to his blood vessels, large intestine, small intestine, stomach, lungs, kidneys,

a. Qingtian: This term is used to refer to a righteous judge in the imperial time.

and so on. Nothing in his entire body is healthy. Thus, God's work does not reach a level unattainable to man, but causes people to know themselves. Because man's body is beset by viruses, and because he has grown old, the day of his death draws near, and there is no way back. But this is only part of the story; the inner meaning has yet to be revealed, for the source of man's illness is being sought. In reality, the time when the entirety of God's work is completed is not the time when His work on earth is completed, for once this step of work is finished, there will be no way of carrying out the work of the future in the flesh, and the Spirit of God will be required to complete it. Thus, God says, "When I formally open the scroll is when people throughout the universe are chastised, the time when My work reaches its climax, when people all over the world are subjected to trials." The time when the work in the flesh is finished is not when God's work reaches its climax—the climax of this time merely refers to the work during this stage, and is not the climax of the entire management plan. Thus, God's requirements of man are not high. He merely asks that people know themselves, thus serving the next step of work, in which God's will shall have been achieved. As God's^[a] work changes, people's^[b] "work unit" alters. Today is the stage of God's work on earth, and thus they must work at the grassroots. In the future, it will be necessary to administer the nation, and thus they will be reassigned to the Central Committee. If they visit abroad, they will have to deal with procedures for going overseas. At such times they will be overseas, far from their homeland—but this will still be because of the requirements of God's work. As people have said, "We will lay down our lives for God when necessary"—is this not the path that shall be walked in the future? Who has ever enjoyed such a life? One can travel all over, visit overseas, provide guidance in the countryside, assimilate themselves among the common people, and they can also talk of the important matters of the nation with members of high-level organizations; and when necessary, they can personally taste life in hell, after which they can return and still be able to enjoy the heavenly blessings—are these not the blessings of man? Who has ever compared to God? Who has ever traveled throughout all nations? In fact, people would be able to understand a little of some of God's words without any pointers or explanations—it's just that they have no faith in themselves, which is what has stretched God's work out until today. Because people lack too much—as God said, "they have nothing"—the work of today poses tremendous difficulties to them; what's more, their weakness has, naturally, constrained God's mouth—and are these things not precisely what is hindering God's work? Can you still not see this? There is hidden meaning in all that God says. When God speaks, He seizes upon the issue at hand, and like a fable, all of the words He speaks contain profound message. These simple words contain profound meaning, and thus explain important questions—is this not what God's words are best at? Do you know this?

INTERPRETATION OF THE THIRTY-FIRST UTTERANCE

The disposition of God runs through all of God's utterances, but the main thread of His words is revealing the rebellion of all mankind and exposing things such as their disobedience, insubordination, unfairness, unrighteousness, and inability to truly love God. It is such that, God's words have reached the point that He says every pore in people's bodies contains opposition to God, that even their capillaries contain defiance to God. If people do not try to examine this, they will always be incapable of knowing them, and will never be able to cast them aside. Which is to say, the virus of opposition to God will spread in them and ultimately, it will be as if their white blood cells have devoured their red blood cells, leaving their entire body devoid of red blood cells; in the end, they'll die from leukemia. This is the real state of man, and no one can deny it. Having been born in the land in which the great red dragon lies coiled, in all people there is at least one thing that typifies and exemplifies the great red dragon's venom. Thus, in this stage of work, the main thread throughout God's words has been knowing oneself, denying oneself, forsaking oneself, and slaying oneself. It can be said that this is God's primary work during the last days, and that this round of work is the most comprehensive and thorough of all—which shows that God is planning to bring the age to an end. No one expected this, but it is also something that they have anticipated in their senses. Although God did not say so explicitly, people's senses are highly acute—they always feel that time is short. I can say that the more a person feels this, the more he has a clear knowledge of the age. It is not the case that he has seen that the world is normal, and thus denies God's words; instead, because of the means by which God works he has come to know what is contained within God's work, which is determined by the tone of God's words. There is a secret to the tone of God's utterances, which no one has discovered and is also precisely what is most difficult for people to enter into. The crux of why people cannot understand God's words is that they remain ignorant of the tone with which God speaks—and if they master this secret, they will be capable of some knowledge of God's words. God's words have always followed one principle: causing people to know that God's words are everything, and resolving all man's difficulties through God's words. From the perspective of the Spirit, God makes plain His deeds, from the perspective of man, He exposes people's conceptions, from the perspective of the Spirit, He says man is not mindful of His will, and from the perspective of man, He says He has tasted the sweet, sour, bitter, and pungent flavors of human experience, that amid the wind and rain, He has experienced the persecution of family, and has experienced the ups and downs of life. These are words spoken from different perspectives. When He speaks to the people of God, it is like a housekeeper telling off slaves, or like a comedy sketch; His words leave people red-faced, with nowhere to hide from shame, as if they have been detained by the feudal authorities to give a confession under severe torture. When He speaks to the people of God, God is as unrestrained as protesting university students exposing the scandals within the central government. If all of God's words were mocking, they would be harder for people to accept; thus, the words spoken by God are straightforward, they do not contain ciphers for man, but point out the actual state of man directly—which shows that God's love of man is not just words, but real. Though people value realness, there is nothing real about their love for God. This is what is lacking in man. If people's love for God is not real, then the entirety of everything will be empty and illusionary, as if all would disappear because of this. If their love of God surpasses the universes, then so too will their status and identity, and even these words, be real, and not empty—do you see this? Have you seen God's requirements for man? Man should not merely enjoy the blessings of status, but live out the reality of status. This is what God asks of the people of God, and of all of man, and is not some great empty theory.

Why does God say this type of words: “as if all I do is an attempt to please them, as a result of which they are always disgusted by My doings”? Are you able to speak of the real manifestations of man’s loathing of God? In people’s conceptions, man and God are “passionately in love,” and today, people’s yearning for God’s words has reached the point that they eagerly wish to swallow God in one gulp—yet God says the following kind of words: “Man despises Me. Why has My love been repaid with man’s hate?” Is this not the mineral deposit within people? Is this not what should be dug out? This is the defect with people’s pursuit, it is a major issue that ought to be solved, and it is the lion that stands in the way of man’s knowledge of God and which must be dispelled for man—is this not what ought to be done? Because, like a pig, man has no memory, and always covets pleasures, God gives man the medicine for amnesia—He speaks more, says more, and He grabs people by the ears and makes them listen closely, and fits them with hearing aids. As for some of His words, speaking only once cannot solve the problem; they must be said over and over again, for “people always suffer forgetfulness in their lives, and the days of the lives of all mankind are in disarray.” In this way, people can be saved from the state in which “they read when they have time, listen when they are free, and leave them alone when they don’t have time; if the words are spoken today, they pay attention, but they will put them to the back of their minds, if they are not spoken tomorrow.” As far as people’s nature is concerned, if today God spoke of their real state and they came to have a thorough knowledge of it, then they would be filled with regret—but afterward, they would go back to their old ways, casting God’s words to the winds and replaying the above when reminded. Thus, when you work or speak, do not forget this essence of man; it would be a mistake to cast aside this essence while working. In doing all work, it is especially important to speak in light of people’s conceptions. In particular, you should add your own insights to God’s words and commune them. This is the path of providing to people and allowing them to know themselves. In providing to people based on the content of God’s words, it will inevitably become possible to grasp their real state. In God’s words, it is enough to grasp man’s real state and thus provide to them—and as such, I shall say no more of God’s words pointing out that “God accepted the invitation to sit at a banquet table on earth.”

INTERPRETATION OF THE THIRTY-SECOND UTTERANCE

God's words leave people scratching their heads; it is as if, when He speaks, God is shunning man and speaking to the air, as if He has no thought at all to pay any more attention to man's deeds, and is totally heedless of man's stature, as if the words He speaks are not directed at people's conceptions, but shun man, as was God's original intention. For myriad reasons, God's words are ungraspable and impenetrable to man. This is no surprise. The original aim of all God's words is not for people to gain know-how or knack from them; instead, they are one of the means by which God has worked from the start until today. Of course, from God's words people do gain things related to mysteries, or things concerning Peter, Paul, and Job—but this is what they ought to attain, and what they are capable of attaining, and, as befits their stature, this has already reached its peak. Why is it that the effect that God asks to be achieved is not high, yet He has spoken so many words? This is connected to the chastisement of which He speaks, and naturally, it is all achieved without people realizing. Today, people endure greater suffering under the attacks of God's words. Superficially, none of them seem to have been dealt with, people have begun to be set free in doing their work, and the service-doers have been elevated to the people of God—and in this, it appears to people that they have entered into enjoyment. In fact, the reality is that, from refinement, they have all entered into more severe chastisement. Just as God says, "The steps of My work are closely linked one to the next, each one ever higher." God has raised the service-doers out of the bottomless pit and cast them into the lake of fire and brimstone, where chastisement is more grievous. Thus, they suffer even greater hardship, from which they are barely able to escape. Is such chastisement not more grievous? Having entered a higher realm, why is it that people feel sorrow rather than any happiness? Why is it said that having been delivered from the hands of Satan, they are given to the great red dragon? Do you remember when God said, "The last part of the work is completed in the home of the great red dragon"? Do you recall when God said, "The final hardship is bearing strong, resounding testimony for God before the great red dragon"? If people are not given to the great red dragon, how could they bear testimony before it? Who has ever said words such as “I have defeated the devil” after killing themselves? Committing suicide after regarding their flesh as the enemy—where’s the actual significance of this? Why did God speak thus? “I do not look at people’s scars, but at the part of them that is unscarred, and from this I am gratified.” If God wished for those who are without scars to be His expression, why has He patiently and earnestly spoken so many words from the perspective of man to strike back against people’s conceptions? Why would He bother with that? Why would He take the trouble to do such a thing? Thus it shows that there is real significance to God’s incarnation, that He would not “write off” the flesh after becoming flesh and completing His work. Why is it said that “gold can’t be pure and man can’t be perfect”? How can these words be explained? What is the meaning when God speaks of man’s essence? To people’s naked eyes, the flesh appears incapable of anything, or else too lacking. To God’s eyes, this is not important at all—yet to people, it is a huge issue. It is as if they are utterly incapable of resolving this and it must be personally handled by a heavenly body—is this not people’s conception? “In people’s eyes, I am but a ‘little star’ that has descended from the sky, a little star in heaven, and My arrival on earth today was commissioned by God. As a result, people have come up with more interpretations of the words ‘Me’ and ‘God.’” Since humans amount to nothing, why does God reveal their conceptions from different perspectives? Could this also be the wisdom of God? Are such words not ridiculous? As God says, “Although there is a place I have established in people’s hearts, they do not require that I reside there. Instead, they wait for the ‘Holy One’ in their hearts to suddenly arrive. Because My identity is too lowly, I do not match up to people’s demands and am thus eliminated by them.” Because people’s estimation of God is “too high,” many things are “unattainable” to God, which puts Him “in difficulty.” Little do people know that what they ask of God to be capable of is their conceptions. And is this not the actual meaning of “A clever person may become the victim of his own ingenuity”? This is truly a case of “smart as a rule, but this time a fool”! In your preaching, you ask that people dispense with the God of their conceptions, and has the God of your conceptions gone away? How can God’s words that “I do not ask much of man” be interpreted? They are not to make people negative and dissolute, but to give them a pure understanding of God’s words—do you understand? Is God incarnate really the “‘Me’ that is high and mighty” as people imagine?

Although there are those who have read all the words spoken by God and can provide a general outline of them, who is able to speak of what God's ultimate aim is? This is what mankind lacks. Regardless of from what perspective God speaks, His overall aim is to make people know the God in the flesh. If there were nothing of humanity—if all He has were the flavor of the God in heaven—then there would be no need for God to say so much. It can be said that what people lack serves as first-hand materials that correlate with God's words. Which is to say, what is manifested in man is the background to what God says about people's conceptions, and thus, people serve the utterances of God. Naturally, this is based on what God says about people's conceptions—only in this way can this be said to be the combination of theory and reality, only then can people more effectively be made to be serious about knowing themselves. What would be the point if the God in the flesh were compatible with people's conceptions and God also testified to Him? It is precisely because of this that God works from the negative side, using people's conceptions to highlight His great power. Is this not the wisdom of God? All that God does for everyone is good—so why not give praise at this time? If things got to a certain point, or the day came, would you, like Peter, be able to utter prayers from deep within yourself amid trials? Only if, like Peter, you are still able to praise God when in Satan's hands will there be the true meaning of "being released from Satan's bondage, overcoming the flesh, and overcoming Satan." Is this not a more real testimony for God? Only this is the effect achieved by "divinity coming forth to act and the sevenfold intensified Spirit working in man," and so, too, is it the effect achieved by "the Spirit coming out from the flesh." Are such actions not real? You used to pay attention to reality, but do you have true knowledge of reality today? "I do not ask much of man, yet people believe otherwise. Thus, their 'humility' is revealed in their every move. They are always liable to walk before Me leading the way for Me, profoundly afraid that I will get lost, terrified that I will wander into the ancient forests deep within the mountains. As a result, people have always led Me onward, deeply fearful that I will walk into the dungeon." What is your knowledge of these simple words—are you truly able to grasp the roots of God's words in them? Have you paid attention to which of your conceptions God has spoken such words about? Is your attention each day on this key point? In the first sentence of the next part, which follows closely after, God says, "Yet people are unknowing of My will and keep praying for things from Me, as if what I have bestowed upon them is incapable of meeting their requirements, as if demand outstrips supply.” In this sentence can be seen what the conceptions within you are. God does not remember or investigate what you did in times gone by, so think no more of matters of the past. Of greater importance is whether you are able to create “the spirit of Peter in the final age” in the path of the future—do you have the faith to attain this? What God asks of man is nothing more than the emulation of Peter, that people might ultimately forge a path to bring shame upon the great red dragon. It is because of this that God says, “I hope only that people have the resolve to cooperate with Me. I do not ask that they cook Me nice food, or arrange somewhere suitable for Me to lay My head....” In the world, people are asked to have the “spirit of Lei Feng” in the 1990s, but in the house of God, God asks that you create “the unique style of Peter.” Do you understand God’s will? Are you truly able to strive for this?

“I move above the universes, and as I walk I observe the people of the entire universe. Amongst the throngs of people on earth, never have there been any who are suitable for My work or who truly love Me. Thus, at this moment I sigh in dismay, and people immediately disperse, to assemble no more, deeply fearful that I will ‘catch them all in one net.’” Most people, perhaps, find these words very difficult to understand. They ask why God does not ask much of man, yet He sighs in dismay because there are none who are fit for His work. Is there a contradiction here? Literally speaking, there is—but in reality, there is no contradiction. Perhaps you can still recall when God said, “All of My words shall have the effect that I desire.” When God works in the flesh, people fixate upon His every action to see what exactly He is going to do. When God carries out His new work toward Satan in the spiritual realm, there are, in other words, produced all manner of conceptions among the people on earth because of the God in the flesh. When God sighs in dismay, that is, when He speaks of all man’s conceptions, people try their utmost to deal with them, and there are even those who believe they are without hope, for God says that all those who have conceptions about Him are His enemies—and so how could people not “disperse” because of this? Particularly today, when chastisement has arrived, people are even more fearful that God will wipe them away. They believe that after they are chastised, God will “catch them all in one net.” Yet the facts are not thus: As God says, “I wish not to ‘detain’ people amid chastisement, never to escape. Because My management lacks the deeds of man, it is not possible to successfully complete My work, which prevents My work from proceeding effectively.” God’s will is not for His work to end once all people are put to death—what would be the point of that? By working in people and chastising them, God then makes plain His deeds through them. Because people have never grasped that there is already chastisement in the tone of God’s words, they have never had any entry in their consciousness. People are incapable of expressing their resolve, and thus God cannot say anything before Satan, which stops God’s work from moving forward. Thus God says, “I once invited man as a guest to My house, yet he ran hither and thither because of My calls—as if, rather than inviting him as a guest, I had brought him to the execution ground. Thus, My house is left empty, for man has always shunned Me, and has always been on his guard against Me. This has left Me with no means of carrying out part of My work.” It is because of man’s mistakes in his work that God clearly puts forward His requirements of man. And it is because people fail to accomplish this step of work that God adds more utterances—which is precisely the “another part of work on man” that God speaks of. But I won’t go into the “catching them all in one net” of which God speaks, because this has little bearing on the work of today. Naturally, in God’s utterances to the entire universe, many of His words deal with man—but people must understand God’s will; regardless of what He says, His intentions are always good. It can be said that because the means by which God speaks are so many, people are not one hundred percent certain about God’s words, and believe that most of God’s words are spoken because of the necessities of His work, and contain little that is real, which leaves them addled and weighed down by their thoughts—for in their conceptions, God is so wise, He is totally beyond their reach, it is as if they know nothing, and they are clueless as about how to eat God’s words. People make God’s words abstract and complex—as God says, “people always wish to add flavoring to My utterances.” Because their ideas are too complicated, and “barely attainable” by God, part of God’s words are constrained by man, leaving Him no choice but to speak in a manner that is straightforward and plain-dealing. Because people’s demands are “too high,” and because their imagination is too rich—as if they are able to cross over into the spiritual realm to behold the deeds of Satan—this has lessened God’s words, for the more that God says, the more melancholy people’s faces grow. Why can’t they simply obey, instead of contemplating their end? Where’s the benefit in this?

INTERPRETATION OF THE THIRTY-THIRD UTTERANCE

In truth, based on what God has done in people, and given them, as well as that which people are possessed of, it can be said that His requirements of people are not excessive, that He does not ask much of them. How, then, could they not try to satisfy God? God gives one hundred percent to man, yet He only requires a fraction of a percent of people—is this asking too much? Is God making trouble out of nothing? Often, people do not know themselves, they do not examine themselves before God, and so there are often times when they become ensnared—how could this be considered cooperating with God? If there were ever a time when God did not place a heavy burden upon people, they would crumble like mud, and would not take it upon themselves to find things to do. That's what people are like, either passive or negative, ever incapable of actively cooperating with God, always looking for a negative reason to give in to themselves. Are you truly someone who does everything not for themselves, but to satisfy God? Are you truly someone who does not fulfill the needs of God's work by virtue of their own emotions or preferences? "Why do they always try to bargain with Me? Am I the general manager of a trade center? Why is it that I wholeheartedly fulfill what people demand of Me, yet what I ask of man comes to nothing?" Why does God ask such things several times in succession? Why does He cry out in dismay thus? God has gained nothing in people, all He sees is the work that they pick and choose. Why does God say, "yet what I ask of man comes to nothing"? Ask yourselves: From start to finish, who can do the work of their duty without any choice? Who does not act by virtue of the feelings within their hearts? People give free rein to their characters, fishing for three days and leaving the nets to dry for two. They are by turns hot and cold: When they're hot, they're able to incinerate all things on earth, and when they're cold, they're capable of freezing all waters on earth. This is not the function of man, but is the most appropriate analogy about man's state. Is this not fact? Perhaps I have "conceptions" of people, perhaps I am vilifying them—but regardless, "With the truth you'll walk the entire world; without the truth, you'll get nowhere." Though this is a human aphorism, I think it's apt to use here. I am not deliberately pouring cold water on people and denying their doings. Let Me consult you on some questions: Who sees God's work as the work of their own duty? Who can say, "As long as I am able to satisfy God, I will give my all"? Who is able to say, "Regardless of others, I will do all that God needs, and no matter whether the length of God's work is long or short, I shall fulfill my duty; bringing His work to an end is God's business, it's not something I think about"? Who is capable of such knowledge? It matters not what you think—maybe you have higher insights, in which case I acquiesce, I admit defeat—yet I must tell you what God wants is a loyal heart that is sincere and passionate, not a wolf's heart that is ungrateful. What do you know of this "bargaining"? From beginning to end, you have "traveled the world." One moment you're in "Kunming," with its eternal spring, and in the blink of an eye you've arrived in the oppressively cold, snow-covered "South Pole." Who has never gone back on themselves? What God asks for is a spirit of "No rest unto death," what He wants is one in which people "do not turn back until they hit the south wall." Naturally, God's intention is not for people to take the wrong path, but to adopt such a spirit. Just as God says, "When I compare the 'gifts' they have given to My things, people instantly recognize My preciousness, and only then do they see My immeasurability." How can these words be explained? Perhaps, reading the words above gives you some knowledge, for God takes out the whole of man's heart for dissection, at which time people come to know these words. But because of the profound inner meaning of God's words, people remain unclear about the old flesh, for they haven't studied at a medical university, nor are they archaeologists, and so they feel that this new term is incomprehensible—and only then do they yield a little. For people are powerless before the old flesh; though it is not like a ferocious beast, nor capable of obliterating mankind like an atomic bomb, they don't know what to do with it, as if they are powerless. But to Me, there are ways of dealing with the old flesh. Man's never making effort to think of a countermeasure has led to the various oddities of man flashing constantly before My eyes; just as God said: "When I show My entirety to them, they look upon Me with wide eyes, standing before Me motionless, like a pillar of salt. And when I behold their oddness I can hardly stop Myself from laughing. Because they are reaching out to ask for things from Me, I give them the things in My hand, and they hold them to their breast, cherishing them like a newborn baby, a motion they do but momentarily." Are these not the actions of the old flesh? Since, today, people understand, why do they not relinquish, and instead still keep on? In fact, part of God's requirements are not unattainable by man, yet people pay them no heed, for "I do not chastise man lightly. It is for this reason that people have always given free rein to their flesh. They do not observe My will, but have ever deceived Me before My judgment seat." Is this not the stature of man? It is not that God is deliberately nitpicking, but that this is reality—must God explain this? Just as God says, "It is because people's faith is so great that they are 'admirable.'" For this reason, I obey God's arrangements, and so I do not say much of this; because of people's faith, I seize on this, making use of their faith to cause them to perform their function without Me reminding them. Is it wrong to do this? Is this not precisely what God needs? Perhaps, upon hearing such words, some people might feel fed up—so I'll speak of something else, to cut them a little slack. When all of God's chosen people beneath the universe pass through chastisement, and when the state within man is rectified, people will secretly rejoice in their hearts, as if they have escaped tribulation. At this moment, people will no longer choose for themselves, for this is exactly the effect achieved during God's final work. With His steps having progressed unto today, God's sons and people have all entered chastisement, and the Israelites, too, cannot escape this phase, for people are tainted by impurity inside, and so God leads all people to enter the great smelting furnace for refinement, which is a necessary path. Once this has passed, people will be resurrected from death, which is precisely what God foretold in "the utterances of the sevenfold Spirit." I shall speak no more of this, so as not to antagonize people. Because God's work is wondrous, the prophecies spoken from God's mouth must ultimately be achieved; when God asks that people speak of their conceptions once again, they are dumbfounded, and so no one should get worried or anxious. Just as I said, "Of all My work, was there ever a step carried out by the hands of man?" Do you understand the substance of these words?

INTERPRETATION OF THE THIRTY-FIFTH UTTERANCE

Nowadays, all humans, to differing degrees, have entered a state of chastisement. Just as God said, “I go forth with humans side by side.” This is absolutely true, but people still are unable to thoroughly understand this point. As a result, part of the work they have done has been unnecessary. God said, “I support and provide for them in accordance with their stature. Because humans are the protagonists of My entire management plan, I devote more guidance to those in this role of ‘humanity’ so that they may play it wholeheartedly and to the best of their ability,” as well as, “However, I refuse to criticize their consciences directly; rather, I continue to guide them patiently and systematically. After all, humans are weak, and unable to carry out any work.” God’s thinking is this: Even if He ends up exterminating all these humans, His work on earth will still continue in accordance with His original plan. God is not doing useless work; everything He does is good. As Peter said, “Even if God were playing with humans like they were toys, how would humans be able to complain? What right would they have?” Is this not what God has wished to achieve with humanity today?^[a] Can humans really have this view? Why was the Peter of a couple thousand years ago able to say such a thing, while “Peters” in the high-tech, modernized era of today cannot? I am unable to say for sure whether history is progressing or regressing. Whether science has taken a step forward or backward is, so far, still a question no one can answer. Everything God has done in humanity has been to make them positive and allow them to grow up in life. Can people not comprehend this? Everything that causes you to be negative is a weak point of yours; it is a vital point of vulnerability, open to Satan’s attacks. Do you understand this? Why did God speak this way? “I am imploring them in all earnestness and sincerity. Are they truly unable to do what I ask?” What do these words mean? Why did God ask this question? It shows that there are too many negative aspects of humanity, and just one kind of negative factor is enough to cause humans to stumble. You might as well have a look and see what continuing in your negative ways will bring you. All that God does goes toward perfecting humanity. Does this require any further explanation? I don't think so! The point can be made that humans have been possessed by Satan, but it would be much better to say that humans have been possessed by negativity. This is a way humans express themselves; it is an appendage of their flesh. Therefore, they have all unconsciously fallen into negativity, and along with it, chastisement. This is a trap prepared for humanity by God, and this is when humans find things most upsetting. Because people dwell in negativity, it is difficult for them to break away from chastisement. Is this not exactly how things are these days? But how can humans ignore God's words: "Nowadays, Satan is rampant to the extreme. Why do I not take this opportunity to show off the focus of My work in order to reveal My power?" As soon as I say something to remind them, people from the churches immediately fall into chastisement. This is because after two months of God's work, people still do not undergo any significant transformation within. They simply analyze God's words with their own minds. However, in actual fact, their states have not changed at all; they are still negative. This being the case, when God mentions that the times of chastisement are at hand, people immediately grow distressed, thinking:^[a] "I don't know whether or not I am predestined by God, nor do I know if I can stand firm under this chastisement. It is even harder to know what methods God will use to chastise people." Humans are all terrified of chastisement, yet are unable to change. They just suffer in silence, but are also afraid that they won't be able to stand firm. In this absence of chastisement and torture of words, humans have all unconsciously slipped into chastisement. Thus, they are all nervous and unsettled. This is called "reaping what they have sown," because humans do not understand God's work at all. Actually, God does not have the inclination to waste any further words on these people; it seems God has adopted a different way of dealing with them that is not true chastisement. It's like when a person catches a chick and picks it up to see if it's a hen or a rooster; this might not seem like a big deal, but the little chick will be so frightened it will struggle to get free, as if terrified the human is going to kill it and eat its meat, because the chick has no

a. The original text omits "thinking."

knowledge of itself. How can someone kill and eat a chick that only weighs a few ounces? Wouldn't that be nonsense? It's exactly as God said: "Why, then, do people constantly avoid Me? Is it because I will treat them like baby chicks, to be killed as soon as they are caught?" Therefore, human suffering is all "selfless" devotion, and can be said to be a useless price to pay. It is because they do not know themselves that they feel afraid; as a result, they cannot throw all caution to the wind. This is humanity's weakness. Are the words spoken by God, "In the end, let humans know themselves. This is My final goal," out of date? Who really knows themselves? If one does not know themselves, then what gives them the right to be chastised? Take lambs for example. How can they be slaughtered if they have not grown into sheep? How can a tree that has not borne fruit be enjoyed by humans? Everyone places too much importance on "vaccination." Thus, people are all doing the work of fasting, and then are hungry. This is an example of reaping what they have sown; they are being self-destructive. It is not that God is brutal or inhumane. If one day humans suddenly know themselves and tremble in fear before God, then God will begin to chastise them. Only this way will humans submissively and willingly embrace hardship. What about today, though? People all receive chastisement against their will, like children being made to cook a meal. How can people like that not feel uncomfortable? Everyone thinks, "Oh well! As long as I'm being chastised, I might as well bow my head and plead guilty! What can I do? Even if I'm crying, I still have to satisfy God, so what can I do? Who told me to walk straight into this path? Oh well! I'll just consider myself unlucky!" Isn't this how people think?

As God said, "Everyone is well-behaved, and there is no one who dares to resist. All are under My guidance, doing their tasks which I assigned to them." Evidently, not a single human willingly receives chastisement, and furthermore, this comes from God, because humans all want to live in leisure rather than turmoil and chaos. God said, "Who is unafraid of death? Are people truly willing to sacrifice themselves?" This is absolutely right; everyone is afraid to die unless, of course, when consumed with anger or despair. This is human substance, and is the most difficult to get around. Today God has come precisely to resolve this predicament. Humans are all powerless, so God has gone out of His way to come among them to set up a specialist hospital to cure them of this sort of disease. People cannot extricate themselves from this entangling illness, which is why they are all so anxious they develop mouth inflammation, and their bellies expand. Over time the volume of gas they contain grows, resulting in an increase of pressure. Finally, their stomachs rupture and they all die. Therefore, at that point, God has treated this serious human ailment, because everyone has died. Isn't this curing the human condition? God has deliberately come to do this work. Because people are overly afraid of death, God Himself has come to partake of the same job as humans; because they have so little courage, He has started by giving a demonstration for them to watch. Only after seeing this precedent does anyone become willing to obey. For this reason, God said, "Because no one could carry out My work, I have set foot upon the battleground in person to engage in a struggle of life and death with Satan." This is a decisive battle, so either the fish dies or the net breaks.^[a] This is certain. Because the spirit will triumph in the end, the flesh must be the target of death. Do you understand the implications of this? However, don't be oversensitive. Maybe this sentence is simple, or maybe it is complex. Regardless, humans still cannot fathom it. This is for certain. Humans can, from within their suffering, accept the refinement of God's word; then one could say this is their good fortune. Yet it could also be said to be unfortunate for them. I still would like to remind everyone, however, that God's intention is correct, after all—unlike the intentions of humans, which are always about making plans and arrangements for themselves. You should be clear about this, and not sink into unending contemplation. Is this not precisely a weakness of humans? They are all like this; rather than loving God to a certain degree, they love themselves to a certain degree. Because He is a God that is jealous of humans, He always places demands on them. The more people love themselves, the more God requires them to love Him, and the stricter His requirements of them become. It's as if God is intentionally teasing people. If people truly love Him, then it seems He does not care about it. Because of this, people are all scratching their heads and tweaking their ears as they fall into contemplation. This is a narrative of God's disposition, just a brief mention of one or two things. This is God's will. It is what God requires people to know; it is imperative. It is a new task that requires you people to be able to work hard to break through and make some new progress. Do you understand this? Do you need Me to say more on the subject?

As for previous eras, God said, “not a single person was ever chosen by Me; everyone was turned down by My silence. This is because those people in the past did not serve Me with single-minded devotion; I therefore did not love them exclusively, either. They had taken Satan’s ‘presents’ and then turned around and offered them to Me; in doing so, was this not slanderous against Me?” How can these words be explained? It’s as God said: “All gifts originate from Satan.” Past generations of apostles and prophets were entirely reliant on their gifts while doing their work, and down through the ages, God has used their gifts to conduct His work. This is why it is said that the service of all people with gifts comes from Satan. However, as God says,^[a] “I use Satan’s ruse as My foil,” due to His wisdom. Thus, God has named the service of people with gifts as presents from Satan. Because they belong to Satan, God calls them slanderous. This is not a baseless accusation against humans; it is a well-founded and appropriate explanation. For this reason, He said, “I did not reveal My disgust; rather, I tried to turn their scheme to My own use by adding these ‘presents’ to the materials being used in My management. Later, once they had been processed by machine, I would burn off all the resulting waste.” This is what is so wonderful about God’s work. This point is least in line with human notions, because no one would think that those reign as kings are not people with gifts, they are the gift-less people whom God loves. As can be seen, the ideas or hopes of Witness Lee and Watchman Nee have all turned to ash—and gift-bearing people in the present day are no exception. Now God has begun this work, and He is gradually taking back all the work of the Holy Spirit in humans who serve as a foil to His work. When God’s work is completely finished, these people will all return to their original place. However, I urge humans not to act recklessly as a result of what I have said. You should go with the flow, following the steps of God’s work so as to avoid interrupting it. Do you understand this point? Because this is the step and method of God’s work. When God “processes” these “presents” into “finished products,” all of His intentions will become obvious, and the presents that render service for Him will all be eliminated; however, God will have the finished products to enjoy. Do you understand this? What God wants is finished products, not rich presents offered by humans. Only when everyone has taken a seat according to their ticket number, meaning when God has returned to His original position and the devil, too, has sat in its own seat, so have the angels, without exception—only then will a gratified smile appear on God’s face, because His intentions will have been satisfied, His goal achieved. God will no longer seek “assistance” from the “devil,” because God’s intentions will have been openly revealed to humans, and humans will never again be made to convey them. At this time, their fleshly bodies will become one with their spirits. This is what God reveals to humans; it is the final destination of the spirit, soul, and body. It is a summarization of the original idea of “humanity.” This does not need to be researched in detail; it is enough to know one or two things about it. Do you understand?

INTERPRETATION OF THE THIRTY-SIXTH UTTERANCE

It is said that God has now begun to chastise man, but no one can say for sure, no one can give a clear answer as to whether the original intention of this chastisement has befallen man. For God says, “Man has never discovered anything in My chastisement, for he does nothing but grasp the yoke around his neck with both hands, both eyes fixed on Me, as if keeping an eye on an enemy—and only at this moment do I sense how emaciated he is. It is because of this that I say ‘none has ever stood firm amid trials.’” God tells man of the facts of the chastisement that has yet to befall him, and He does so in great detail, without missing anything out. It is as if they have entered chastisement and are truly unable to stand firm—and God provides a vivid, lifelike depiction of the ugly features of man, which makes them feel under pressure: Since God says that man has never stood firm amid trials, how could I be the one to break the world record, to be accepted despite convention? At this moment, they begin to reflect. In reality, it is just as God says: “Have I brought them to the end of the road?” Indeed, God has brought all people to the end of the road, and so, in their consciousness, people always believe that God is cruel and inhumane. God has fished all people out of the sea of worldly affliction, after which, “to prevent any accidents, I killed all the fish that had been caught, after which the fish became obedient, and had not the slightest complaint.” Is this not fact? God has pulled all people from the bitter sea of death into another abyss of death, He has dragged all of them onto the executioner's block, He has forced them to the end of the road—why does He not do this to the other sons and people of God? What is His intention in carrying out such work in the country of the great red dragon? Why is the hand of God so malicious? No wonder “When I need man, he is always hidden. It is as if he's never seen astonishing scenes, as if he was born in the countryside and knows nothing of city matters.” In fact, inside themselves people ask: “What is God's plan in doing this? Does He not put us to death? And what is the point? Why do the steps of His work come thick and fast, and why is He not the slightest bit lenient toward us?” Yet people don't dare to say this, and because God's words cause them to cast away such thoughts, stripping them of the chance to think further, they have no choice but to put aside any more such thoughts. It's just that God reveals all of man's conceptions, and so people force back their conceptions, not allowing them to come forth. It was previously said that these people are the progeny of the great red dragon. In fact, to be clear, they are the embodiment of the great red dragon. When God forces them to the end of the road and slaughters them, then—without a doubt—the spirit of the great red dragon has no further chance to work in them. In this way, when people walk to the end of the road is also when the great red dragon ends up dead. It can be said that it is using death to repay God's “great kindness”—which is the aim of God's work in the nation of the great red dragon. When people are ready to sacrifice their lives, everything becomes trifling, and no one can get the better of them. What could be more important than life? Thus, Satan becomes incapable of doing any more in people, there's nothing it can do with man. Although, in the definition of the “flesh” it is said that the flesh is corrupted by Satan, if people truly give themselves over, and are not driven by Satan, then no one can get the better of them—and at this moment, the flesh will perform its another function, and begin to officially receive the direction of the Spirit of God. This is a necessary process, it must happen step-by-step; if not, God would have no means of working in the stubborn flesh. Such is the wisdom of God. In this way, all people have unconsciously entered the circumstances of today. And is it not God who has led man to the “end of the road”?

Could it be a new road opened up by man? Looking at your experiences, it appears that in you, God employs methods of the utmost cruelty, from which can be seen God's righteousness. How could you not give praise? What God does in you allows people to behold the righteous disposition of God; does this not merit your admiration of God? Today, at the crossroads when the old era still exists and the new era has yet to materialize, how do you bear testimony to God? Is such a serious issue not worthy of deep consideration? Do you still contemplate other, extraneous matters? Why does God say "Although people once cried 'Long live the understanding,' no one has spent much time analyzing the word 'understanding,' showing that people have no desire to love Me"? If God did not say such things, could you not try to understand God's heart of your own volition?

Though, in recent times, some people may have come to know a little of the aims and point of God's incarnation, I can say for sure that if God did not speak plainly to man, no one would be able to guess the aims and point of God's incarnation. This is absolute. Is it still not clear to you? Everything God does in people is part of His management plan—yet they are incapable of accurately grasping God's will. This is the deficiency of man, but God does not require that people be capable of doing anything, He merely asks that they listen to the "doctor's admonishments." This is God's requirement. He asks all people to know true human life, for "in their hearts, the words 'human life' don't exist, they have no regard for them, and merely despise My words, as if I have become a rambling old lady." In people's eyes, God's words are like an everyday utensil, they don't treat them as important at all. Thus, people cannot put God's words into practice—they have become miserable wretches who are aware of the truth but don't put it into practice. This fault of man alone is therefore sufficient to cause disgust in God for a period of time, and thus He says multiple times that people pay no heed to His words. Yet in their conceptions, people think the following: "Each day we study and analyze God's words, how could it be said we pay them no heed? Is this not doing us an injustice?" But let Me dissect a little for you—people will be red-faced. When they read God's words, they nod their heads, they bow and scrape, like a pug slavering to the words of its master. Thus, at this moment, people feel unfit, tears stream down their faces, it is as if they wish to repent and start anew—but once this time has passed, their sheepishness immediately disappears, to be replaced by wolfishness, they put God's words to one side, and always believe that their own affairs take precedence, that matters of God come last, and because of these actions of theirs, they are never able to put God's words into action. When the facts arrive, they stretch their elbows outward^[a]—this is double-crossing their own people—no wonder God says, “he ‘runs the other way’ while relying on Me for sustenance.” Only from this can it be seen that there is not the slightest falsehood in God's words, they are entirely true, and contain not the slightest exaggeration, yet they do seem to have been understated somewhat, for man's stature is too small, he is incapable of acceptance. God's words have already provided a crystal clear depiction of the things of man, both inside and out, they have etched them with utter clarity, portraying a vivid likeness that is exactly the original face of Satan. It's just that in the present stage, people have yet to see everything clearly, and thus it is said that they have not come to know themselves. It is because of this that I say this lesson must continue, it cannot stop. When people have come to know themselves will be when God is glorified. This is easy to understand—there's no need for Me to go into detail. There is, however, one thing that I'll remind you of, though first must be read these words of God: “In today's times, people have never treasured Me, I have no place in their hearts. Could they show a true love for Me in the days of suffering to come?” What is the meaning of these words? God is saying that chastisement has yet to befall man, which shows that there is yet an inner meaning to the words “knowing yourself”—did you see this? Without undergoing hardship and refinement, how can people know themselves? Are these not empty words? Do you really trust in all that is spoken by God? Are you able to discern God's words? Why does God repeatedly say things like “Seeing man's actions, My only choice is to leave,” and also says “Only when the mountains topple and the earth is rent asunder do people think of My words, only then are they awoken from their dreams, but the time has already come, they are engulfed in the great flood, their corpses floating on the surface of the water”? Why does God say, “people think of” and not “people obey My words”? Is it true that the mountains topple and the earth is rent asunder? People pay no

a. “Stretch one's elbow outward” is a Chinese idiom, which means a person is helping others at the expense of people close to that person, for example parents, children, relatives or siblings.

heed to such words, they let them slip by, and so they suffer much “hardship” in God’s words. This is because they are too thoughtless. Because of this failing of man, God says “I, this ‘freak’ without tear ducts, have cried many tears for man. Man, however, knows nothing of this.” Because people pay no attention to God’s words, God uses this means to remind them and get their “help.”

For now, I shall not prophesy about world developments, but will foretell something of man’s fate. Have I not asked that people know themselves? How can this be explained? How should people know themselves? When God torments people so much that they hover between life and death, they begin to understand something of the meaning of human life, and they detest human life, believing that a person’s entire life is nothing more than a dream. They believe that man’s life is one of anguish, that they will die without ever having achieved anything, that their life is pointless and without worth. Human life is but a dream, a dream in which grief and happiness come and go. Today, people live for God, but because they live in the world of man, their daily lives remain empty and without worth, causing all people to know that the enjoyment of God is but a passing comfort—but if, when they don’t enjoy God, they still live in the flesh even though they believe in God, what’s the point? In the flesh, all is empty for man. Having experienced the vicissitudes of human life, with the arrival of old age man’s hair turns white, his face is full of wrinkles, his hands are covered with callouses. Although he has paid a great price, he has gained practically nothing. Thus, My words go a step further: Everything is empty for those who live in the flesh. This is beyond doubt, and there is no need for you to examine this in detail. This is the original face of human life that God has talked of time and time again. God does not eschew these words as a result of man’s weakness, but simply acts according to His original plan. Perhaps, some words provide support and understanding to people, and perhaps some do precisely the opposite, deliberately causing people to live in an atmosphere of death—and it is precisely because of this that they suffer. Thus, perhaps God sets out the “empty city strategy” to deliberately confuse people, but they can’t see this at all, they remain in the dark. And yet, all is in God’s hands, and even though people know this, how could they guard against it? Thus, no one is able to escape from the threat of chastisement—what could they do? They can but submit to God’s arrangements—and isn’t that because God has grabbed them and won't let them go? Only under God's threats are all people able to follow nature's course—is this not the case? If not for the arrangements of God, how could people willingly admit defeat? Wouldn't that be a joke? Although human life is empty, who is willing, when their lives are comfortable, to silently leave behind the world of man and try to satisfy God? People die amid helplessness—who has ever died amid abundance, when they have all they could want? Only a “star” that descended from the sky would be an exception to this. Compared to the life of the third heaven it enjoyed, life on earth would be like living in hell—only under such a circumstance might it be willing to die. Yet who today is a star in heaven? I, too, am “unclear” about this. Let us search around and see if we can find one. If he is found, I ask people to help Me inquire if he is willing to act according to My words above. Yet I have a warning for each of you: None of you must play the “hero” and volunteer to die, do you understand?

INTERPRETATION OF THE THIRTY-EIGHTH UTTERANCE

According to mankind's inherent traits, that is, mankind's true face, being able to carry on until now has truly not been an easy thing, and it is only through this that God's great power has become apparent. Based on the essence of the flesh as well as the corruption of the great red dragon thus far, if not for the guidance of the Spirit of God, how could man still stand today? Man is not worthy to come before God, but He loves mankind for the sake of His management and so that His great work may be accomplished before too long. In truth, no man can repay God's love for mankind within their lifetime. Perhaps some wish to repay God's grace by sacrificing their lives, but I tell you: Man is unworthy of dying before God, and so the death of man is in vain. Because to God the death of a man is not even worthy of mention, nor is it worth a penny, and it is like the death of an ant on earth. I advise people not to think yourselves to be so precious, and not to think that dying for God carries the weight of a great mountain. In truth, the death of a man is a matter as light as a feather. It is not worthy of note. But then again, the flesh of man is doomed to die by nature, and so in the end, the physical body has to end on the earth. This is the honest truth, and none can deny it. This is a “law of nature” that is summed up from all human life experience by Me. And so unwittingly, God’s end for man is defined as such. Do you understand? No wonder God says “I despise mankind’s disobedience. I do not know why. It seems I have hated man since the beginning, and yet I feel deep sympathy for them. And so man looks upon Me with two hearts, for I love man, and I also hate man.”

Who does not praise God for His presence or His appearance? At this time, it’s as if I have completely forgotten the impurity and unrighteousness within man. Mankind’s self-rightness, self-importance, disobedience, defiance, and all of his rebelliousness—I push all of this into the back of My mind to forget it. God is not constrained because of such being of mankind. Since God and I “share this same affliction,” I will also free Myself from this puzzle lest I be further constrained by man. Why bother with that? Since man is not willing to join God’s household along with Me, how can I use My power to suppress them? I do not do things to impose My power upon them, and no wonder, because I was born in the family of God, of course man and I are always different. This has led to today’s crushing defeat. But I continue to shun the weaknesses of man; what choice do I have? I am to blame for being powerless. No wonder God wishes to “retire” from the “agency” of mankind, and wants His “pension.” I speak from the perspective of a man, and man does not listen, but when I speak as God, do they not still disobey? Perhaps the day will come when God will truly suddenly “retire” from the “agency” of mankind, and when that time comes, God’s word will become even more fierce. Today, it may be because of Me that God speaks this way, and if that day comes, God will no longer be like Me, patiently “telling stories to the kids at a nursery school.” Perhaps what I say does not hit the mark. Only for the sake of God incarnate is God willing to loosen His hold on man a bit, otherwise, it would be too horrible to contemplate. Just as God said, “I loosened My grip on them to a certain extent, allowing them to indulge in their fleshly desires, and so they dared to be unbridled, without restraint, and it can be seen that they did not truly love Me, as they lived in the flesh.” Why does God say here “indulge in their desires,” and “lived in the flesh”? Truthfully, this wording does not require My interpretation, and it can be understood naturally. Perhaps some people say they don’t understand, but I will say that you know the truth, and simply feign ignorance. I remind you: Why does God say “I only ask for man to cooperate with Me”? Why does God say that human nature is difficult to change? Why does God despise human nature? And what exactly is the nature of man? What is not the nature of man? Who has contemplated these questions? Perhaps this is a new subject to man, but regardless, I implore man to give it much consideration, otherwise you will always offend God because of words like "human nature is immutable." What good is it to act against Him in that way? Is it not ultimately just asking for trouble? Is it not, in the end, just like hurling an egg against a stone?

In truth, all the trials and temptations that come upon man are lessons that God requires of man. According to God's original intention, even if man resigns himself to parting with something he loves, it can still be achieved. The problem is just that man always loves himself, so he fails to truly cooperate with God. God does not ask much of man. All that God asks of man is meant to be achieved easily and happily; it is just that man is unwilling to suffer hardships. Like children, they could live frugally to come up with a few pennies to honor their parents and fulfill the duty they ought to fulfill. Yet they fear that they won't eat well enough and that their clothing will be too plain, so for one reason or another, they take their parents' love and care and cast it far out into the clouds, as if they will start to do this after earning a great deal of money. But I can see from this that men do not have the filial piety of loving their parents—they are unfilial sons. Perhaps this is too extreme, but I can't spout nonsense contrary to the facts. I cannot "emulate others" to resist God for satisfying Myself. It is only because no one on earth is filial that God said: "In heaven, Satan is My enemy, on earth, man is My foe. Because of the union between the heaven and earth, nine generations of theirs should be considered guilty by association." Satan is an enemy of God; the reason I say that is because it does not repay God for His great favor and kindness, but rather "paddles against the current," and in doing so does not fulfill its "filial piety" to God. Aren't people also this way? They show no filial respect to their "parents" and never return the nurture and support of their "parents." This is adequate to show that the people of earth are the kin of Satan in heaven. Man and Satan are of one heart and mind against God, and so it is no wonder God implicates nine generations as guilty by association and none may be pardoned. In the past, God had a prostrate servant in heaven who He called upon to manage mankind, but it didn't listen, and acted based on its own temperament to rebel against Him. Aren't rebellious humans also striding forward toward this path? No matter how much God tightens the “reins,” people simply never waver and cannot turn around. In My view, if man continues on this way, they will be ruined, and perhaps it is at this time that you will understand the true meaning of these words: “man cannot be disentangled from their old nature.” God has reminded man on many occasions: “Because of man’s disobedience, I have left him.” Why does God say this over and over? Could God really be so heartless? Why does God also say “I simply am not human”? Over so many idle days, who has really scrutinized these detailed issues? I urge mankind to put more effort into the words of God and to not treat it lightly; this has no benefit for you, or for others. It’s better to not say that which does not need to be said, and to not think of that which does not need to be contemplated. Isn’t that simpler? What wrong can come of this? Before God proclaims the end of His work on earth, no one shall stop “moving”; no one shall wash their hands of their duty. Now is not the time; do not act as guide for God, or a vanguard. I think it is too early to stop now and cease moving forward—what do you think?

God brings man into chastisement, and He brings them into an atmosphere of death, but on the other hand, what does God want man to do on earth? To act as a wardrobe at home? It cannot be eaten or worn, but only looked at. If so, why employ so many complex processes, making people suffer so much in the flesh? God says, “I escort them to the ‘execution ground,’ as mankind’s guilt is enough to merit My chastisement.” At this time, does God have people walk to the execution ground themselves? Why does no one beg forgiveness for them? Then how should man cooperate? Can man truly do things without being colored by emotion, as God makes His judgments? The effectiveness of these words mainly depends on the actions of man. As a father earns money, if afterward the mother does not know how to cooperate, not knowing how to manage the household, then what state would that home be in? Look at the state of the church now; what will you as leaders think? You could hold a meeting where everyone can talk about their personal impressions. The mother makes a mess of the things in the home, so what will the children of this family be like? Orphans? Beggars? No wonder God said: “People all think that I am divinity that lacks ‘quality of intellect,’ but who can understand that I am able to see through everything in humanity?” As for such an obvious situation, there is no need to speak from His divinity. Just as God says, “there is no need to hit a nail with a sledgehammer.” At this time, perhaps there are people who have some practical experience with God's maxim of: "Among men, there are none who love Me." At this point, it is just as God said: "People all reluctantly bow their heads because of the current situation, but their hearts remain unconvinced." These words are like a telescope. In the near future, man will go into another situation. This is called being incorrigible. Do you understand? That is the answer to these two questions of God: "Don't people refrain from sin only because they fear I will go away? Is it not true that they do not complain only because they fear chastisement?" In fact, now people are a little bit slack and seem overly weary, and they are completely disinterested in heeding God's work, and solely concerned with the arrangements and plans for their flesh. Is this not the case?

INTERPRETATION OF THE THIRTY-NINTH UTTERANCE

Let us go beyond God's words and talk a little about matters concerning our lives, so that our lives bloom, and we live up to God's hopes for us. In particular, with the arrival of today—a time of each being classed according to kind, and of chastisement—there is a greater need to focus on the bigger picture and concentrate on the "collective interest." This is the will of God, and it is what should be achieved by all people. How could we not sacrifice ourselves for the will of God in heaven? God "assigns numbers for all kinds of people and marks different signs on every sort of person, so that their ancestors can guide them back to their families," which shows that people have been classed according to kind, and as a result, all kinds of people are revealing their true form. As such, it is fair to say that people are loyal to their ancestors, not God. However, all people are also rendering service to God with the direction of their ancestors, which is the wondrousness of God's work. All things are serving God, and even though Satan disturbs people, God uses this opportunity to draw on "local resources" to serve Him. People, however, cannot discern this. As God says, "thus, I also divide the labor, and distribute the efforts. This is part of My plan, and can be disrupted by no man." People cannot see all that is determined by God, and all that God wishes to accomplish, before He has done it. They can only see it when God's work has been completed; if not, they are blind, and see nothing.

Today, God has new work among the churches. He makes everything follow nature's course, truly bringing to bear the function of man. As God says, "I rule everything among all that there is, I command everything among all things, causing all there is to follow the course of nature and to submit to the command of nature." I don't know what clever insights you have into "following nature's course," so let's talk about this. This is how I see it: Because they are led home by their ancestors, all kinds of people must come forth and "perform." And because they are following nature's course, that which is inherent to them is used to bring their original function to bear, making them follow the guidance of the Holy Spirit according to this law. The work of the Holy Spirit is carried out according to the state within each person; accurately speaking, this is called "God maneuvers all things so that they serve Him," this is then connected to following the course of nature. Even though a person has the elements of the devil inside them, God shall make use of this, adding the work of the Holy Spirit to the foundation of what is inherently within them, making them sufficient to render service to God. This is all I'll say about "following the course of nature"—perhaps you have some higher suggestions. I hope you can provide some valued input, how about it? Are you willing to cooperate in following the course of nature? Are you willing to divide the work with God? Have you ever thought about how to achieve this? I hope that people are able to understand God's will, that they can work together to satisfy God for the sake of shared ideals, and can advance together on the road to the kingdom. What need is there to come up with unnecessary conceptions? Whose existence up until today has not been for the sake of God? And since it is thus, what need is there for sorrow, grief, and sigh? This is of no benefit to anyone. People's entire lives are in the hands of God, and if it were not for their resolution before God, who would be willing to live in vain in this empty world of man? Why bother? Rushing in and out of the world, if they don't do anything for God, will their entire lives not have been wasted? Even if God doesn't deem your actions worthy of mention, will you not give a happy smile at the moment of your death? You should pursue positive progress, not negative regression—is this not better practice? If your actions are purely for the sake of satisfying God, then you won't be negative or regressive. Because there are always things that are unfathomable in people's hearts, without them realizing it their faces are covered with dark clouds, which leads to several “trenches” appearing on their faces without them knowing, which seems to be because the ground keeps splitting open. It is as if the ground keeps moving, causing the “hillocks” or “dips” upon the ground to move place without people realizing. In this, I am not mocking people, but speaking of “geographical knowledge.”

Though God has led all people into chastisement, He says nothing of this. Instead, He deliberately avoids this topic and starts a new one, which in one regard is because of God's work, and in another, is in order to immediately complete this step of work. Because God's aims in carrying out this step of work have long since been achieved, there's no need to say any more. Today, I do not know how much you have seen of the methods of God's work; in My consciousness, I always feel that God's work is not as clearly divided into stages and time periods as it used to be. Instead, each day brings its own means of working, change occurs almost every three to five days, and even in five days, there might be two different kinds of content to the work of God. This shows the speed of God's work; before people have had the time to react and peer closely, God is gone without a trace. Thus, God is always ungraspable to people, which has led to the imperceptibility of the work of the Holy Spirit. Why does God always say words such as “and so I left man”? People might pay a little attention to these words, but they do not understand their meaning. How about now, do you understand? No wonder people have no grasp of the Holy Spirit's presence. Their search for God is always beneath hazy moonlight—this is completely true—and it is as if God is deliberately teasing man, making the brains of all people swell, so that they feel dizzy and disorientated. They barely know what they're doing, it's as if they're dreaming, and once they awake, they don't know what happened. All it takes are some ordinary words from God to leave people at a loss. No wonder, then, that God says, “Today, I cast all people into the ‘great furnace’ to be refined. I stand up high watching closely as people burn in the fire and, forced by the flames, people offer forth the facts.” Amidst God's ever-changing words, people have no idea what to do; in fact, just as God says, chastisement has long since begun, and because people haven't realized this, they only know when God says so explicitly, they only pay attention after God has told them. It can be said that people only begin to study chastisement now that God's work has been carried out to this point. It's just like when people became aware of the atomic bomb—but because the time has not arrived, people pay no heed; only when someone begins to make it do people begin to pay attention. Only when the atomic bomb comes to light do people understand more of it. Only when God says He shall cast man into the furnace do people become a little aware. If God did not speak, no one would know—is it not so? So, God says, “people unwittingly enter the furnace, as if they have been led there by a rope, as if they have grown numb.” Why not analyze this: When people offer forth the facts, is it when God says that chastisement has begun, or prior to when God says that chastisement has begun? From this can be seen that, before God has spoken of chastisement, people began to confess, showing that chastisement began before God spoke of it—is this not fact?

INTERPRETATION OF THE FORTIETH UTTERANCE

To God, man is like a plaything in His grasp, like a hand-stretched noodle in His hands—one that can be made as thin or thick as God wishes, to do with as He pleases. It is fair to say that man really is a plaything in God’s hands, like a Persian cat that a lady has bought from the market. Without a doubt, he is a plaything in God’s hands—and so there was nothing false about the knowledge of Peter. From this can be seen that God’s words and actions in man are accomplished casually, with ease. He does not rack His brains or make plans, as people imagine; the work He does in man is very normal, as are the words He utters to man. When God speaks, He seems to let His tongue run away with Him, He says whatever comes into His mind, without restraint. However, after reading God’s words, people are utterly convinced, they are lost for words, wide-eyed and dumbstruck. What is going on here? This well shows just how great God’s wisdom is. If, as people imagine, God’s work in man had to be meticulously planned to be accurate and correct, then—to take these imaginings a step further—God’s wisdom, wondrousness, and unfathomability would be quantifiable, which shows people’s valuation of God is too low. Because there is always stupidity in people’s actions, they measure God in the same way. God does not make calculations or arrangements for His work; instead, it is directly carried out by the Spirit of God—and the principles by which the Spirit of God works are free and unrestrained. It is as if God pays no heed to the states of man and talks as He pleases—yet still man can hardly tear himself away from God's words, which is because of the wisdom of God. The facts, after all, are facts. Because the work of God's Spirit in all people is so evident, this is sufficient to show the principles of God's work. If God had to pay such a great price in His work in created beings, would that not be a case of putting fine timber to petty use? Must God act in person? Would it be worth it? Because the Spirit of God has been working for so long, and yet throughout the ages the Spirit of God has never worked in this way, no one has ever known the means and principles by which God works, they have never been clear. Today they are clear, for God's Spirit has personally revealed them—and this is beyond doubt, it is shown directly by the Spirit of God, not summarized by man. Why not take a trip to the third heaven and see whether this is really what's going on, see whether, after doing all this work, God's labors have left Him exhausted, His back aching and His legs in pain, or else unable to eat or sleep. Did God have to read through a great many reference materials to speak all these words, are drafts of God's utterances spread across the table, is He dry-mouthed after saying so much? The facts are precisely the opposite: The words above have nothing in common with the place where God resides. God says, "I have expended much time, and paid a great price, for the sake of man—but at this time, for an unknown reason, people's consciences remain ever incapable of performing their original function." Regardless of whether people have any sense of God's sorrow, if they could approach God's love without going against their conscience, this would be considered rational and reasonable. The only fear is that they are unwilling to bring to bear the original function of conscience. What do you say, is this right? Does this help you? My hope is that you belong to the kind of things that are possessed of conscience, rather than being trash without conscience. What do you think of these words? Does anyone have a sense of this? Does having a needle stuck in your heart not hurt? Does God stick the needle in an insensate corpse? Is God mistaken, has old age dulled His eyesight? I say that is impossible! Anyway, this must be the fault of man. Why not go to the hospital and take a look? There's undoubtedly a problem with man's heart, it needs to be fitted with new "parts"—how about it? Would you do that?

God says, "I look at their ugly faces and oddities, and I once again depart from man. Under such circumstances, people remain

uncomprehending, and once more take back the things I have denied them, awaiting My return.” Why, during this “new technological age,” is God still talking about an ox and cart? Why is this? Is it because God likes to nag? Is God passing the time because He has nothing better to do? Is God like man, idling away the time after stuffing himself full of food? Is there any use in repeating these words over and over again? I have said that people are wretches, that you always have to grab them by the ears to get through to them. After the words have been spoken to them today, they’ll immediately forget them tomorrow—it’s as if they’re suffering from amnesia. Thus, it is not the case that some words have not been spoken, but that they have not been accomplished by people. If something is said but one or two times, people remain ignorant—it must be said three times, this is the minimum number. There are even some “old men” to whom it must be said ten to twenty times. In this way, the same thing is said over and over again in different ways, to see whether or not people have changed. Have you truly worked in this way? I don’t want to scold people, but they’re all toying with God; they all know to take more nutritional supplements, but don’t feel anxious because of God—and is this serving God? Is this loving God? No wonder they spend all day without a care in the world, idle and quiescent. But even so, some people are still not satisfied, and create their own sorrow. Maybe I’m being a little harsh, but this is what’s known as being self-sentimental! Is it God who makes you feel sorrowful? Is this not a case of bringing suffering upon yourself? Are none of God’s graces qualified to be the source of your happiness? Throughout, you haven’t been mindful of God’s will, and you’ve been negative, sickly, and distressed—why is this so? Is it God’s will to make you live in the flesh? You’re ignorant of God’s will, uneasy within your own heart, you grumble and complain, and spend the whole day moping, and your flesh suffers pain and torture—that’s what you deserve! You ask that others praise God amid chastisement, that they emerge from chastisement, and be not constrained by it—yet you have fallen into it and cannot escape. It takes years to emulate this Dong Cunrui-esque “spirit of self-sacrifice.” When you preach words and doctrines, do you not feel ashamed? Do you know yourself? Have you put yourself aside? Do you truly love God? Have you put aside your prospects and fate? No wonder God says that people are the ones who are wondrous and unfathomable. Who would have thought that there were so many “treasures” within man that have yet to be dug out?

Today, the sight of it is enough to “open one’s eyes”—people are so “fantastic”! It’s as if I’m a child who can’t count. Even today I haven’t figured out how many people truly love God. I can never recall the number—and so, because of My “disloyalty,” when the time comes to give accounts before God, I am always empty-handed, incapable of doing as I’d wish, I’m always in God’s debt. As a result, when I give account, I am always reprimanded by God. I know not why people are so cruel, always making Me suffer because of this. People use this chance to double up with laughter, they are truly not My friends. When I’m in trouble, they don’t give Me any help, but deliberately make fun of Me—they truly have no conscience!

INTERPRETATION OF THE FORTY-FIRST UTTERANCE

How does God work on man? Do you comprehend this? Is it clear? And how is it done in the church? What do you think? Have you ever considered these questions? What does He hope to accomplish through His work in the church? Is it all clear yet? If not, then all that you do is futile, null and void! Do these words touch your heart? Is all that is required to achieve God’s desire just proactive progress, and not being negative and retreating? Is blind cooperation enough? What should you do if there is still a cloud of ambiguity about the vision? Is it okay not to seek? God says, “I once took on a great undertaking among men, but they did not notice, and so I had to use My word to reveal it to them. And yet, man still could not understand My words, and remained ignorant of the objective of My plan.” What does this mean? Have you ever considered its purpose? Does God just act aimlessly and blindly? And if so, what’s the point? If the purpose is not clear, and if man doesn’t understand, then how can they truly cooperate? God says that people’s pursuits are in the boundless seas, within empty words and doctrines. You aren’t even able to say what category your pursuits fall under. What does God want to achieve in man? You should be clear on all of this. Is it only to shame the great red dragon in the negative aspect? Could it be that after shaming the great red dragon, God will just live as an empty-handed hermit? Then what is it God wants? Does He really want the hearts of men? Or their lives? Or their wealth and possessions? What use are these? They are no use to God. Has God done so much in man just so that He can use them as evidence of His victory over Satan, and demonstrate His power? Would this not make God seem petty? Is God really that kind of God? Just like a child pulling adults into a fray? Of what significance is this? Man has always examined God through his own notions. God once said, "A year has four seasons, and for each season there are three months." Man listened, and remembered His words, and continued to say that there were three months to a season and four seasons to a year. And then, when God asked, "How many seasons are in a year? And how many months per season?" man replied in unison, "Four seasons, three months." Man always tries to define God based on sets of rules. Nowadays in the era of "three seasons per year, four months per season," man still is unaware, apparently blind, trying to assign rules to everything. And now man is trying to apply his rules to God! They are truly blind! Do they not see there is now no "winter," only "spring, summer, and fall"? Man truly is foolish! In the current state, man is still unaware of how to know God. They are just like people in the 1920s, who think that the transportation is inconvenient, so they walk, or take a donkey, or who think they should use oil lamps, or other primitive ways of life. Are these not all notions from the minds of men? So why still talk of mercy and love today? What use is this? Like a rambling old woman, recounting her past, what use are these words? After all, the present is the present; can the clock be turned back 20 or 30 years? People always follow the tide; why is it so difficult for them to take that in? In this current era of chastisement, what use are these talks of mercy and love? As if all there was to God was mercy and love? Why is it in this era of "flour and rice," people always serve husks and bitter vegetables? God is unwilling, but man forcibly suppresses Him. If He were to resist, He would be labeled a "counter-revolutionary," and though it was said over and over that God wasn't merciful or loving, who would listen? Man is too absurd. It seems the word of God has no effect. Men always view My words in a different light. God is always bullied by people, and it seems that innocent people are faced with a groundless accusation; who will act in accord with God? You are always willing to live in God's mercy and love, so what can be done? God must suffer the insults of man; however, I hope you can figure out how the Holy Spirit works before arguing with God. Still, I urge you to comprehend the original meaning of God's word. Do not think yourself clever, and think the word of God contains impurity. This is unnecessary! Who can tell how much "impurity" there is in the word of God? Unless God says it directly, or indicates it clearly. Do not think so highly of yourself. If you are able to see the path to practice from His words, then you meet the requirements. What else do you want to see? God said "I no longer have any mercy for the feebleness of man." Even these distinct, simple words cannot be interpreted, so what is the point in researching, and investigating further? Without even the basic mechanical knowledge, how could man be qualified to build a rocket? Isn't that just someone who likes to boast? Man is not qualified to do the work of God; it is only that God exalts them. Not knowing what He loves, what He hates, and just serving Him. Isn't this a recipe for disaster? Men do not understand themselves, but think they are extraordinary. Who do they think they are! They are truly blind to the difference between good and evil. Think back to the past, and look ahead to the future. What do you think? Then get to know yourself.

God has revealed a great deal about man's intent and purpose. God said, "It was at this time that I saw man's intent and purpose. I sighed from the mist: Why must man always act for his own interests? Are My chastisements not meant to make them perfect? Am I trying to discourage them?" What do you learn about yourself from these words? Has man's intent and purpose really gone? Have you ever checked? You might as well come before God and learn, what does His work of chastisement achieve in you? Have you summarized it? Perhaps next to nothing, or else you may have long ago indulged in exaggeration. What does God ask you to achieve? Of the words that have been spoken to you, how much have you put into practice? How much was said in vain? In the eyes of God, few of His words are actually implemented; this is because man can never decipher His original meaning, and they just accept whatever is echoed back. In this way can they know the mind of God? In the near future, God will have more work for man; can man accomplish that work with the little stature man has now? If not erroneous, man is absurd, or perhaps arrogant, like these are people's nature. It is really incomprehensible: With all that God has said, why is it man doesn't take it to heart? Could it be that God's word is just a joke, not meant to have any effect? All for the sake of seeing man perform a drama of "Happiness, Anger, Sorrow, and Joy"? To make man happy for a moment, and cry in the next, afterward attending to his own business offstage? What effect would this have? "Why is it that

My requirements of man always come to nothing? Is it as if I were asking a dog to climb a tree? Am I trying to create trouble out of nothing?" The words God speaks target man's actual state. One might as well introspect, and see who is living in accordance with God's word. "And still now, much of the terrain continues to change. If someday the earth really changes to another type, I will readily cast it aside—is that not the stage I am currently at in My work?" Indeed, God is now in the process of this work; however, when God mentions "readily cast it aside," this refers to the future, as everything is a process. Can you see this is the trend in God's current work? Due to the flaw of man's intention, unclean spirits take the opportunity to manifest. At this time, "the earth changes to another type" and people at that time will change qualitatively, but their essence will remain the same. This is because there is something else on the earth of improvement. In other words, the original earth was inferior, and once it has improved it may be used. However, after it has been used for a certain period, and then is no longer used, it will gradually return to its original form. This is a summary of the next step in God's work. God's future work will be more complex, because it is time to classify various types of people. At the meeting place of the end, it will be a mess of confusion, and man will be without a definite view. Just as God said: "Men are all performers who go along with the group." Just as men have the performance ability to go along with the group, God uses this flaw for the next step in His work, so that He can make all of man reverse this defect. Men are easily swayed because they do not have true stature. If they did have, they would be towering trees. God intends to use a portion of evil spirits' work to perfect a portion of man, so that these people can completely see through demons' deeds, and allow everyone to understand their ancestors. Only then can humans completely break free, not only forsaking the posterity of the demons, but even more so their ancestors. This is the original intent of God completely defeating the great red dragon, to make it so that all of man knows the great red dragon's true form, completely tearing off its mask, and seeing its true form. This is what God wants to achieve, and it is His final goal on earth for which He has done so much work; He aims to accomplish this in all of man. This is known as the maneuver of all things for God's purpose.

Are you clear on how the future work will be done? All of this must be understood. For example: Why is it God says men never attend to their duties? Why does He say that many people have failed to complete the homework He has left them? How can these things be achieved? Have you ever considered these questions? Have these become the topic of your communication? For this stage of work, man must understand God's current intentions. Once that has been achieved, the others can be discussed, all right? What God hopes to achieve in man needs to be expressly explained, otherwise it is of no use. They will be unable to enter into it, and it will be even less likely that they can achieve it; it is all moot. Have you found a path for practice of what God has currently said? People view God's word with a feeling of fear. They cannot comprehend it, and fear offending God. How many of the ways of eating and drinking that have now been pointed out have they found? Most do not know how to eat; how can this be resolved? Did you find a way of doing so in today's utterance? In what way did you try to cooperate? And once all of you have taken in the words, through what means do you discuss your impressions? Shouldn't man do this? How should you prescribe the right medicine? Do you still need the direct voice of God? Is this required? How can these problems be eradicated completely? Simply see if you are actually able to comply with the Holy Spirit in deed. If there is suitable compliance, the Holy Spirit will do great work. If there is no suitable compliance but rather confusion, the Holy Spirit will not be in a position to help. "If you know your enemy and know yourself, you will always emerge victorious." Regardless of who originally spoke these words, they are most suitable for you. In short, you must first know yourselves before you may know your enemies, and finally you will be able to win every battle. You all must be able to do this. No matter what God asks of you, you need only give it your all. Hopefully you are able to show your loyalty to God before Him in the end, and as long as you can see God's gratified smile upon His throne, even if it is the time of your death, you should be able to laugh and smile as your eyes are closed. You must do your final duty for God during your time on earth. In the past, Peter was crucified upside down for God; however, you should satisfy God in the end, and exhaust all of your energy for God. What can a creature do for God? So you should give yourself to the mercy of God sooner rather than later. As long as God is happy and pleased, then let Him do whatever He wants. What right do men have to complain?

INTERPRETATION OF THE FORTY-SECOND UTTERANCE

I don't know whether people have seen any change in the utterance of today. Some people might have seen a little, but they don't dare to say for sure. Perhaps others haven't perceived anything. Why is there such a great difference between the twelfth and the fifteenth day of the month? Have you pondered this? What's your view? Have you grasped anything from all of God's utterances? What was the main work done between the second of April and the fifteenth of May? Why, today, are people clueless, as disoriented as if they'd been hit over the head with a club? Today, why are there no columns entitled "Scandals of the People of the Kingdom"? On the second and fourth of April, God did not point out man's state; likewise, in the several days after today He did not point out people's state—why is this so? There is surely a puzzle about this—why was there a 180-degree turn? Let's first talk a little about why God spoke thus. Let us look at God's first words, in which He wasted no time in saying "As soon as the new work begins." The sentence gives you the first inkling that God's work has entered a new beginning, that He has once more begun new work. This shows that chastisement is drawing to a close; it can be said that the peak of chastisement has already been entered, and so people must make the most of their time to complete the work of this era of chastisement, to avoid falling behind, or losing their balance. This is all the work of man, and it requires that man do his utmost to cooperate, and when chastisement is entirely sent away, God begins to embark upon the next part of His work, for God says, "... I have continued to carry out My work among man.... At this moment, My heart is filled with great delight, for I have gained a portion of people, and so My 'business' is no longer in a slump, it is no longer empty words." In times past, people saw God's pressing will in His words—there is no falsehood in this—and today God does His work with greater speed. To man, this does not seem to entirely accord with God's requirements—but to God, His work has already finished. Because people's thoughts are too convoluted, their view of things is often overly complicated. Because people are too demanding of people, but God does not make so great demands of man, it shows how great the discrepancy between God and man is. People's conceptions are laid bare in all that God does. It's not that God makes great demands of people and people are incapable of attaining them, but that people make great demands of God and God is unable to achieve them. Because, following treatment, there exist sequelae in mankind, who has been corrupted by Satan for several thousand years, people have always made such “high” demands of God, and are not in the least bit lenient, deeply afraid that God is not pleased. Thus, in many things, when people are not up to the task, they are enduring self-chastisement, and bearing the consequences of their own actions, and it is sheer suffering. Of the hardship endured by people, over 99% is disdained by God. To put it bluntly, no one has truly suffered for God. They all bear the consequences of their own actions—and this step of chastisement, of course, is no exception, it is a bitter cup brewed by man, which he lifts to drink himself. Because God has not revealed the original purpose of His chastisement, though there is a portion of people who are cursed, this does not represent chastisement. A portion of people are blessed, but this does not mean that they will be blessed in the future. To people, it seems that God is a God who does not keep His word. Don't worry. These might be a little over the top, but do not be negative; what I speak of bears some relation to the suffering of man, yet I think you must build a good relationship with God. You should give Him more “gifts,” that'll definitely make Him happy. I trust that God loves those who give Him “gifts.” What do you say, are these words correct?

As of now, how much of your prospects have you put aside? God's work will soon finish—so you must have put aside more or less all of your prospects, yes? You may as well examine yourselves: You always love to stand up high, blowing your own horn and parading yourselves—what is this? Today, I still don't know what people's prospects are. If people really live engulfed by the sea of affliction, when they live amid the refinement of hardship, or else under the threat of various implements of torture, or live at the time of rejection by all people and looking up into the sky and sighing deeply, in their thoughts at such times they may, perhaps, put aside their prospects. This is because people search for the Shangri-La amidst hopelessness, and no one in comfortable circumstances has ever abandoned their pursuit of a beautiful dream. This might be unrealistic, but I would that this is not what's in people's hearts. Do you still wish to be raptured alive? Do you still wish to change your form in the flesh? I don't know if you are of the same opinion, but I've always felt that this is unrealistic—such thoughts seem too extravagant. People say things like this: Put aside your prospects, be more realistic. You ask that people dispense with thoughts of being blessed—but what about yourself? Do you negate people's ideas of being blessed and yourself seek blessings? You don't allow others to receive blessings but secretly think of them yourself—what does that make you? A con artist! When you act thus, does your conscience not stand accused? In your heart, do you not feel indebted? Are you not a fraudster? You dig out the words in the hearts of others, but say nothing of those in your own—what a worthless piece of trash you are! I wonder what you're thinking in your hearts when you speak—could you not be reproached by the Holy Spirit? Doesn't this unsettle your dignity? You really don't know what's good for you! It turns out you're all just like Mr. Nanguo—you're imposters. No wonder God put the "dedicate themselves" in "they are all willing to 'dedicate themselves'" in quotes. God knows man like the back of His hand, and no matter how artful man's deception—even if he doesn't give anything away, his face doesn't redden, his heart doesn't race—God's eyes are bright, so man has always had trouble escaping God's gaze. It is as if God has x-ray vision and can see man's internal organs, as if He can see through to what blood type people are without a test. Such is God's wisdom, and it cannot be imitated by man. As God says, "Why have I done so much work, yet there is no proof of it in people? Have I not put in enough effort?" Man's cooperation with God is too lacking, and it can be said that there is too much that is negative within man, and rarely do people have any positivity, only occasionally do they have a little, but it is too tainted. This shows just how much people love God; it is as if there is only a hundred millionth of love for God in their hearts, of which 50% is still tainted, which is why God says He gains no proof in man. It is precisely because of man's disobedience that the tone of God's utterances is so heartless and unfeeling. Though God does not speak of times gone by with man, people always want to reminisce, in order to show themselves before God, and they always want to talk of times gone by—yet God has never treated man's yesterday as today; instead, He approaches the people of today using today. This is the attitude of God, and in this, God has said these words clearly, to prevent people saying in the future that God is too unreasonable, for God does not do unconscionable things, but tells people of the true face of the facts, lest people cannot stand firm—for man, after all, is weak. Having heard these words, how about it: Are you willing to listen and submit, and give no more thought to it?

The above is off topic, it matters not whether it is talked of or not. I hope you don't take exception, because God does this work of words, and He likes to chat about everything under the sun. But I hope you still give them a read, and do not ignore these words, OK? Would you do that? It was just said that in today's words God has revealed new information: The method by which God works is about to change. As such, it would be better to focus on this hot topic. It can be said that all of today's utterances prophesy future matters, they are God making arrangements for the next step of His work. God has pretty much finished His work in the people of the church, after which He shall employ rage to appear before all people. As God says, "I shall make the people on earth acknowledge My doings, and before the 'judgment seat,' My deeds shall be proven, so that they are acknowledged among people across the earth, who shall yield." Did you see anything in these words? In this is the summary of God's next part of work. First, God shall make all the guard dogs who wield political power sincerely convinced and step back from the stage of history themselves, to never again fight for status or scheme and intrigue. This work must be carried out through God raising up various disasters on earth. But God will not appear; because, at this time, the nation of the great red dragon shall still be a land of filth, God will not appear, but will merely emerge through chastisement. Such is the righteous disposition of God, and no one can escape it. During this time, all that inhabits the nation of the great red dragon will suffer calamity, which naturally also includes the kingdom on earth (the church). This is the very time when the facts come forth, and so it is experienced by all people, and no one can escape. This has been predestined by God. It is precisely because of this step of work that God says, "Now is the time to make the most of one's talents." Because, in the future, there will be no church on earth, and due to the advent of catastrophe, people can't think of anything else, and it is difficult for them to enjoy God amidst catastrophe, thus, people are asked to love God with all their heart during this wonderful time, so that they don't miss the chance. When this fact passes, God has utterly defeated the great red dragon, and thus the work of testimony of the people of God has come to an end; afterward God will commence the next step of work, laying waste to the country of the great red dragon, and ultimately nailing people throughout the universe upside down on the cross, after which He shall annihilate all mankind—these are the future steps of God’s work. Thus, you should pursue trying to love God in this peaceful environment. In the future you will have no more opportunities to love God, for people only have the opportunity to love God in the flesh; when they live in another world, no one will talk of loving God. Is this not the responsibility of a created being? And so how should you love God amidst your days of life? Have you ever thought of this? Are you waiting until after you die to love God? Is this not empty talk? Today, why do you not pursue loving God? Can loving God while busy be the true love for God? The reason why it is said that this step of God’s work shall soon come to an end is because God already has testimony before Satan; thus, there is no need for man to do anything, man is merely asked to pursue loving God in the years he is alive—this is what’s key. Because God’s requirements are not great, and, furthermore, because there is a burning anxiety in His heart, He has revealed a summary of the next step of work before this step of work has finished, which clearly shows how much time there is; if God were not anxious in His heart, would He speak these words so early? It is because time is short that God works in this way. It is hoped that you can love God with all your heart, with all your mind, and with all your strength, just as if you were protecting your own life. Is this not a life of the utmost meaning? Where else could you find the meaning of life? Would that not be so blind? Are you willing to love God? Is God worthy of man’s love? Are people worthy of man’s adoration? So what should you do? Love God boldly, without reservations—and see what God will do to you. See if He will slay you. In sum, the task of loving God is more important than copying and writing things down for God. You should give first place to what’s most important, so that your life has more meaning and is full of happiness, and then you should wait for God’s “sentence” for you. I wonder if your plan will include loving God—I would that everyone’s plans become that which is completed by God, and become reality.

INTERPRETATION OF THE FORTY-FOURTH AND FORTY-FIFTH UTTERANCES

Since God told man of the “love of God”—the most profound of all lessons—He focused on speaking of this topic in “the utterances of the sevenfold Spirit,” causing all people to try to know the emptiness of human life, and thus digging out the true love within them. And how much do those who exist in the present step love God? Do you know? There are no limits to the lesson of “loving God.” What of the knowledge of human life in all people? What is their attitude toward loving God? Are they willing or unwilling? Do they follow the great masses, or detest the flesh? These are all things that you should be clear about and understand. Is there really nothing within people? “I want man to truly love Me, but today, people still dilly-dally, unable to give their true love to Me. In their imagination, they believe that if they give their true love to Me, they’ll be left with nothing.” In these words, just what does “true love” really mean? Why does God still ask for people’s true love in this era when “all people love God”? Thus, God’s intention is to ask man to write the meaning of true love upon an answer sheet, and so, this is precisely the homework that God has laid out for man. As for this step of today, even though God does not make great demands of man, people have yet to attain God’s original requirements of man; in other words, they have yet to invest all their strength in loving God. Thus, amidst their unwillingness, God still makes His requirements of people, right up until this work has had an effect, and He is glorified in this work. Indeed, the work on earth is concluded by the love of God. Thus, only when God concludes His work does He indicate the most important work of all to man. If, at the time when His work ends, He gives man death, what would become of man, what would become of God, and what would become of Satan? Only when the love of man on earth is elicited can it be said that “God has conquered man.” If not, people would say that God bullies man, and God would thus be shamed. God would not be so stupid to bring His work to an end without a whisper. Thus, when the work is soon to finish, there arises the passion for the love of God, and the love of God becomes a hot topic. Of course, this love of God is not tainted by man, it is an unadulterated love, like a faithful wife’s love for her husband, or the love of Peter. God does not want the love of Job and Paul, but the love of Jesus for Jehovah, the love between the Father and Son. “Only thinking of the Father, without consideration of personal loss or gain, loving only the Father, and none other, and asking for nothing else”—is man capable of this?

If we compare what Jesus did, He who was not of complete humanity, what do we think? How far have you gotten in your complete humanity? Are you capable of attaining a tenth of what Jesus did? Are you qualified to go to the cross for God? Can your love of God bring shame upon Satan? And how much of your love of man have you expelled? Has it been replaced with the love of God? Do you really endure all for the love of God? Have a think about Peter of times past, and have a look at you, who are of today—there really is a great discrepancy, you are unfit to stand before God. Within you, is there more love for God, or more love for the devil? This should be alternately placed on the left- and right-hand side of the scale, seeing which one is higher—how much love for God is really in you? Are you fit to die before God? The reason why Jesus was able to stand upon the cross was because His experiences on earth were sufficient to bring shame upon Satan, and only for that reason did God the Father boldly allow Him to complete that stage of work; it was because of the hardship He had suffered and His love of God. But you are not so qualified. Thus, you must continue experiencing, achieving having God, and nothing else, in your heart—can you accomplish this? From this can be seen how much you hate God, and how much you love God. It is not that God is too demanding toward man, but that man does not work hard. Is this what’s really going on? If not, how much that is lovable would you discover in God, and how much that is detestable would you find in yourself? You should give close consideration to these things. It is fair to say that only a few beneath the heavens love God—but can you be a pioneer, breaking the world record, and loving God? God asks nothing of man. Can’t man give Him face in this? Are you incapable of achieving even this? What else is there to say?

INTERPRETATION OF THE FORTY-SIXTH UTTERANCE

Among all these words, none are more unforgettable than those of today. God's words previously revealed the states of man or the mysteries of heaven, yet this utterance is unlike those of the past. It does not mock or poke fun, but is something completely unexpected: God sat down and calmly talked with people. What is His intention? What do you see when God says, "Today, I have begun new work above the universes. I have given the people on earth a new beginning, and asked them all to move out from My house. And because people always like to indulge themselves, I advise them to be self-aware, and to not always disturb My work"? And what is this "new beginning" that God speaks of? God has advised people to leave before, but God's intention then was to test their faith. So today, when He speaks with a different tone—is He being genuine or false? Before, people did not know the trials of which God spoke. It was only through the step of work of the service-doers that their eyes saw, and they personally experienced, God's trials. Thus, from that time onward, thanks to the example of Peter's hundreds of trials, people often made the mistake of believing that "It was the trial of God." Furthermore, in God's words the facts came but rarely. As such, people became more superstitious about God's trials, and so in all the words spoken by God, they never believed this to be the work of the facts carried out by God; instead, they believed that God, with nothing else to do, was specifically using words to test people. It was amidst such trials, which were hopeless and yet seemed to offer hope, that people followed, and so after God said "all who remain will likely suffer misfortune and little luck in the end," people still devoted their attention to following, and thus had no intention of leaving. People followed amid such illusions, and not one of them dared be sure that there was no hope—which is part of the proof of God's victory. God's viewpoint shows that He maneuvers everything to be in service to Him. People's illusions encourage them not to leave God, regardless of the time or place, and so during this step God uses people's imperfect motivations to make them bear the testimony for Him, which is the profound significance of when God says, "I have gained a portion of people." Satan uses man's motivations to cause disturbance, whereas God uses man's motivations to make him serve—which is the true meaning of God’s words that “They imagine that they can wangle their way in, but when they hand Me their false entry passes, I cast them into the pit of fire there and then—and, seeing their own ‘painstaking efforts’ in flames, they lose hope.” God maneuvers all things to make them serve, and so He does not skirt the various opinions of man, but boldly tells people to leave; this is the wondrousness and wisdom of God’s work, combining honest words and the method into one, leaving people dizzy and disoriented. From this can be seen that God really is asking people to move out from His home, that this is not some sort of trial, and God takes this opportunity to say, “Yet I also tell people that when they fail to gain blessings, no one may complain about Me.” No one can grasp whether God’s words are genuine or false, yet God uses this opportunity to stabilize people, to strip them of their desire to leave. Thus, if one day they are cursed, they will have been forewarned by God’s words, just as people say that “The ugly words are the good ones.” Today, people’s love for God is earnest and sincere, and so in words that they couldn’t tell were genuine or false, they were conquered and came to love God, which is why God said “I have already accomplished My great work.” When God says “I hope they find their own path to survival, and I am powerless in this,” this is the reality of God’s utterance of all these words—yet people do not think so; instead, they have always followed without paying the slightest attention to God’s words. As such, when God says “in future, no longer will there be any words between us, no longer will we have anything to talk about, we will not interfere with each other, we will each go our own way,” these words are reality, and not in the least bit tainted. Whatever people think, such is the irrationality of God. God has already borne the testimony before Satan, and God said that He shall make all people not leave Him regardless of the time or place—and so this step of work has been completed, and God pays no heed to the complaints of man. Yet God has made this clear from the beginning, and so people are left over a barrel, forced to eat humble pie. The battle between God and Satan is entirely based on man. People have no control over themselves, they are well and truly puppets, while God and Satan are the ones who pull the strings from behind the scenes. When God uses people to bear testimony for Him, He does all He can think of, does everything possible, to use people to do service for Him, causing people to be manipulated by Satan, and, moreover, directed by God. And when the testimony that God wishes to be borne has finished, He tosses people to one side and leaves them suffering, while God acts like He has nothing to do with them. When He again wishes to use people, He picks them up once more and puts them to use—and people have not the slightest awareness of this. They are merely like an ox or horse used as its master pleases, none of them have any control over themselves. This might sound a little sad, but regardless of whether or not people have any control over themselves, doing service to God is an honor, not something to get upset about. It is as if God ought to act in this way. Is being able to satisfy the Almighty's need not something to be proud of? So what do you think? Have you ever set your resolution to render service for God? Could it be you still wish to hold onto the right to search for your own freedom?

Regardless, all that God does is good, and worthy of emulation, and man and God are, after all, different. Upon this basis, you should love God with a human heart regardless of whether or not God has any regard for your love. God's words show that there is also great sadness within God's heart. It is only because of God's words that people are refined. Yet this work did, after all, happen yesterday—and so what exactly will God do next? To date, this remains a secret, and thus people are incapable of understanding or fathoming it, and can but sing in time to God's music. Nonetheless, all that God says is real, it all comes true—this is without doubt!

PART TWO

THE WORDS OF
THE SON OF MAN INCARNATE
AS HE WALKED IN THE CHURCHES
(I, II, III, IV)

INTRODUCTION

This portion of God's words contains a total of four sections; they were expressed by Christ between late 1992 and 2005. Most of them are based on the recordings from His sermons and fellowship while walking in the churches. The text has not undergone any modification, nor has Christ made any changes. The rest is comprised of writings from Christ's own pen. (When Christ writes it is done all in one go without pausing to think; it has never required the slightest modifications, and is entirely the expression of the Spirit. This cannot be doubted.) We have not arranged these separately, but instead included them in the original order in which they were expressed. This way we will be able to see God's steps of work from what He has said, and understand how He works during each phase. This order also brings greater benefit for mankind's understanding of the steps of God's work, and for knowing His wisdom.

The first eight chapters "The Path" of "The Words of the Son of Man Incarnate as He Walked in the Churches (I)" are a small portion of Christ's words as He stands as an equal among man. They almost seem bland, but they actually contain a sense of God's love and consideration for mankind. Prior to this God spoke from the perspective of the third heaven, so the distance between man and God became very great and people didn't dare to get close to God, much less request God's supply for their lives. So, in "The Path," God spoke to man as an equal and pointed out the direction of the way so that the relationship between man and God recovered its original state, man no longer doubted whether God was still employing a method of speaking, and there was no longer the specter of the trial of death. God descended from the third heaven to earth; man came in front of God's throne from the lake of fire and brimstone, throwing off the shadow of being service-doers, and officially accepted the baptism of God's words just like newborn calves. It was only this way that God was able to sit side by side with people and speak with them, and perform more life-sustaining work. The purpose of God humbling Himself as a person is to become closer to mankind, to reduce the distance between man and God, to gain people's recognition and trust, and to inspire their confidence to pursue life and follow God. In the end, the eight chapters of "The Path" are God's keys opening the doors of people's hearts; it is

His sugar-coated tablet. Only this way can people carefully listen to God's repeated teachings and reprimands. It could be said that it was only after then that God officially began the work of supply for life and expression of the truth in this current stage of work, and He continued to speak: "What Viewpoint Believers Ought to Hold" and "On the Steps of God's Work".... Does this manner not show God's wisdom and His earnest intentions? This is Christ's very first supply for life, so compared to the next few sections the truths are somewhat shallow. The principle behind this is very simple: God works according to mankind's needs. He doesn't act or speak blindly; only God fully understands mankind's needs, and it is only He that has the most consideration and love for man.

"Work and Entry" (1 through 10) are God's words entering into another new phase, so we have started out with these ten chapters and after that, gave rise to "The Words of the Son of Man Incarnate as He Walked in the Churches (II)." In that phase, God made more detailed requirements of His group of followers, which included knowledge regarding people's lifestyles, requirements of their caliber, and so on. And because those people had already firmly set their hearts on following God and no longer doubted God's identity and essence, He began to officially treat those who followed Him as His own family and shared with them in fellowship the inside truth regarding God's work from the creation of the world until now. He also revealed the truth about the Bible, and even more, He allowed them to understand the true significance of God becoming flesh. People can better understand God's essence and the essence of His work from these words, and furthermore, they will realize that what people have gained through God's salvation has surpassed what was gained by the prophets and apostles throughout the ages. From every line of God's words, you can experience every bit of His wisdom as well as His meticulous love and care. While expressing these words, He also openly revealed to people their previous notions, errors, things they had never before imagined, and even their future paths one by one. Perhaps this is the narrow sense of love that people are able to experience! After all, God has already given to man what they need and what they have asked for—He has not held back and He has particularly not made demands.

A particular few chapters in this portion are His words regarding the Bible. This is because the Bible followed several thousand years of human history and people all treat it like God to the point that people in the last days replace God with the Bible. This is something that God really hates. So in His spare time, He had to clarify the inside story and the origin of the Bible. Otherwise, the Bible would still be able to replace God's place in people's hearts and they could condemn and measure God's actions based on the words in the Bible. God's explanation of the essence, the construction, and the flaws of the Bible is absolutely not denying the existence of it, nor is it condemning the Bible. Rather, it is to provide a reasonable and appropriate explanation, to restore the original image of the Bible, and to correct the misunderstandings people have toward the Bible so that all people have a correct view of it, no longer worship it, and are no longer lost—they erroneously take their blind faith in the Bible as believing in and worshiping God, and they even do not dare to face its true background and its weak points. After everyone has a pure understanding of the Bible they will be able to cast it aside without hesitation and bravely accept God's new words. This is God's goal in these several chapters. The truth that God wants to tell people here is that no theory or fact can replace God's practical work or words, and there is nothing that can replace God's position. If people are not able to cast off the net of the Bible, they will never be able to come in front of God. If they want to come in front of God, they must first cleanse their hearts of anything that could replace Him—this way God will be satisfied. Although God only explains the Bible here, do not forget that there are many other erroneous things that people truly worship aside from the Bible, and the only things that they do not worship are those that truly come from God. God just uses the Bible as an example to remind everyone not to take the wrong path and not to go to extremes again and fall into confusion when they believe in God and accept His words.

The words that God provides go from shallow to deep. Therefore, what He says continues to deepen from people's external behaviors and actions to their corrupt dispositions, and from there it goes further to put the spotlight on the deepest recesses of people's souls—their nature. During the time that "The Words of the Son of Man Incarnate as He Walked in the Churches (III)" was expressed, God's utterances emphasize the essence and identity of man, and what a real man means—these deepest truths and essential questions regarding people's entry into life. Of course, thinking back to the truth God provides man with in "The Words of the Son of Man Incarnate as He Walked in the Churches (I)," by comparison, "The Words of the Son of Man Incarnate as He Walked in the Churches (III)” is simply too profound. This section deals with people’s future path and how they can be perfected; it deals with mankind’s future destination as well as words on God and man entering into rest together. (It could be said that to date, these are the words God has expressed to man regarding their nature, their mission, and their destination that are the easiest to understand.) God hopes that those who read these words are those who have come out from human notions and imaginations, and who are able to have a pure understanding of every word of His deep in their hearts. He hopes even more that all those who read these words can take His words as the truth, the way, and the life, and that they do not treat God lightly or deceive Him. If people read these words with an attitude of examining or studying God, then its entire significance is lost on them. Only those who pursue the truth, have set their hearts on following God, and are without a shred of doubt toward Him are qualified to accept these words.

“The Words of the Son of Man Incarnate as He Walked in the Churches (IV)” are another kind of divine words that follow after “God’s Utterances to the Entire Universe.” This section includes God’s exhortations, teachings, and revelations to all people in Christian denominations and sects, such as: “When You Behold the Spiritual Body of Jesus Will Be When God Has Made Anew Heaven and Earth,” “Those Incompatible With Christ Are Surely Opponents of God.” It also includes the most specific requirements that God has for mankind, such as: “You Ought to Do Enough Good Deeds to Prepare for Your Destination,” “Three Admonitions,” “Transgressions Will Take Man to Hell.” Many aspects are spoken of such as revelations and judgments for all kinds of people and words on how to know God. It could be said that this section is the core of God’s judgment of mankind. What is most unforgettable is that when God was about to close the curtain on His work, He exposed what is in people’s bones—betrayal. His goal is to have people know this fact in the end and to burn it into the deepest parts of their hearts: It doesn’t matter how long you have been His follower—your nature is still to betray God. That is, it is in people’s nature to betray God because people do not have absolute maturity in their lives, they only have relative changes in disposition. Although these two chapters, “Betrayal (1)” and “Betrayal (2),” deliver a blow to people, they truly are God’s most loyal and benevolent warnings to people. At the very least, when people are complacent and self-conceited, after reading these two chapters, their own evilness will be restrained and they will calm down. Through these two chapters God reminds all people that no matter how mature your life is, how deep your experience is, how great your confidence is, and no matter where you were born and where you are going, your nature of betraying God can come out at any time and any place. What God wants to tell each and every person is this: Betrayal of God is human nature. Of course God's intention in expressing these two chapters is not to find excuses to eliminate or condemn mankind, but it is to make them more aware of their own nature and thus very carefully live in front of God at all times to obtain His guidance, avoiding losing His presence and stepping onto the path of no return. These two chapters are an alarm bell for all those who follow God. Hopefully people may understand God's earnest intentions. After all, these words are all indisputable facts, so why does man haggle over when and how they were expressed by God? If God kept all of these things to Himself and did not say them but waited until people thought it was a suitable time, wouldn't it be too late? When would the most suitable time be?

In these four sections God uses multiple methods and perspectives. For example, sometimes He uses satire, and sometimes He uses the method of direct supply and teaching; sometimes He uses examples, and sometimes He uses harsh rebukes. Overall, there are all kinds of different methods, and the goal is to cater to people's various states and tastes. The perspective from which He speaks changes with the different methods or content of what He says. For example, sometimes He says, "I" or "Me," that is, He speaks to people from the perspective of God Himself. Sometimes He speaks from the third person, saying "God" is this or that, and there are other times that He speaks from the perspective of a human being. No matter what perspective He speaks from, it cannot change His essence. That is because no matter how He speaks, what He expresses is all God's own essence—it is all the truth, and it is what mankind needs.

(I)

THE PATH ... (1)

In their lifetime, no person knows what kind of setbacks they're going to encounter, nor do they know what kind of refinement they will be subject to. For some it's in their work, for some it's in their future prospects, for some it's in their family of origin, and for some it's in their marriage. But what's different from them is that today we, this group of people, are suffering for the word of God. That is, as someone who serves God, we have suffered setbacks on the path of believing in Him, and this is the path that all believers take and it is the road underneath all of our feet. It is from this point that we officially begin our course of believing in God, raise the curtain on our lives as human beings, and enter onto the right path of life. That is, it is when we enter onto the right path of God living alongside man, which normal people take. As someone who stands in front of God and serves Him, that is, someone who wears the robes of a priest in the temple, who has divine dignity and the authority and majesty of God, I make the following declaration to all people. To put it more clearly: The glorious countenance of God is My glory, His management plan is My core. I do not seek to gain a hundredfold in the world to come, but only to carry out God's will in this world so that He may enjoy one small fraction of His glory on the earth due to the meager efforts I put forth in the flesh. This is My only desire. In My opinion, this is My only spiritual sustenance; I believe that these should be the final words of someone who lives in the flesh and who is full of emotion. This is the path underneath My feet today. I believe that this outlook of Mine is My final words in the flesh, and I hope that people do not have other notions or thoughts of Me. Although I have given it My all, I have still been unable to satisfy the will of God in heaven. I am immeasurably sad—why is this the essence of the flesh? So, because of the things I have done in the past as well as the work of conquering God has carried out on Me, only now have I gained a deeper understanding of the essence of mankind. Only since then have I set the most basic standard for Myself: to only seek to carry out God's will, to give it My all, and to have nothing weighing on My conscience. I pay no mind to what requirements others who serve God have for themselves. In short, I have set My heart on carrying out His will. This is My confession as one of His creation who serves before Him—someone who has been saved and beloved by God, and who has suffered His blows. This is the confession of someone who has been watched over, protected, loved, and greatly used by God. From now on, I will continue down this path until I have completed the important task entrusted to Me by God. But in My opinion, the end of the road is imminent because His work has been completed, and as of today people have done all that they are able to do.

Ever since mainland China entered into this stream of recovery, its local churches gradually developed, centered around the work of the Holy Spirit. God has worked unceasingly in these local churches because they have become the core of God in the fallen imperial family. Because God has established local churches in such a family, without a doubt He is overwhelmed with happiness—it is a joy that defies description. After establishing local churches in mainland China and spreading this good news to brothers and sisters in other local churches across the world, God was very excited—this was the first step of work that He wanted to do in mainland China. It could be said that this was the first act, that God has been able to begin the first step of His work in a place that is like a city of demons that is unassailable by any thing, by any man—is that not God’s great power? It’s clear that for the recovery of this work, countless brothers and sisters have been martyred, dying under the devils’ butcher knife. Mentioning this now brings great grief, but for the most part, the days of suffering have passed. Now I can work for God, and I have been able to make it to where I am today entirely because of God’s power. I have great admiration for those who God chose for martyrdom—they were able to carry out God’s will and sacrifice themselves for God. To speak frankly, if it weren’t for God’s grace and mercy, I would have collapsed in the mire long ago. Thanks be to God! I am willing to give all the glory to God, to allow Him to be at rest. Some people ask Me: “Because of Your position You shouldn’t die, so why is it that You’re happy when God mentions death?” I don’t give a direct answer; I just give a little smile and respond: “This is the path that I must pursue, that I absolutely must follow.” People don’t understand My response, but just give Me a surprised look. They’re a bit puzzled by Me. However, I believe that since this is the path that I have chosen and it is also the determination I have set in front of God, then no matter how great the difficulties are, I just work hard to continue down it. I think that this is a promise that should be upheld by someone who serves God. They cannot go back on their word one bit.

This is also a rule, a regulation that was put forth long ago, in the Age of Law, that someone who believes in God should understand. In My experience, My knowledge of God is not great and My practical experience is negligible, not even worth mentioning, so I can't speak to any lofty opinions. However, God's words must be upheld, and cannot be rebelled against. To tell the truth, My own practical experience is not great, but because God bears witness to Me and people always have blind faith in Me, what can I do? I can only consider Myself unlucky. However, I still hope that people rectify their viewpoints on loving God. Personally, I'm nothing, because I am also pursuing the way of faith in God, and the path that I am walking is no more than the path of belief in God. Someone who is good should not be an object of worship—they can only act as an exemplar to follow. I don't care what others do, but I declare to people that I also give the glory to God; I do not give the glory of the Spirit to the flesh. I hope that everyone can understand My feeling on this. It's not shirking My responsibility, but it's just the whole story. This is something that should be utterly clear, and going forward it won't need to be mentioned again.

Today, I received enlightenment from God. God's work on the earth is the work of salvation; it's unrelated to anything else. Some people may think otherwise, but I always feel that the Holy Spirit is just doing a stage of work of salvation, and no other work. This should be clear. It's not until now that the work the Holy Spirit has been doing in mainland China has become clear—why would God want to open up all paths and work in this place where demons are running rampant everywhere? It can be seen from this that the work God is doing is mainly the work of salvation. To be more precise, it's mainly the work of conquering. From the start the name of Jesus was called out. (Maybe some have not experienced it, but I say that this was a step of the work of the Holy Spirit.) This was in order to depart from the Jesus of the Age of Grace, so a portion of the people were selected in advance, and then later that selection was narrowed. After that, the name of Witness Lee was called out in mainland China—this was the Holy Spirit's second part of the recovery work in mainland China. This was the first step of work in which the Holy Spirit began to select people, which was to first round people up, wait for the shepherd to tend to them, and the name "Witness Lee" was used to perform that service. God personally did His work upon the witnessing of the name "the Powerful" and before that, it was in a preparatory stage. So, it doesn't matter if that was right or wrong, and it is not the main issue within God's plan. After the witnessing of the name "the Powerful," God officially began to personally do His own work and after that, His deeds as God in the flesh officially began. Through the name "the Powerful Lord," He took control of all those who were rebellious and disobedient, and they began to take on the likeness of human beings, just like when someone enters their twenty-third or twenty-fourth year, they start to seem like an actual adult. That is, people had just begun to have a life of a normal human being, and through the step of service-doers, God's work naturally transitioned to the phase of performing divine work. It could be said that only this stage of work is the core of so much of His work and that it is the primary step in His work. People know themselves and hate themselves. They have reached a point where they are able to curse themselves, they are happy to give up their own lives and they have a faint sense of God's loveliness. It is on this foundation that they understand the true meaning of life. This is achieving God's will. God's work in mainland China is drawing to a close. God has been carrying out His preparations in this land of filth for several years, but people had never achieved the point they have reached now. This means that only now has God formally begun His own work. There's no need to go into detail about this; this need not be explained by humans. This stage of work is without a doubt done directly through God's divinity, but it is carried out through man. No one can deny this. It certainly is due to God's great power on earth that His work could reach the extent that it currently has in the people of this land of licentiousness. The fruit of this work could be taken anywhere to convince people. No one would dare to lightly pass judgment on this and deny it.

Perhaps our brothers and sisters have a bit of an outline of the sequence, the steps, and the methods of God's work in mainland China, but I always feel it's better to have a recollection or a little summary for our brothers and sisters. I'm just using this opportunity to say a bit of what's on My heart; I'm not talking about anything outside of this work. I hope that the brothers and sisters can understand My mood, and I also humbly request that all those who read My words understand and forgive My small stature, that My life experience is truly inadequate, and that I truly cannot keep My head high in front of God. However, I always feel that these are only objective reasons. In short, no matter what, no people, events, or things can hinder our fellowship in God's presence, and I hope that our brothers and sisters are able to work harder in front of God along with Me. I would like to offer up the following prayer: "Oh God! Please have mercy on us so that I and My brothers and sisters may struggle together under the dominion of our common ideals, be faithful to You until death, and never go back on it!" These words are the determination I set in front of God, but it could also be said that it's My own motto as a man of flesh who is used by God. I have shared this in fellowship with the brothers and sisters by My side many times, and I have given this to those alongside Me as a message. I don't know what people think of it, but no matter what, I believe that they not only have an aspect of subjective effort, but even more, they also contain an aspect of objective theory. Because of this, it's possible that some people have certain opinions, and you can take these words as your motto and see how great your drive for loving God will be. Some people will develop a certain notion when they read these words, and think: "How could such an everyday, normal thing to say give people a great drive to love God until death? And it has nothing to do with the topic of what we're discussing, 'The Path.'" I acknowledge that these words don't have a great deal of charm, but I have always thought that it can lead people onto the right track, and allow them to undergo all kinds of trials along the path of belief in God without losing heart or turning back. This is why I always treat this as My motto, and I hope that people can carefully think this over. However, My intention isn't to force everyone to accept My own views—this is just a suggestion. No matter what other people think of Me, I think that God will understand the inner dynamics of every single one of us. God is constantly working on every single one of us, and His work is tireless. This is because we were all born in the country of the great red dragon—this is why He works this way in us. Those who were born in the country of the great red dragon have the fortune to gain this kind of work of the Holy Spirit. As one of them, I greatly feel the dearness, respectability, as well as the loveliness of God. This is God caring for us. Such a backward, conservative, feudalistic, superstitious, and depraved empire of the proletariat gains this kind of work from God. From this, it's clear that we, this group of people in the final age, are very blessed. I believe that all of the brothers and sisters whose spiritual eyes are opened to see this work will all weep tears of joy for this, and at that time, won't you express this to God by dancing with joy? Won't you offer up the song in your heart to God? At that time won't you show your resolve to God and make another plan before Him? I think that all of these are things that a proper believer in God should do. As human beings, I believe that every one of us should have some kind of expression in front of God. This is what a person who has feelings should do. Looking at the caliber of everyone among us as well as our birthplace, it shows how much humiliation God endured in order to come to our midst. Although we have some knowledge of God inside of us, based on what we do know, God is so great, so supreme, and so honorable, it is enough to know how great His suffering has been among mankind by comparison. But this is still a vague thing to say, and people can only treat it as words and doctrines. This is because those in our midst are too numb and dull-witted. I can only put more effort into explaining this issue to all those brothers and sisters who would accept it so that our spirits can be moved by the Spirit of God. May God open our spiritual eyes so that we may see the price God has paid, the effort He has made, and the energy He has expended for us.

As one of those in mainland China who has accepted the Spirit of God, I deeply feel that our caliber is truly lacking. (I hope that our brothers and sisters don't feel negative because of this—this is the reality of the situation.) In My practical life I have clearly seen that what we have and are is all so backward. In the major aspects, it's how we conduct ourselves in our lives and our relationship with God, and in the minor aspects, it's every single idea and thought. All of these are things that exist objectively and they are difficult to conceal with words or illusory things. So, when I say this most people nod their heads and acknowledge it, and they are convinced of it unless they are someone with lacking normal reason. That kind of person is unable to accept this kind of view of Mine. Perhaps I really don't know how to be courteous, and I am straightforwardly referring to that kind of person as a veritable beast. This is because that kind of person is lowest on the totem pole in the country of the great red dragon—they are like a pig or a dog. That kind of person is most lacking in caliber, and they are not worthy of coming in front of God. Perhaps it is that My words are too impudent. I represent the Spirit of God who is working in Me and curse this kind of beast-like, filthy creature, and I hope that My brothers and sisters are not weakened by this. It is possible that we do not have this kind of person amongst us, but no matter what the truth is, I believe that this is how that kind of person should be dealt with. What do you think?

The several thousand years of the empire of the great red dragon has been depraved all the way until now, and because it has consistently resisted God, God has cursed this country and treated it with wrath, and after that He has meted out His chastisement. This country cursed by God has been subject to racial discrimination, and it is still in a state of backwardness. The country that we were born in is the gathering ground of many unclean spirits, and therefore they run rampant and seek dominance in this land. This has led to the sully of those who were born here. People's habits, customs, and ideas and concepts are backward and old-fashioned, so they form all sorts of notions about God which so far they have been unable to shake off. In particular, they act one way in front of God and act in another way behind His back, mistaking enshrining Satan for serving God. This is a display of being most backward. God has carried out so much work in mainland China and has spoken so many of His words, but people are yet utterly numb and indifferent. They are still doing their work as they previously did and they have absolutely no understanding of God's words. When God proclaimed that there was no future and no hope, a church that was alive with the heat of summer immediately fell into a cold winter. People's true selves were exposed in the light of day and their previous confidence, love, and strength all disappeared without a trace. And now, no one has recovered their vitality. They say with their words that they love God, and although they don't dare to complain in their hearts, no matter what they just do not have that love. What is that about? I think that our brothers and sisters will acknowledge this fact. May God enlighten us, so that we can all know His loveliness, love our God in the depths of our hearts, and express the love all of us have for God in different positions; may God bestow upon us unswerving hearts of sincere love for Him—this is what I hope for. Having said this, I feel a bit of sympathy for My brothers and sisters also living in this land of filth, so I have developed a hatred for the great red dragon. It hinders our love for God and entices our greediness for our future prospects. It tempts us to be negative, to resist God. It has been the great red dragon that has deceived us, corrupted us, and ravaged us until now, to the point that we are unable to repay God's love with our hearts. We have the drive in our hearts but in spite of ourselves, we are powerless. All of us are its victims. For this reason, I hate it from My very core and I cannot wait to destroy it. However, when I think again, this would be to no avail and it would only bring trouble to God, so I come back to these words—I set My heart on carrying out His will—loving God. This is the path that I am taking—it is the path that I, one of His creations, should walk. It is how I should spend My life. These are words from My heart, and I hope that My brothers and sisters will gain some encouragement after reading these words so that My heart can gain some peace. For My goal is to carry out God's will and thus live out a life full of meaning and brilliance. In this, I will be able to die without regrets, with a heart full of gratification and comfort. Would you like to do that? Are you someone with that kind of resolution?

That God is able to work in those called the “Sick Man of East Asia” is His great power. It is His humility and hiddenness. Regardless of His harsh words or chastisement toward us, we should praise Him from the bottom of our hearts for His humility, and love Him until the very end for this. People who have been bound by Satan for several thousand years have continued to live under its influence and have not thrown it off. They have continued to bitterly grope and struggle. In the past they would burn incense, and bow to and enshrine Satan, and they were tightly bound to family and secular entanglements as well as social interactions. They were unable to throw them off. In this kind of dog-eat-dog society, where can anyone find a meaningful life? What people recount is a life of suffering, and fortunately, God has saved these innocent people, placing our lives under His care and His protection so that our lives are joyful and no longer full of worries. We have continued to live under His grace so far. Is this not God's blessing? How can anyone have the nerve to make extravagant demands of God? Has He given us so little? You still aren't satisfied? I think that the time has come for us to repay God's love. Although we are subject to no small amount of ridicule, slander, and persecution because we follow the path of belief in God, I believe this is a meaningful thing. It is a thing of glory, not shame, and no matter what, the blessings we enjoy are not paltry at all. In countless times of disappointment, God's words have brought comfort, and before we know it, sorrow has turned to joy. In countless times of need, God has brought blessings and we have been provided for through His words. In countless times of sickness, God's words have brought life—we have been freed from danger, and turned from danger to safety. You have already enjoyed so many things such as these without realizing it. Could it possibly be that you do not remember?

In My own life, I'm always willing to give Myself over to God entirely, body and mind. This way, there is no blame on My conscience and I can gain a little bit of peace. A person who pursues life must first give their heart over to God entirely. This is a precondition. I'd like for My brothers and sisters to pray with Me to God: "Oh God! May Your Spirit in heaven bestow grace upon people on the earth so that My heart may fully turn to You, that My Spirit may be moved by You, and that I may see Your loveliness in My heart and My Spirit, so that those on the earth are blessed to see Your beauty. God! May Your Spirit once again move our spirits so that our love is long-lasting and never changes!" What God does in all of us is to first test our hearts, and when we pour our hearts into Him, it is then that He begins to move our spirits. It is only in the spirit that one can see God's loveliness, supremacy, and greatness. This is the path of the Holy Spirit in human beings. Do you have this kind of life? Have you experienced a life of the Holy Spirit? Has your spirit been moved by God? Have you seen how the Holy Spirit works in people? Have you given over your heart to God entirely? When you fully give your heart to God, you are able to directly experience the life of the Holy Spirit, and His work can be continually revealed to you. At that time, you can become someone who is used by the Holy Spirit. Are you willing to become that kind of person? In My memory, when I was moved by the Holy Spirit and first gave My heart to God, I fell down in front of Him and cried out: "Oh God! It is You who has opened up My eyes so that I may understand Your salvation. I am willing to give My heart to You entirely, and all I ask is that Your will be done. All I wish is that My heart gain Your approval in Your presence, and to carry out Your will." That prayer is most unforgettable for Me; I was deeply moved, and I wept bitterly in front of God. That was My first successful prayer in God's presence as a person who has been saved, and it was My first aspiration. I was frequently moved by the Holy Spirit after that. Have you had this kind of experience? How has the Holy Spirit worked in you? I think that people who seek to love God will all have this kind of experience, to greater or lesser degrees, but people forget about them. If someone says they haven't had this kind of experience, that proves that they have not yet been saved and are still under the domain of Satan. The work that the Holy Spirit carries out in everyone is the path of the Holy Spirit, and it is also the path of someone who believes in and seeks God. The first step of work that the Holy Spirit performs on people is that of moving their spirits. After that, they will begin to love God and pursue life; all of those on this path are within the stream of the Holy Spirit. These are not only the dynamics of God's work in mainland China, but also in the entire universe. He does this on all of mankind. If someone has not been moved even once, this shows that they are outside of this stream of recovery. I pray to God unceasingly in My heart that He may move all people, that everyone under the sun may be moved by Him and walk this path. Perhaps this is some minuscule request I have of God, but I believe that He will do this. I hope that all of My brothers and sisters will pray for this, that God's will may be done, and that His work may conclude soon so that His Spirit in heaven may be at rest. This is My own little hope.

I believe that since God can carry out His work in one city of demons, then He certainly is able to carry out His work in countless cities of demons across the universe. Those of us of the final age will certainly see the day of God's glory. This is called "following to the end will result in salvation." No one can replace God in this stage of His work—only God Himself can do it. This is because it is extraordinary; it is a stage of the work of conquering, and human beings cannot conquer other humans. It is only the words from God's own mouth and the things that He does personally that can conquer mankind. Out of the entire universe, God is using the country of the great red dragon as a testing ground. After this, He will begin this work everywhere else. That means that God will carry out even greater work throughout the universe, and all the people of the universe will receive God's work of conquest. People of every denomination and every sect must accept this stage of work. This is a path that must be taken—no one can escape it. Are you willing to accept this which is entrusted to you by God? I always feel that accepting something entrusted by the Holy Spirit is a glorious thing. The way I see it, this is the greatest trust that God puts in mankind. I hope to have My brothers and sisters work hard alongside Me and accept this from God, so that God may be glorified throughout the entire universe, and our lives will not be in vain. We should do something for God, or we should make an oath. If someone believes in God but doesn't have an object of pursuit, then their life comes to naught, and when the time comes for them to die, they have only the blue sky and the dusty earth to look at. Is that a meaningful life? If you are able to meet God's requirements while you are living, is this not a beautiful thing? Why are you always seeking out trouble, and downcast? That way do you gain anything at all from God? And can God gain anything from you? Within the promise I have made with God, I simply give My heart to Him and do not fool Him with My words. I would not do something like that—I am only willing to comfort the God that I love with My heart, so that His Spirit in heaven may be comforted. The heart may be valuable but love is more precious. I am willing to give the most precious love in My heart to God so that what He enjoys is the most beautiful thing I have, that He may be fulfilled by the love that I offer up to Him. Are you willing to give your love to God for Him to enjoy? Are you willing to make this your own capital for survival? What I see from My experience is that the more love I give to God, the more I feel that I am living with joy, and I have boundless strength, I am willing to sacrifice My entire body and mind, and always feel that I cannot possibly love God enough. So is your love a negligible love, or is it infinite, immeasurable? If you truly want to love God, you will always have more love to give back to Him. If that's the case, what person and what thing can possibly stand in the way of your love for God?

God sees all of mankind's love as precious; He heaps even more of His blessings on all those who love Him. This is because man's love is so hard to come by, there is so little of it, and it almost can't be found. Throughout the universe, God has attempted to demand that people return love to Him, but through all the ages until now, those who have given genuine love back to God are few—they are small in number. As far as I remember, Peter was one, but he was personally guided by Jesus and it was only at the time of his death that he gave his full love to God, ending that life of his. Therefore, it's under these kinds of unfavorable conditions that God has narrowed the scope of His work in the universe, using the country of the great red dragon as a demonstration. He is focusing all of His energy and His efforts in one place. This will have more favorable outcomes and will be more beneficial to His witness. It is under these two conditions that God moved His work of the entire universe to these people of the poorest caliber in mainland China and began His loving work of conquest so that after these people are able to love Him, He can carry out the next step of His work. This is God's plan. The fruit of His work will be greatest this way. The scope of His work is both centered and contained. It's clear how great of a price that God has paid and how much effort He has expended by carrying out His work in us, that our day has come. This is our blessing. So, what is not in line with human notions is that Westerners envy us for having been born in a nice place, but we all see ourselves as lowly and humble. Isn't this God uplifting us? The descendants of the great red dragon who have always been trampled upon are looked up to by Westerners—this is truly our blessing. When I think of this, I am overcome by the kindness of God, and by His dearness and closeness. From this it can be seen that what God does is all incompatible with human notions, and although all of these people are cursed, He is not constrained by the strictures of the law and He has intentionally centered His work around this piece of the earth. This is why I rejoice, why I feel immeasurably happy. As someone who takes a leading role in the work, just like the chief priests among the Israelites, I am able to directly carry out the work of the Spirit and directly serve the Spirit of God; this is My blessing. Who would dare to think of something like this? But today, this has unexpectedly come upon us. It truly is an enormous joy that merits our celebration. I hope that God continues to bless us and lift us up so that those of us in the dunghill may be made great use of by God, thus allowing us to repay His love.

Repaying God's love is the path that I am now taking, but I feel that this is not God's will, nor is it the path that I should be walking. God's will is for Me to be made great use of by Him—this is the path of the Holy Spirit. Perhaps I am mistaken. I think this is the path that I am taking since I established My resolve with God a long time ago. I am willing to have God guide Me so that I enter onto the path that I should be on as soon as possible, and satisfy God's will as soon as possible. No matter what others may think, I believe that carrying out God's will is of the utmost importance and it is the most important matter of My life. There is no one who can deprive Me of this right—this is My personal view, and perhaps there are some who can't understand it, but I believe that I don't need to justify this to anyone. I will take the path I should take—once I recognize the path I should be on I will take it and will not retreat. Thus I come back to these words: I set My heart on carrying out God's will. I expect that My brothers and sisters would not be critical of Me! Overall, as I personally see it, other people can say what they like, but I feel that carrying out God's will is critical and I should not be subject to constraints around this. I cannot go wrong when I carry out His will, and doing this cannot be planned based on My own interests. I believe that God has seen inside of My heart! So how should you understand this? Are you willing to offer yourself up for God? Are you willing to be used by God? Is your own resolve to carry out the will of God? I hope that My brothers and sisters are all able to gain some amount of assistance from My words. Although My own view is too superficial, I still say what I can so that we can all have a heart-to-heart talk free of any barriers, so that God may remain amongst us forever. These are words from My heart. Alright! That's all for My heartfelt words for today. I hope that My brothers and sisters continue to work hard, and I hope that the Spirit of God always looks after us!

That people are able to discover God's loveliness, to seek the way of loving God in this age, and that they are willing to accept the training of the kingdom of today—all of this is God's grace and even more, it's Him uplifting mankind. Whenever I think of this I strongly feel the loveliness of God. It is truly that God loves us. Otherwise, who would be able to discover His loveliness? It is only from this that I see that all of this work is personally done by God Himself, and people are guided and directed by God. I give thanks to God for this, and I'd like My brothers and sisters to join Me in praising God: "All glory be to You, the supreme God Himself! May Your glory multiply and be revealed in those of us who have been selected and obtained by You." I have gained enlightenment from God—before the ages God had already predestined us and wanted to gain us in the last days, thus allowing all things in the universe to see God's glory in its entirety through us. Thus, we are the crystallization of six thousand years of God's management plan; we are the models, the specimens of God's work in the entire universe. Not until now have I discovered how much love God truly has for us, and that the work He does in us and the things that He says all surpass that of ages past a millionfold. Even in Israel and in Peter, God never personally did so much work and spoke so much. This shows that we, this group of people, truly are incredibly blessed—incomparably more blessed than the saints of times past. This is why God has always said people of the final age are blessed. No matter what others say, I believe that we are the ones who are most blessed by God. We should accept the blessings bestowed upon us by God; perhaps there are some who will complain to God, but I believe that blessings come from God and that proves that they are what we deserve. Even if others complain or are not happy with us, I always believe that no one can accept or take away the blessings God has given to us. Because God's work is carried out on us and He is speaking to us face to face—to us, not to others—God does whatever He wants to do, and if people are not convinced, isn't that just asking for trouble? Isn't that courting humiliation? Why would I say this? It's because I have deep experience with this. Just like the work God does on Me that only I can accept—can anyone else do it? I am fortunate that God entrusts Me with this—could someone else just indiscriminately do that? But I hope that My brothers and sisters can understand My heart. It's not to hold up My own credentials to boast to people, but it's to explain an issue. I am willing to give all glory to God and to have Him observe each and every one of our hearts so that our hearts are all purified in front of God. I would like to make a wish from the bottom of My heart: I hope to be completely obtained by God, to become a pure virgin who is sacrificed upon the altar, and even more to have the obedience of a lamb, appearing among all of mankind as a holy spiritual body. This is My promise, the oath I have set forth in front of God. I am willing to fulfill it and repay God's love through this. Are you willing to do this? I believe that this promise of Mine will invigorate more younger brothers and sisters, and bring more young people hope. I feel that it seems that God places special emphasis on young people. Perhaps it's My own bias, but I always feel that young people have hope for their future; it seems that God does extra work in young people. Although they are lacking in insight and wisdom and they are all overly exuberant and hot-headed just like a newborn calf, I believe that the youth are not entirely without their merits. You can see the innocence of youth in them and they are easy to accept new things. Although young people do tend toward arrogance, fierceness, and impulsivity, these things do not impact their ability to receive new light. This is because young people generally don't hold fast to outmoded things. That's why I see limitless promise in young people, and their vitality; it is from this that I have a tender feeling for them. Although I don't have any dislike for the older brothers and sisters, I'm also not interested in them. I do, however, sincerely apologize to the older brothers and sisters. Perhaps what I've said is out of line or is inconsiderate, but I hope that all of you can forgive My recklessness, because I am too young and do not place too much emphasis on My manner of speaking. However, to tell the truth, the older brothers and sisters do, after all, have their functions that they should perform—they are not at all useless. This is because they have experience in dealing with affairs, they are steady in how they handle things, and they do not make as many mistakes. Aren't these their strengths? I'd like for all of us to say before God: "Oh God! May we all fulfill our own functions in our different positions, and may we all do our very best for Your will!" I believe this must be God's will!

From what I have seen in My experience, many who have openly resisted this stream, that is, many who have directly resisted God's Spirit, have been older people. The religious notions that these people hold are very strong and they compare old-fashioned things to God's words in every aspect. They always apply things they accepted in the past to God's words. Are they not absurd? Can someone like that do God's work? Can God use that kind of person for His work? The Holy Spirit has a method for any given day of His work; if people cling to old-fashioned things, there will come a day when they are pushed off the stage of history. At each stage of His work, God always uses new people. If one were to lecture others with obsolete things, wouldn't this just be ruining people? Wouldn't this be holding up His work? So when can God's work be completed? Maybe there are some who have some notions about what I've just said. Maybe they won't be convinced. However, I hope that you are not worried; many things such as this will happen in the near future, and this can only be elucidated through the facts. We may as well go visit some important personages, some prestigious pastors or Bible expositors and preach this stream to them. At first, they'll surely not openly resist, but they'll pull out the Bible to compete with you. They'll have you recount the Book of Isaiah and the Book of Daniel, and they'll even have you explain the Book of Revelation. And if you can't speak to it, they'll reject you, and call you a false Christ, say that you are spreading a way of absurdity. After an hour they'll make false accusations against you to the point that you are breathless. Isn't this open resistance? But that's just the beginning. They cannot impede the next step of God's work, and before long, the Holy Spirit will force them to accept it. This is the general trend; it is something that humans cannot do and something that people cannot even imagine. I believe that God's work will spread unimpeded throughout the universe. This is God's will, and no one can stop it. May God enlighten us and make us accept more new light and not interrupt God's management in this matter. May God have mercy on us so that we are all able to see the arrival of His day of glory. When God is glorified across the entire universe will also be the time that we gain glory alongside Him. It seems that will also be the time that I will part from those who walk with Me. I hope that My brothers and sisters may raise their voices with Mine in a plea to God: May God's great work be completed soon so that we may see His day of glory during our lifetime. I still hope to achieve God's will within My lifetime, and I hope that God may continue to do His work in us and that there are never any hindrances. This is My eternal aspiration. May God always be among us and may His love build bridges between us so that the friendship between us becomes more precious. I hope that love creates further understanding between us and that love can bring us closer, remove any distance between us, and that the love between us may become deeper, broader, and sweeter. I believe that this has to be the will of My God, and I hope that My brothers and sisters may become more intimate with Me, and that we may all treasure the brief days we have together and they can serve as beautiful memories for us.

There have been more steps of God's work in mainland China but they are not complicated at all. Thinking of all those steps, they are not without reason—they have all been completed by God Himself, and all people play a variety of roles within His work. Every act in this play is funny to people, and surprisingly everyone has a role in it. In every trial, people's performances are true to life, and each and every person is sketched very vividly and thoroughly with God's pen. Everyone has plenty that is exposed in the light of day. I'm not saying that God is poking fun at people through His work; there would be no sense in that. All of God's work has its purpose; He absolutely does not do anything that doesn't have significance or value. Everything that He does is to perfect and obtain mankind. It is only from this that I have truly seen that God's heart is entirely for the good of man. Although it can be called a play, it can also be said that this play is an example of real life, but for the general director of the drama, God, people are all to cooperate to complete this work. But from another side, God obtains people through this and makes people love Him more. Isn't this His will? So I hope that no one has any concerns. Don't you know anything about God's will? I've said so much—I hope My brothers and sisters can all understand and don't misunderstand My heart. I believe that God absolutely will obtain you. Everyone walks a different path. I hope that the path under your feet is the one that is opened by God, and that you may all pray and say: "Oh God! May You obtain me so that my spirit may return to You." Are you ready to seek God's guidance in the depths of your spirit?

It used to be that no one knew the Holy Spirit, and they particularly did not know what the path of the Holy Spirit is. That's why people always made fools of themselves in front of God. It can be said that nearly all of the people who believe in God do not know the Spirit, but just have a confused kind of belief. It's clear from this that people do not understand God, and even though they say they believe in Him, in terms of the essence of it, based on their actions they believe in themselves, not God. From My personal actual experience, I can see that God witnesses God in the flesh, and from the outside, all people are forced to acknowledge His witness, and it can just barely be said that they believe that the Spirit of God is completely without error. However, I say that what people believe in is not this person and it particularly is not God's Spirit, but they believe in their own feeling. Isn't that just believing in themselves? These words I say are all true. It's not labeling people, but I do need to clarify one thing—that people could be brought to this day, whether they have clarity or they are confused, this is all done by the Holy Spirit and it is not something that humans can dictate. This is an example of what I've mentioned before about the Holy Spirit forcing people's belief. This is the way that the Holy Spirit works, and it is one path that the Holy Spirit takes. No matter whom people believe in in essence, the Holy Spirit forcefully gives people a type of feeling so that they believe in the God in their own heart. Isn't this the kind of belief that you have? Don't you feel that your belief in God is a strange thing? Don't you think that it's a strange thing that you are unable to escape from this stream? Haven't you put any effort into pondering this? Isn't this the greatest sign and wonder? Even if you've had the urge to escape many times, there's always a great life force that attracts you and makes you reluctant to walk away. And every time you encounter this you are always choked up and sobbing, and you don't know what to do. And there are some of you who try to leave, but when you try to go, it's like a knife to your heart, and it's as if your soul was taken from you by a ghost on earth so that your heart is restless and without peace. After that, you can't help but steel yourself and return to God.... Haven't you had this experience? I believe that the young brothers and sisters who are able to open up their hearts will say: "Yes! I've had so many of these experiences; I am so ashamed to think of them!" In My own daily life I am always happy to see My young brothers and sisters as My intimates because they are full of innocence—they are pure and so lovable. It's as if they are My very own companions. This is why I'm always looking for an opportunity to bring all of My intimates together, to talk about our ideals and our plans. May God's will be carried out in us so that we are all like flesh and blood, without barriers and without distance. May we all pray to God: "Oh God! If it is Your will, we plead with You to provide us with an appropriate environment so that we may all realize the wishes in our hearts. May You have mercy on those of us who are young and lacking in reason, so that we may exert every drop of strength in our hearts!" I believe that this must be God's will because long ago, I made the following supplication in front of God: "Father! We on earth call out to You at all times, and hope that Your will may be completed soon on earth. I am willing to seek Your will. May You do what You want to, and complete what You have entrusted to Me as soon as possible. As long as Your will can be accomplished as soon as possible, I am even willing for You to open up a new path among us. My only hope is that Your work can be completed soon. I believe that no rules can hold Your work back!" This is the work that God is doing now. Haven't you seen the path that the Holy Spirit is taking? When I encounter older brothers and sisters, there's always a feeling of oppression that I can't put My finger on. It's only when I'm with them that I can see that they reek of society, and their religious notions, experiences with handling things, their ways of speaking, the words they use, etc., are all exasperating. It's as if they are full of wisdom and I always stay far away from them because personally, My philosophy of life is very lacking. When I am with them I always feel exhausted and overtaxed, and sometimes it becomes so serious, so oppressive that I can hardly breathe. So at these perilous times, God gives Me the best way out. Perhaps it's My own misconception. I only care about what benefits God; carrying out God's will is most important. I keep far away from these people, and if God requires Me to deal with them, then I obey. It's not at all that they are detestable, but it's that their "wisdom," notions, and philosophies of life are so irritating. I'm here to complete what God has entrusted Me with, not to learn from their experiences with handling affairs. I remember that God once told Me the following: "On the earth, seek the will of the Father and complete what He has entrusted You with. All else is irrelevant for You." When I think of this I feel a bit of peace. This is because I always feel that earthly matters are too complicated and that I can't wrap My head around them—I never know what to do. So I don't know how many times I've been so distraught for this and have hated mankind—why are people so complicated? What's wrong with being a little simpler? Trying to be clever—why bother? When I deal with people for the most part it's on the basis of God's commission for Me, and even though there have been a few times that this wasn't the case, who can possibly know what's hidden deep in My heart?

There have been many times I have advised the brothers and sisters who are with Me that they should believe in God from their own hearts and not protect their own interest, that they should be considerate of His will. I have cried bitterly in front of God many times—why are people inconsiderate of God's will? Could it be that God's work would just disappear without a trace for no reason at all? I don't know why, and it seems that it has become the riddle in My heart. Why is it that people never recognize the path of the Holy Spirit, but they always maintain improper interpersonal relationships? I am nauseated when I see people like this. They do not see the path of the Holy Spirit, but just pay attention to what people do. Can God's heart be satisfied this way? I am frequently saddened by this. It seems that this has become My burden to bear. The Holy Spirit is also concerned about this—don't you feel any blame in your heart? May God open up our spiritual eyes. As One who guides people to enter into the spirit, I have prayed before God many times: "Oh Father! May I make Your will the core and seek Your will. May I be faithful to what You have entrusted Me with for You to obtain this group of people. May You bring us into a free world so that we may all get in touch with You with our spirits. May You awaken the spiritual feelings in our hearts!" I hope that God's will is completed, so I pray to Him without cease that His Spirit may continue to enlighten us and allow us all to take the path led by the Holy Spirit. This is because the path that I walk is the path of the Holy Spirit. Who else could walk that path in My stead? It is this that makes My burden even heavier. I feel as if I am about to fall over, but I believe that God certainly will not delay His work. Perhaps when what He has entrusted to Me is completed we will part ways. So maybe it is because of the effect of God's Spirit that I have always felt different from others. It is as if God wants to do some work, and now I still have not gained a grasp on it. However, I believe that no one on earth is better than My intimates, and I believe that My intimates will pray for Me in front of God. If so, I will be immeasurably grateful for this. I hope that My brothers and sisters may say with Me: "Oh God! May Your will be fully revealed in those of us in the final age so that we may be blessed with the life of the spirit, that we may see the deeds of the Spirit of God and His true face!" Once we have reached this step we will truly be living under the guidance of the Spirit, and only at that time will we be able to see God's true face. That is, people will be able to understand the true meaning of all of the truth. It is not understood or comprehended through human notions, but enlightenment occurs based on the will of God's Spirit. In its entirety, this is God Himself working without a bit of man's idea in it. This is His work plan for the actions He wants to reveal on earth, and it is His final piece of work on earth. Are you willing to participate in this work? Do you want to be a part of this work? Do you have the will to be perfected by the Holy Spirit and to enjoy the life of the spirit?

The crucial work right now is to go deeper from our original foundation. We must go deeper in the aspects of the truth, the vision, and our lives. However, I must first remind My brothers and sisters that in order to enter into this work, you must discard of your previous notions. That is, you must change your previous lifestyles, make a new plan, and turn over a new leaf. If you continue to uphold what has been precious to you in the past, the Holy Spirit will be unable to move in you; He will barely be able to sustain your life. If a person does not seek or enter in, or make a plan, the Holy Spirit will fully abandon them. This is called one who is rejected by the age. I hope that My brothers and sisters can all understand My heart, and I also hope that more “new recruits” are able to stand up and work with God to complete this work together. I believe that God will bless us, and I also believe that God will bestow upon Me more and more intimates so that I may travel to the ends of the earth and we may have even more love between us. I am more convinced that God will expand His kingdom due to our efforts, and I hope that our hard work reaches unprecedented levels so that God may gain even more young people. May we all pray more for this and beseech God without cease so that our lives are lived in front of Him, and that we are intimate with God. May there be no barriers amongst us, and may we all swear this oath in front of God: “To work unitedly! Devotion until the end! Never part, to always be together!” May My brothers and sisters set this determination in front of God so that our hearts do not stray and our wills are unwavering! In order to achieve God’s will, I would like to say again: Work hard! Give it everything you have! God absolutely will bless us!

THE PATH ... (6)

It is because of God’s work that we have been brought into the present day. So, we are all the survivors in God’s management plan, and that we can be retained until the present day is a great uplifting from God. According to God’s plan, the country of the great red dragon should be destroyed, but I think that perhaps He has established another plan, or He wants to carry out another portion of His work. So until today I haven’t been able to explain it clearly—it’s as if it’s an unsolvable riddle. But overall, this group of ours has been predestined by God, and I continue to believe that God has other work in us. May we all beseech Heaven thus: “May Your will be accomplished and may You once again appear to us and not conceal Yourself so that we may see Your glory and Your countenance more clearly.” I always feel that the path that God guides us on doesn’t go straight up, but it’s a winding road that is full of potholes, and God says that the rockier the path is the more it can reveal our hearts of love, but not one of us can open up this kind of path. In My experience, I have walked many rocky, treacherous paths and I have endured great suffering; at times I have even been utterly grief-stricken to the point that I wanted to cry out, but I have walked this path until this day. I believe that this is the path led by God, so I endure the torment of all the suffering and continue on. For this is what God has ordained, so who can escape it? I do not ask to receive any blessings; all I ask is that I am able to walk the path I ought to walk according to God's will. I do not seek to imitate others or walk the path that they walk—all I seek is that I may fulfill My devotion to walk My designated path until the end. I do not ask for the help of others; to be frank, I can't help anyone else either. It seems that I am terribly sensitive on this matter. I don't know what other people think. This is because I have always believed that however much an individual must suffer and however far they must walk on their path is ordained by God and that no one can really help anyone else. Perhaps a portion of our enthusiastic brothers and sisters may say that I am lacking in love. But this is just what I believe. People walk their paths relying on God's guidance, and I believe that most of My brothers and sisters will understand My heart. I also hope that God provides us with much greater enlightenment in this aspect so that our love may become purer and our friendship may become more precious. May we not be confused on this topic, but only become clearer so that our interpersonal relationships may be established on the basis of God's leadership.

God has worked in mainland China for a number of years, and He has paid a significant price in all people to finally get us to where we are today. I think that in order to guide everyone onto the right path, this work must begin where everyone is weakest—only this way can the first hurdle be overcome for it to continue to move forward. Isn't that better? The Chinese nation which has been corrupted for thousands of years has continued on until today. All sorts of viruses continue to expand and are spreading everywhere like the plague; just looking at people's relationships is enough to see how many viruses are in people. It's extremely difficult for God to develop His work in such a tightly closed and virus-infected area. People's personalities, habits, the way they do things, everything they express in their lives and their interpersonal relationships are all broken beyond belief and even their knowledge and their cultures have all been condemned by God. Not to mention the various experiences they learned from their families and society—these have all been judged in the eyes of God. This is because those who live in this land have eaten too many viruses. It seems to be business as usual for people, and they think nothing of it. Therefore, the greater the corruption of the people in a place, the more improper their interpersonal relationships will be. There is infighting in human relationships—they plot against and slaughter each other as if that place were a man-eat-man city of demons. It is incredibly difficult to carry out God’s work in this kind of place that is so terrifying, where ghosts run rampant. When I deal with people, I always plead with God without cease. This is because I am always afraid of dealing with people, and I deeply fear that I will offend others’ “dignity” with My disposition. In My heart I always fear that these unclean spirits will act recklessly, so I always beseech God to protect Me. All sorts of improper relationships can be seen between these people among us. I see all of these things and there is hatred in My heart. That is because people are always doing the business of humans between them and they never take God into account. I hate these people’s actions deep in My bones. What can be seen in the people in mainland China is nothing but corrupt satanic dispositions, so in God’s work in these people, it’s nearly impossible to find any desirable parts in them; they are all the parts that the Holy Spirit works in, and it is only that the Holy Spirit moves people more, and works in them. It’s nearly impossible to utilize those people, that is, the work of being moved by the Holy Spirit coupled with people’s cooperation cannot be done. The Holy Spirit just slogs away to move people, but even so people are just numb and insensate and have no idea what it is that God is doing. So, God’s work in mainland China is comparable to His work of creating the world. He makes all men born again and changes everything about them because there’s no desirable part in these people. It’s so heartbreaking. I often make a sorrowful prayer for these people: “God, may Your great power be revealed in these people so that Your Spirit may greatly move them, and so that these numb and dull-witted sufferers may awaken, no longer sleep, and see the day of Your glory.” May we all pray in front of God and say: Oh God! May You once again take mercy on and care for us so that our hearts can fully turn to You and we are able to escape from this filthy land, stand up, and complete what You have entrusted us with. I hope that God may once again move us so that we may gain His enlightenment, and that He may have mercy on us so that our hearts are able to gradually turn to Him and He may gain us. This is the desire that we all share.

The path that we take is entirely ordained by God. Overall, I believe that I am certainly able to walk this path until the end, and this is because God always smiles upon Me, and it is as if God's hand is always guiding Me. So, it is not diluted by anything else in My heart—I am always preoccupied with God's work. I try My best to complete everything that God has entrusted to Me with devotion, and I absolutely do not interfere with tasks He has not allotted to Me, nor do I interfere with the work anyone else is doing. That's because I believe that every person must walk their own path without interfering with each other. This is how I see it. Perhaps this is because of My own personality, but I hope that My brothers and sisters understand and forgive Me because I never dare to go against the decrees of My Father. I do not dare to defy the will of Heaven. Could you possibly have forgotten that "the will of Heaven cannot be defied"? Maybe some people think that I'm too selfish, but I think that I have come particularly to do a part of the work of God's management. I have not come for interpersonal relationships. I simply can't learn how to have good relationships with other people. But I have God's guidance on what He has entrusted Me with, and I have the confidence and perseverance to do this work well. It's possible that I'm too selfish. I wish that everyone could take the initiative to feel God's selfless love and to cooperate with Him. Do not wait for the arrival of God's second majesty—that isn't good for anyone. I always think that I must do everything possible to do what I ought to in order to satisfy God. God has entrusted each individual with something different, and we should consider how to accomplish it. You should be aware of what the path you take actually is—it is imperative that you are clear on this. Since you are all willing to satisfy God, why don't you first give yourself over to Him? The first time I prayed to God, I gave My heart over to Him entirely. The people around Me—parents, sisters, brothers, or colleagues—they were pushed far into the back of My mind by My determination, and it was as if they didn't exist to Me at all. That was because My mind was always on God, His words, or His wisdom—these things were always front and center in My heart and they became the most precious thing in My heart. So for people who are full of life philosophies, I am an emotionless, cold-blooded creature. How I conduct Myself, how I do things, My every move—these all pierce their hearts. They cast strange glances at Me as if I had personally become an unsolvable riddle. People are secretly sizing Me up in their hearts—they don't know what I'm going to do. How could I stop moving forward because of those people's every move? Maybe they're envious, or disgusted, or mocking—I still pray eagerly in front of God as if it were only He and I in the same world, and there was no one else. External forces are always closely oppressing Me, but the feeling of being moved by God also surges in Me. In this dilemma, I bowed down before God: “Oh God! I am never unwilling to work for Your will. In Your eyes I am honorable and regarded as fine gold, but I am unable to escape from the forces of darkness. I am willing to suffer for Your sake for a lifetime, I am willing to make Your work My own life's work; I beg You to give Me a proper place of rest to devote Myself to You. Oh God! I am willing to offer Myself up for You. You know well man's weakness, so why do You conceal Yourself from Me?” Right then I felt like I was a mountain lily releasing its fragrance in a gentle breeze, but no one knew it. Heaven was weeping and My heart kept crying as if I had even more pain in My heart. All forces and the siege of mankind were like a thunderbolt in a clear day. Who could understand My heart? So I came before God again and said: “Oh God! Is there no way to carry out Your work in this land of filth? Why is it that others are at ease in an environment that is supportive and free of persecution, yet cannot be considerate of Your heart? Even if I were to spread My wings, why is it that I cannot fly away? Do You not approve?” I spent several days weeping over this, but I always believed that God would comfort My sorrowful heart. From beginning to end, no one could understand My anxious mood. Perhaps it was a direct perception from God—I always have a fire under Me for His work and I barely have time to take a breath. Until this day I still pray: “Oh God! If it is Your will, may You lead Me to carry out even greater work of Yours so that it may expand throughout the entire universe, open up to every nation, every denomination in the world, so that My heart may gain a bit of peace, that I may live in the place of rest for You, and that I may work for You with no interference and I am able to quiet My heart to serve You for My lifetime.” This is the desire in My heart. Maybe My brothers and sisters will say that I'm arrogant, that I'm haughty. I acknowledge that because it's a fact—what young people possess is simply arrogance. So I speak the truth without contravening the facts. In Me you may see all the personalities of a young person, but you can also see where I'm different from other young people—that is My quietness and My calmness. I'm not making a topic out of this; I believe that God knows

Me better than I know Myself. These are words from My heart, and I hope that My brothers and sisters do not take offense. May we speak out the words in our hearts, look at each of our objects of pursuit, compare our hearts of love for God, listen to the words we whisper to God, sing out the most beautiful songs in our hearts, and express our feelings of pride so that our lives become more beautiful. Forget the past, and look toward our future. God will open up a path for us!

All of us can see in our practical experiences that there are many times that God has personally opened up a path for us so that we are treading the path that is firmer, more realistic. This is because this path is the one that God opened up for us since the beginning of time and has been passed on to our generation after tens of thousands of years. So we are succeeding our predecessors who did not walk the path until its end; we are the ones who have been chosen by God to walk the last section of this road. Thus, it has been prepared particularly for us, and no matter if we receive blessings or suffer misfortune, no one else can walk this path. I add My own insight to this: Don't make plans to escape to any other place or find another route, longing for status, or setting up your own kingdom; these are all illusions. If you have some bias toward these words, I advise you not to become confused. It's best if you think it over, don't try to be too clever or fail to distinguish right and wrong. When God's plan is accomplished, you will regret that. That is to say, when the kingdom of God comes He will smash to pieces the nations of the earth, and at that time you will see that your own plans have also been obliterated and those who have been chastised are those who are smashed. At that time God will completely reveal His disposition. I figure that I should tell you about this since I am well aware of this matter so that in the future you don't complain about Me. That we have been able to walk this path until today was ordained by God, so don't think that you are something special or that you are unlucky—no one may make assertions regarding God's current work lest you are smashed to pieces. Light has come to Me through God's work, and no matter what, God will make this group of people complete and His work can never be changed—He is going to bring these people to the end of the road and complete His work on earth. This is something that we should all understand. The majority of people are constantly forward-looking and insatiable; they all lack understanding of God's current anxious intention, so they all have thoughts of escape. They always want to go out into the wilderness to wander like a wild horse that has thrown off its reins, but it's rare that there are people who want to settle down in the good land of Canaan to seek the way of human life—when they've entered the land flowing with milk and honey, wouldn't they only think of enjoying it? To be frank, outside of the good land of Canaan everywhere is the wilderness. Even when people have entered the place of rest they are unable to uphold their duty; aren't they just harlots? If you have lost the opportunity for God to perfect you in that environment, it will be something that you repent for the rest of your days; you will feel immeasurably regretful. You will end up like Moses who just gazed at the land of Canaan but was unable to enjoy it, clenching empty fists and dying full of regrets—don't you think that is something shameful? Don't you think that being scoffed at by others is an embarrassing thing? Are you willing to be humiliated by others? Don't you have the heart to strive to do well for yourself? Aren't you willing to be an honorable and upstanding person who is perfected by God? Are you really someone who is lacking any resolution? You're not willing to take the other paths but you're also not willing to take the path that God has ordained for you? Do you dare to go against the will of Heaven? No matter how great your skill is, can you really offend Heaven? I believe that it's best for us to know ourselves well—just one little bit of God's word can change heaven and earth, so what is a scrawny little person in God's eyes?

Looking from My own experience, the more confrontational you are with God, the more God will show to you His majestic disposition, and the more severe will be the chastisement that He "serves" to you. The more you obey Him, the more He will love you and protect you. God's disposition is like a torture device: If you obey you will be safe and sound. If you do not obey but always want to be in the limelight and play tricks, His disposition will change on a dime. Just like the sun on a cloudy day, He will hide from you and show you the wrath. It is also like the weather in June, with clear skies for miles and blue waves rippling on the surface of the water, until the water suddenly gains momentum and formidable waves well up. Given this disposition of God, do you dare to behave wildly and willfully? Most brothers and sisters have seen in their experiences that when the Holy Spirit works in the day they are full of confidence, but then God's Spirit suddenly forsakes them without them knowing when, leaving them restless and sleepless at night, casting about for the direction in which His Spirit disappeared. But no matter what they are unable to find out where His Spirit went; and He appears to them again without them knowing when, and just like when Peter suddenly saw his Lord Jesus again, he was ecstatic and seemed to cry out with wild joy. Can you possibly forget having experienced this after so many times? The Lord Jesus Christ, who became flesh, was nailed to the cross, and then was resurrected and ascended into heaven, is always hidden to you for a time, then appears to you for a time. He reveals Himself to you because of your righteousness, and He becomes angry and departs from you because of your sins, so why don't you entreat Him more? Didn't you know that since the Pentecost, the Lord Jesus Christ has another commission on earth? All you know is that it's a fact that the Lord Jesus Christ became flesh, came to the earth, and was nailed to the cross, but you have never been aware that the Jesus you believed in before entrusted the work to someone else long ago. His work was completed a long time ago, so the Spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ has come to the earth again in fleshly form to do another part of His work. I'd like to insert something here—despite the fact that you are currently in this stream, I dare to say that few of the people among you believe that this person is the One bestowed upon you by the Lord Jesus Christ. All you know is to enjoy Him but you do not acknowledge that God's Spirit has once again come to the earth, and you do not acknowledge that the God of today is the Jesus Christ from thousands of years ago. This is why I say that all of you are walking with your eyes closed. You just accept wherever you end up—you're not serious about it at all. It's for this reason that you believe in Jesus in word, but you dare to blatantly resist the One who is witnessed by God today. Are you not foolish? The God of today doesn't care about your mistakes; He doesn't condemn you. You say that you believe in Jesus, so would your Lord Jesus Christ be able to let you off? Do you think that God is the place for you to vent or to lie? When your Lord Jesus Christ once again reveals Himself, He will determine whether you are righteous or whether you are evil based on how you behave now. Most people end up with notions about what I refer to as "My brothers and sisters"; they believe that God's way of working will change. Aren't these people just courting death? Can God witness Satan as God Himself? Aren't you just condemning God? Do you think that anyone can casually act as God Himself? If you really had knowledge, then you wouldn't develop notions. There's the following passage in the Bible: "him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons to glory, he is our captain. ... for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brothers." Perhaps you know these words better than Me, and even can easily recite it by heart but you don't understand what it actually means; are you not believing in God with your eyes closed?

I believe that our generation is blessed to be able to take up the path unfinished by the people of previous generations, and to be able to behold the reappearance of God from several thousand years ago—God who is here among us, and also fills all things. You would never have thought that you could walk upon this path: Can you do it? This path is led directly by the Holy Spirit, it is led by the sevenfold intensified Spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ, and it is the path that has been opened up for you by the God of today. Even in your wildest dream you couldn't have imagined that the Jesus of several thousand years ago would appear once again before you. Do you not feel gratified? Who is able to come face-to-face with God? I often pray for our group to receive greater blessings from God that we might be favored by God and gained by Him, but there have also been countless times when I have shed bitter tears for us, asking that God enlighten us, and allow us to behold greater revelations. When I see that people are always trying to fool God and without resolve, considering the flesh or struggling for fame and fortune to take center stage, how could I not feel so pained in My heart? How can people be so senseless? Is it that what I do bears no fruit? If your children were all rebellious and were not filial to you, had no conscience, only cared for themselves, never had empathy for your feelings, and just kicked you out of the house after they grew up, how would you feel at that point? Wouldn't you be awash in tears and reminiscing about the great price you paid to raise them? This is why I've prayed to God countless times: "Dear God! Only You know whether or not I have any burden in Your work. In any areas where My actions are not in line with Your will, You discipline Me, perfect Me, and make Me aware. My only request of You is that You move these people more so that You may soon gain glory and these people may be obtained by You, and that Your work may achieve what Your will is and You may complete Your plan soon." God does not want to conquer people through chastisement; He does not want to always lead people by the nose. He wants people to obey His words and work in a disciplined fashion, and through this satisfy His will. But people have no shame and they constantly rebel against Him. I believe that it is best for us to find the simplest way to satisfy Him, that is, to obey all of His arrangements, and if you can truly achieve this you will be perfected. Isn't this an easy, joyful thing? Take the path that you should take without paying any mind to what others say or thinking too much. Do you have your future and your fate in your own hands? You always run away and want to take a worldly path, but why can't you get out? Why is it that you waver at a crossroads for many years and then end up choosing this path once again? After wandering for many years, why is it that you have now returned to this house in spite of yourself? Is this just your own matter? For those of you in this stream, if you don't believe this, then just listen to Me say this: If you plan to leave, just wait and see if God allows you to, and see how the Holy Spirit moves you—experience it for yourself. To speak frankly, even if you suffer misfortune, you must suffer it in this stream, and if there is suffering, you must suffer here today and you cannot go elsewhere. Do you see it clearly? Where would you go? This is God's administrative decree. Do you think that it is meaningless for God to choose this group of people? In God's work today, He doesn't become angry easily, but if people want to disrupt His plan He can change His countenance in an instant and turn it from bright to cloudy. So, I advise you to settle down and submit to God's designs, allow Him to make you complete. This is the only way to be a smart person.

THE PATH ... (8)

When God comes to the earth to mingle with mankind, to live with them, it is not just for one or two days. Maybe in all this time people have more or less known God, and maybe they have gained significant insights of serving God, and are very seasoned in their belief in God. Whatever the case is, people pretty much understand God's disposition, and the expressions of all sorts of human dispositions are really varied. The way I see it, people's various expressions are adequate for God to use as specimens, and their mental activities are adequate for Him to reference. Maybe this is one aspect in which mankind cooperates with God, it is mankind's unwitting cooperation with God, so that this performance directed by God is colorful and lifelike, very vivid. I am saying these things to My brothers and sisters as the general director of this play—every single one of us can speak to our thoughts and feelings after acting this out, and chat about how each of us experiences our lives within this play. We may as well have an entirely new kind of symposium to open up our hearts and talk about our performing arts, see how God guides each individual so that in the next rendition we are able to express a higher level of our art and each play out our own role to the greatest extent possible, not disappointing God. I hope that My brothers and sisters can take this seriously—no one can overlook it because playing a part well isn't something that can be achieved in one or two days. It requires that we experience life and go deeper into our real lives over the long term, and have practical experience of various types of lives. Only then can we go up on stage. I am full of hope for My brothers and sisters, and I believe that you are not disheartened or discouraged, and no matter what God does, you are like a pot of fire—you are never tepid and you can persist until the end, until God's work is fully revealed, and until the play that God directs comes to its final conclusion. I have no other requirements of you. All I hope for is that you can continue to hold on, that you are not anxious for results, that you cooperate with Me so that the work that I should do is done well, and that no one creates interruptions or disturbances. When this portion of the work is completed, God will reveal everything to you. After My work has been completed, I will present your credit in front of God to give account to Him. Isn't that better? We can help each other achieve our own aims. Isn't this a perfect solution for everyone? This is a difficult time that requires you to pay a price. Because I am currently the director, I hope that none of you are irritated. This is the work that I am doing. Perhaps there will be one day when I switch to a more appropriate "work unit" and I no longer make things difficult for you. I will show to you whatever you are willing to see, and I will also fulfill you in whatever you are willing to hear. But not now—this is the work for today and I cannot give free rein to your characters and allow you to do whatever you want to. That way, My work would not be easy to do. To be honest, that wouldn't bear any fruit and it wouldn't be beneficial for you. So now you need to "suffer hardships," and when the day comes that this stage of My work has been completed I will be free. I will not bear such a heavy burden, and I will accede to whatever you ask from Me; as long as it is beneficial for your lives I will fulfill your requests. I have now taken up a heavy responsibility. I cannot go against the commands of God the Father, and I cannot disrupt the plans for My work. I cannot manage My personal affairs through My business affairs. I hope you can all understand and forgive Me because everything that I do is according to the intention of God the Father. I do whatever He has Me do no matter what He wants, and I am not willing to provoke His anger or His wrath. I only do what I should do. So on behalf of God the Father, I advise you to endure a little while longer. No one need worry. After I have completed what I need to do, you can do whatever you want and see whatever you like, but I must complete the work that I need to.

In this stage of work great faith and great love are required of us. We may stumble from the slightest carelessness because this stage of work is different from all the previous ones. What God is perfecting is mankind's faith—one cannot see or touch it. What God does is convert words to faith, to love, and to life. People must reach a point where they have endured hundreds of refinements and possess faith greater than Job's. They need to endure incredible suffering and all kinds of torture without departing from God at any time. When they are obedient until the death, and have great faith in God, then this stage of God's work is complete. It is this work that I have taken on, so I hope that My brothers and sisters are able to understand My difficulties and don't have any other requirements of Me. This is God the Father's requirement of Me and I cannot escape from this reality. I must do the work that I should do. All I hope is that you are not irrational, that you gain more insights and do not look at issues too simply. Your thinking is too childish, too naive. God's work isn't as simple as you might imagine, that He just does whatever He wants to do. If that were the case His plan would be ruined. Wouldn't you say so? I am doing the work of God. I'm not just doing odd jobs for people, doing whatever I feel like doing and personally arranging whether or not I do something. It's not that simple right now. I have been sent by the Father to act as the director—do you think that I arranged and chose this Myself? People's thinking always interrupts the work of God. So, after I work for a period of time, there are many requests from people that I have not been able to fulfill and people have all changed their minds about Me. You should all be clear about these ideas you have—I have no need to point each of them out individually. I can do nothing but explain the work I do; My feelings aren't hurt by this at all. Once you've understood that, you can see it however you like. I won't raise any objections because this is how God works. I'm not obliged to explain all of it. I have just come to complete the work of words, to work and perform at the direction of words. I don't need to say much about the rest of it, and I'm not able to do anything else. I have explained everything I have to say. Whatever you think of it is fine, and it doesn't matter to Me. But I would still like to remind you that God's work is not as simple as you imagine it to be. The less in line it is with people's notions the deeper the significance is, and the more in line it is with people's notions, the less valuable it is, and without actual significance. Consider these words carefully—I only say this one thing about that, and you yourselves can analyze the rest. I will not do any explaining.

People imagine that God does things in a certain way, but over this last year or so, has what we have seen and experienced of God's work really been according to human notions? From the creation of the world until now, not a single person has been able to put their finger on the stages or the rules of God's work. If they could, why is it that those religious leaders don't recognize that God is currently working this way? Why is it that so few people understand the reality of today? From this we can see that no one understands God's work—people can only do things according to the guidance of His Spirit, but they cannot just rigidly apply rules to His work. If you take the image and the work of Jesus and compare it with God's current work, it is just like the Jewish people holding Jesus up to the idea of^[a] Jehovah. Isn't this suffering a loss? Even Jesus didn't know what God's work in the last days would be; all He knew was that what He needed to complete was the work of being crucified, so how could others know? How could they know what work God is going to do in the future? How could God disclose His plan to human beings, who have been occupied by Satan? Isn't that foolish? What God allows you to know and to understand is His will. He does not allow you to consider His future work. All we need to do is believe in God and do things according to His guidance, handle actual difficulties practically, not make things difficult for God or cause trouble for Him. We should just go do what we ought to do—as long as we can be within God's present work that's enough! This is the path that I am guiding you on. We should continue forward, and God will not mistreat a single one of us. In this last year of your marvelous experiences you have gained a great many things; I believe that you will not take it so hard. The path that I'm leading you on is My work, My responsibility, and it was ordained by God long ago so that we would be predestined to come this far, until today—that we have been able to do this is our great blessing, and although it has not been a smooth path, our friendship is everlasting, and it will be passed down through the ages. Whether they were cheers and laughter or sadness and tears, they all make up our beautiful memories! Maybe you should know that I do not have many days for My work. I have so many work projects, and I cannot accompany you often. I hope you can understand Me—because our original friendship is still the same. Maybe one day I will once again appear in front of you, and I hope that you don't make things difficult for Me. After all, I am different from you. I travel all around for My work, and I don't live My life just lollygagging in hotels. Regardless of how you are, I just do what I should do. I hope that the things we shared in the past may become the flower of our friendship.

It can be said that this path was opened up by Me, and whether bitter or sweet, I have led the way. That we have been able to continue to the present day has all been due to God's grace. There may be some who thank Me, and there may be some who complain against Me, but none of that is important. All I want to see is that what should be achieved in this group of people has been achieved. This should be celebrated. So, I do not bear a grudge against those who complain against Me; all I want is to complete My work as quickly as possible so that God's heart may be at rest soon. At that time I will not bear any heavy burden, and there will be no worries in God's heart. Are you willing to cooperate in a better way? Isn't doing God's work well a better aim for our struggles? It can really be said that we have undergone innumerable hardships and experienced all the joys and sorrows over this period of time, and overall, the performance of every single person has been almost passable. Perhaps in the future there will be more pleasant work that is required of you, but don't linger on thoughts of Me; just do what you should. What I need to do is almost there, and I hope that you will be loyal at all times and that you will not be nostalgic regarding My work. You should know that I have come only to complete one stage of work, certainly not to do all of God's work. This is something that you need to understand. Don't have any other opinions about it. God's work requires more avenues in order to be complete; you cannot always rely on Me. Perhaps you saw long ago that what I am doing is just one portion of the work; it does not represent Jehovah or Jesus. God's work is divided into many stages, so don't be too rigid. While I'm working you must listen to Me. God's work has been different in every single age; it doesn't remain the same, and it's not just the same old song being sung. There is His work which is suitable in every stage and it changes with the ages. So since you have been born into this age, you must eat and drink of God's words and read His words. The day may come when My work changes and you must continue on according to what you should do. There can be no errors in God's work. No matter how the outside world changes, God cannot be wrong and His work cannot be wrong. It is merely that sometimes God's old work passes away and His new work begins; however, it cannot be said that because the new work has come the old work is wrong. That is a fallacy! God's work cannot be said to be right or wrong, it can only be said to be earlier or later. This is the guide for people's belief in God and it absolutely cannot be ignored.

WHAT VIEWPOINT BELIEVERS OUGHT TO HOLD

What is it that man has received since he first believed in God? What have you known about God? How much have you changed because of your belief in God? Now you all know that man's belief in God is not solely for salvation of the soul and welfare of the flesh, nor is it to enrich his life through love of God, and so on. As it stands, if you love God for the sake of welfare of the flesh or momentary pleasure, then even if, in the end, your love for God reaches its peak and you ask for nothing, this love you seek is still an impure love and not pleasing to God. Those who use love for God to enrich their dull lives and fill a void in their heart are those who seek to live in ease, not those who truly seek to love God. This kind of love is against one's will, a pursuit of emotional pleasure, and God does not need this kind of love. What kind, then, is a love such as yours? For what do you love God? How much true love do you have for God now? The love of most among you is as previously mentioned. This kind of love can only maintain the status quo; it cannot attain eternal constancy, nor take root in man. This kind of love is that of a flower which bears no fruit after it has bloomed then withered. In other words, after you have loved God once in such a way and there is no one to lead you on the path ahead, then you will fall. If you can only love God in the times of loving God and you make no changes to your life disposition afterward, then you will continue to be shrouded by the influence of darkness, unable to escape, and still unable to break free from being manipulated and fooled by Satan. No such man can be fully gained by God; in the end, their spirit, soul, and body will still belong to Satan. This is unquestionable. All those who cannot be fully gained by God will return to their original place, that is, back to Satan, and they will go down to the lake that burns with fire and brimstone to accept the next step of punishment from God. Those gained by God are those who rebel against Satan and escape from its domain. Such men will be officially numbered among the people of the kingdom. This is how the people of the kingdom come to be. Are you willing to be this kind of person? Are you willing to be gained by God? Are you willing to escape from the domain of Satan and return to God? Do you now belong to Satan or are you numbered among the people of the kingdom? Such things should all be clear and require no further explanation.

In times past, many pursued with the ambition and notions of man and for the sake of the hopes of man. These matters will not be discussed now. The key is to find a way of practice that will enable each of you to maintain a normal condition before God and to gradually break free of the shackles of Satan's influence, so that you may be gained by God, and live out on earth what God asks of you. Only this can fulfill the desire of God. Many believe in God, yet know neither what it is that God desires nor what it is that Satan desires. They foolishly believe and blindly follow others, and so have never had a normal Christian life; they have no normal personal relationships, much less a normal relationship that man has with God. From this it can be seen that the troubles and faults of man, and other factors that can thwart the will of God are many. This is sufficient to prove that man has not set himself on the right track nor experienced real life. So what is it to set on the right track? To set on the right track means that you can quiet your heart before God at all times and commune naturally with God, gradually coming to know what is lacking in man and slowly gaining a deeper knowledge of God. Through this, you will daily gain new seeing and enlightenment in your spirit; your longing grows, and you seek to enter into the truth. Every day there is new light and new understanding. Through this path, you gradually break free of the influence of Satan, and your life grows greater. A man such as this has set on the right track. Evaluate your own actual experiences and examine the path you have taken in your belief of God against the above. Are you one who is set on the right track? In what matters have you broken free from the shackles of Satan and from the influence of Satan? If you have yet to set yourself on the right track, your ties with Satan have yet to be severed. As such, can this pursuit of love for God result in a love that is authentic, dedicated, and pure? You say that your love for God is unwavering and heartfelt, yet you have not broken free of the shackles of Satan. Are you not making a fool of God? If you wish to attain a pure love for God, be fully gained by God, and become numbered among the people of the kingdom, then you must first set yourself on the right track.

ON THE STEPS OF GOD'S WORK

From the outside, it seems that the steps of God's work in this current stage have already been finished, and that mankind has already experienced the judgment, chastisement, smiting, and refinement of His words, and that they have undergone the steps such as the trial of service-doers, the refinement of the times of chastisement, the trial of death, the trial of the foils, and the times of^[a] loving God. Although people have undergone great suffering in each step they still have not understood God's will. Just like the trial of service-doers, what people gained from that, what they understood from it, and what result God wanted to achieve through that—people still remain unclear about these issues. It seems from the speed of God's work, that according to the current rate people absolutely cannot keep up. It can be seen from this that God is first revealing these steps of His work to mankind, and He doesn't necessarily need to get to a level that people can imagine in any of the steps, but He is trying to use this to elucidate an issue. In order for God to perfect someone to be truly gained by Him, He must carry out the steps that were described above. The goal of doing this work is to have people see what steps God needs to carry out to perfect a group of people. So, looking from the outside, the steps of God's work have been completed, but in essence He has just officially begun perfecting mankind. This is something that people should see clearly—it is that the steps of His work have been completed, not that His work has been completed. But what people believe from their notions is that the steps of God's work have been revealed to mankind, and that is without a doubt that His work has been finished. This way of seeing things is utterly wrong. God's work is not in line with people's notions, it is a counterattack against people's notions at every turn, and the steps of His work are particularly out of line with people's notions; this shows God's wisdom. It can be seen from this that people's notions are disruptive at every turn, and all that people can imagine are things that God wants to strike back at. This is an insight from actual experience. People all think that God works so quickly, and they think that when they still don't have any understanding and are still befuddled and confused God's work has been finished without people knowing it. Every step of His work is this way. Most people believe that God is toying with people, but the intention behind the work that He does is not like that. His working method is through rumination, first working from a general level, then going into the details, and after that fully refining these details. This catches people by surprise. People all want to fool God, and they think that if they just get by they'll be able to get to a point where they can satisfy Him, but in reality, how could God possibly be satisfied because of mankind's attempts at getting by? God works through the method of taking people by surprise and catching them unawares in order to gain the greatest results and to have people better know His wisdom and better understand His righteousness, majesty, and His unoffendable disposition.

a. The original text omits "the times of."

God has now officially begun to perfect people. In order to be made complete, people must undergo the revelation, judgment, and chastisement of God's words, and experience the trials and refinement of His words (such as the trial of service-doers). In addition, people must be able to withstand the trial of death. That is, someone who truly carries out God's will can emit praise from deep in their heart in the midst of God's judgment, chastisement, and trials, and is able to fully obey God and forsake themselves, thus loving God with a heart of sincerity, single-mindedness, and purity; such is a complete person, and it is also the work that God wants to do, and is what God wants to accomplish. People cannot draw conclusions lightly about God's working methods, and they can only pursue entry into life. This is the foundation. Do not constantly scrutinize God's working methods; this will only hinder your future prospects. How much have you currently seen of His working methods? How obedient have you been? How much have you gained from each working method? Are you willing to be perfected by God? Are you ready to be a complete person? These are things that you should be completely clear on. They are things that you should enter into.

CORRUPT MAN CANNOT REPRESENT GOD

Man has been living under the shroud of the influence of darkness, shackled without release by the influence of Satan. And the disposition of man, after it has been processed by Satan, is becoming increasingly corrupt. In other words, man lives constantly with his corrupt satanic disposition, unable to truly love God. Hence, if man wishes to love God, he must be stripped of his self-rightness, self-importance, arrogance, conceit, and the likes of which belong to the disposition of Satan. Otherwise, the love of man is an impure love, entirely the love of Satan, and one which absolutely cannot receive the approval of God. If man is not directly perfected, dealt with, broken, pruned, disciplined, chastened, or refined by the Holy Spirit, then none can truly love God. If you say that a part of your disposition represents God and hence you can truly love God, then you are one who speaks words of arrogance and are a preposterous man. Such men are the archangel! The inborn nature of man cannot directly represent God. Man has to cast it off through the perfection of God, then care for and satisfy God's will and go through the work of the Holy Spirit, before his living out can be approved by God. No one who lives in the flesh can directly represent God unless he is a man used by the Holy Spirit. However, even such a person's disposition and what he lives out cannot be said to completely represent God; it can only be said that what he lives out is governed by the Holy Spirit. The disposition of such a man cannot represent God.

Though the disposition of man is ordained by God—this is unquestionable and can be considered a positive thing—it has been processed by Satan. That is why all of man's disposition is the disposition of Satan. A man might say that God, by disposition, is straight-forward in His work, and that he too behaves in this way; he too has this sort of character, and so he says that his disposition represents God. What kind of man is this? Can the corrupt satanic disposition represent God? Whoever declares that his disposition is representative of God blasphemes God, and it is an insult to the Holy Spirit! Looking at how the Holy Spirit works, the work of God on earth is solely to conquer, hence much of man's corrupt satanic disposition has not been cleansed. What man lives out is still the image of Satan. It is the goodness of man and represents the actions of man's flesh. More precisely, it represents Satan and absolutely cannot represent God. Even if a man already loves God to the extent that he is able to enjoy a life of heaven on earth, is able to make such statements as: "God! I cannot love You enough," and has reached the highest realm, you cannot say that he lives out God or represents God, for the substance of man is unlike that of God. Man can never live out God, much less become God. What man lives out as governed by the Holy Spirit is only in accordance with what God asks of man.

All the actions and deeds of Satan are shown through man. Now all the actions and deeds of man are an expression of Satan and hence cannot represent God. Man is the embodiment of Satan, and the disposition of man does not represent the disposition of God. Some men are of a good character; God may do some work through it and their work is governed by the Holy Spirit, yet their disposition cannot represent God. The work God does in them is just working with and expanding on what already exists within. Be it prophets from ages past or men used by God, none can directly represent Him. All men come to love God only under compulsion from their surroundings, and not one subjectively strives to cooperate. What are positive things? All that directly comes from God is positive. However, the disposition of man has been processed by Satan and cannot represent God. Only the love, will to suffer, righteousness, submission, humbleness, and hiddenness of God incarnate directly represent God. This is because when He came, He was without a sinful nature and came directly from God; He has not been processed by Satan. Jesus is only in the likeness of sinful flesh and does not represent sin; therefore, His actions, deeds, and words, until that time prior to His accomplishment of the work through crucifixion (including the crucifixion) are all directly representative of God. This instance of Jesus is sufficient to prove that any man with a sinful nature cannot represent God, and the sin of man represents Satan. That is to say, sin does not represent God and God is sinless. Even the work done in man by the Holy Spirit can only be considered to have been governed by the Holy Spirit and cannot be said to be done by man on behalf of God. As far as man is concerned, neither his sin nor his disposition represents God. Looking at the work done in man by the Holy Spirit today and in the past, most was performed by the Holy Spirit. This is what allowed man to have living out. However, this is only one side, and very few are able to live out the truth after being dealt with and disciplined by the Holy Spirit. That is to say, only the work of the Holy Spirit is present and cooperation on the part of man is absent. Do you see this clearly now? So then, what should you do to diligently work in concert with the Holy Spirit and, in so doing, fulfill your duty?

END RELIGIOUS SERVICE

Since the beginning of His work in the entire universe, God has predestined many people to serve Him, including people from every walk of life. His purpose is to fulfill His own will and to ensure that His work on earth is brought to fruition. This is God's purpose in choosing people to serve Him. Every person who serves God must understand this will of God. Through this work of His, people are better able to see God's wisdom and God's almightiness, and to see the principles of His work on earth. God practically comes to earth to do His work and contact people so that they will know His deeds more clearly. Today, it is the privilege of you group of people to serve the practical God. This is a great blessing for you. God is truly raising you up. When God selects a person to serve Him, He always has His own principles. Serving God is not merely a matter of enthusiasm, as people imagine. Today a person can serve God in His presence, as you can see, because they are guided by God and have the work of the Holy Spirit; and because they are seekers after the truth. These are the minimum requirements for a servant of God.

Serving God is no simple task. Those whose corrupt disposition is not changed can never serve God. If your disposition has not been judged and chastised by God's word, then your disposition still represents Satan. This is sufficient to prove that your service of God is out of your own good intention. It is service based on your satanic nature. You serve God with your natural character, and according to your personal preferences; what's more, you keep thinking that God loves whatever you like, and that God hates whatever you do not like, and your work is guided entirely by your own preferences. Can this be called serving God? Ultimately your life disposition will not be changed one iota. In fact, you will become more stubborn because you have been serving God, and it will make your corrupt disposition deeply ingrained. Inside yourself, you will develop doctrines of service to God based on nothing more than your own character, and the experience derived from your serving according to your own disposition. This is human experience and lessons. It is man's philosophy of life. People like this are among the Pharisees and the religious officials. If they never wake up and repent, then they will ultimately turn into the false Christs who will appear in the last days. They will be deceivers. The false Christs and deceivers that were spoken of shall come from this type of people. If those who serve God follow their character and act according to their own will, then they are in constant danger of being cast out. Those who apply their many years of experience to serving God to ensnare the hearts of people, lecture and control people, elevate themselves—and who never repent, never confess, never renounce the benefits of position—these people will fall down before God. They are people of the same type as Paul, conceited with and showing off their seniority. God will not perfect people like this. This kind of service interferes with the work of God. People love to cling to the old. They cling to the notions of the past, cling to things from the past. This is a great obstacle to their service. If you cannot throw them off, those things will throttle your whole life. God will not commend you, not in the slightest, not even if you run your legs off or break your back laboring, nor even if you are martyred in your service of God. Quite the contrary: He will say that you are an evildoer.

As of today, God will formally perfect those who have no religious notions, who are ready to set aside their old selves, and who simply obey God, and perfect those who long for the word of God. These people should stand up and serve God. In God there is endless abundance and fathomless wisdom. His amazing work and precious words are there for more people to enjoy. As it stands, these new things cannot be accepted by those with religious notions, those who assume seniority, and those who will not put their old selves aside. The Holy Spirit has no chance to perfect those people. If a person does not have the will to obey, and does not thirst for the word of God, then they will be unable to receive the new things. They will just become more and more rebellious, more and more crafty, and end up on the wrong track. In God's work now, He will raise up more people who truly love Him and who can accept the new light. And He will completely cut down the religious officials who flaunt their seniority. He does not want a single person who resists change. Do you want to be one of those people? Do you perform your service according to your own preferences, or do you do what God wants? This is something you must know for yourself. Are you one of the religious officials, or are you a newborn babe being made perfect by God? How much of your service is commended by the Holy Spirit? How much of it will God not even remember? After many years of service, how much difference have you made in your life? Are you clear about all these? If you have true faith, then you will cast aside your old religious notions, and serve God better in a new way. If you step up now, it is not too late. Old religious notions will strangle a person's life. The experience a person acquires will lead them away from God, to do things in their own way. If you do not give these things up, they will become a stumbling block to your growth in life. God has always perfected those who serve Him. He does not cast them out lightly. There is a future for you if you truly accept the judgment and chastisement of God's word, if you can put aside your old religious practices and doctrines, and avoid using old religious notions as the measure of God's word today. But if you cling to old things, if you still treasure them, then you cannot be saved. God will take no notice of people like that. If you really want to be made perfect, then you must resolve to completely abandon everything from before. Even if what was done before was right, even if it was God's work, you shall put it aside; you must not cling to it. Even if it was clearly the work of the Holy Spirit, done directly by the Holy Spirit, today you must put it aside. You must not hold onto it. This is what God demands. Everything must be renewed. In God's work and God's word, He makes no reference to the old things that went before, and He does not dig into old history. God is always new and never old. He does not cling even to His own words from the past. This shows that God does not follow any doctrine. If you always cling tightly to the things of the past and rigidly apply them as formulas while God is no longer working in the ways He did before, then are your words and actions as a human not disruption? Have you not become an enemy of God? Are you willing to waste your entire life over these old things? These old things make you into a person who obstructs God's work. Is that the kind of person you want to be? If you truly do not want that, then quickly stop what you are doing and turn around; start all over again. God does not remember past service.

IN YOUR FAITH IN GOD YOU SHOULD OBEY GOD

Why do you believe in God? Most people are confounded by this question. They always have two entirely different viewpoints about the practical God and the God in heaven, which shows that they believe in God not in order to obey, but to receive certain benefits, or to escape the suffering of disaster. Only then are they somewhat obedient, but their obedience is conditional, it is for the sake of their own personal prospects, and forced upon them. So: why do you believe in God? If it is solely for the sake of your prospects, and your fate, then you'd best not believe. Belief such as this is self-deception, self-reassurance, and self-appreciation. If your faith is not built upon the foundation of obedience to God, then you will ultimately be punished as a result of opposing God. All those who do not seek obedience to God in their faith oppose God. God asks that people seek the truth, that they thirst for God's words, and eat and drink God's words, and put them into practice, so that they may achieve obedience to God. If your motivations are truly thus, then God will surely raise you up, and will surely be gracious toward you. No one can doubt this, and no one can change it. If your motivations are not for the sake of obedience to God, and you have other aims, then all that you say and do—your prayers before God, and even your every action—will be in opposition to God. You may be soft-spoken and mild-mannered, your every action and expression may look right, you may appear to be one who obeys, but when it comes to your motivations and your views about faith in God, everything you do is in opposition to God, and evil. People who appear as obedient as sheep, but whose hearts harbor evil intentions, are wolves in sheep's clothing, they directly offend God, and God will not spare a single one of them. The Holy Spirit will reveal every one of them, so all can see that every one of those who are hypocritical will be surely detested and rejected by the Holy Spirit. Don't worry: God will deal with and resolve each of them in turn.

If you are unable to accept the new light of God, and cannot understand all that God does today, and do not seek it, or else doubt it, pass judgment on it, or study and analyze it, then you have no mind to obey. If, when the light of the here and now appears, you still treasure the light of yesterday and oppose God's new work, then you are nothing more than a joke, you are one of those who deliberately oppose God. Key to obeying God is appreciating the new light, and being able to accept it and put it into practice. Only this is true obedience. Those who do not have the will to thirst for God are incapable of being of a mind to obey God, and can only oppose God as a result of their satisfaction with the status quo. That man cannot obey God is because he is possessed by what came before. The things that came before have given people all manner of conceptions and illusions about God that have become the image of God in their minds. Thus, what they believe in are their own conceptions, and the standards of their own imagination. If you measure the God who does actual work today against the God of your own imagination, then your faith comes from Satan, and is according to your own preferences—and God does not want faith such as this. Regardless of how lofty their credentials, and regardless of their dedication—even if they have devoted a lifetime of efforts to His work, and have martyred themselves—God does not approve of any with faith such as this. He merely shows them a little grace, and allows them to enjoy it for a time. People such as this are incapable of putting the truth into practice, the Holy Spirit does not work within them, and God will eliminate each of them in turn. Regardless of whether they are old or young, those who do not obey God in their faith and have the wrong motivations, are those who oppose and interrupt, and such people will unquestionably be eliminated by God. Those who are without the slightest obedience to God, who merely acknowledge God's name, and have some sense of God's dearness and loveliness yet do not keep pace with the steps of the Holy Spirit, and do not obey the present work and words of the Holy Spirit—such people live amid God's grace, and will not be gained and made perfect by God. God makes people perfect through their obedience, through their eating, drinking, and enjoying of God's words, and through the suffering and refinement in their lives. Only through faith such as this can people's dispositions change, only then can they possess the true knowledge of God. Not being satisfied with living amid God's graces, actively thirsting for the truth, and searching for the truth, and pursuing being gained by God—this is what it means to consciously obey God; this is precisely the kind of faith that God wants. People who do nothing more than enjoy God's graces cannot be made perfect, or changed, and their obedience, piety, and love and patience are all superficial. Those who only enjoy God's graces cannot truly know God, and even when they do know God, their knowledge is superficial, and they say things like God loves man, or God is compassionate toward man. This does not represent the life of man, and does not show that people truly know God. If, when God's words refine them, or when His trials come upon them, people are unable to obey God—if, instead, they become doubtful, and fall down—then they are not in the least bit obedient. Within them, there are many rules and restrictions about faith in God, old experiences that are the result of many years of faith, or various doctrines based upon the Bible. Could people such as this obey God? These people are full of human things—how could they obey God? They all obey according to their personal preferences—could God wish for obedience such as this? This isn't obeying God, but abiding by doctrine, it is satisfying and consoling yourself. If you say that this is obedience to God, do you not blaspheme against Him? You are an Egyptian Pharaoh, you commit evil, and you expressly engage in the work of opposing God—could God want service such as this? You'd best hurry up and repent and have some self-awareness. If not, you'd be better off going home: that would do more good for you than your service to God, you wouldn't interrupt and disturb, you'd know your place, and live well—and wouldn't that be better? That way you'd avoid opposing God and being punished!

ESTABLISHING A PROPER RELATIONSHIP WITH GOD IS VERY IMPORTANT

People believe in God, love God, and satisfy God by touching the Spirit of God with their heart, thereby obtaining His satisfaction; when engaging with God's words with their heart, they are therefore moved by the Spirit of God. If you wish to achieve a proper spiritual life and establish a proper relationship with God, you must first give your heart to Him, and quiet your heart before Him. Only after you have poured your whole heart into God can you gradually develop a proper spiritual life. If people do not give their heart to God in their belief in Him, if their heart is not in Him and they do not treat His burden as their own, then everything they do is cheating God, and it is all the behavior of religious people—this cannot receive God's praise. God cannot get anything from this kind of person; this kind of person can only serve as a foil to God's work, like a decoration in the house of God, taking up space, and is a good-for-nothing—God does not use this kind of person. In such a person, not only is there no opportunity for the work of the Holy Spirit, but even more, there isn't any value of perfection. This type of person is the real "walking dead." They have no components that can be used by the Holy Spirit—they have all been appropriated by Satan, corrupted to the extreme by Satan, and they are the object of God's elimination. Currently the Holy Spirit is not only using people by putting their virtues into play, but also perfecting and changing their shortcomings. If your heart can be poured into God and keep quiet before Him, then you will have the opportunity and the qualifications to be used by the Holy Spirit, to receive the enlightenment and illumination of the Holy Spirit, and even more, you will have the opportunity for the Holy Spirit to make up for your shortcomings. When you give your heart to God, you can enter more deeply into the positive aspect and be on a higher plane of insight; in the negative aspect, you will have more understanding of your own faults and shortcomings, you will be more eager to seek to satisfy God's will, and you will not be passive, and will actively enter in. This will mean that you are a correct person. On the premise that your heart is calm before God, the key to whether or not you receive praise from the Holy Spirit and whether or not you please God is whether you can actively enter in. When the Holy Spirit enlightens a person and uses a person, it never makes him negative, but always makes him actively progress. Even though he has weaknesses, he is able to not live according to them, he is able to refrain from delaying his growth in life, and he is able to continue to seek to satisfy God's will. This is a standard which sufficiently proves that you have obtained the presence of the Holy Spirit. If a person is always negative, and even after being enlightened to know himself he is still negative and passive, unable to stand up and act in concert with God, then this type of person just receives the grace of God, but the Holy Spirit is not with him. When a person is negative, this means that his heart has not turned to God and his spirit has not been moved by God's Spirit. This should be recognized by all.

It can be seen from experience that one of the most important issues is quieting one's heart before God. It is an issue that concerns people's spiritual life, and the growth of their life. Only if your heart is at peace before God will your pursuit of the truth and of changes in your disposition bear fruit. Because you come burdened before God and you always feel that you are lacking too much, that there are many truths that you need to know, much reality that you need to experience, and that you should give every care to God's will—these things are always on your mind, and it is as if they are pressing down on you so hard that you can't breathe, and thus you feel heavy of heart (but not in a negative state). Only people such as this are qualified to accept the enlightenment of God's words and be moved by the Spirit of God. It is because of their burden, because they are heavy of heart, and, it can be said, because of the price they have paid and the torment they have suffered before God that they receive His enlightenment and illumination, for God does not give anyone special treatment. He is always fair in His treatment of people, but He is also not arbitrary in His provision to people, and does not give to them unconditionally. This is one aspect of His righteous disposition. In real life, most people have yet to attain this realm. At the very least, their heart has yet to completely turn to God, and thus there has still not been any great change in their life disposition. This is because they only live amid God's grace, and have yet to gain the work of the Holy Spirit. The criteria for God's use of people are as follows: Their heart turns to God, they are burdened by the words of God, they have a heart of yearning, and they have the resolve to seek the truth. Only people such as this can gain the work of the Holy Spirit and frequently gain enlightenment and illumination. The people God uses appear from the outside to be irrational and seem to not have proper relationships with others, though they speak with propriety, don't speak carelessly, and can always keep a quiet heart before God. But it is just this kind of person who is sufficient to be used by the Holy Spirit. This "irrational" person God speaks of looks like they don't have proper relationships with others, and they don't have outward love or superficial practices, but when they are communicating spiritual things they can open their heart and selflessly provide others with the illumination and enlightenment they have acquired from their actual experience before God. This is how they express their love for God and satisfy God's will. When others are all slandering and ridiculing them, they are able to not be controlled by outside people, occurrences, or things, and can still be quiet before God. Such a person seems to have their own unique insights. Regardless of others, their heart never leaves God. When others are chatting cheerfully and humorously, their heart still remains before God, contemplating God's word or praying in silence to the God in their heart, seeking God's intentions. They never make the maintenance of their proper relationships with other people the main focus. Such a person seems to have no philosophy of life. On the outside, this person is lively, adorable, and innocent, but also possesses a sense of calmness. This is the likeness of a person God uses. Things like the philosophy of life or "normal reason" cannot get through to this type of person; this type of person has devoted his whole heart to God's word, and seems to only have God in his heart. This is the type of person who is what God refers to as a person "without reason," and is just the person that is used by God. The mark of a person who is being used by God is: No matter when or where, his heart is always before God, and no matter how dissolute others are, how much they indulge in lust, indulge in the flesh—his heart never leaves God, and he doesn't follow the crowd. Only this type of person is suited for God's use, and is exactly the one who is perfected by the Holy Spirit. If you are unable to reach this point, then you are not qualified to be gained by God, to be perfected by the Holy Spirit.

If you want to have a proper relationship with God, your heart must turn to God, and on this foundation, you will also have a proper relationship with other people. If you don't have a proper relationship with God, no matter what you do to maintain your relationships with other people, no matter how hard you work or how much energy you exert, it will still belong to a human philosophy of life. You are maintaining your position among people through a human perspective and a human philosophy so that they will praise you. You do not establish proper relationships with people according to the word of God. If you don't focus on your relationships with people but maintain a proper relationship with God, if you are willing to give your heart to God and learn to obey Him, very naturally, your relationships with all people will become proper. This way, these relationships aren't established on the flesh, but on the foundation of God's love. There are almost no interactions based on the flesh, but in the spirit there is fellowship as well as love, comfort, and provision for one another. This is all done on the foundation of a heart that satisfies God. These relationships aren't maintained by relying on a human philosophy of life, but they are formed very naturally through the burden for God. They don't require human effort—they are practiced through the principles of the word of God. Are you willing to be considerate toward the will of God? Are you willing to be a person "without reason" before God? Are you willing to completely give your heart to God, and not consider your position among people? Of all the people you have contact with, with which of these do you have the best relationships? With which of these do you have the worst relationships? Are your relationships with people proper? Do you treat all people equally? Are your relationships with others maintained according to your philosophy of life, or are they built on the foundation of God's love? When one does not give his heart to God, his spirit becomes obtuse, it becomes numb and unconscious. This kind of person will never understand God's words and will never have a proper relationship with God; this kind of person will never change their disposition. Changing one's disposition is the process of one giving his heart completely to God, and of receiving enlightenment and illumination from the words of God. God's work can allow one to actively enter in, as well as enable him to get rid of his negative aspects after gaining knowledge. When you are able to give your heart to God, you will be able to perceive every subtle moving within your spirit, and you will know every enlightenment and illumination received from God. Hold onto this, and you will gradually enter into the path of being perfected by the Holy Spirit. The quieter your heart can be before God, the more sensitive and delicate your spirit will be, and the more your spirit will be able to perceive the moving of the Holy Spirit, and then your relationship with God will become more and more proper. A proper relationship between people is established on the foundation of giving their heart to God; it is not achieved through human effort. Without God, relationships between people are merely relationships of the flesh. They are not proper, but are indulgent of lust—they are relationships that God detests, that He loathes. If you say that your spirit has been moved, but you always want to have fellowship with people who appeal to you, with whoever you think highly of, and if there is another seeker who does not appeal to you, who you hold a bias against and will not engage with, this is more proof that you are an emotional person and you do not have a proper relationship with God at all. You are attempting to deceive God and cover up your own ugliness. Even if you can share some understanding but you carry wrong intentions, everything you do is good only by human standards. God will not praise you—you are acting according to the flesh, not according to God's burden. If you are able to quiet your heart in front of God and have proper interactions with all those who love God, only then are you fit for God's use. This way, no matter how you associate with others, it will not be according to a life philosophy, but it will be living in front of God, considerate of His burden. How many people like this are there amongst you? Are your relationships with others really proper? On what foundation are they built? How many life philosophies are there within you? Have they been cast off? If your heart cannot completely turn to God, then you are not of God—you come from Satan, and in the end you will be returned to Satan. You are not worthy of being one of God's people. All of this requires your careful consideration.

A NORMAL SPIRITUAL LIFE LEADS PEOPLE ONTO THE RIGHT TRACK

You have only walked a very small portion of the path of a believer in God, and you've yet to enter onto the right track, so you're still far from achieving God's standard. Right now, your stature is not adequate to meet His demands. Due to your caliber as well as your innate corrupt nature, you always treat God's work carelessly and don't take it seriously. This is your greatest shortcoming. Furthermore, you are incapable of finding the path of the Holy Spirit. Most of you don't understand it and can't see it clearly. Moreover, most of you pay no mind to this matter, and are even less serious about it. If you continue to behave like this and do not know the work of the Holy Spirit, then the path you take as a believer in God will be futile. This is because you don't do everything in your power to seek to fulfill God's will, and because you don't cooperate well with God. It's not that God hasn't worked on you, or that the Holy Spirit hasn't moved you. It's that you are so careless that you don't take the work of the Holy Spirit seriously. You must turn things around immediately and walk the path led by the Holy Spirit. This is the main topic for today. This "path led by the Holy Spirit" is that people gain enlightenment in their spirit, they have knowledge of God's word, they gain clarity on the path ahead of them, and they are able to enter into the truth step by step, and come to understand God more and more. The path led by the Holy Spirit is primarily that people have a clearer understanding of God's word, free of deviations and misconceptions, so that they may walk in it. In order to achieve this effect, you will need to work in harmony with God, find a correct path to put into practice, and walk the path led by the Holy Spirit. This concerns cooperation on man's part, that is, what you do to achieve God's requirements of you, and how you behave to enter onto the right track.

It sounds quite complicated to walk the path led by the Holy Spirit, but you'll find this process much simpler if the path of practice is crystal clear to you. The truth is that people are capable of achieving all that God demands of them. He does not push people beyond what they are capable of. In all situations, God seeks to resolve people's problems and settle their concerns. All of you must understand this; don't misunderstand God. The path of the Holy Spirit is using God's word to guide people. As mentioned before, you must give your heart to God. This is a prerequisite for walking the path led by the Holy Spirit. You must do this in order to enter onto the right track. How does one give their heart to God with intention? When you experience God and pray to Him in your daily life, you do it carelessly—you pray to God while you work. Can this be called giving your heart to God? You're thinking about household matters or affairs of the flesh; you are always of two minds. Can this be considered quieting your heart in the presence of God? This is because your heart is always fixated on external affairs, and is not able to turn to God. If you desire to truly make your heart at peace before God, you must deliberately do the work of cooperation. That is to say, every one of you must take time away from every person, matter, and object for your personal spiritual devotionals, where you will be able to bring peace to your heart and quiet yourself before God. You should have your own individual devotional notes where you can record your knowledge of God's word and how your spirit has been moved, regardless of whether what you write down is profound or superficial. Quiet your heart before God with intention. If you can dedicate one or two hours to a true spiritual life during the day, then your life that day will feel enriched and your heart will be bright and clear. If you live this kind of spiritual life on a daily basis, then you will be able to give your heart to God more and more, your spirit will become stronger and stronger, you will become more capable of walking the path led by the Holy Spirit, and God will bestow more and more blessings upon you. The purpose of your spiritual life is to deliberately seek and gain the presence of the Holy Spirit. It is not to observe rules or conduct religious rituals, but to truly act in concert with God and discipline your body. This is what man should do, so you must give it your all in order to do this. The better your cooperation and the more effort you put forth, the more you will be able to turn your heart toward God, and the more you will quiet your heart before Him. Once you've reached a certain state, God will gain your heart completely. No one will be able to sway or capture your heart, and you will belong completely to God. If you walk this path, God's word will reveal itself to you at all times and enlighten you on everything you don't understand—this can all be achieved because of your cooperation. This is why God always says, "All who act in concert with Me, I will reward twice over." You must see this path clearly. If you wish to walk the right path, then you must do all that you can to satisfy God. You must do all that you can to attain a spiritual life. At the start, you may not be able to achieve much in this regard, but you must not allow yourself to regress or wallow in negativity—you must keep on working hard! The more you live a spiritual life, the more your heart will be occupied by the words of God, always concerned with these matters and always bearing this burden. After that, you can reveal your innermost truth to God through your spiritual life, tell Him what you want to do, what you've been thinking about, your understanding of and your own way of seeing God's word. Don't hold back anything, not even a little bit! Practice speaking the words within your heart to God, tell Him the truth, and don't hesitate to speak what's in your heart. The more you do this, the more you will feel God's loveliness, and your heart will be pulled more and more toward God. When this happens, you will feel that God is dearer to you than anyone else. You will never leave God's side, no matter what. If you practice this kind of spiritual devotion on a daily basis and do not put it out of your mind, but treat it as your calling in life, then God's word will occupy your heart. This is what it means to be touched by the Holy Spirit. It will be as if your heart has always been possessed by God, as if there has always been love in your heart. No one can take that away from you. When this happens, God will truly live inside you and have a place within your heart.

PROMISES TO THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN PERFECTED

What is the path through which God perfects man? Which aspects are included? Are you willing to be perfected by God? Are you willing to accept the judgment and chastisement of God? What do you know of these questions? If you cannot speak of such knowledge, then this shows that you still know not of God's work and have not been enlightened at all by the Holy Spirit. Such kind of man cannot be perfected. They can only receive a small amount of grace to enjoy briefly and it cannot be maintained in the long term. If one merely enjoys God's grace, he cannot be perfected by God. Some may be satisfied with the peace and enjoyment of the flesh, a life of ease without adversity or misfortune, living in peace with their family without fights or quarrels. They may even believe this to be the blessing of God, but in truth, it is merely the grace of God. You cannot be satisfied merely with enjoying the grace of God. This kind of thinking is too vulgar. Even if you read the word of God daily, pray every day, and your spirit feels particular enjoyment and peace, yet in the end you cannot speak of any knowledge of God and His work or have no experience with such, and no matter how much of God's word you have eaten and drunk, if you merely feel peace and enjoyment in your spirit and that the word of God is sweet beyond compare, as if you cannot enjoy it enough, but you have no real experience with and no reality of the word of God, then what can you receive from such manner of faith in God? If you cannot live out the essence of God's word, your eating and drinking and prayers are entirely concerned with religion. Then such kind of man cannot be perfected and cannot be gained by God. All those gained by God are those who pursue the truth. What God gains is not man's flesh nor his possessions, but the part within him that belongs to God. That is why I say that God perfects not the flesh of man but his heart, so that the heart of man may be gained by God. In other words, the essence of saying that God perfects man is that God perfects the heart of man so that it may turn to God and love Him.

The flesh of man is mortal. It serves no purpose for God to gain the flesh of man, for it is that which inevitably decays. It cannot receive the inheritance of God or His blessings. If God only gains the flesh of man and keeps man's flesh in this stream, man would be in this stream in name, but man's heart would belong to Satan. Then not only would man be unable to become the expression of God, he would instead become His burden. Thus God's choosing men would become meaningless. Those who will be perfected by God are those who will receive God's blessings and His inheritance. That is, they take in what God has and is, so that it becomes what they have within; they have all the words of God wrought into them; whatever the being of God, you are able to take it all in exactly as is, thereby living out the truth. This is the kind of man perfected by God and gained by God. Only such kind of man is eligible to inherit these blessings bestowed by God:

1. Receiving the whole of God's love.
2. Acting in accordance with the will of God in all things.
3. Receiving the guidance of God, living under the light of God, and being enlightened by God.
4. Living out the image loved by God on earth; loving God truly as Peter did, crucified for God and worthy to die in recompense for God's love; having the same glory as Peter.
5. Being beloved, respected, and admired by all on earth.
6. Overcoming all the bondage of death and Hades, giving no opportunity for Satan's work, being possessed by God, living within a fresh and lively spirit, and having no feeling of weariness.
7. Having an unspeakable sense of elation and excitement at all times throughout life, as if he has seen the coming of the day of God's glory.
8. Receiving glory with God, and having a countenance similar to God's beloved saints.
9. Becoming that which God loves on earth, that is, the beloved son of God.

10. Changing form and ascending with God to the third heaven, transcending the flesh.

Only those able to inherit the blessings of God are those perfected by God and gained by God. Have you gained anything? To what extent has God perfected you? God does not perfect man at random. There are conditions and apparent results that can be seen by man. It is not as man believes, that as long as he has faith in God, he can be perfected and gained by God, and can receive on earth the blessings and inheritance of God. Such matters are exceedingly difficult, and much more so when it comes to the changing of form. At present, that which you should primarily seek is to be perfected by God in all things, and to be perfected by God through all people, matters, and things that you are faced with, so that more of what God is will be incorporated into you. You must first receive the inheritance of God on earth before you are eligible to inherit more and greater blessings from God. All such things are that which you should seek and which you should first understand. The more you seek to be perfected by God in all things, the more you will be able to see the hand of God in all things, thereby actively seeking to enter into the being of God's word and the reality of His word through different perspectives and in different matters. You cannot be content with such negative states as merely not committing sins, or having no conceptions, no philosophy of life, and no human will. God perfects man in various ways, and it is possible in all matters for you to be perfected as a result. Not only can you be perfected in terms of the positive, but also of the negative, thereby enriching you. Every day there are opportunities to be perfected and time to be gained by God. After a period of such experience, you will be greatly changed. You will now naturally be able to gain insight into many things that you previously did not understand; without needing others to teach you, unknowingly, you will be enlightened by God, so that you have enlightenment in all things and all your experiences go into detail. God will guide you so that you veer not to either side. Then you will be set upon the path to perfection by Him.

Being perfected by God cannot be confined to perfection by eating and drinking God's word. This manner of experience is too one-sided and does not encompass enough; it only restricts man to a very small scope. In this case, man lacks much needed spiritual nourishment. If you wish to be perfected by God, you must learn to experience all things and be enlightened in all that you face. Whenever you are faced with something, be it good or bad, you should benefit from it and it should not cause you to become passive. No matter what, you should be able to consider it by standing on the side of God, and not analyze or study it from the perspective of man (this is a deviation in your experience). If this is the manner of your experience, then your heart will be taken over by the burdens for your life; you will live constantly in the light of God's countenance and will not easily deviate in your practice. Such kind of man has great prospects. There are so many opportunities to be perfected by God. It all rests on whether you are ones who truly love God and whether you have the resolution to be perfected by God, be gained by God, and receive His blessings and inheritance. It will not do for you to only have resolution. You must have much knowledge, otherwise you will always deviate in your practice. God is willing to perfect each and every one of you. As it stands now, though most have already accepted the work of God for much time, they have limited themselves to merely basking in the grace of God and are only willing to receive some comfort of the flesh from Him. They are unwilling to receive more and higher revelations, showing that the heart of man is still always on the outside. Though the work of man, his service, and his heart of love for God have fewer impurities, as far as the essence of man within and his unenlightened thinking are concerned, man still constantly seeks the peace and enjoyment of the flesh, and cares not what the conditions for and purposes of God perfecting man are. So the lives of most are still vulgar and decadent, without the slightest bit of change. They simply do not regard faith in God as a matter of importance. Rather, it is as if they just have faith for the sake of another, acting without earnestness or dedication, and getting by with the bare minimum, adrift in a purposeless existence. Few are those who seek to enter into the word of God in all things, gaining more enriching things, becoming ones of greater wealth in the house of God this day, and receiving more of God's blessings. If you seek to be perfected by God in all things and are able to inherit the promises of God on earth; if you seek to be enlightened by God in all things and do not let the years slip idly by, this is the ideal path to actively enter in. Only in this way are you worthy and eligible to be perfected by God. Are you truly one who seeks to be perfected by God? Are you truly one who is earnest in all things? Do you have the same spirit of love for God as Peter? Do you have the will to love God as Jesus did? You have had faith in Jesus for many years; have you seen how it is that Jesus loved God? Is it truly

Jesus that you believe in? You believe in the practical God of this day; have you seen how the practical God in the flesh loves the God in heaven? You have faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; that is because the crucifixion of Jesus to redeem mankind and the miracles He performed are generally accepted truths. However, the faith of man comes not from knowledge and true understanding of Jesus Christ. You believe only in the name of Jesus but have no faith in His Spirit, for you show no regard for how Jesus loved God. Your faith in God is too juvenile. Though you have had faith in Jesus for many years, you know not how to love God. Does this not make you the world's greatest fool? This shows that for years you have eaten the food of the Lord Jesus Christ in vain. Not only do I dislike such kind of man, I trust that so too does the Lord Jesus Christ, whom you worship. How can such kind of man be perfected? Are you not red-faced? Do you not feel ashamed? Do you still have the gall to face your Lord Jesus Christ? Do you all understand the meaning of My words?

THE WICKED MUST BE PUNISHED

Inspecting whether you practice righteousness in all that you do, and whether all of your actions are observed by God, are the behavioral principles of those who believe in God. You will be called righteous because you are able to satisfy God, and because you accept God's care and protection. In God's eyes, all those who accept God's care, protection, and perfection and who are gained by Him, are righteous and looked upon with cherishment by God. The more you accept the words of God in the here and now, the more you are able to receive and understand God's will, and thus the more you can live out God's words and satisfy His requirements. This is God's commission for you, and what you ought to achieve. If you use conceptions to measure and delineate God, as if God were an unchanging clay statue, and if you delimit God within the Bible, and contain Him within a limited scope of work, then this proves that you have condemned God. Because, in their hearts, the Jews of the age of the Old Testament cast God in the mold of idol, as if God could only be called the Messiah, and only He who was called the Messiah was God, and because they served and worshiped God as if He were a (lifeless) clay statue, they nailed the Jesus of that time to the cross, sentencing Him to death—condemning innocent Jesus to death. God had committed no crime, yet man did not spare God, and unwaveringly sentenced Him to death. Thus, Jesus was crucified. Man always believes that God is unchanging, and defines Him according to the Bible, as though man has seen through to God's management, as though all that God does is in the hands of man. People are ridiculous to the extreme, they are possessed of the utmost arrogance, and they all have a flair for turgid eloquence. Regardless of how great your knowledge of God, still I say that you do not know God, that there are none who are more opposed to God, and that you condemn God, for you are utterly incapable of obeying the work of God and walking the path of being made perfect by God. Why is God never satisfied with the actions of man? Because man does not know God, because he has so many conceptions, and because, instead of complying with reality, all of his knowledge of God is cut from the same cloth, and rigid and inflexible. Thus, having come to earth today, God has once more been nailed to the cross by man. Cruel, brutal mankind! The conniving and intrigue, the jostling with each other, the scramble for reputation and fortune, the mutual slaughter—when will it ever end? God has spoken hundreds of thousands of words, yet no one has come to their senses. They act for the sake of their families, and sons and daughters, for their careers, prospects, status, vanity, and money, for the sake of clothes, for food and the flesh—whose actions are truly for the sake of God? Even among those whose actions are for the sake of God, there are but few who know God. How many do not act for the sake of their own interests? How many do not oppress and discriminate against others for the sake of maintaining their own status? Thus, God has been forcibly condemned to death innumerable times, countless barbaric judges have condemned God and once more nailed Him to the cross. How many can be called righteous because they truly act for the sake of God?

Before God, is it that easy to be made perfect into a holy one, or a righteous person? It is a truism that “there are no righteous upon this earth, the righteous are not in this world.” When you come before God, consider what you're wearing, consider your every word and action, all of your thoughts and ideas, and even the dreams that you dream every day—they are all for your own sake. Is this not the true state of affairs? “Righteousness” does not mean giving alms, it does not mean loving your neighbor as yourself, and it does not mean not fighting, arguing, robbing, or stealing. Righteousness means taking God's commission as your duty and obeying God's orchestrations and arrangements as a heaven-sent vocation, regardless of the time or place, just like all that was done by the Lord Jesus. This is the very righteousness spoken of by God. That Lot could be called a righteous man is because he saved the two angels sent by God without care for what he gained or lost; what he did at that time can be called righteous, but he cannot be called a righteous man. It was only because Lot had seen God that he gave his two daughters in exchange for the angels. But not all of his behavior in the past represents righteousness, and thus I say that "there are no righteous upon this earth." Even among those who are in the stream of recovery, no one can be called righteous. No matter how good your actions, no matter how you appear to glorify the name of God, not hitting and cursing others, or robbing and stealing from them, still you cannot be called righteous, for such things can be possessed by any normal person. Today, what's key is that you do not know God. It can only be said that today you have a little normal humanity, yet you are bereft of the righteousness spoken of by God, and thus nothing that you do is proof of your knowledge of God.

Before, when God was in heaven, man tried to fool God in his actions; today, God has come among man—for how long no one knows—yet still man goes through the motions for God, and tries to fool God. Is man not extremely backward in his thinking? It was the same with Judas: Before Jesus came, Judas would tell lies to his brothers and sisters, and after Jesus came still he did not change; he had not the slightest knowledge of Jesus, and in the end he betrayed Jesus. Was it not because he did not know God? If, today, you still do not know God, then you will become Judas, and the tragedy of Jesus' crucifixion during the Age of Grace, thousands of years ago, will be played out again. Do you not believe this? It is a fact! Today, most people exist in such circumstances—I may be saying this a little early—and such people play the role of Judas. I am not speaking blithely, but according to fact—and you must believe. Although many people pretend to be humble, in their hearts is nothing but stagnant, stinking water. Now, too many in the church are like this. You think I do not know anything; today, My Spirit guides Me, and bears testimony to Me. Do you think I know nothing? Do you think I understand nothing of the devious thoughts within your hearts and the things kept within your hearts? Is God so easily deceived? Do you think you can treat Him however you wish? In the past, I worried that you were ensnaked, and so kept on giving you free rein, but no one realized that I was being good to them. I gave them an inch and they took a mile. Ask each other: I've dealt with almost no one, and have not been quick to reprimand anyone—yet I am very clear about the motivations and conceptions of man. Do you think the God Himself to whom God bears testimony is a fool? If so, then I say you are too blind. I won't censure you, and let's see how depraved you become. Let's see whether your tricks can save you, or whether trying your best to love God can save you. Today, I will not condemn you; let's wait until the time of God to see how He takes retribution upon you. I have no time for idle chit chat with you now, and am unwilling to delay My greater work for your sake, a maggot such as you is not fit for God to take up His time in dealing with you—so let's see how much you can indulge yourself. Such people do not pursue the slightest knowledge of God, and they do not have any love for God, yet still they wish to be called righteous by God—is this not a joke? Because there is actually a small number of people who are honest, I concern Myself with providing nothing but life to man. I will only complete that which should be done today, and later, retribution shall be brought upon each according to their behavior. I have said what I am supposed to say, for this is the work that I do. I do that which I should do, and do not do that which I should not, yet still I hope that you spend more time in reflection: Exactly how much of your knowledge of God is true? Are you one of those who have once more nailed God to the cross? Finally, I say this: Woe to those who crucify God.

HOW TO ENTER INTO A NORMAL STATE

The more receptive people are of God's words, the more enlightened they become and the more they hunger and thirst to pursue knowledge of God. Only those who receive God's words are able to have deeper and richer experiences; they are the only ones whose lives blossom more and more. Everyone who pursues life must treat this as if it were their job, and should have the feeling that they can't live without God, that there is no single success without God, and all is emptiness without God. They should have the resolution of doing nothing without the presence of the Holy Spirit, and being unwilling to do anything further if their actions do not bear fruit. They should not act to indulge themselves. Life experiences come through God's enlightenment and guidance, and they are also the fruition of your subjective efforts. You should have the requirement of not making excuses for yourself in your life experience.

Sometimes your conditions aren't normal—you lose God's presence and you can't feel Him when you pray; it's normal to feel afraid at such times. You should immediately reach out in seeking or God will become farther from you, and you will not have the Holy Spirit with you for a day or two, or even a month or two, and you'll be even more without His work. When you encounter this type of situation you become numb to a certain extent; you are once again taken captive by Satan, and will even be capable of doing anything—love and longing for money, deceiving brothers and sisters, watching movies and videos, playing mahjong, even smoking and drinking without being subjected to any discipline. Your heart moves away from God, you secretly try to become independent, and you make your own judgments on His work at will. In some cases it's so serious that people sin with the opposite sex with no feeling of shame or embarrassment. Such people are abandoned by the Holy Spirit and in fact, have been without the work of the Holy Spirit for a long time. All you can see in them is that they become increasingly corrupt, they outstretch their evil hands farther and farther, and in the end they deny the existence of this way—they become Satan's captive through their sins. If you discover that you have the presence of the Holy Spirit but not His work, you are already in a very dangerous state. When you cannot feel the presence of the Holy Spirit, you are on the brink of death. If you still fail to repent, you will be returned to Satan completely and be one of those who are eliminated. So when you realize that you are in a state where you just have the presence of the Holy Spirit (not committing sins, engaging in debauchery, or obviously resisting God), but you lack the work of the Holy Spirit (you are not moved when you pray, you gain no clear enlightenment and illumination when you eat and drink God's words, you are lazy about eating and drinking God's words, always lacking growth in life, having no significant illumination for a long time), at these times you must be more careful. You can no longer indulge yourself or be obstinate. The presence of the Holy Spirit may disappear at any time, so these situations are perilous times. If you encounter this kind of state, you must quickly make rectifications. Firstly, you should pray to repent, beg God for mercy, pray more earnestly; what's more, you must quiet your heart for eating and drinking God's words more, and upon this basis, you must pray more. Strengthen your efforts in singing hymns, praying, eating and drinking God's words, and doing your duty. When you are at your weakest, your heart is most easily occupied by Satan; if so, your heart will be taken away from in front of God and will be returned to Satan; thereafter, you won't have the presence of the Holy Spirit, and it will become extremely difficult for you to recover the work of the Holy Spirit. It is better to seek the work of the Holy Spirit while you still have His presence, ask God to enlighten you more, and not allow Him to depart from you. You should pray, sing hymns, perform your function, and eat and drink God's words so that Satan does not have the opportunity to do its work. By doing so, you will gain the work of the Holy Spirit. If you do not recover this way but just wait, when you lose the presence of the Holy Spirit it will become difficult to recover, unless the Holy Spirit especially moves, illuminates, and enlightens you; even so, your state will not be recoverable within the span of one to two days, or even half a year. This is all because people slack off and are not able to properly go on in experience; therefore, they are abandoned by the Holy Spirit. Even if you have recovered, you won't be very clear on the present work of God because you are so behind in your life experience, as if it plummeted. Isn't this a life-threatening thing? But I tell such people: It isn't too late for you to repent now, but there is one condition, which is that you must work harder and can't be lazy. If other people pray five times daily, you should pray ten times; if other people eat and drink God's words for two hours daily, you should spend four to six hours; if other people listen to hymns for two hours, you must at least spend half a day. Frequently quiet yourself before God, and think about God's love; not until you are moved, your heart has turned to Him, and you no longer dare to depart from Him will there be fruit. Only through these practices can you recover a normal state as in the past.

Some people seek with zest, but cannot enter the right track. This is because they are too careless and do not pay attention to spiritual matters at all. They do not know how to experience God's words at all, they don't know what the presence of the Holy Spirit or the work of the Holy Spirit is. These people are enthusiastic but confused; they are not pursuing life. For they do not know the Spirit in the slightest, or know the dynamics of the work of the Holy Spirit, and they are not familiar with their own spiritual state. Isn't this a kind of confused faith? Such people will not gain anything even if they seek until the very end. The crux of man's belief in God and having growth in life lies in understanding what work God performs through your experience, seeing how lovable God is, and understanding His will so that you can submit to all of God's arrangements, have His words wrought into you to become your life, and satisfy God. If you only have a confused kind of faith, you don't pay attention to spiritual matters or matters concerning changes in life disposition, and you don't put in efforts toward the truth, will you be able to grasp His will? If you don't understand God's requirements, you won't be able to have experience, and you won't find a path for practice. The focus in experiencing God's words is to emphasize the effect that God's words achieve in you, and to know God through that. If you only read God's words but don't know how to experience them, doesn't it show that you do not have spiritual understanding? Since most people cannot experience God's words now, they don't know His work; isn't this a shortcoming in practice? If that continues, when can rich experience and growth in life be achieved? Wouldn't it be empty talk? There are many among you who pay attention to doctrines; you have no understanding of spiritual things, but still want God to use you for something great and be blessed by Him. This isn't realistic at all! Therefore, you should make up for this lack so that you may all enter the right track in your spiritual life, have true experience, and truly enter the reality of God's words.

HOW TO SERVE IN HARMONY WITH GOD'S WILL

Today, we will primarily be communing how people should serve God in their belief in God, what conditions should be fulfilled and what should be understood by those who serve God, and what deviations there are in your service. You should understand all of this. These issues touch upon how you believe in God, how you walk onto the path of guidance by the Holy Spirit, and how your all is arranged by God, and they will allow you to know every step of God's work in you. When you reach that point, you will appreciate what faith in God is, how to properly believe in God, and what you should do to act in harmony with God's will. This will make you completely and utterly obedient to God's work, and you will have no complaints, you will not judge, or analyze, much less research. Furthermore, you will all be capable of obedience to God unto death, allowing God to steer you and slaughter you like a sheep, so that you can all become the Peters of the 1990s, and can love God to the utmost even upon the cross, without the slightest complaint. Only then will you be able to live as Peters of the 1990s.

Everyone who has resolved to can serve God—but it must be that only those who give every care to God's will and understand God's will are qualified and entitled to serve God. In your experiences, it can be seen that many people believe that serving God means fervently spreading the gospel for God, going on the road for God, spending and sacrificing for God, and so on; even more religious people believe that serving God means running around with a Bible in their hands, spreading the gospel of the kingdom of heaven and saving people by making them repent and confess; there are many religious officials who think that serving God is preaching in chapels after studying at the seminary, teaching people by reading chapters of the Bible; many fellow brothers and sisters believe that serving God means never getting married or raising a family, and dedicating their entire being to God; there are also people in impoverished regions who believe that serving God means healing and casting out demons, or praying for the brothers and sisters, or serving them; amongst you, there are many who believe that serving God means eating and drinking the words of God, and praying to God every day, and visiting churches everywhere; so, too, are there people who say that living the life of the church is serving God. Yet few people know what it actually means to serve God. Although there are as many who serve God as stars in the sky, the number of those who can serve directly, and who are able to serve God's will, is paltry—piffingly small. Why do I say this? I say this because you do not understand the substance of the phrase “service to God,” and you understand so little of how to serve God's will. Today, we are mainly communing how to serve in accordance with God's will, how to serve in order to satisfy God's will.

If you wish to serve God's will, you must first understand what kind of people are beloved by God, what kind of people are loathed by God, what kind of people are made perfect by God, and what kind of people are qualified to serve God. This is the very least that you ought to be equipped with. Moreover, you should know the aims of God's work, and the work that God shall do in the here and now. After understanding this, and through the guidance of God's words, you will first enter, and first receive God's commission. When you actually experience based upon God's words, and when you truly know God's work, you will be qualified to serve God. And it is when you serve Him that God enlightens your spiritual eyes, and allows you to have a greater understanding of His work and see it more clearly. When you enter this reality, your experiences will be more profound and real, and all those of you who have had such experiences will be able to walk among the churches and provide to your brothers and sisters, each side drawing on the strengths of the other to make up for your own deficiencies, and gaining a richer knowledge in your spirits. Only after achieving this effect will you be able to serve God's will and be made perfect by God in the course of your service.

Those who serve God should be God's intimates, they should be beloved by God, and capable of the utmost loyalty to God. Regardless of whether you act behind people, or in front of them, you are able to gain the joy of God before God, you are able to stand firm before God, and regardless of how other people treat you, you always walk your own path, and give every care to God's burden. Only this is an intimate of God. That God's intimates are able to serve Him directly is because they have been given God's great commission, and God's burden, they are able to take God's heart as their own, and God's burden as their own, and they give no consideration to whether they gain or lose prospect: Even when they have no prospects, and they will gain nothing, they will always believe in God with a loving heart. And so, this kind of person is God's intimate. God's intimates are also His confidants; only God's confidants could share His restlessness, and His wants, and although their flesh is painful and weak, they are able to endure pain and forsake that which they love to satisfy God. God gives more burdens to such people, and that which God shall do is expressed through these people. Thus, these people are beloved by God, they are servants of God who are after His own heart, and only people such as this can rule together with God. When you have truly become God's intimate is precisely when you will rule together with God.

Jesus was able to complete God's commission—the work of all mankind's redemption—because He gave every care to God's will, without His personal plans and considerations. So, too, was He the intimate of God—God Himself, something which you all understand very well. (Actually, He was the God Himself who was testified to by God; I mention this here to use the fact of Jesus to illustrate the issue.) He was able to place God's management plan at the very center, and always prayed to the heavenly Father and sought the will of the heavenly Father. He prayed, and said: "God the Father! Accomplish that which is of Your will, and act not according to My intentions; would that You act according to Your plan. Man may be weak, but why should You care for him? How could man be the subject of Your concern, man who is like an ant in Your hand? In My heart, I wish only to accomplish Your will, and I would that You can do what You would do in Me according to Your own intentions." On the road to Jerusalem, Jesus felt in agony, as if a knife were being twisted in His heart, yet He had not the slightest intention of going back on His word; always there was a powerful force compelling Him onward to where He would be crucified. Ultimately, He was nailed to the cross and became the likeness of sinful flesh, completing that work of the redemption of mankind, and rising above the shackles of death and Hades. Before Him, mortality, hell, and Hades lost their power, and were vanquished by Him. He lived for thirty-three years, throughout which He always did His utmost to fulfill God's will according to God's work at the time, never considering His own personal gain or loss, and always thinking of the will of God the Father. Thus, after He was baptized, God said: "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Because of His service before God that was in harmony with God's will, God placed the heavy burden of redeeming all mankind upon His shoulders and made Him go forth to accomplish it, and He was qualified and entitled to complete this important task. Throughout His life, He endured immeasurable suffering for God, and He was tempted by Satan countless times, but He was never disheartened. God gave Him such a task because He trusted Him, and loved Him, and thus God personally said: "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." At that time, only Jesus could accomplish this commission, and this was one part of God's completion of His work of redeeming all mankind in the Age of Grace.

If, like Jesus, you are able to give every care to God's burden, and turn your back on your flesh, God will entrust His important tasks to you, so that you will meet the conditions of serving God. Only under such circumstances will you dare to say that you are carrying out God's will and completing His commission, only then will you dare say you are truly serving God. Compared to Jesus' example, do you dare say you are God's intimate? Do you dare say that you are carrying out God's will? Do you dare say that you are truly serving God? If, today, you do not understand such service to God, do you dare say you are God's intimate? If you say that you serve God, do you not blaspheme against Him? Think about it: Are you serving God, or yourself? You serve Satan, yet you stubbornly say you are serving God—in this do you not blaspheme against God? Many people behind Me covet the blessing of status, they gorge themselves on food, they love to sleep and give every care to the flesh, always afraid that there is no way out of the flesh. They do not perform their normal function in the church, and eat for free, or else admonish their brothers and sisters with My words, they stand up high and lord it over others. These people keep saying they are carrying out God's will, they always say they are God's intimates—is this not absurd? If you have the right motivations, but are unable to serve God's will, then you're being foolish; but if your motivations aren't right, and you still say you serve God, then you are someone who opposes God, and you ought to be punished by God! I have no sympathy for such people! In the house of God they eat for free, and always covet the comforts of the flesh, and give no consideration to the interests of God; they always seek what's good for them, they pay no heed to God's will, all that they do is not looked upon by God's Spirit, they're always maneuvering and plotting against their brothers and sisters, and being two-faced, like a fox in a vineyard, always stealing grapes and trampling over the vineyard. Could such people be God's intimates? Are you fit to receive God's blessings? You take no responsibility for your life and the church, are you fit to receive God's commission? Who would dare trust someone like you? When you serve like this, could God dare to entrust you with a greater task? Are you not delaying things?

I say this so that you might know what conditions must be fulfilled in order to serve in harmony with God's will. If you do not give your heart to God, if you do not give every care to God's will like Jesus, then you cannot be trusted by God, and will end up being judged by God. Perhaps today, in your service to God, you always harbor the intention of deceiving God—but God will still take note of you. In short, regardless of all else, if you cheat God heartless judgment will come upon you. You should take advantage of having just entered onto the right track of serving God to first give your heart to God, without divided loyalties. Regardless of whether you are before God, or before other people, your heart should always face God, and you should be resolved to love God like Jesus. In this way, God will make you perfect, so that you become a servant of God who is after His heart. If you truly wish to be made perfect by God, and for your service to be in harmony with His will, then you should change your previous views about faith in God, and change the way you used to serve God, so that more of you is made perfect by God; in this way, God will not abandon you, and, like Peter, you will be at the vanguard of those who love God. If you remain unrepentant, then you will meet the same end as Judas. This should be understood by all those who believe in God.

HOW TO KNOW REALITY

God is the God of reality: All of His work is real, all of the words He speaks are real, and all of the truths He expresses are real. Everything that is not His words is vacuous, non-existent, and unsound. Today, the Holy Spirit is to guide people into the words of God. If people are to pursue entry into reality, then they must seek reality, and know reality, after which they must experience reality, and live out reality. The more that people know reality, the more they are able to tell whether the words of others are real; the more people know reality, the less conceptions they have; the more people experience reality, the more they know the deeds of the God of reality, and the easier it is for them to leave their corrupt, satanic dispositions behind; the more reality people have, the more they know God, and the more they detest the flesh and love the truth; and the more reality people have, the closer they come to the standards of God's requirements. People who are gained by God are those who are possessed of reality, and who know reality; those who are gained by God have come to know God's real deeds through experiencing reality. The more actually you cooperate with God and discipline your body, the more you will acquire the work of the Holy Spirit, the more you will gain reality, and the more you will be enlightened by God—and thus the greater your knowledge of God's real deeds. If you are able to live in the present light of the Holy Spirit, the present path to practice will become clearer to you, and you will be more able to separate yourself from the religious conceptions and old practices of the past. Today reality is the focus: The more reality people have, the clearer their knowledge of the truth, and the greater their understanding of God's will. Reality can overcome all letters and doctrines, it can overcome all theory and expertise, and the more reality people focus on, the more they truly love God, and hunger and thirst for His words. If you always focus on reality, your life philosophy, religious conceptions, and natural character will naturally be expunged following the work of God. Those who do not pursue reality, and have no knowledge of reality, are likely to pursue that which is supernatural, and they will be easily tricked. The Holy Spirit has no means of working in such people, and so they feel vacant, and that their lives have no meaning.

The Holy Spirit can only work in you when you actually train, actually search, actually pray, and are willing to suffer for the sake of searching the truth. Those who do not seek the truth have nothing but letters and doctrines, and empty theory, and those who are without the truth naturally have many conceptions about God. People such as this long only for God to turn their fleshly body into a spiritual body so that they might return to the third heaven. How foolish these people are! All who say such things have no knowledge of God, or of reality; people such as this cannot possibly cooperate with God, and can only wait passively. If people are to understand the truth, and to clearly see the truth, and if, furthermore, they are to enter the truth, and put it into practice, they must actually train, actually search, and actually hunger and thirst. When you hunger and thirst, and when you actually cooperate with God, God's Spirit will surely touch you and work within you, which will bring you more enlightenment, and give you more knowledge of reality, and be of greater help to your life.

If people are to know God, they must first know that God is the real God, and must know God's words, God's real appearance in the flesh, and God's real work. Only after knowing that all of God's work is real will you be able to actually cooperate with God, and only through this path will you be able to achieve the growth of your life. All those who have no knowledge of reality have no means of experiencing God's words, they are ensnared in their conceptions, they live in their imagination, and thus they have no knowledge of God's words. The greater your knowledge of reality, the closer you are to God, and the more intimate you are with Him; the more you seek vagueness and abstraction, and doctrine, the further you will stray from God, and so the more you will feel that experiencing God's words is strenuous and difficult, and that you are incapable of entry. If you wish to enter the reality of God's words, and onto the right track of your spiritual life, you must first know reality and separate yourself from vague and supernatural things—which is to say, first you must understand how the Holy Spirit actually enlightens and guides you from within. In this way, if you can truly grasp the Holy Spirit's real work within you, you will have entered onto the right track of being made perfect by God.

Today, everything starts from reality. God's work is the most real, and can be touched by people; it is what people can experience, and achieve. In people there is much that is vague and supernatural, which stops them from knowing God's present work. Thus, in their experiences they always deviate, and always feel difficult, which is all caused by their conceptions. People are unable to grasp the principles of the Holy Spirit's work, they do not know reality, and so they are always negative in their path to entry. They look at God's requirements from afar, unable to achieve them; they merely see that God's words really are good, but cannot find the path to entry. The Holy Spirit works by this principle: Through people's cooperation, through them actively praying, searching and coming closer to God, results can be achieved and they can be enlightened and illuminated by the Holy Spirit. It is not the case that the Holy Spirit acts unilaterally, or that man acts unilaterally. Both are indispensable, and the more that people cooperate, and the more they pursue the attainment of the standards of God's requirements, the greater the work of the Holy Spirit. Only people's real cooperation, added to the work of the Holy Spirit, can produce real experiences and the substantive knowledge of God's words. Gradually, through experiencing in this way, a perfect person is ultimately produced. God does not do supernatural things; in people's conceptions, God is almighty, and everything is done by God—with the result that people wait passively, do not read the words of God or pray, and merely await the touch of the Holy Spirit. Those with a correct understanding, however, believe this: God's actions can only go as far as my cooperation, and the effect that God's work has in me depends on how I cooperate. When God speaks, I should do all I can to seek and strive toward God's words; this is what I should achieve.

In Peter and Paul you can clearly see that it was Peter who paid the most attention to reality. From what Peter went through, it can be seen that his experiences drew upon the lessons of those who had failed in the past, and that he absorbed the strengths of the saints of the past—and from this it can be seen just how real Peter's experiences were, that they were enough to allow people to touch, and to be capable of, and that they were achievable by people. Paul, though, was different: All that he spoke of was vague and invisible, things like going to the third heaven, the ascension to the throne, and the crown of righteousness. He focused on that which was external: on status, and reprimanding people, on showing off his seniority, being touched by the Holy Spirit, and so on. Nothing he pursued was real, and much of it was fantasy, and thus it can be seen that all that is supernatural, such as how much the Holy Spirit touches people, the great joy that people enjoy, going to the third heaven, or regular training and enjoying it to a certain extent, reading God's words and enjoying them to a certain extent—none of this is real. All of the Holy Spirit's work is normal, and real. When you read God's words and pray, inside you are bright and steadfast, the external world cannot interfere with you, inside you are willing to love God, are willing to engage with positive things, and you detest the evil world; this is living within God, and is not, as people say, enjoying so much—such talk is not real. Today, everything begins from reality. Everything God does is real, and in your experiences you should pay attention to really knowing God, and to searching for the footprints of God's work and the means by which the Holy Spirit touches and enlightens people. If you eat and drink the words of God, and pray, and cooperate in a way that is more real, assimilating what was good from times gone by, and rejecting what was bad like Peter, if you listen with your ears and observe with your eyes, and often pray and ponder in your heart, and do all you can to cooperate with God's work, then God will surely guide you.

REGARDING A NORMAL SPIRITUAL LIFE

A believer must have a normal spiritual life—this is the foundation for experiencing God's words and entering into reality. Currently, can all of the prayers, the getting close to God, the singing, praising, meditation, and the trying to figure out God's words that you practice meet the standards of a normal spiritual life? None of you are very clear on this. A normal spiritual life is not limited to prayer, song, church life, eating and drinking the words of God, and other such practices, but it means to live a spiritual life that is fresh and lively. It's not about the method, but the result. Most people think that in order to have a normal spiritual life one must pray, sing, eat and drink the words of God, or try to figure out the words of God. No matter whether there is any result, or whether there is a true understanding, these people just focus on going through the motions on the outside, and do not focus on the result—they are people living within the rituals of religion, and are not people living within the church, and even less are they people of the kingdom. This kind of person's prayers, songs, and eating and drinking of the words of God are all abiding by the rules, they are compelled to do them, and they are done in keeping with trends; they are not done willingly or done from the heart. No matter how much these people pray or sing, there will be no result at all, because all they practice are religious rules and rituals, and they are not practicing the word of God. By only focusing on the method, and taking the words of God as rules to keep, this kind of person is not practicing the word of God, but is satisfying the flesh, and is doing things to show off to others. This kind of religious ritual and rule comes from man, not from God. God does not keep rules, does not abide by any laws; He does new things every day and He does practical work. Like the people in the Three-Self Church who are limited to daily morning watch, evening prayers, giving thanks before meals, expressing thanks in everything, and other such practices, no matter how much these people do, or how long they practice, they will not have the work of the Holy Spirit. If people live within rules, with their hearts poured into practice, then the Holy Spirit has no way to work, because people's hearts are taken up with rules, are taken up with human conceptions; therefore God has no way to do work; people will just always be living under control of the law, and this type of person will never be able to receive the praise of God.

A normal spiritual life is to live a life before God. When praying one can quiet one's heart before God, and through prayer one can seek for enlightenment by the Holy Spirit, know God's words, and can understand the will of God. When eating and drinking the words of God one can be clearer and more lucid on what God wants to do right now, and one can have a new path of practice and not be conservative, so that all one's practice is for the purpose of achieving progress in life. For example, one's prayer is not for the purpose of saying some nice words, or to bawl before God to express one's debt, but rather it is to practice exercising one's spirit, to quiet one's heart before God, to practice searching for guidance in all things, to make one's heart a heart that is drawn toward new light every day, to neither be passive nor lazy, and to enter onto the right track of practicing God's words. Currently most people are focused on methods, and are not trying to pursue truth to achieve progress in life; this is where people deviate. There are also some people who, even though they are able to receive new light, their methods are unchanging; they integrate religious notions of the past to receive the word of God today, and what they take in is still the doctrine which carries religious notions with it, and they are not taking in purely the light of today. Therefore, their practices are impure—they are doing the same thing with a new name, and no matter how good their practice, it is still hypocritical. God guides people to do new things daily, and requires people to have new insights and new understanding every day, and not to be old-fashioned or monotonous. If you have believed in God for many years, but your methods have not changed at all, if you are still ardent and busy on the outside, and do not come before God to enjoy His words with a quiet heart, then you will not be able to obtain anything. When receiving God's new work, if you do not form a new plan, if you do not practice in a new way, if you do not seek new understanding, but instead hold onto old things from the past and receive only a limited amount of new light without changing the way you practice, then although this type of person is nominally within this stream, in reality they are a religious Pharisee outside the stream of the Holy Spirit.

If you want to live a normal spiritual life, you need to receive new light daily, seek true understanding of God's words, and achieve a lucidity toward the truth. You need to have a path to practice in everything, and by reading God's words every day you can find new questions and discover your own shortcomings. This will in turn bring forth a heart that thirsts and searches, that will set your whole being in motion, and you will be able to be quiet before God at any time, and have a deep fear of falling behind. If a person can have this thirsting heart, this searching heart, and is also willing to enter in continuously, then they are on the right track for a spiritual life. All those who can accept being moved by the Holy Spirit, who desire to make progress, who are willing to seek being perfected by God, those who long for a deeper understanding of the words of God, and who do not seek the supernatural but who pay a practical price, show practical consideration to God's will, enter in practically, make their experience more true and more realistic, who do not seek the empty words of doctrine, and who also do not seek a feeling of the supernatural, nor worship any great man—this kind of person has entered into a normal spiritual life, and everything they do is for the purpose of achieving more progress in life, to keep their spirit fresh and not stagnant, and to always be able to enter in positively. For example, when they pray before meals, they are not compelled to do so, but instead they quiet their heart before God, thank God in their heart, are willing to live for God, to put their time in the hands of God, and are willing to cooperate with God and expend for God. If their heart cannot be quiet before God, they would rather not eat but carry on practicing; then this is not abiding by rules, but is practicing the word of God. Some people, when praying before eating, consciously do some posturing to put on an act, which may seem very pious, but their mind wonders: "Why do I need to practice this way? Aren't things just fine without praying? Things are still the same after praying, so why bother?" This kind of person is abiding by rules, and although their words are saying that they are willing to satisfy God, their heart has not come before God. They do not pray like this in order to practice quieting their heart before God, but rather they do it to fool other people and for other people to see. This kind of person is a purely hypocritical person, like a religious pastor who can only intercede for others but cannot himself enter in; this kind of person is a religious official, through and through! Every day God says new things, does new things, but you are abiding by rules every day, trying to fool God, dealing with God perfunctorily, so aren't you someone who is defying God? Can you receive blessings while abiding by rules and defying God? Won't you be chastised by God?

The work of God is rapidly developing, casting the religionists of various factions and the celebrities who observe the church service far, far away, and also scattering to the four winds those experts among you who especially love to abide by rules. God's work does not wait, it does not rely on anything and it does not drag its heels. It does not pull or drag anyone along; if you can't keep up then you will be abandoned, no matter how many years you have followed. No matter how qualified a veteran you are, if you abide by rules then you must be eliminated. I advise this type of person to have some self-knowledge, to voluntarily take a back seat, and not to hold onto what is old; making others practice the word of God according to your principles of action—isn't this trying to win over the hearts of people? Your practice is abiding by rules, and teaching people to observe church service. You always make people do things according to your wishes, so isn't this forming cliques? Isn't this splitting the church? Then how do you have the nerve to say that you are considerate of God's will? What qualifies you to say that this is to perfect others? If you continue to lead this way, isn't this leading people into religious rituals? If a person has a normal spiritual life, if they obtain release and freedom in their spirit every day, then they can practice the words of God freely to satisfy Him and, even when they are praying, they are not just going through formalities or following a process, and they are able to keep up with new light every day. When they practice quieting their heart before God, they can make their heart truly quiet before God, and nobody can disturb them, and no person, event, or thing can restrain their normal spiritual life. This kind of practice is for the purpose of achieving a result, not just to give people some rules to abide by. This kind of practice is not abiding by rules, but to advance people's progress in life. If you are only a keeper of rules, then your life will never change; though others may practice in this way, as you do, in the end, others can keep up with the pace of the Holy Spirit's work, while you will be eliminated from the stream of the Holy Spirit. So are you not fooling yourself? The purpose of these words is to allow people to quiet their hearts before God and turn to God, to allow God's work to be carried out on people unimpeded, and for it to achieve results.

DISCUSSING CHURCH LIFE AND REAL LIFE

People feel that they are only able to transform within their church life, and that if they are not living within the church, transformation is not possible, that they are unable to achieve transformation in their real life. Can you recognize what this issue is? I have talked about bringing God into real life, and this is the path for those who believe in God to enter into the reality of God's words. In fact, the life of the church is only a limited way to perfect men. The primary environment for perfecting men is still real life. This is the actual practice and actual training that I talked about, which allows men to achieve a life of normal humanity and to live out the likeness of a true person during daily life. One aspect is that one must become educated in order to elevate his own educational level, be able to understand God's words, and achieve the capability to understand. Another aspect is that one must be equipped with the basic knowledge required to live as a human being in order to achieve the insight and reason of normal humanity, because men are almost entirely lacking in these areas. Furthermore, one must also come to savor God's words through church life, and gradually come to have a clear understanding of the truth.

Why is it said that in believing in God, one must bring God into real life? Not only can the life of the church transform man, but more importantly, man should enter into reality in real life. You used to always talk about your spiritual state and spiritual matters while neglecting training in many things, as well as neglecting your entry into them. You wrote every day, you listened every day, and you read every day. You prayed while you were cooking: "Oh God! May You become my life within me. How should I pass this day? Please bless me, enlighten me. Whatever You enlighten me on today, please allow me to understand it in this moment, so that Your words may act as my life." You also prayed while you were eating dinner: "Oh God! You have bestowed this meal upon us. May You bless us. Amen! Please allow us to rely on You for our lives. May You be with us. Amen!" After you finished your dinner and were washing the dishes, you started rambling again: "Oh God, I am this bowl. After this bowl has been used it has become like us, corrupted by Satan, and now it must be washed with water, and You are the water, Your words are the living water that provides for my life." After having said that, when it was time for bed, you started rambling again: "Oh God! You have blessed me and guided me through the day. I am truly grateful to You...." This was how you passed your day and entered into your slumber. Most people lived like this every day, and even until now, they have not paid attention to actual entry, but only focus on paying lip service in their prayers. This is man's previous life—this is their old life. Most people are like this, lacking any actual training, and they have very few real transformations. They only pay lip service in their prayers, approaching God through their words but lacking transformations in understanding. Let us take the simplest example—tidying your home. You see that your home is messy, so you sit there and pray: "Oh God! Look at the corruption that Satan has wrought on this home. Oh God! I praise and thank You. I am just as dirty as this home, and without Your salvation and enlightenment, I would not have realized this fact.” You only sit there and ramble on, praying for a long time, and then you act as if nothing has happened, behaving like a rambling old woman. You pass your spiritual life this way without any true entry into reality at all, with too many superficial practices! In the training of entry into reality, it involves people’s real lives and it involves their practical difficulties—only this can transform them. Without real life, men cannot be transformed, and what then is the use of paying lip service in their prayers? Without understanding the nature of men, everything is a waste of time, and without a path for practice, everything is a waste of effort! Proper prayers can maintain a proper state within people, but it cannot thoroughly transform them. Knowing human self-righteousness, arrogance, conceit, hubris, and corrupt disposition—knowledge of these things does not come through prayers, but they are discovered through savoring God’s words, and they are known through enlightenment by the Holy Spirit in real life. People nowadays are all able to speak well, and they have listened to the loftiest preaching, loftier than any others through the ages, yet very little of it is actually implemented in their real life. That is to say, in people’s real life there is no God, and they are lacking the life of a new man after transformation. There is no living out the truth in real life, and there is no bringing God into real life. People’s lives are lived as if they are the sons of hell. Is this not an obvious deviation?

In order to restore the likeness of a normal person, that is, to achieve having normal humanity, people cannot merely please God with their words. They are harming themselves by doing so, and it brings no benefit to their entry and transformation. Therefore, to attain transformation, people must practice little by little, enter slowly, seek and explore bit by bit, enter in from the positive, and live a practical life of truth, a life of the saints. From now on, it involves real matters, real things, and real environments, allowing people to have practical training. It does not require them to pay any lip service; instead, it requires training in real environments. People come to realize that they are of poor caliber, and then they have the proper eating and drinking of God’s words, proper entry, and proper practice; this is how they obtain reality, and this is how entry may occur even more rapidly. To transform people, there must be some practicality, they must practice with real matters, real things, and real environments. By merely relying on church life, is it possible to achieve true training? Could man enter into reality? No. If man is unable to enter into real life, then he is unable to transform his old ways of doing things and living life. It is not entirely due to the laziness of man or his strong dependency, but rather it is because man simply does not have the capacity for living, and moreover, he has no understanding of the standard of the likeness of a normal man that God requires. In the past, people were always talking, speaking, having fellowship, and they even became “orators”; yet none of them were seeking transformations in life disposition; they only insisted on seeking profound theories. Therefore, today you must change this religious life of believing in God. You must enter in and practice by targeting one thing, one matter, one person. You must do things with focus—only then can you attain results. To transform people, it must begin with their substance. The work must be targeted on people’s substance, their life, on the laziness, dependency, and slavishness of people, and only in this way can they be transformed.

Even though the life of the church can produce results in some areas, the key is still that real life can transform people, and their old nature cannot be transformed without real life. Let us take the work of Jesus during the Age of Grace. When Jesus abolished the previous laws and established the commandments of the new age, He spoke through examples of real life. When Jesus led His disciples through the wheat field on a Sunday, when the disciples got hungry and they plucked and ate ears of grain, the unbelievers saw this and said that they did not observe the Sabbath. They also said that people were not allowed to save the calves that had fallen into a pit on the Sabbath, saying that no work might be performed during the Sabbath. Jesus used these incidents to gradually promulgate the commandments of the new age. At the time, He used many practical matters to have people understand and transform. This is the principle by which the Holy Spirit performs His work, and it is only this way that can transform people. When lacking practical matters, people can only gain understanding in theory and they are only able to understand things intellectually—this is not an effective way to transform people. Speaking of acquiring wisdom and insight through training, how could this be achieved? Could man acquire wisdom and insight simply from listening, reading, and advancing his knowledge? How does this lead to the acquisition of wisdom and insight? Man must strive to understand and experience through real life. Therefore, training cannot be lacking and one cannot depart from real life. Man must pay attention to different aspects and have entry in various aspects: educational level, expressiveness, the ability to see things, discernment, the ability to understand God's words, common sense and rules of humanity, and other things relating to humanity that man must be equipped with. After understanding has been attained, man must focus on entry, and only then can transformation be attained. If man has attained understanding yet neglected practice, how can transformation occur? Now, man has understood much, but he does not live out reality, thus he is able to have only a little substantive understanding of God's words. You have only been marginally enlightened; you have received a little illumination from the Holy Spirit, yet you have no entry in real life, or you might not even care about entry, thus you will only have little transformation. After such a long time, people have understood a lot and they are able to talk a lot about their knowledge of theories, but their external disposition remains the same, and their original caliber lingers without the slightest elevation. If this is the case, when will you finally enter in?

Church life is only a kind of life where men gather to savor God's words, and it takes up only a small sliver of a person's life. If a person's real life could also be like his church life, including a proper spiritual life, properly savoring God's words, praying and being close to God properly, living a real life where everything is carried out in accordance with God's will, living a real life where everything is carried out in accordance with the truth, living a real life of practicing prayers and being quiet before God, of practicing the singing of hymns and dancing, only such a life would bring man into a life of God's words. Most people only focus on the several hours of their church life without "tending to" their life outside those hours, as if it is of no concern to them. There are also many people who only enter into the life of the saints when eating and drinking God's words, singing hymns or praying, and then they revert to their old selves outside those times. Such lives cannot transform people, and they will not allow them to know God. In believing in God, if man desires transformation in his own disposition, then he must not detach himself from real life. In real life, you must know yourself, forsake yourself, practice the truth, as well as learn the principles, common sense and rules of self-conduct in all things before you are able to achieve gradual transformation. If you only focus on the knowledge in theories and only live among religious ceremonies without going deep into reality, without entering into real life, then you will never enter into reality, you will never know yourself, the truth, or

God, and you will always be blind and ignorant. The purpose of God's working man is not to allow him to have a proper human life only several hours out of the entire day while living in the flesh the rest of the time. And it is not to transform man's knowledge of theories. Rather, it is to change his old disposition, to change all of his old life, to change all of his outdated thinking and his mental outlook. Focusing only on church life will not change man's old life habits or change the old ways he has lived for a long time. No matter what, man must not become detached from real life. God asks that people live out normal humanity in real life, not just in church life; that they live out the truth in real life, not just in church life; that they fulfill their functions in real life, not just in church life. To enter into reality, one must turn everything toward real life. If believers in God cannot enter into real life and know themselves or live out normal humanity in real life, they will become failures. Those who disobey God are all people who cannot enter into real life. They are all people who speak of humanity but live out the nature of demons. They are all people who speak of the truth but live out doctrines instead. Those who cannot live out the truth in real life are those who believe in God but are detested and rejected by Him. You have to practice your entry in real life, know your own deficiencies, disobedience and ignorance, and know your abnormal humanity and weaknesses. That way, all your knowledge will be integrated into your actual situation and difficulties. Only this kind of knowledge is real and can allow you to truly grasp your own condition and achieve your dispositional transformation.

Now that the perfecting of mankind has formally begun, one must enter into real life. Therefore, to achieve transformation, one must start from entry into real life, and transform little by little. If you avoid man's normal life and only talk about spiritual matters, then things become dry and flat, they become unrealistic, and how could man transform? Now you are told to enter into real life to practice, in order to establish a foundation for entering into true experience. This is one of the things that man should do. The work of the Holy Spirit is mainly guidance, while the rest depends on people's practice and entry. Everyone may attain entry into real life through various paths, such that they can bring God into real life, and live out a real normal humanity. Only this is a life with meaning!

ON EVERYONE PERFORMING THEIR FUNCTION

In the current stream, every person that truly loves God has the opportunity to be perfected by Him. Regardless of whether they are young or old, so long as they keep in their hearts an obedience to God and reverence for Him, they will be able to be perfected by Him. God perfects people according to their different functions. So long as you have done all in your strength and submit yourself to the work of God you will be able to be perfected by Him. At present none of you are perfect. Sometimes you are able to perform one type of function and sometimes you are able to perform two; so long as you give all your strength to God and expend yourselves for Him, ultimately you will be perfected by God.

Young people have fewer philosophies of life, and they lack wisdom and insight. God is here to perfect man's wisdom and insight, and the word of God makes up for these things that they lack. However, the dispositions of young people are unstable and this requires transformation by God. Young people have fewer religious notions and fewer philosophies of life. They think in simple terms, and their considerations are not complex. This is the aspect where their humanity has not taken shape. It is a desirable aspect, but young people are ignorant and lack wisdom. This is an aspect which needs to be perfected by God, so that you may develop discernment and be able to clearly understand many spiritual things, and gradually turn into someone who is fit for God to use. Older brothers and sisters are also able to perform some functions and they are not abandoned by God. With older brothers and sisters they too have some desirable aspects and some undesirable aspects. The older brothers and sisters have more philosophies of life, they have more religious notions, their actions are stuck in a rigid framework, they follow rules like automatons, and they apply them mechanically. They are not flexible, but rather very rigid. This is not a desirable aspect. However, older brothers and sisters are calm and collected toward whatever comes up; their dispositions are stable. They do not have tempestuous moods, but they are always persistent. They just accept things slowly, but this is not a major defect. So long as you are able to submit yourselves and accept the actual words of God, if you do not hesitate to submit yourselves and follow along, if by all means you do not pass judgment or have other bad thoughts, if you accept His words and put them into practice, and if you do not scrutinize God's words and you submit yourselves—if you meet these conditions—you will be able to be perfected.

Regardless of whether you are a younger or an older brother or sister, you know the function you ought to perform. Those in their youth are not arrogant; those who are older are not passive and do not regress. And they are able to use each other's strengths to make up for their weak points, and they are able to serve one another without any prejudice. A friendship bridge is built between younger and older brothers and sisters. Because of God's love you are able to better understand one another. Younger brothers and sisters do not look down on older brothers and sisters, and the older brothers and sisters are not self-righteous. Is this not a harmonious partnership? If you all have this resolve, then the will of God will certainly be accomplished in your generation.

In the future, whether you are blessed or cursed will be decided based on the actions you perform today. If you are to be perfected by God it will be right now in this era; there will not be another opportunity in the future. Right now, God truly wants to perfect you, and this is not a manner of speaking. In the future, regardless of what trials befall you, what events take place, or what disasters befall you, God wants to perfect you—this is a definite and undoubted fact. From where can this be seen? From the fact that the word of God through the ages and generations has never attained such a great height as it has today—it has entered the highest realm, and the work of the Holy Spirit among all men today is unprecedented. Hardly anyone from generations past has tasted this. Even in the age of Jesus there were not the revelations of today; great heights have been reached in the words spoken to you, the things you understand, and the things you experience. You do not depart in the midst of trials and chastisements, and this is sufficient to prove that the work of God has reached unprecedented splendor. This is not something that man is able to do and it is not something that man maintains, but rather it is the work of God Himself. So, from many of the facts of the work of God it can be seen that God wants to perfect man, and He is certainly able to make you complete. If you are able to catch sight of this, if you are able to have this new discovery, then you will not wait for the second coming of Jesus but instead, you will allow God to make you complete in the present age. Thus, you should each do your utmost and spare no effort so that you may be perfected by God.

Nowadays you must not pay attention to the negative things. You must first put aside and disregard each and every thing that can make you feel negative. When you are handling affairs you must maintain a heart of seeking and groping, and you must maintain a heart of obedience to God. Whenever you discover any weakness within yourselves, but you are not subject to its control and you perform the function that you ought to, this is a positive move forward. For example: Older brothers and sisters have religious notions, but you are able to pray, and you are able to submit yourselves, eat and drink the word of God, and sing hymns.... In a word, whatever you are able to do, whatever function you are able to perform, make full use of it with all the strength you can muster. Do not wait passively. Being able to perform your duty to the satisfaction of God is the first step. Then when you are able to understand the truth and enter into the reality of the word of God, you will have been perfected by God.

CONCERNING GOD'S USE OF MAN

No one is capable of living independently except for those who are given special direction and guidance by the Holy Spirit, for they require the ministry and shepherding of those who are used by God. Thus, in each age God raises up different people who rush and busy about shepherding the churches for the sake of His work. Which is to say, God's work must be done through those whom He looks favorably upon and approves of; the Holy Spirit must use the part within them that is worthy of use in order to work, and they are made fit for use by God through being made perfect by the Holy Spirit. Because man's ability to understand is too lacking, he must be shepherded by those who are used by God; it was the same with God's use of Moses, in whom He found much that was suitable for use at the time, and which He used to do God's work during that stage. In this stage, God uses a man whilst also taking advantage of the part of him that can be used by the Holy Spirit in order to work, and the Holy Spirit both directs him and simultaneously makes perfect the remaining, unusable part.

The work carried out by the one who is used by God is in order to cooperate with the work of Christ or the Holy Spirit. This man is raised up by God among man, he is there to lead all of God's chosen ones, and he is also raised up by God in order to do the work of human cooperation. With someone such as this, who is able to do the work of human cooperation, more of God's requirements toward man and the work that the Holy Spirit must do among man can be achieved through him. Another way of putting it is like this: God's aim in using this man is so that all those who follow God can better understand God's will, and can attain more of God's requirements. Because people are incapable of directly understanding God's words or God's will, God has raised someone up who is used to carry out such work. This person who is used by God can also be described as a medium by which God guides people, as the "translator" who communicates between God and people. Thus, such a man is unlike any of those who work in God's household or who are His apostles. Like them, he can be said to be someone who serves God, yet in the substance of his work and the background of his use by God he differs greatly from the other workers and apostles. In terms of the substance of his work and the background of his use, the man who is used by God is raised up by Him, he is prepared by God for God's work, and he cooperates in the work of God Himself. No person could ever stand in for his work, it is human cooperation that is integral to the divine work. The work carried out by other workers or apostles, meanwhile, is but the conveyance and implementation of the many aspects of the arrangements for the churches during each period, or else the work of some simple provision of life in order to maintain the church life. These workers and apostles are not appointed by God, much less can they be called those who are used by the Holy Spirit. They are selected from among the churches and, after they have been trained and cultivated for a period of time, those who are fit are kept on, while those who are unfit are sent back to where they came from. Because these people are selected from among the churches, some show their true colors after becoming leaders, and some even do many bad things and end up being eliminated. He who is used by God, on the other hand, is someone who has been prepared by God, and who possesses a certain caliber, and has humanity. He has been prepared and made perfect in advance by the Holy Spirit, and is completely led by the Holy Spirit, and, particularly when it comes to his work, he is directed and commanded by the Holy Spirit—as a result of which there is no deviation on the path of leading God's chosen ones, for God surely takes responsibility for His own work, and God does His own work at all times.

PRACTICE THE TRUTH ONCE YOU UNDERSTAND IT

God's work and word are meant to bring about a change in your disposition; His goal isn't merely to make you understand or recognize it and have that be the end of it. As one with the ability to receive, you should have no difficulty in understanding the word of God, as most of God's word is written in human language that is only too easy to understand. For instance, you can know what God wants you to understand and practice; this is something that a normal person who has the faculty of understanding should be able to do. What God says now is especially clear and transparent, and God points out many things that people have not considered and the various conditions of man. His words are all-embracing, as clear as the light of a full moon. So now, people understand many issues; what they lack is putting His word into practice. People must experience all aspects of truth in detail, and explore and seek it out in greater detail, not simply wait to take in what's readily given to them; otherwise they become little more than freeloaders. They know God's word, but don't put it into practice. This kind of person doesn't have a love of the truth, and will ultimately be eliminated. Having a style like a Peter of the 90s means that each one of you should practice the word of God, have true entry in your experiences and gain even more and even greater enlightenment in your cooperation with God, bringing even more assistance to your life. If you've read a lot of God's word but only understand the meaning of the text and you do not have first-hand knowledge of God's word through your practical experiences, you won't know God's word. As far as you are concerned, God's word is not life, but just lifeless letters. And if you only hold fast to lifeless letters, you cannot grasp the essence of God's word, nor will you understand His will. Only when you experience His word in your actual experiences will the spiritual meaning of God's word open itself up to you, and it is only in experience that you can grasp the spiritual meaning of many truths, and only through experience that you can unlock the mysteries of God's word. If you do not put it into practice, then no matter how clear His word, the only thing you've grasped hold of is empty letters and doctrines, which have become religious regulations to you. Isn't this what the Pharisees did? If you practice and experience God's word, it becomes practical to you; if you do not seek to practice it, then God's word to you is little more than the legend of the third heaven. In fact, the process of believing in God is the process of you experiencing His word as well as being gained by Him, or to put it more clearly, to believe in God is to have the knowledge and understanding of His word and to experience and live out His word; that is the reality of your belief in God. If you believe in God and hope for eternal life without seeking to practice the word of God as something you have within you, then you're foolish; it's like going to a feast only to take note of what's there to eat without actually trying it. Isn't a person like that foolish?

The truth that man needs to possess is found in the word of God, a truth that is the most beneficial and helpful to mankind. It is the tonic and sustenance that your body needs, something that helps man restore his normal humanity, a truth that man should be equipped with. The more you practice God's word, the more quickly your life will blossom; the more you practice God's word, the clearer the truth becomes. As you grow in stature, you will see things of the spiritual world more clearly, and you will be more powerful to triumph over Satan. Much of the truth that you don't understand will be made clear when you practice the word of God. Most people are satisfied to merely understand the text of God's word and focus on equipping themselves with doctrines without experiencing its depth in practice; isn't that the way of the Pharisees? How can the phrase "The word of God is life" be true for them, then? Only when man practices the word of God can his life truly blossom; it cannot grow simply by reading His word. If it is your belief that to understand God's word is all that is needed to have life, to have stature, then your understanding is warped. Truly understanding God's word occurs when you practice the truth, and you must understand that "only by practicing the truth can it ever be understood." Today, after reading the word of God, you can merely say that you know God's word, but you can't say that you understand it. Some say that the only way to practice the truth is to understand it first, but this is only half right and not entirely accurate. Before you have knowledge of a truth, you have not experienced that truth. Feeling that you understand what you hear is not the same thing as truly understanding. To equip yourself with the truth as it is seen in text isn't the same as understanding the true meaning therein. Just because you have a skin-deep knowledge of the truth doesn't mean you actually understand it or recognize it; the true meaning of the truth comes from having experienced it. Therefore, only when you experience the truth can you understand it, and only when you experience the truth can you grasp the hidden parts of it. To experience it in depth is the only way to grasp the connotations of the truth, to understand the essence of it. Therefore, you can go everywhere with the truth, but if there is no truth in you, don't think of trying to convince your family, much less religious people. You will be like fluttering snow without the truth, but with the truth, you can be happy and free, where none can attack you. No matter how strong a theory is, it cannot overcome the truth. With the truth, the world itself can be swayed and mountains and seas moved, whereas a lack of the truth leads to ruin by maggots; this is simply fact.

What's important now is to first know the truth, then put it into practice, and to equip yourself further with the true meaning of the truth. That should be what you aim for, not merely to have others follow your words but to have them follow your actions, and only in this can you find something meaningful. No matter what befalls you, no matter what person you come across, you can only stand firm with the truth. The word of God is that which brings life to man, not death. If after reading the word of God you do not come alive, but you are still dead, then there is something wrong with you. If after some time you've read much of God's word and have heard many practical sermons, but you are still in a condition of death, this is proof that you are not one who values the truth, nor are you a person who seeks the truth out. If you truly sought to gain God, you wouldn't focus on equipping yourself with high doctrines and using them to teach others, but would instead focus on experiencing God's word and putting the truth into practice; isn't that what you should currently enter into?

There is a limited time for God to do His work in man, so what outcome can there be if you do not cooperate with Him? Why is it that God always wants you to practice His word once you understand it? It's because God has revealed His words to you, and your next step is to actually practice them, and God will carry out the work of enlightenment and guidance as you practice these words. That is how it is. The word of God is meant to allow man to blossom in life without causing deviations or negativity. You say you've read God's word and practiced it, but you still haven't received any work of the Holy Spirit—what you say could only deceive a child. Man doesn't know if your intentions are right, but you think God won't know? How is it that others practice the word of God and receive the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit, yet you practice His word and don't receive the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit? Is God emotional? If your intentions are truly right and you're cooperative, then God's Spirit will be with you. Why is it that some people always want to take center stage, and yet God does not let them rise up and lead the church? Why is it that some people merely fulfill their function and without realizing it, they gain God's approval? How can that be? God examines the innermost heart of man, and people who seek the truth must do so with right intentions—people who do not have right intentions cannot stand. At its core, your goal is to let God's word take effect within you. In other words, it is to have a true understanding of God's word in your practice of it. Perhaps your ability to receive God's word is poor, but when you practice the word of God, He can supplement the flaw of your poor ability to receive, so not only must you know many truths, but you must also practice them. This is the greatest focus that cannot be ignored. Jesus also suffered much in His thirty-three and a half years because He practiced the truth. Why is it always said in the records that He was persecuted? It is to explain He suffered much. It was because He practiced the truth and carried out the will of God that He suffered a lot. Suffering He would not have undergone had He known the truth without practicing it. If Jesus had followed the teachings of the Jews, followed the Pharisees, then He would not have suffered. You can learn from Jesus' practice that the effectiveness of God's work on man comes from his cooperation, and this is something you must recognize. Would Jesus have suffered as He did on the cross if He had not practiced the truth? Could He have prayed such a sorrowful prayer if He had not acted in accordance with God's will? This means then that this is the kind of suffering a person should endure.

A PERSON WHO ATTAINS SALVATION IS ONE WHO IS WILLING TO PRACTICE THE TRUTH

Very early on, the necessity of having a proper church life was mentioned in the sermons. So why is it that the life of the church has not yet improved, and is still just the same old thing? Why is there not a completely new and different way of life? Could it be proper for a person of the nineties to live like an emperor of a bygone era? Although the food and drink may be delicacies rarely tasted in previous ages, there have been no major turnarounds in conditions in the church. It has been like putting old wine in a new bottle. What then is the use of God saying so much? The churches in most places have not changed at all. I have seen it with My eyes and it is clear in My heart; even though I have not experienced the life of the church for Myself, I know the conditions of church gatherings like the back of My hand. They have not made much progress. It goes back to that saying—it's like putting old wine in a new bottle. Nothing has changed, not in the least bit! When someone is shepherding them they burn like fire, but when no one is there to support them, they are like a block of ice. Not many can talk of practical things, and very rarely can anyone take the helm. Although the sermons are lofty, seldom has anyone had any entry. Few people cherish the word of God. They become tearful when they take up God's word and become cheerful when they set it aside; they turn gloomy and morose when they depart from it. Speaking frankly, you simply do not cherish the word of God, and you never see the words from His own mouth today as a treasure. You just become anxious when reading His word, and feel it is very strenuous when memorizing it, and when it comes to putting His word into practice, it is like facing a Sisyphean task—you are unmotivated. You are always energized when reading God's word, yet forgetful when practicing it. In fact, these words need not be spoken so painstakingly and repeated so patiently; people just listen but do not put them into practice, therefore it has become an obstacle for God's work. I cannot not bring it up, I cannot not talk about it. I am compelled to do so; it is not that I enjoy exposing the weaknesses of others. You think that your practice is just about adequate and you think that when revelations are at a peak, that you have also entered into that peak? Is it so simple? You never examine the foundation upon which your experiences are ultimately built. As of this moment, your gatherings absolutely cannot be called a proper life of the church, nor is it a proper spiritual life at all. It is the gathering of a bunch of people who enjoy chatting and singing. Strictly speaking, there is not much reality in it. Saying it a little more clearly, if you do not practice, where is the reality? Is it not boasting to say that you have reality? Those who always perform work are arrogant and conceited, while those who always obey keep quiet and keep their heads down, without any opportunity for exercise. People who do the work do nothing but talk, going on and on with their high-sounding speeches, and the followers only listen. There is no transformation to speak of; these are just ways of the past! Today, your being able to submit and not daring to interfere or behave willfully is due to the arrival of the administrative decrees of God; it is not change you have undergone through experiences. The fact that there are many things you would not do today that you would have done yesterday is because God's work is so apparent that it has conquered people. Let Me ask someone, how much of your accomplishment today was earned with the sweat of your own hard work? How much of it was told to you directly by God? How would you answer? Would you be dumbfounded and speechless? Would you stick out your tongue? Why is it that others are able to speak out about many of their experiences to provide you with sustenance, while you simply enjoy the meals that others have cooked? Do you not feel ashamed? Aren't you embarrassed?

You may carry out a fact-finding examination, examining those at higher levels who are somewhat better: How much truth do you understand? How much do you ultimately put into practice? Whom do you love more, God or yourself? Do you give more often, or receive more often? On how many occasions when your intent was wrong have you forsaken your old self and satisfied the will of God? Just these few questions will baffle many people. For most people, even if they realize that their intent is wrong, they still knowingly do wrong, and they are nowhere near forsaking their own flesh. Most people allow sin to run rampant within them, allowing sinfulness to direct their every action. They are unable to conquer their sins, and continue to live in sin. Having arrived at this current stage, who does not know how many evil deeds he has done? If you say you don't know, then I would say that you are lying. To speak frankly, it is all an unwillingness to forsake your old self. What is the use of saying so many repentant "words from the heart" that are worthless? Would this help you grow in your life? To know yourself is your full-time work. I perfect people through their submission and their practice of God's words. If you only wear God's word as you would wear your clothes, just to look smart and snazzy, are you not deceiving yourself and others? If all you have is talk and you never put it into practice, what will you attain?

Many people can talk a bit about practice and they can talk about their personal impressions, but the majority of it is the illumination gained from the words of others. It does not at all include anything from their own personal practices, nor does it include what they see from their experiences. I have dissected this issue earlier; don't think that I know nothing. You are merely a paper tiger, yet you speak of conquering Satan, of bearing victorious testimonies, and of living out God's image? This is all nonsense! Do you think that all the words spoken by God today are for you to admire? Your mouth speaks of forsaking your old self and putting truth into practice, yet your hands are carrying out other deeds and your heart is plotting other schemes—what kind of a person are you? Why are your heart and your hands not one and the same? So much preaching has become empty words; isn't this heart-breaking? If you are unable to put God's word into practice, it proves that you have not yet entered into the way that the Holy Spirit works, you have not yet had the work of the Holy Spirit in you, and you have not yet had His guidance. If you say that you are only able to understand the word of God but are unable to put it into practice, then you are a person who does not love the truth. God does not come to save this kind of person. Jesus suffered enormous pain when He was crucified in order to save sinners, to save the poor, to save those humble people. His crucifixion brought the sin offering. If you cannot practice God's word, then you should leave as soon as you can; don't laze around in God's house as a freeloader. Many people even find it difficult to stop themselves from doing things that clearly resist God. Are they not asking for death? How can they speak of entering God's kingdom? Would they have the audacity to see His face? Eating food that He provides you with, doing crooked things that oppose God, being malicious, insidious, and scheming, even while God allows you to enjoy the blessings He has bestowed upon you—do you not feel them burning your hands when you receive them? Do you not feel your face turning red? Having done something in opposition to God, having carried out schemes to “go rogue,” do you not feel frightened? If you feel nothing, how can you speak of any future? There was already no future for you long ago, so what greater expectations can you still have? If you say something shameless yet feel no guilt, and your heart has no awareness, then doesn't it mean that you have already been abandoned by God? Speaking and acting indulgently and unrestrainedly has become your nature; how can you ever be perfected by God like this? Would you be able to walk the world over? Who would be convinced by you? Those who know your true nature would keep their distance. Is this not God's punishment? All in all, if there is only talk and no practice, there is no growth. Though the Holy Spirit may be working on you while you speak, if you do not practice, the Holy Spirit shall stop working. If you continue to go on like this, how can there be any talk of the future or giving your entire being to God's work? You only speak of giving your entire being, yet you do not give to God your heart that truly loves Him. All that God has received is the heart of your words, and not the heart of your practice. Could this be your true stature? If you were to continue on like this, when would you be perfected by God? Do you not feel anxious over your dark and gloomy future? Do you not feel that God has lost hope in you? Do you not know that God desires to perfect more and newer people? Could old things hold their own? You are not paying attention to God's words today: Are you waiting for tomorrow?

WHAT AN ADEQUATE SHEPHERD SHOULD BE EQUIPPED WITH

You must have an understanding of the many conditions men will be in when the Holy Spirit performs work on them. In particular, those who coordinate to serve God must have an even better grasp of the many conditions brought about by the work that the Holy Spirit performs on men. If you only talk about many experiences and many ways of entering in, it shows that your experience is too one-sided. Without grasping many situations in reality, you are unable to achieve transformation in your disposition. If you have grasped many conditions, then you will be able to understand various manifestations of the work of the Holy Spirit, and see clearly through and discern much of the work of the evil spirits. You must expose the many notions of men and go straight to the heart of the issue; you must also point out many deviations in people's practice or problems in believing in God so that they may recognize them. At the very least, you must not make them feel negative or passive. However, you must understand the many difficulties that objectively exist for people, you must not be unreasonable or "try to teach a pig to sing"; that is foolish behavior. To resolve the many difficulties of men, you must understand the dynamics of the work of the Holy Spirit, you must understand how the Holy Spirit performs work on different people, you must understand the difficulties of men, the shortcomings of men, see through to the key issues of the problem, and get to the source of the problem, without deviations or errors. Only this kind of person is qualified to coordinate to serve God.

Whether you are able to grasp the key issues and see clearly through many things depends on your individual experiences. The way that you experience affects how you lead others. If you understand letters and doctrines, then you lead others to understand letters and doctrines. The way that you experience the reality of God's words is the way that you lead others to enter into the reality of God's words. If you are able to understand many truths and see clearly through many things in God's words, then you are able to lead others to understand many truths, and those that you lead will have a clear understanding of the visions. If you focus on grasping supernatural feelings, then those that you lead will also focus on supernatural feelings. If you neglect practice and emphasize talking, then those that you lead will also focus on talking, without any practice, without any transformation in their dispositions, and they will only be enthusiastic on the outside, without practicing any truths. Men all supply others with what they have themselves. The type of the person determines the path that he guides others onto, and the type of the person determines the type of people that he leads. To be truly fit for God's use, you not only need to have aspiration, but you also need many enlightenments from God, guidance from God's words, dealing from God, and the refinement of His words. Add to this foundation the observations, thoughts, pondering, conclusions, absorptions or eliminations that you normally pay attention to. These are all paths for your entry into reality and all of them are indispensable—this is the way that God performs work. If you should enter into this method by which God performs work, then you will have the opportunity to be perfected by God every day. And at any time, regardless of whether it is a harsh environment or a favorable environment, whether you are being tested or tempted, whether you are working or not, whether you are living life as an individual or as a collective, you will always find opportunities to be perfected by God, without missing a single one of them. You will be able to discover all of them, and in this way you will have found the secret to experiencing God's words.

ON EXPERIENCE

Throughout Peter's experiences, he had endured hundreds of trials. Though people now are aware of the term "trial," they do not at all understand its true meaning or circumstances. God tempers the determination of man, refines his confidence, and perfects his every part, achieving this mostly through trials. Trials are also the hidden work of the Holy Spirit. It seems that God has forsaken man, and so man will, if not careful, see them as Satan's temptations. In fact, many trials can be considered temptations, and this is the principle and rule of God's work. If man truly lives before God, he will see them as trials by God and not let them slip. If someone says that because God is with him Satan will surely not approach him, this is not entirely correct. How can it be explained that Jesus faced temptations after He had fasted in the wilderness for forty days? So if man has truly put right his views on believing in God, he will see many things much more clearly and will not have skewed and fallacious understanding. If one is truly resolved to be made perfect by God, he needs to approach matters he is faced with from many different angles, neither leaning to the left nor the right. If you do not have knowledge of God's work, you will not know how to cooperate with God. If you do not know the principles of God's work and are unaware of how Satan works on man, you will have no path of practice. A mere zealous pursuit will not allow you to attain the results God demands. Such way of experience is akin to that of Lawrence, not differentiating and only focusing on experience, utterly unaware of what Satan's work is, of what the work of the Holy Spirit is, what man is like without the presence of God, what kind of people God wants to perfect. How to behave toward different people, how to grasp God's present will, how to know God's disposition, at which people, which circumstances, and which age, God's mercy, His majesty and righteousness are directed—he does not differentiate these. If man does not have many visions as his foundation, a foundation for his experiences, then life is out of the question, even less so is experience; he just foolishly keeps submitting to everything, enduring everything. All such people are very difficult to be made perfect. It may be said that having none of the visions touched on above is ample proof you are being a fool, akin to a pillar of salt, always standing in Israel. Such people are useless, they are good-for-nothings! Some people only ever submit blindly, they always know themselves and always use their ways of conducting themselves when dealing with new matters, or use “wisdom” to deal with trivial matters that are unworthy of mention, those are people who are devoid of discernment, as if they by nature were to resign themselves to adversity, always being the same, never changing; this is a fool with no discernment whatsoever. They never suit measures to the circumstances or to different people. Such people do not have experience. I see that some people know themselves to a certain point that when confronted with those who have the work of the evil spirit they even lower their heads and admit guilt, not daring to stand up and condemn them. When faced with the obvious work of the Holy Spirit, they do not dare obey, either, believing that evil spirits are also in the hands of God, and not in the slightest do they dare to rise in resistance. These are people who do not have the dignity of God, and they are definitely unable to bear heavy burdens for God. Such muddled people do not differentiate. This way of experience ought therefore to be abandoned as it is untenable in the eyes of God.

God indeed does a lot of work on people, sometimes trying them, sometimes creating environments to temper them, and sometimes speaking words to guide them and amend their shortcomings. Sometimes the Holy Spirit leads people to environments prepared by God for them to unknowingly discover many things that they lack. Through what people say and do, the way that people treat others and deal with things, without their knowing it, the Holy Spirit enlightens them to understand many things that were not understood before, allowing them to comprehend many things or people more thoroughly, allowing them to see into many things of which they were previously unaware. If you are in contact with the world, you gradually become more discriminating about the things of the world, and as you approach death you might conclude: “It is truly hard to be a person.” If you experience for some time in the presence of God, and come to understand God's work and His disposition, you will unwittingly gain much insight, and your stature will gradually grow. You will understand many spiritual things better, and you will be more clear about God's work in particular. You will be able to accept God's words, God's work, God's every action, God's disposition, and what God is and has as your own life. If all you do is wander in the world, your wings will become harder and harder, and the aspect of you that resists God will become ever greater. It will be hard for God to find a use for you. Because there is too much of that "as I see it" aspect in you, it is hard for God to find a use for you. The more you are in the presence of God, the more experiences you will have. If you are still in the world like a beast, your mouth professing belief in God but your heart somewhere else, and learn worldly philosophies of life, would this not be undoing all the previous work? Therefore, the more that people are in the presence of God the easier they are to be perfected by God. This is the path by which the Holy Spirit does His work. If you do not understand this, it will be impossible for you to enter onto the right track, and being perfected by God will be out of the question. You will not be able to have a normal spiritual life, and you will be as if disabled, with only your own hard work and none of God's work. Would this not be something wrong with your experience? You don't necessarily have to pray to be in the presence of God. Sometimes it is in your contemplating God or pondering His work, sometimes in your dealing with some matter, and sometimes through your being revealed in an event, that you come into God's presence. Most people say, am I not in the presence of God, since I often pray? Many people pray endlessly "in the presence of God." The prayers may be always on their lips, but they do not really live in God's presence. This kind of person can only maintain their condition of being in the presence of God in this way. They cannot contact God with their hearts constantly, or use the method of experience to come into God's presence, be it through pondering, silent contemplation in their hearts, or contacting the God of their hearts with their own hearts by considering God's burden. They offer prayers up to the sky with their mouths. Most people do not have God in their hearts, and they have God only when they get close to God, but most of the time they don't have God at all. Is this not an expression of not having God in one's heart? If they really have God, would they be likely to do things that robbers or beasts do? If a person really reveres God, they will bring their true heart in contact with God, and their thoughts and ideas will always be occupied by God's words. They will be unlikely to make mistakes in the outward things that people are capable of achieving, not doing anything that obviously opposes God. Only this is the standard of being a believer.

THE COMMANDMENTS OF THE NEW AGE

You have been told to equip yourselves with the words of God, that regardless of what is arranged for you, all is orchestrated by God's own hand, and that there is no need for your earnest prayer or supplication—they are useless. Yet in terms of the present situation, the practical problems facing you are unimaginable to you. If you merely await the arrangements of God, your progress will be too slow, and for those who don't know how to experience there will be much passivity. Thus, if you are unable to completely see through to these things, then you are muddled and silly in your experiencing. If you have no reality but only words, is this not a sign of erroneousness? Much erroneousness is visible in you, this group. Today, you're incapable of achieving such trials as "service-doers," or else are incapable of imagining or achieving other refinement related to the words of God. You must adhere to the many things you are required to put into practice. Which is to say, people must adhere to the many duties that they should perform. This is what people should adhere to, and what they must carry out. Let the Holy Spirit do what must be done by the Holy Spirit; man can play no part in it. Man should adhere to what ought to be done by man, which bears no relation to the Holy Spirit. It is nothing but that which ought to be done by man, and should be adhered to as commandment, just like adherence to the law of the Old Testament. Although now is not the Age of Law, there are still many words of a kind with the Age of Law that should be adhered to, and they are not carried out merely by relying on being touched by the Holy Spirit, but are what should be adhered to by man. For example: You shall not pass judgment on the work of the practical God. You shall not oppose the man who is testified to by God. Before God, you shall keep your place and shall not be dissolute. You should be moderate in speech, and your words and actions must follow the arrangements of the man testified to by God. You should revere the testimony of God. You shall not ignore the work of God and the words from His mouth. You shall not imitate the tone and aims of God's utterances. Externally, you shall not do anything that manifestly opposes the man who is testified to by God. This, and more, is what each person should adhere to. In each age, God specifies many rules that are akin to the laws and are to be adhered to by man. Through this, He constrains man's disposition, and detects his sincerity. Take the words "Honor your father and your mother" of the Old Testament age, for example. These words do not apply today; at the time, they merely constrained some of man's external disposition, they were used to demonstrate the sincerity of man's belief in God, and were a mark of those who believed in God. Although now is the Age of Kingdom, there are still many rules that man must adhere to. The rules of the past don't apply; today, there are many, more fitting practices for man to carry out, and which are necessary. They do not involve the work of the Holy Spirit and must be done by man.

In the Age of Grace, many of the practices of the Age of Law were discarded because these laws were not particularly effective for the work at that time. After they were discarded, many practices were set out that were suitable for the age, and which have become the many rules of today. When the God of today came, these rules were dispensed with, and no longer needed to be adhered to, and there were set out many practices suitable for the work of today. Today, these practices are not rules, but in order to achieve an effect; they are suitable for today—and tomorrow, perhaps, they will become rules. In sum, you should adhere to that which is fruitful for the work of today. Pay no heed to tomorrow: What is done today is for the sake of today. Maybe tomorrow there will be better practices which you will be required to carry out—but do not pay too much attention to that, adhere to that which should be adhered to today so as to avoid opposing God. Today, nothing is more crucial for man to adhere to than the following: You must not deceive or conceal anything from the God that stands before your eyes. You shall not utter filthiness or arrogant talk in front of the God before you. You shall not deceive the God before your eyes by good words and fair speeches in order to gain His trust. You shall not act irreverently before God. You shall obey all that is spoken from the mouth of God, and shall not resist, oppose, or dispute His words. You shall not interpret, as you see fit, the words spoken from the mouth of God. You should guard your tongue to avoid it causing you to fall prey to the deceitful schemes of the wicked. You should guard your footsteps to avoid transgressing the boundaries set out for you by God. Doing so will cause you to speak conceited and pompous words from the perspective of God, and thus become loathed by God. You shall not carelessly repeat the words spoken from the mouth of God, lest others mock you and the devils make a fool of you. You shall obey all of the work of the God of today. Even if you do not understand it, you shall not pass judgment on it; all you can do is seek and fellowship. No person shall transgress God's original place. You can do nothing more than serve the God of today from the position of man. You cannot teach the God of today from the position of man—to do so is misguided. No one may stand in the place of the man testified to by God; in your words, actions, and inmost thoughts, you stand in the position of man. This is to be abided by, it is the responsibility of man, it is alterable by no one, and doing so would violate the administrative decrees. It should be remembered by all.

The long time that God has spent speaking and uttering has caused man to consider reading and memorizing the words of God to be his primary task. No one pays attention to practice, and even that which you ought to abide by you do not, so this has brought many difficulties and problems to your service. If, prior to practicing the words of God, you have not adhered to that which you should adhere to, then you are one of those who are detested and rejected by God. In adhering to these practices, you should be earnest and sincere. You should not treat them like shackles, but adhere to them as commandments. Today, you ought not to concern yourself with what effects are to be achieved; in short, this is how the Holy Spirit works, and whoever commits offense must die. The Holy Spirit is without emotion, and heedless of your present understanding. If you offend Him today, then He will punish you. If you offend Him within the scope of His jurisdiction, then He will not spare you. He does not care how serious you are in your adherence to the words of Jesus. Today, if you do wrong you will be treated with the death penalty. How could it be acceptable for you to not adhere? You must adhere—even if it means suffering a little pain! No matter what denomination, sector, nation, or sect it is, in the future they must all adhere to these practices. None are exempt, and none will be spared! For they are what the Holy Spirit will do today, and they are unoffendable to all. Although they are no great thing, they must be done by every person, and are the commandments set for man by Jesus, who was resurrected and ascended to heaven. Does “The Path ...

(7)” not say that Jesus’ definition of whether you are righteous or sinful is according to your attitude toward God today? No one must overlook this point. In the Old Testament, generation after generation of the Pharisees believed in God, but with the arrival of the Age of Grace they did not know Jesus, and opposed Him. So it was that all they did came to nothing, and was in vain, and God did not accept it. If you can see through to this, then you will not easily sin. Many people, perhaps, have measured themselves against God. How does it taste to oppose God, is it bitter or sweet? You should understand this—do not pretend that you don’t know. In their hearts, perhaps, some people remain unconvinced. Yet I advise you to try it and see—see what it tastes like. This will prevent many people from being suspicious about it. Many people read the words of God yet secretly oppose Him in their hearts. After opposing Him like this, do you not feel like a knife has been twisted in your heart? If it is not family disharmony, it is physical discomfort, or the afflictions of sons and daughters. Although your flesh is spared death, the hand of God will never leave you. Do you think it could be that simple? In particular, it is even more necessary for the many who are near to God to focus on this. As time goes on, you will forget it, and, without realizing it, you will be plunged into temptation, you will become heedless of everything, and this will be the start of your sinning. Does this seem trivial to you? If you can do this well, then you have the chance to be made perfect—to receive the guidance from God’s own mouth before God. If you don’t consider this important, then you will be in trouble—you will be defiant of God, your words and actions will be dissolute, and sooner or later you will be carried away by great gales and mighty waves. These things should be noted by every one of you. The man who is testified to by God may not condemn you, but the Spirit of God is not finished with you, He will not spare you. Do you think you have what it takes to commit offense? Thus, no matter what God says, you must put His words into practice, and must adhere to them by any means you can. This is no simple matter!

THE MILLENNIAL KINGDOM HAS ARRIVED

Have you seen what work God will accomplish in this group of people? God said, even in the Millennial Kingdom people must still follow His utterances onward, and in the future God's utterances will yet directly guide man's life in the good land of Canaan. When Moses was in the wild, God instructed and spoke to him directly. From heaven God sent food, water, and manna for the people to enjoy, and today it is still thus: God has personally sent down things to eat and drink for people to enjoy, and He has personally sent curses to chastise people. And so every step of His work is personally carried out by God. Today, people long for the occurrence of facts, they try to see signs and wonders, and it is possible that all such people will be abandoned, for the work of God is becoming increasingly real. No one knows that God has descended from heaven, they are still unaware that God has sent down food and tonics from heaven—yet God actually exists, and the warm scenes of the Millennial Kingdom that people imagine are also the personal utterances of God. This is fact, and only this is ruling with God on earth. Ruling with God on earth refers to the flesh. That which is not of the flesh is not on earth, and thus all those who focus on going to the third heaven do so in vain. One day, when the entire universe returns to God, the center of His work throughout the cosmos will follow the voice of God; elsewhere, some people will phone, some will take a plane, some will take a boat across the sea, and some will use lasers to receive the utterances of God. Everyone will be adoring, and yearning, they will all come close to God, and congregate toward God, and will all worship God—and all of this will be the deeds of God. Remember this! God will never start again elsewhere. God will accomplish this fact: He will make all people throughout the universe come before Him, and worship the God on earth, and His work in other places will cease, and people will be forced to seek the true way. It will be like Joseph: Everyone came to him for food, and bowed down to him, for he had things to eat. In order to avoid famine people will be forced to seek the true way. The entire religious community is suffering severe famine, and only the God of today is the wellspring of living water, possessed of the ever-flowing wellspring provided for the enjoyment of man, and people will come and depend on Him. That will be the time when the deeds of God are revealed, and God is glorified; all people throughout the universe will worship this unremarkable “man.” Will this not be the day of God’s glory? One day, old pastors will send telegrams seeking the water from the wellspring of living water. They’ll be elderly, yet still they will come to worship this man, whom they despised. In their mouths they will acknowledge and in their hearts they will be trusting—and is this not a sign and wonder? When the whole kingdom rejoices is the day of God’s glory, and whoever comes to you and receives God’s good news will be blessed by God, and these countries and these people will be blessed and cared for by God. The future direction will be thus: Those who gain the utterances from God’s mouth will have a path to walk on earth, and be they businessmen or scientists, or educators or industrialists, those who are without God’s words will have a hard time taking even a single step, and will be forced to seek the true way. This is what is meant by, “With the truth you’ll walk the entire world; without the truth, you’ll get nowhere.” The facts are thus: God will use the Way (which means all of His words) to command the whole universe and govern and conquer mankind. People are always hoping for a great turn in the means by which God works. To speak plainly, it is through words that God controls people, and you must do what He says^[a] whether you wish to or not; this is an objective fact, and must be obeyed by all, and so, too, is it inexorable, and known to all.

The Holy Spirit gives people a feeling. After reading the words of God, in their hearts they are steadfast, and at peace, while those who do not obtain God’s words feel empty. Such is the power of God’s words—people have to read them, after reading them they are nourished, and they can’t do without them. It’s like when people take opium: It gives them strength, and without it they feel desperate, and have no strength. Such is the tendency among people today. Reading God’s words gives people strength. If they don’t read them, they feel listless, but after reading them, they immediately rise from their sickbed. This is the meaning of the reign of God (the Word) on earth. Some people want to leave, or have grown weary of God’s work. Regardless, they can’t depart from God’s words; no matter how weak they are, still they must depend on God’s words to live, and no matter how rebellious they are, still they do not dare to leave God’s words.

Footnotes:

a. The original text omits “what He says.”

When God's words truly show their might is when God rules and wields power, and this is how God works. This, after all, is the means by which God works, and none may leave it. God's words will spread among countless homes, they will become known to all, and only in this way will His work spread throughout the universe. Which is to say, if God's work is to spread throughout the entire universe, then His words must be spread. On the day of God's glory, God's words will show their power and authority. Every one of His words from time immemorial until today will be accomplished and come true. In this way, glory will be to God on earth—which is to say, His words will reign on earth. All who are wicked will be chastised by the words in God's mouth, all who are righteous will be blessed by the words in His mouth, and all will be established and made complete by the words in His mouth. Nor will He show any signs or wonders; all will be accomplished by His words, and His words will produce facts. Everyone on earth will celebrate God's words, whether they be adults or children, male, female, old, or young, all people will submit beneath the words of God. God's words will appear in the flesh, and will appear vivid and lifelike to people on earth. This is what it means for the Word to become flesh. God has come to earth primarily to accomplish the fact of "the Word become flesh," which is to say, He has come so that His words may be issued from the flesh (not like the time of Moses in the Old Testament, when God spoke directly from the sky). After that, each of His words will be fulfilled during the Age of Millennial Kingdom, they will become facts visible before people's eyes, and people will behold them using their own eyes without the slightest disparity. This is the supreme meaning of God's incarnation. Which is to say, the work of the Spirit is accomplished through the flesh, and through words. This is the true meaning of "the Word become flesh" and "the Word's appearance in the flesh." Only God can speak the will of the Spirit, and only God in the flesh can speak on behalf of the Spirit; the words of God are made plain in God incarnate, and everyone else is guided by them. No one is exempt, they all exist within this scope. Only from these utterances can people come to know; those who do not gain in this way are daydreaming if they think they can gain the utterances from heaven. Such is the authority demonstrated in God's incarnate flesh: making all believe. Even the most venerable experts and religious pastors cannot speak these words. They must all submit beneath them, and none will be able to make another start. God will use words to conquer the universe. He will do this not by His incarnate flesh, but through using the utterances from the mouth of God become flesh to conquer all people in the entire universe; only this is the Word become flesh, and only this is the appearance of the Word in the flesh. Perhaps, to people, it appears as if God hasn't done much work—but God has but to utter His words for people to be thoroughly convinced, and for them to be overawed. Without facts, people shout and scream; with the words of God, they fall silent. God will surely accomplish this fact, for this is God's long-established plan: accomplishing the fact of the Word's arrival on earth. Actually, there is no need for Me to explain—the arrival of the Millennial Kingdom on earth is the arrival of God's words on earth. New Jerusalem's descent from heaven is the arrival of God's words to live among man, to accompany man's every action, and all his inmost thoughts. This is also the fact that God will accomplish, and the wonderful scene of the Millennial Kingdom. This is the plan set by God: His words will appear on earth for a thousand years, and they will manifest all of His deeds, and complete all of His work on earth, after which this stage of mankind shall come to an end.

HOW IS YOUR RELATIONSHIP WITH GOD

In believing in God, you must at least resolve the issue of having a normal relationship with God. Without a normal relationship with God, then the significance in believing in God is lost. Establishing a normal relationship with God is entirely attained through quieting your heart in God's presence. A normal relationship with God means being able to not doubt or deny any of God's work and submit to it, and furthermore it means having the right intentions in the presence of God, not thinking of yourself, always having the interests of God's family as the most important thing no matter what you are doing, accepting God's observation, and submitting to God's arrangements. You are able to quiet your heart in God's presence whenever you do anything; even if you do not understand God's will, you must still fulfill your duties and responsibilities to the best of your ability. It is not too late to wait for God's will to be revealed to you and then put this into practice. When your relationship with God has become normal, then you will also have a normal relationship with people. Everything is established on the foundation of God's words. Through eating and drinking the words of God, practice in accordance with God's requirements, put your viewpoints right, and do not do things that resist God or disturb the church. Do not do things that do not benefit the lives of the brothers and sisters, do not say things that do not contribute to other people, do not do shameful things. Be just and honorable when doing all things and make them presentable before God. Even though the flesh is weak sometimes, you are able to attach the highest importance to benefiting God's family, not covet your own benefits, and carry out righteousness. If you can practice in this way, your relationship with God will be normal.

Whenever you do anything, you must examine whether your motivations are right. If you are able to act according to the requirements of God, then your relationship with God is normal. This is the minimum criterion. If, when you examine your motivations, there emerge those that are incorrect, and if you are able to turn your back on them and act according to the words of God, then you will become someone who is right before God, which will show that your relationship with God is normal, and that all that you do is for the sake of God, and not for yourself. Whenever you do or say anything, you must put your heart right, be righteous, and not be led by your emotions, or act according to your own will. These are the principles by which believers in God conduct themselves. A person's motivations and stature can be revealed in a small thing, and thus, for people to enter onto the path of being made perfect by God, they must first resolve their own motivations and their relationship with God. Only when your relationship with God is normal will you be able to be made perfect by God, and only then will God's dealing, pruning, discipline, and refinement in you be able to achieve their desired effect. That is to say, people are able to have God in their hearts, not seek personal benefits, not think about their personal future (referring to thinking of the flesh), but rather they bear the burden of entering life, do their best to seek truth, and submit to God's work. This way, the objectives you seek are correct, and your relationship with God is normal. It can be said that fixing one's relationship with God is the first step on entry into one's spiritual journey. Although man's destiny is in God's hands, and has been predestined by God, and cannot be changed by themselves, whether or not you can be made perfect or gained by God depends on whether or not your relationship with God is normal. Perhaps there are parts of you that are weak or disobedient—but as long as your outlook is right and your motivations are correct, and as long as you have put right your relationship with God and made it normal, then you will be qualified to be made perfect by God. If you do not have the right relationship with God, and act for the sake of the flesh, or your family, then regardless of how hard you work it will all be for nothing. If your relationship with God is normal, then everything else will fall into place. God looks at nothing else, but He looks only at whether your views on the belief in God are right: who you believe in, for whose sake you believe, and why you believe. If you are able to see these things clearly, and are able to put right your views and practice, then your life will make progress, and you are sure to be able to enter onto the right track. If your relationship with God is not normal, and your views on the belief in God are deviant, then these will preclude all else. No matter how you believe in God, you will gain nothing. Only if your relationship with God is normal will you be approved by God when you turn your back on the flesh, pray, suffer, endure, obey, help your brothers and sisters, devote more effort to God, and so on. Whether or not something you do has value and significance depends on whether your intentions are right and whether your viewpoints are correct. Nowadays, many people's belief in God is like looking at a clock with their head turned to one side—their viewpoints are deviant. Everything will be good if a breakthrough can be made here, everything will be fine if this is resolved, while everything shall come to nothing if this is not resolved. Some people behave well in My presence, but behind My back all that they do is resist. These are crooked and deceitful manifestations and this type of person is a servant of Satan, they are the typical embodiment of Satan to test God. You are only a right person if you are able to submit to My work and My words. As long as you are able to eat and drink the words of God, as long as everything you do is presentable before God, everything you do is just and honorable, as long as you do not do shameful things, do not do things that would harm the lives of people, as long as you live in the light, and are not exploited by Satan, then your relationship with God will be put right.

In believing in God, your intentions and viewpoints must be put right; you must have a correct understanding and correct treatment of the words of God, God's work, the environments arranged by God, the man testified by God, and of the practical God. You must not practice according to your personal thoughts, or make your own little plans. You must be able to seek truth in everything and stand in your place as a creation of God and submit to all of God's work. If you want to pursue being perfected by God and enter into the right track of life, then your heart must always live in God's presence, not be dissolute, not follow Satan, not leave Satan any opportunities to do its work, and not let Satan use you. You must completely give yourself to God and let God rule over you.

Are you willing to be Satan's servant? Are you willing to be exploited by Satan? Do you believe in God and pursue God so that you can be perfected by Him, or is it so you become a foil in God's work? Are you willing to be obtained by God and live a meaningful life, or are you willing to live a worthless and empty life? Are you willing to be used by God, or exploited by Satan? Are you willing to let God's words and truth fill you, or let sin and Satan fill you? Consider and weigh this out. In your daily life, you must grasp those words you say and those things you do that will cause your relationship with God to be abnormal, then rectify yourself and enter into the correct manner. Examine your words, your actions, your each and every move, and your thoughts and ideas at all times. Grasp your true state and enter into the way of the work of the Holy Spirit. Only in this way can you have a normal relationship with God. By weighing out whether your relationship with God is normal, you will be able to rectify your intentions, understand the essence of man, and understand yourself; through this, you will be able to enter into real experiences, truly forsake yourself, and achieve deliberate submission. In such matters as when you are experiencing whether your relationship with God is normal, you will be able to find opportunities to be perfected by God, you will be able to understand many situations under which the Holy Spirit is working, and you will be able to see through many of Satan's tricks and conspiracies. Only through this way can you be perfected by God. You put right your relationship with God so that you will submit yourself to all the arrangements of God. It is so you will more deeply enter into real experiences, and obtain more work of the Holy Spirit. When you are practicing having a normal relationship with God, most of the time, you will attain this through forsaking the flesh and through your real cooperation with God. You should understand that "without a cooperative heart, it is difficult to receive the work of God; if the flesh does not suffer hardships, there are no blessings from God; if the spirit does not struggle, Satan will not be ashamed." If you practice and clearly understand these principles, your viewpoints on the faith in God will be put right. In your current practices, you must discard the viewpoint of “seeking bread to satisfy hunger,” you must discard the viewpoint of “everything is done by the Holy Spirit and people are unable to intervene.” People who speak this way all think, “People can do whatever they are willing to do, and when the time comes the Holy Spirit will work and people will have no need to overcome the flesh, they will have no need to cooperate, and only need the Holy Spirit to move them.” These viewpoints are all absurd. Under these circumstances, the Holy Spirit is unable to work. It is this kind of viewpoint that becomes a great obstruction to the work of the Holy Spirit. Often times, the work of the Holy Spirit is attained through people’s cooperation. Without cooperation and resolution, then wanting to change one’s disposition, obtain the work of the Holy Spirit, and obtain enlightenment and illumination from God are all extravagant thoughts; this is called “indulging one’s self and pardoning Satan.” People like this do not have a normal relationship with God. You have found many manifestations of Satan in yourself, and in your past actions, there are many things that have run counter to God’s current requirements. Are you able to forsake them now? Attain a normal relationship with God, do according to God’s intentions, become a new person and have a new life, don’t look back at past transgressions, don’t be overly remorseful, be able to stand up and cooperate with God, and fulfill the duties that you should perform. This way, your relationship with God will be normal.

If you merely accept these words verbally after reading them but are not moved in your heart, and are not serious about having a normal relationship with God, then it proves that you do not attach importance to your relationship with God, your viewpoints have not yet been put right, your intentions are still not directed at allowing God to obtain you, and allowing God the glory, but rather are directed at allowing Satan’s conspiracies to prevail and for obtaining your personal purposes. This kind of people all have incorrect intentions and viewpoints. Regardless of what God has said or how it is said, they are indifferent and no transformation can be seen. Their hearts don’t feel any fear and they are unashamed. This kind of person is a confused person without a spirit. For every utterance of God, after you have read it and you have gained an understanding, you shall put it into practice. Regardless of how you used to practice before—perhaps in the past your flesh was weak, you were rebellious, and you resisted—this is not a big deal, and it can't obstruct your life from growing today. As long as you are able to have a normal relationship with God today, then there is hope. If for every time that you read God's words, you have changes and allow other people to see that your life has transformed for the better, it shows that you have a normal relationship with God and that it is put right. God does not treat people based on their transgressions. As long as you are able to not rebel again and not resist again after you have understood and are aware, then God will still have mercy on you. When you have this understanding and the will to pursue being perfected by God, then your condition in God's presence will be normal. No matter what you do, consider: What will God think if I do this? How will it affect the brothers and sisters? Examine your intentions in your prayer, fellowship, speech, work, and contact with people, and examine whether your relationship with God is normal or not. If you are unable to distinguish your intentions and thoughts, then you have no discrimination, which proves that you understand too little about truth. Have a clear understanding of everything that God does, see things according to God's word and see things by standing on the side of God. This way your viewpoints will be correct. Therefore, to build a good relationship with God is a top priority for anyone believing in God; everyone should treat it as the most important task and as their major life event. Everything you do should be weighed against whether or not you have a normal relationship with God. If your relationship with God is normal and your intentions are correct, then do it. In order to maintain a normal relationship with God, you can't be afraid of losing out on personal interests, you can't allow Satan to prevail, you can't allow Satan to have a handle on you, and you can't allow Satan to make you into a laughing stock. Such an intention is a manifestation that your relationship with God is normal. It is not for the flesh, but rather it is for peace of spirit, it is for obtaining the work of the Holy Spirit and for satisfying the will of God. If you are to enter into a correct state, you must build a good relationship with God, you must set right your viewpoint of belief in God. It is to allow God to obtain you, to allow God to reveal the fruits of His words in you, and to enlighten and illuminate you even more. This way you will enter into the correct manner. Continuously eat and drink God's current words, enter into the current way of the Holy Spirit's work, do according to God's current requirements, not follow old-fashioned practices, not cling to old ways of doing things, and quickly enter into the manner of today's work. This way your relationship with God will be completely normal and you will enter into the right track of believing in God.

FOCUS MORE ON REALITY

Every person has the possibility of being perfected by God, so everyone should understand what service to God most suits God's intentions. Most people don't know what it means to believe in God and have no idea why they should believe in God. That is to say, most people have no understanding of God's work or the purpose of God's management plan. Down to the present, most people still think believing in God is about going to heaven and having their souls saved. They still have no idea of the particular significance of believing in God, and moreover they don't have any understanding whatsoever of God's most important work in His management plan. For all sorts of their own reasons, people just don't take any interest in God's work and give no thought to God's intentions or God's management plan. As an individual in this stream, each person should know what the purpose of God's entire management plan is, the facts that God has already fulfilled, why God has chosen this group of people, what its goals and significance are, and what God wants to achieve in this group. In the land of the great red dragon, God has been able to raise such a group of inconspicuous people, and He has continued to work until now, trying and perfecting in all sorts of ways, speaking countless words, performing much work and sending so many serving objects. From God accomplishing such enormous work, it can be seen that the significance of God's work is so great. You cannot yet see into it entirely. Therefore, do not treat the work that God has done on you as a simple matter; this is not a small thing. Just what God has shown you today is enough for you to ponder and understand. Only if you thoroughly understand can you experience more deeply and make progress in your life. What people understand and are doing right now is really too little and cannot fully satisfy God's intentions. This is the insufficiency of man and the failure to fulfill their duty. This is why the results that should have been achieved have not been. The Holy Spirit has no way to work on many people because they have such a shallow understanding of God's work and are unwilling to treat the work of the house of God as something valuable. They always go through the motions just to get by, or copy what most people are doing, or just show people that they are "working." Today, each person in this stream shall recall whether what you have done is all that you could have, and whether you have put in all your effort. People have not fulfilled their duties at all. It is not that the Holy Spirit does not do His work but that people do not do theirs, making it impossible for the Holy Spirit to do His work. God has finished expressing His words, but they have not kept up at all and have fallen far behind, unable to stay close with every step, unable to follow the Lamb's footsteps closely. What they should abide by they have not abided by; what they should have practiced they have not put into practice; what they should have prayed they have not prayed; what they should have discarded they have not discarded. They have not done any of these things. Therefore, this talk of going to the banquet is empty and has no real meaning at all. It is in people's own imagination. It can be said that as of the present people have not fulfilled their duty at all. Everything is dependent on God doing and saying things Himself, while people's function has really been all too small. They are all useless trash who don't know how to coordinate with God. God has spoken hundreds of thousands of words, but people have not put them into practice at all, from forsaking the flesh, discarding notions, practicing obedience in all things, developing discernment and gaining insight at the same time, to letting go of people's status in their hearts, eliminating the idols who occupy their hearts, rebelling against individual intentions that are not right, not acting based on their emotions, doing things fairly without bias, thinking more about God's interests and their influence on others when they speak, doing more things that benefit God's work, keeping in mind benefitting God's house in all that they do, not letting their emotions determine their behavior, discarding what pleases their own flesh, eliminating selfish old conceptions, and so on. People actually understand some things in all these words of what God requires of them, but they are just not willing to put them into practice. How else can God work and move them? How can rebels in the eyes of God still have the nerve to pick up God's words to admire them? How do they have the nerve to eat God's food? Where is man's conscience? They have not fulfilled the very least of the duties they should have, so talking about doing all they can is pointless. Are they not dreamers? There can be no talk of reality without practice. That is plain fact!

You ought to be studying more realistic lessons now. There's no need for that high-sounding, empty talk that people admire. When it comes to talking about knowledge, each person's is higher than the previous one, but they still don't have the path to practice. How many have put anything into practice? How many have learned actual lessons? Who can fellowship about reality? Being able to speak of knowledge of God's words doesn't amount to your genuine stature. It only goes to show you were born smart and gifted. It's still futile if you cannot point out the way, and you are just useless trash! Are you not pretending if you can't say anything about an actual path to practice? Aren't you faking it if you cannot offer your own actual experiences to others, thereby giving them lessons they can learn from or a path to practice? Aren't you just a counterfeit? What value do you have? Such a person could only play the part of "inventor of the theory of socialism," not "contributor to bringing about socialism." To be without reality is to have no truth. To be without reality is to be good for nothing. To be without reality is to be the walking dead. To be without reality is to be a "Marxist-Leninist thinker," without value as a reference. I urge each person to shut up about theory and talk of something real, something genuine and substantial, study some "modern art," speak of something realistic, contribute some reality, and have some spirit of dedication. Face reality when speaking and don't indulge in unrealistic and exaggerated talk to make people happy or so they can think of you in a different way. What is the value of that? What point is there in stirring up people's enthusiasm for you? Be "artistic" in your speech, be fair in your conduct, be reasonable in your work, be realistic in addressing people, keep in mind benefitting God's house in every act, let your conscience guide your emotions, do not repay kindness with hate, or be ungrateful to kindness, and do not be a hypocrite, lest you be a bad influence. When you eat and drink God's words, link them more to reality, and when you communicate, speak more about realistic things and do not be condescending—God objects to that. Be more patient and tolerant, practice conceding more, be generous and open with people, and learn from the "spirit of the prime minister."^[a] When you have thoughts that are not good, practice forsaking the flesh more. When you are working, speak more of realistic paths and don't get too lofty or it will be beyond people's reach. Less enjoyment, more contribution—show your selfless spirit of dedication. Be more considerate toward God's intentions, listen more to your conscience, and keep in mind more and do not forget how God admonishes you daily out of concern for you. Read the "old almanac" more often. Pray more and fellowship more often. Do not go on being so muddled, but show more sense and gain some insight. When your hand of sin reaches out, pull it back and don't let it extend so far. It's useless! What you get from God is nothing but curses; be careful. Let your heart take pity on others and don't always strike out with weapons in hand. Offer more and talk more about life, keeping a spirit of helping others. Do more and say less. Put more into practice and less into research and analysis. Be moved more by the Holy Spirit, and give God more opportunities to perfect you. Eliminate more human elements—there are still too many human ways of doing things. Superficial conduct and behavior are still loathsome. Eliminate more of them. Your mental states are still too detestable. Correct them more. The status people occupy in your hearts is still too much. Give more status to God and don't be so unreasonable. The "temple" is God's in the first place and should not be occupied by people. In sum, focus more on righteousness and less on emotions, and it is best to eliminate the flesh; talk more about reality and less about knowledge, and it is best to be silent; speak more of the path of practice and have less worthless inflated talk, and it is best to begin practice starting now.

God's requirements of people are not lofty. If people put in a bit of effort they will be able to receive a "passing grade." Actually, understanding, knowing, and accepting the truth is more complicated than practicing the truth; knowing and accepting the truth comes after first practicing the truth. This is the step and way of the work of the Holy Spirit. How can you not obey it? Will you be able to have the work of the Holy Spirit by doing things your way? Does God work based on your will, or after you have compared against God's words? It's pointless if you cannot see this clearly. Why is it that most people have spent much effort reading God's words but only have knowledge and cannot say anything about a real path afterward? Do you think that having knowledge amounts to having the truth? Isn't that a confused point of view? You are able to speak as much knowledge as there is sand on a beach, yet none of it contains any real path. In this, are you not fooling people? Are you not all hat and no cattle? Acting in this way is harmful to people! The higher the theory, the more it is devoid of reality, and the more it is incapable of taking people into reality; the higher the theory, the more it makes you defy and oppose God. Do not treat the most lofty theories like precious treasure; they are pernicious, and serve no use! Maybe some people are able to talk of the most lofty theories—but such theories contain nothing of reality, for these people have not personally experienced them, and thus they have no path to practice. Such people are incapable of taking man onto the right track, and will only lead people astray. Is this not harmful to people? At the very least, you must be able to solve the present troubles and allow people to achieve entry; only this counts as devotion, and only then will you be qualified to work for God. Do not always speak grandiose, fanciful words, and do not bind people and make them obey you with your many unsuitable practices. Doing so will have no effect, and can only increase people's confusion. Leading people this way will produce many pieces of regulation, which will make people loathe you. This is man's shortcoming, and it is really insufferable. Therefore, talk more about problems that exist now. Don't treat other people's experiences as private property and bring it out for others to appreciate. You must individually search for a way out. This is what each person should put into practice.

If what you say can give people a path to walk, then that amounts to you having reality. No matter what you say, you must bring people into practice and give them all a path they can follow. It is not about only making it so that people have knowledge, but more importantly, it is about having the path to walk. For people to believe in God, they must walk the path along which God's work leads them. That is, the process of believing in God is the process of walking the path on which the Holy Spirit leads you. Accordingly, you must have a path you can walk on no matter what, and you must walk onto the path of being perfected by God. Don't stretch it out too long, and don't get involved in too much. Only if you walk the path on which God leads without causing interruptions can you receive the work of the Holy Spirit and have the path of entry. Only this counts as fitting God's intentions and fulfilling man's duty. As an individual in this stream, each person should fulfill their duty properly, do more of what people should be doing, and don't act willfully. People carrying out work must make their words clear, people who follow must focus more on enduring hardship and obeying, and each person must keep to their place and not step out of line. It should be clear in the heart of each person how they should practice and what function they should fulfill. Take the path on which the Holy Spirit leads; do not go astray or take to falsehood. You must see today's work clearly. Entering into today's work method is what you should practice. It is the first thing you must enter. Don't waste any more words on other things. Doing the work of God's house today is your responsibility, entering today's work method is your duty, and practicing today's truth is your burden.

KEEPING THE COMMANDMENTS AND PRACTICING THE TRUTH

In practice, the commandments should be connected with the practice of the truth. While keeping the commandments, one ought to practice the truth. When practicing the truth, one should not violate the principles of the commandments or go against the commandments. Do that which God requires you to do. Keeping the commandments and practicing the truth are interconnected, not contradictory. The more you practice the truth, the more you keep the essence of the commandments. The more you practice the truth, the more you will understand God's word as expressed in the commandments. Practicing the truth and keeping the commandments are not contradictory actions, but are rather interconnected. In the beginning, only after man keeps the commandments can he practice the truth and attain enlightenment from the Holy Spirit. But this is not the original intention of God. God requires you to worship God with heart, not to just practice good behavior. But you must keep the commandments at least superficially. Gradually, through experience, man gains a clearer understanding of God. He stops rebelling against and resisting God, and he stops calling God's work into question. In this way man may abide by the essence of the commandments. Therefore, merely keeping the commandments without practicing the truth is ineffective and does not constitute real worship of God because you have not yet attained real stature. If you keep the commandments without the truth, this amounts to just keeping rigidly to the rules. In so doing, the commandments become your law, which will not help you grow in life.

On the contrary, they will become your burden, and will bind you firmly like the law of the Old Testament, causing you to lose the presence of the Holy Spirit. Therefore, only by practicing the truth can you effectively keep the commandments. One keeps the commandments in order to practice the truth. You practice even more truths through keeping the commandments. You gain even more understanding of the practical meaning of the commandments through practicing the truth. The purpose and meaning of God's imperative that man ought to keep the commandments is not to follow ordinances as man may imagine, but rather has to do with man's entry into life. The more you grow in life, the greater the degree to which you will be able to keep the commandments. Although the commandments are for man to keep, the essence of the commandments only becomes apparent through man's life experience. Most people think keeping the commandments well means "everything is ready, all that remains is to be caught up." This is an extravagant imagining and is not God's will. Those who say such things do not wish to make progress and are greedy for the flesh. This is nonsense! This is not in keeping with reality! Only practicing the truth without keeping the commandments practically is not God's will. This kind of person is disabled and proceeds as if hobbling on one leg. However, only keeping the commandments and sticking rigidly to the commandments without having truth is, likewise, not fulfilling God's will—like a man who sees from one eye only, this is also a form of disability. It can be said that if you keep the commandments well and gain a clear understanding of the practical God, then you will have truth. From a relative perspective, you will have gained real stature. You practice the truth and keep the commandments at the same time without mutual conflict. Practicing the truth and keeping the commandments are two systems, both of which are integral parts of one's life experience. One's experience should comprise an integration of the keeping of the commandments with the practice of the truth, not a division. However, there are both differences and connections between these two things.

The promulgation of the commandments in the new age is a testimony to the fact that all men in this stream and all those who hear God's voice today have entered a new age. This is a new beginning for God's work and is the start of the last part of the work in God's management plan over six thousand years. The commandments of the new age symbolize that God and man have entered into the realm of a new heaven and new earth, and that God, just as Jehovah worked among Israelites and Jesus worked among Jews, will do more practical work and do more and greater work on earth. They also symbolize that this group of men will receive more and greater commission from God, and will receive practical supply, feeding, support, care and protection from God. Further they will be put through more practical exercise, as well as being dealt with, broken and refined by God's word. The meaning of the commandments of the new age is quite profound. They suggest that God will really appear on earth and God will conquer the entire universe upon earth, revealing all of His glory in the flesh. They also suggest that the practical God is going to do more practical work on earth to perfect all that He has chosen. Further, God will accomplish everything with words on earth and make manifest the decree that "the incarnate God rises to the highest and is magnified, and all peoples and all nations kneel down to worship God—who is great." Although the commandments of the new age are for man to keep, which is man's duty and the aim of his accomplishments, the meaning they represent is rather too deep to be fully expressed in one or two words. The commandments of the new age replace the Old Testament laws and New Testament ordinances as promulgated by Jehovah and Jesus. This is a deeper lesson, not as simple a matter as man may imagine. The commandments of the new age have an aspect of practical meaning: They serve as an interface between the Age of Grace and the Age of Kingdom. The commandments of the new age end all the practices and ordinances of the old age and also end all the practices of the age of Jesus and those before the new age.^[a] They bring man to the presence of the more practical God and let man start to receive God's personal perfection, which is the beginning of the path of being perfected. Therefore, you shall possess a correct attitude toward the commandments of the new age and shall not follow them carelessly or despise them. The commandments of the new age stress one point: that man shall worship the practical God Himself of today, which is to submit to the essence of the Spirit more practically. They also stress the principle by which God will judge man to be guilty or righteous after He appears as the Sun of righteousness. The commandments are easier understood than practiced. Thus, if God wishes to perfect man, He must do so through His own words and guidance, man cannot achieve perfection through his own innate intelligence alone. Whether man can keep the commandments of the new age or not is related to man's knowledge of the practical God. Hence, whether you can keep the commandments or not is not a question that will be resolved in a matter of days. This is a deep lesson.

Practicing the truth is a path by which man's life may grow. If you don't practice the truth, you'll be left with only theory and you will have no real life. Truth is the symbol of man's stature. Whether or not you practice the truth is related to the attainment of real stature. If you do not practice the truth, do not act righteously, or are swayed by emotions and care for the flesh, then you are far away from keeping the commandments. This is the deepest lesson. There are many truths for man to enter and for man to understand in each age. But there are different commandments accompanying the truths in each age. The truth man practices relates to the age and the commandments kept by man also relate to the age. Each age has its own truths to be practiced and commandments to be kept. However, based on the different commandments promulgated by God, that is, based on the different ages, the goal and effect of man's practice of the truth differ commensurately. It can be said that the commandments serve the truth and the truth exists to maintain the commandments. If there is only truth, there will be no changes in God's work to speak of. However, by referring to the commandments, man can identify the dynamic extent of the work done by the Holy Spirit and man can know the age in which God works. In religion, there are many people who can practice the truths practiced by man of the Age of Law. However, they do not have the commandments of the new age and cannot keep the commandments of the new age. They keep the old way and remain as primordial humans. They are not accompanied by the new manner of work and cannot see the commandments of the new age. As such, God's work is absent. They are like a man holding an empty egg shell: There is no spirit if there is no chick inside. More precisely speaking, there is no life. Such men have not entered the new age and have lagged behind many steps. Therefore, it is useless if people have the truth of old ages but do not have the commandments of the new age. Many of you practice the truth of this time but do not keep the commandments of this time. You will get nothing, the truth you practice will be worthless and meaningless and God will not praise it. Practicing the truth must be done in a manner by which the Holy Spirit works today; it must be done following the voice of the practical God today. Without this, everything is null—like drawing water with a bamboo basket. This is the practical meaning of the promulgation of the commandments of the new age. If you have a thorough understanding of the work of the Holy Spirit in the current time and enter the manner of work of today, you will naturally see through to the essence of keeping the commandments. If the day comes when you see through to the essence of the commandments of the new age and you can keep the commandments, then at that time you will have been perfected. This is the real meaning of practicing the truth and keeping the commandments. Whether you can practice the truth or not depends on how you perceive the essence of the commandments of the new age. The work of the Holy Spirit will continuously appear to man and God will require more and more of man. Therefore, the truths which man actually practices will be more and greater and the effects of keeping the commandments will be more profound. Therefore, you shall practice the truth and keep the commandments at the same time. Nobody shall neglect this matter. Let new truth and new commandments start at the same time in this new age.

YOU SHOULD KNOW THAT THE PRACTICAL GOD IS GOD HIMSELF

What should you know about the practical God? The Spirit, the Person, and the Word make up the practical God Himself, and this is the true meaning of the practical God Himself. If you only know the Person—if you know His habits and personality—but do not know the work of the Spirit, or what the Spirit does in the flesh, and only pay attention to the Spirit, and the Word, and only pray before the Spirit, unknowing of the work of God's Spirit in the practical God, then this yet proves that you do not know the practical God. Knowledge of the practical God includes knowing and experiencing His words, and grasping the rules and principles of the work of the Holy Spirit, and how the Spirit of God works in the flesh. So, too, does it include knowing that every action of God in the flesh is governed by the Spirit, and that the words He speaks are the direct expression of the Spirit. Thus, if you wish to know the practical God, you must primarily know how God works in humanity and in divinity; this, in turn, concerns the expressions of the Spirit, which all people engage with.

What is covered in the expressions of the Spirit? Sometimes the practical God works in humanity, and sometimes in divinity—but overall, in both cases the Spirit is in command. Whatever the spirit within people, thus is their external expression. The Spirit works normally, but there are two parts to His direction by the Spirit: One part is His work in humanity, and the other is His work through divinity. You should know this clearly. The Spirit's work varies according to the circumstances: When His human work is required, the Spirit directs this human work, and when His divine work is required, the divinity appears directly to carry it out. Because God works in the flesh and appears in the flesh, He both works in humanity and in divinity. His work in humanity is directed by the Spirit, and in order to satisfy people's fleshly needs, to facilitate their engagement with Him, to allow them to behold the reality and normality of God, and to allow them to see that the Spirit of God has come in the flesh, and is among man, lives together with man, and engages with man. His work in divinity is in order to provide the life of people, and guide people in everything from the positive side, changing people's dispositions and allowing them to truly behold the Spirit's appearance in the flesh. In the main, the growth in man's life is directly achieved through God's work and words in divinity. Only if people accept God's work in divinity can they achieve changes in their disposition, only then can they be sated in their spirit; only if there is added to this the work in humanity—God's shepherding, support, and provision in humanity—can people satisfy God's will. If they are to abide by the commandments, at the very least people should know the practical God who appears in the flesh, without confusion. In other words, people should grasp the principles of abiding by the commandments. Abiding by the commandments does not mean following them haphazardly or arbitrarily, but abiding by them with a basis, with an objective, and with principles. The first thing to be achieved is for your visions to be clear. The practical God Himself that is spoken of today works both in humanity and in divinity. Through the appearance of the practical God, His normal human work and life and His completely divine work are achieved. His humanity and divinity are combined in one, and the work of both is^[a] accomplished through words; whether in humanity or divinity, He utters words. When God works in humanity, He speaks the language of humanity, so that people may engage and understand. His words are spoken plainly, and are easy to understand, such that they can be provided to all people; regardless of whether these people are possessed of knowledge, or poorly educated, they can all receive God's words. God's work in divinity is also carried out through words, but it is full of provision, it is full of life, it is untainted by human ideas, it does not involve human preferences, and it is without human limits, it is outside the bounds of any normal humanity; it, too, is carried out in the flesh, but it is the direct expression of the Spirit. If people only accept God's work in humanity, then they will confine themselves to a certain scope, and so will require perennial dealing, pruning, and discipline in order for there to be a slight change in them. Without the work or presence of the Holy Spirit, though, they will always resort to their old ways; it is only through the work of divinity that these maladies and deficiencies can be rectified, only then can people be made complete. Instead of sustained dealing and pruning, what is required is positive provision, using words to make up for all shortcomings, using words to reveal people's every state, using words to direct their lives, their every utterance, their every action, to lay bare their intentions and motivations; this is the real work of the practical God. And thus, in your attitude to the practical God you should both submit before His humanity, recognizing and acknowledging Him, and, furthermore, you should also accept and obey the divine work and words. God's appearance in the flesh means that all of the work and words of the Spirit of God are done through His normal humanity, and through His incarnate flesh. In other words, God's Spirit both directs His human work and carries out the work of divinity in the flesh, and in God incarnate you can see both God's work in humanity and completely divine work; this is the real significance of the practical God's appearance in the flesh. If you can see this clearly, you will be able to connect all of the different parts of God, and will cease to place too much of a premium on His work in divinity, and to be too dismissive of His work in humanity, and you will not go to extremes, nor take any detours. Overall, the meaning of the practical God is that the work of His humanity and of His divinity, as directed by the Spirit, is expressed through His flesh, so that people can see that He is vivid and lifelike, and real and actual.

a. The original text reads "and both are."

The Spirit of God's work in humanity has transitional phases. By making humanity perfect, He enables His humanity to receive the direction of the Spirit, after which His humanity is able to provide and shepherd the churches. This is one expression of God's normal work. Thus, if you can see clearly the principles of God's work in humanity, then you will be unlikely to have conceptions about God's work in humanity. Regardless of anything else, the Spirit of God cannot be wrong. He is right, and without error; He would not do anything incorrectly. Divine work is the direct expression of the will of God, without the interference of humanity. It does not undergo perfection, but comes directly from the Spirit. And yet, that He can work in divinity is because of His normal humanity; it is not in the least bit supernatural, and appears to be carried out by a normal person; God came from heaven to earth primarily in order to express the words of God through the flesh, to complete the work of the Spirit of God using the flesh.

Today, people's knowledge of the practical God remains too one-sided, and their understanding of the significance of the incarnation is still too paltry. When it comes to God's flesh, through His work and words people see that God's Spirit includes so much, that He is so rich. But, regardless, God's testimony ultimately comes from the Spirit of God: what God does in the flesh, which principles He works by, what He does in humanity, and what He does in divinity. Today you are able to worship this person, but in actuality you are worshiping the Spirit. This is the very least that should be achieved in people's knowledge of God incarnate: knowing the substance of the Spirit through the flesh, knowing the Spirit's divine work in the flesh and human work in the flesh, accepting all of the Spirit's words and utterances in the flesh, and seeing how the Spirit of God directs the flesh and demonstrates His power in the flesh. Which is to say, man comes to know the Spirit in heaven through the flesh; the appearance of the practical God Himself among man has dispelled the vague God himself in people's conceptions; people's worship of the practical God Himself has increased their obedience to God; and through the Spirit of God's divine work in the flesh, and human work in the flesh, man receives revelation and shepherding, and changes are achieved in his life disposition. Only this is the actual meaning of the Spirit's arrival in the flesh, and it is primarily so that people may engage with God, rely on God, and attain the knowledge of God.

In the main, what attitude should people have toward the practical God? What do you know of the incarnation, of the Word's appearance in the flesh, of God's appearance in the flesh, of the deeds of the practical God? And what is mainly spoken of today? The incarnation, the Word's arrival in the flesh, and God's appearance in the flesh—these must all be understood. Based on your stature, and the era, you must gradually come to understand these issues; during your life experiences, you must gradually come to understand these issues, and must have a clear knowledge. The process by which people experience God's words is the same as the process by which they know the appearance of God's words in the flesh. The more people experience God's words, the more they know the Spirit of God; through experiencing God's words, people grasp the principles of the Spirit's work and come to know the practical God Himself. In fact, when God makes people perfect and gains them, He is making them know the deeds of the practical God; He is using the work of the practical God to show people the actual significance of the incarnation, and to show them that the Spirit of God has actually appeared before man. When people are gained by God and made perfect by God, the expressions of the practical God have conquered them, the words of the practical God have changed them, and given His life to them inside, filling them with what He is (whether it be what He humanly is, or what He divinely is), filling them with the substance of His words, and making people live out His words. When God gains people, He does so primarily by using the words and utterances of the practical God in order to deal with people's deficiencies, and to judge and reveal their rebellious disposition, causing them to gain what they need, and showing them that God has come among man. Most important, the work done by the practical God is saving every person from the influence of Satan, taking them away from the land of filth, and dispelling their corrupt disposition. The most profound significance of being gained by the practical God is being able to take the practical God as an exemplar, as a model, and living out normal humanity, being able to practice according to the words and requirements of the practical God, without the slightest deviation or departure, practicing however He says, and being able to achieve whatever He asks. In this way, you will have been gained by God. When you are gained by God you don't just possess the work of the Holy Spirit; principally, you are able to live out the requirements of the practical God. Merely having the work of the Spirit does not mean you have life. What's key is whether you are able to act according to the practical God's requirements of you, which relates to whether you are able to be gained by God. These things are the greatest meaning of the practical God's work in the flesh. Which is to say, God gains a group of people by really and actually appearing in the flesh and being vivid and lifelike, being seen by people, actually doing the work of the Spirit in the flesh, and by acting as an exemplar for people in the flesh. God's arrival in the flesh is primarily to enable people to see the real deeds of God, to materialize the formless Spirit in the flesh, and allow people to see and touch Him. In this way, those who are made complete by Him will live Him out, they will be gained by Him, and after His heart. If God only spoke in heaven, and did not actually come on earth, then people would still be incapable of knowing God, they would only be able to preach God's deeds using empty theory, and would not have God's words as reality. God has come on earth primarily to act as an exemplar and a model for those who are to be gained by God; only in this way can people actually know God, and touch God, and see Him, and only then can they truly be gained by God.

ONLY PUTTING THE TRUTH INTO PRACTICE IS HAVING REALITY

Being able to blatantly explain God's words does not mean that you are in possession of reality—things are not as simple as you may have imagined. Whether you are in possession of reality or not is not based on what you say, rather, it is based on what you live out. When God's words become your life and your natural expression, only this counts as reality, and only this counts as you possessing understanding and real stature. You must be able to withstand examination for a long period of time, and you must be able to live out the likeness that is required of you by God; it must not be mere posturing, but it must flow naturally out of you. Only then will you truly have reality, and only then will you have gained life. Let Me use the example of the service-doers that everyone is familiar with. Anyone can talk about the loftiest theories regarding the service-doers; you all have a decent level of understanding regarding this matter, and each of you is more proficient at talking about this subject matter than the previous one, as if this were a competition. However, if man has not undergone a major trial, it is hard to say he has a good testimony. In short, man's living out is still very lacking, and this is out of tune with his understanding. Therefore, it has yet to become man's actual stature, and it is not yet man's life. Because man's understanding has not been brought into reality, his stature is still like a castle built on sand, teetering and on the verge of collapse. Man has too little of reality—it is almost impossible to find any reality in man. There is too little reality naturally flowing from man and all the reality in his life has been forced, which is why I say that man possesses no reality. Don't put too much stock in men saying that their love of God never changes—this is only what they say before they have been faced with trials. Once they are suddenly faced with trials, the things that they speak of will once again become incompatible with reality, and it will once again prove that men possess no reality. It can be said that whenever you encounter things that do not fit with your notions and require that you put yourself aside, these are your trials. Prior to God's will being revealed, there is a rigorous test for every man, an immense trial for everyone—can you see clearly through this matter? When God wants to try men, He always lets them make their choices before the truth of the facts has been revealed. This is to say that when God is trying you, He will never tell you the truth, and that is how men may be exposed. This is one way that God carries out His work, to see whether you understand the God of today, and to see whether you possess any reality. Are you truly free of doubts regarding God's work? Will you be able to stand firm when a major trial comes upon you? Who dares to say words such as "I guarantee there will be no problems"? Who dares to say words such as "Others might have doubts, but I shall never doubt"? Just as the times Peter was put under trials—always talking big before the truths had been revealed. This is not a personal flaw unique to Peter; this is the greatest difficulty facing every man now. If I were to visit several places, or if I were to visit several brothers and sisters, to look at your understanding of God's work of today, you would certainly be able to talk about many of your understandings, and it would appear that you do not have any doubts. If I were to ask you: "Can you really determine that the work of today is performed by

God Himself? Without any doubt?" you would certainly answer: "Without any doubt, it is the work performed by the Spirit of God." Once you have answered in such a way, you surely would not have a shred of doubt and you might even feel great enjoyment—you might feel that you have gained a bit of reality. Those who tend to understand things in this manner are those who are in possession of less reality; the more one thinks that he's gained it, the more one won't be able to stand firm in trials. Woe to those who are arrogant and haughty, and woe to those who have no knowledge of themselves. Such men are the best at talking yet fare the worst in their actions. When there is the smallest sign of trouble, these men will start to have doubts and the thought of quitting enters their mind. They have no possession of any reality; all that they have are theories loftier than those of religion, without any of the realities that God now demands. I am most disgusted by those who only speak of theories and have no reality. They make the loudest cries when carrying out their work, yet they fall apart as soon as they are faced with reality. Doesn't it show that these people have no reality? No matter how ferocious the wind and waves, if you can remain standing without a shred of doubt entering your mind, and you can stand firm and not be in a state of denial even when there is no one else left, then this counts as you having true understanding and you truly being in possession of reality. If you follow whichever way the wind blows, if you follow the majority and learn to say what others are saying, no matter how well you say such things, it is no proof that you are in possession of reality. Therefore, I suggest that you not be premature in shouting out empty words. Do you know the work that God will perform? Do not behave like another Peter lest you bring shame to yourself and you can no longer hold your head high—this doesn't do anyone any good. Most men have no real stature. God has performed a great deal of work but He has not made reality come upon people; to be more exact, God has never personally chastised anyone. So, some of them have been exposed by such trials, with their tentacles of sin crawling further and further out, thinking that they can treat God in an offhanded manner, and doing whatever they want. Since they are not even able to withstand this kind of trial, the more challenging trials are out of the question, and reality is also out of the question. Is this not trying to fool God? To have reality is not something that can be faked, and neither is it something that you can attain from your knowledge of it. It is based on your true stature, and it is based on whether you are able to withstand all trials. Do you understand now?

God's requirement of men is not simply to be able to talk about reality. Wouldn't that be too easy? Why does God then talk about entry into life? Why does He talk about transformation? If one is merely capable of empty talk of reality, could a transformation in disposition be achieved? Training a group of good soldiers of the kingdom is not the same as training men who can only talk about reality or men who only boast, but it is training men who can live out God's words at all times, who are unyielding regardless of the setbacks that they face, and who live in accordance with God's words at all times, and do not go back to the world. This is the reality that God talks about, and this is God's requirement of men. Therefore, do not see the reality spoken of by God as too simple. Mere enlightenment by the Holy Spirit does not equal the possession of reality: This is not the stature of men, but the grace of God, and it does not involve any achievements of men. Each man must endure Peter's sufferings, and even more possess Peter's glory, which is what men live out after they have gained the work of God. Only this can be called reality. Do not think that you will possess reality because you can talk about reality. This is a fallacy, this does not fit with God's will, and it has no actual significance. Do not say such things in the future—extinguish such sayings! All those with a false understanding of God's words are unbelievers. They do not have any real knowledge, much less any real stature; they are ignorant people without reality. That is, all those who live outside of the substance of God's words are unbelievers. Those deemed unbelievers by men are beasts in the eyes of God, and those deemed unbelievers by God are those who do not have God's words as their life. Therefore, those who do not possess the reality of God's words and who fail to live out God's words are unbelievers. God's intention is to make it so that everyone lives out the reality of God's words. It is not simply that everyone is able to talk about reality, but more importantly, that everyone is able to live out the reality of God's words. The reality that man perceives is too superficial, it has no value, it cannot fulfill God's will, it is too lowly, is not even worthy of mention, is lacking too much, and is too far off from the standard of God's requirements. Each of you will be subject to a major inspection to see which of you only knows to talk about your understanding but is unable to point out the path, and to see which of you is useless trash. Remember this in the future! Do not talk about empty understandings—only talk about the path of practice, and about reality. Transition from real knowledge to actual practice, and then transition from practicing to living out reality. Do not lecture others, and do not talk about real knowledge. If your understanding is a path, then you can release it; if it is not a path, then please shut up, and stop talking. What you say is useless—it is just some words of understanding to fool God and to have others envy you. Is that not your ambition? Is this not deliberately toying with others? Is there any value in this? Only talk about understanding after you have experienced it, and then you will no longer be boasting. Otherwise you are only someone who says arrogant words. You cannot even overcome many things or rebel against your own flesh in your actual experience, always doing whatever you are driven to do by your desires, not satisfying God's will, yet you still have the gall to talk of theoretical understandings—you are shameless! You still have the gall to talk about your understanding of God's words—how impudent of you! Orating and boasting has become your nature, and you have become accustomed to doing this. It is at your fingertips whenever you want to talk, you do it smoothly and offhandedly, and you indulge in ornamentations when it comes to practicing. Is this not fooling others? You may be able to fool men, but God cannot be fooled. Men do not know and have no discernment, but God is serious about such matters, and He will not spare you. Your brothers and sisters might advocate for you, praising your understanding, admiring you, but if you have no reality, the Holy Spirit will not spare you. Perhaps the practical God will not pick on your flaws, but God's Spirit will not pay any attention to you, and that will be enough for you to bear. Do you believe this? Talk more about the reality of practice; have you forgotten already? Talk more about the practical paths; have you forgotten already? "Speak less of the lofty theories or worthless inflated talk, and it is best to begin practice starting now." Have you forgotten these words? Do you not understand any of this? Do you have no understanding of God's will?

KNOWING GOD'S WORK TODAY

To know God's work in these times is, for the most part, to know God incarnate of the last days, what His principal ministry is, and what He has come to do on earth. I have previously mentioned in My words that God has come to earth (during the last days) to set an exemplar before departing. How does God set this exemplar? By speaking words, by working and speaking throughout the land. This is God's work during the last days; He only speaks, so that the earth becomes a world of words, so that every person is provided for and enlightened by His words, and so that man's spirit is awakened and he is clear about the visions. During the last days, God incarnate has come to earth chiefly in order to speak words. When Jesus came, He spread the gospel of the kingdom of heaven, and accomplished the work of redemption of the crucifixion. He brought an end to the Age of Law, and abolished all the old things. The arrival of Jesus ended the Age of Law and ushered in the Age of Grace. The arrival of God incarnate of the last days has brought an end to the Age of Grace. He has come chiefly to speak His words, to use words to make man perfect, to illuminate and enlighten man, and to remove the place of the vague God within man's heart. This is not the stage of work that Jesus did when He came. When Jesus came, He performed many miracles, He healed and cast out demons, and He did the work of redemption of the crucifixion. As a consequence, in his conceptions, man believes that this is how God should be. For when Jesus came, He did not do the work of removing the image of the vague God from man's heart; when He came, He was crucified, He healed and cast out demons, and He spread the gospel of the kingdom of heaven. In one regard, the incarnation of God during the last days removes the place held by the vague God in the conceptions of man, so that there is no longer the image of the vague God in man's heart. Using His actual words and actual work, He moves across all lands, and the work He does among man is exceptionally real and normal, such that man comes to know the reality of God, and the vague God loses his place in man's heart. In another regard, God uses the words spoken by His flesh to make man complete, and accomplish all things. This is the work that God will accomplish during the last days.

What you must know:

1. The work of God is not supernatural, and you should not harbor conceptions about it.

2. You must understand the principal work that God incarnate has come to do this time.

He has not come to heal, or to cast out demons, or to perform miracles, and He has not come to spread the gospel of repentance, or to grant man redemption. That is because Jesus has already done this work, and God does not repeat the same work. Today, God has come to bring an end to the Age of Grace and cast out all the practices of the Age of Grace. The practical God has come chiefly to show that He is real. When Jesus came, He spoke few words; He primarily displayed miracles, performed signs and wonders, and healed and cast out demons, or else He spoke prophecies in order to convince man, and to make man see that He really was God, and was a dispassionate God. Ultimately, He completed the work of crucifixion. The God of today does not display signs and wonders, nor does He heal and cast out demons. When Jesus came, the work He did represented one part of God, but this time God has come to do the stage of work that is due, for God does not repeat the same work; He is the God that is always new and never old, and so all that you see today is the words and work of the practical God.

God incarnate of the last days has come chiefly in order to speak His words, to explain all that is necessary to the life of man, to point out that which man should enter into, to show man the deeds of God, and to show man the wisdom, omnipotence, and wondrousness of God. Through the many ways in which God speaks, man beholds the supremacy of God, the magnitude of God, and, moreover, the humility and hiddenness of God. Man sees that God is supreme, but that He is humble and hidden, and can become the least of all. Some of His words are spoken directly from the perspective of the Spirit, some of His words are spoken directly from the perspective of man, and some of His words are spoken from the perspective of the third person. In this can be seen that the manner of God's work varies greatly and it is through words that He allows man to see it. God's work during the last days is both normal and real, and thus the group of people of the last days are subjected to the greatest of all trials. Because of the normality and reality of God, all people have entered amid such trials; that man has descended into the trials of God is because of the normality and reality of God. During the age of Jesus, there were no conceptions or trials. Because most of the work done by Jesus was in accordance with man's conceptions, people followed Him, and had no conceptions about Him. The trials of today are the greatest ever faced by man, and when it is said that these people have come out of the great tribulation, this is the tribulation that is referred to.

Today, God speaks to create faith, love, sufferance and obedience in these people. The words spoken by God incarnate of the last days are according to the substance of man's nature, according to the behavior of man, and according to that which man should enter into today. His method of speaking^[a] is both real and normal: He does not speak of tomorrow, nor does He look back on yesterday; He speaks only of that which should be entered into, put into practice, and understood today. If, during the present day, there is to emerge a person who is able to display signs and wonders, and can cast out demons, and heal, and perform many miracles, and if this person claims that they are the coming of Jesus, then this would be the counterfeit of evil spirits, and their imitation of Jesus. Remember this! God does not repeat the same work. Jesus' stage of work has already been completed, and God will never again undertake that stage of work. The work of God is irreconcilable with the conceptions of man; for example, the Old Testament foretold the coming of a Messiah, but it turned out that Jesus came, so it would be wrong for another Messiah to come again. Jesus has already come once, and it would be wrong if Jesus were to come again this time. There is one name for every age, and each name is characterized by the age. In the conceptions of man, God must always display signs and wonders, must always heal and cast out demons, and must always be just like Jesus, yet this time God is not like that at all. If, during the last days, God still displayed signs and wonders, and still cast out demons and healed—if He did exactly the same as Jesus—then God would be repeating the same work, and the work of Jesus would have no significance or value. Thus, God carries out one stage of work in every age. Once each stage of His work has been completed, it is soon imitated by evil spirits, and after Satan begins to follow on the heels of God, God changes to a different method; once God has completed a stage of His work, it is imitated by evil spirits. You must be clear about these things. Why is the work of God today different to the work of Jesus? Why does God today not display signs and wonders, not cast out demons, and not heal? If Jesus' work were the same as the work done during the Age of Law, could He have represented the God of the Age of Grace? Could Jesus have completed the work of crucifixion? If, as in the Age of Law, Jesus had entered into the temple and kept the Sabbath, then He would have been persecuted by none and embraced by all. If that were so, could He have been crucified? Could He have completed the work of redemption? What would be the point if God incarnate of the last days displayed signs and wonders, like Jesus? Only if God does another part of His work during the last days, one that represents part of His management plan, can man gain a deeper knowledge of God, and only then can God's management plan be completed.

During the last days God has come chiefly in order to speak His words. He speaks from the perspective of the Spirit, from the perspective of man, and from the perspective of the third person; He speaks in different ways, using one way for a period of time, and uses the ways of speaking to change the conceptions of man and remove the image of the vague God from man's heart. This is the main work done by God. Because man believes that God has come to heal, to cast out demons, to perform miracles, and to bestow material blessings upon man, God carries out this stage of work—the work of chastisement and judgment—in order to remove such things from the conceptions of man, so that man may know the reality and normality of God, and so that the image of Jesus may be removed from his heart and replaced by a new image of God. As soon as the image of God within man becomes old, then it becomes an idol. When Jesus came and carried out that stage of work, He did not represent the entirety of God. He performed some signs and wonders, spoke some words, and was ultimately crucified, and He represented one part of God. He could not represent all that is of God, but represented God in doing one part of God's work. That is because God is so great, and so wondrous, and is unfathomable, and because God only does one part of His work in every age. The work done by God during this age is chiefly the provision of the words for the life of man, the disclosure of the substance of the nature of man and the corrupt disposition of man, the elimination of religious conceptions, feudal thinking, outdated thinking, as well as the knowledge and culture of man. This must all be laid bare and cleansed away through the words of God. In the last days, God uses words, and not signs and wonders, to make man perfect. He uses His words to expose man, to judge man, to chastise man, and to make man perfect, so that in the words of God, man comes to see the wisdom and loveliness of God, and comes to understand the disposition of God, so that through the words of God, man beholds the deeds of God. During the Age of Law, Jehovah led Moses out of Egypt with His words, and spoke some words to the Israelites; at that time, part of the deeds of God were made plain, but because the caliber of man was limited and nothing could make his knowledge complete, God continued to speak and work. In the Age of Grace, man once more saw part of the deeds of God. Jesus was able to show signs and wonders, to heal and cast out demons, and be crucified, three days after which He was resurrected and appeared in the flesh before man. Of God, man knew no more than this. Man knows as much as is shown to him by God, and if God were to show nothing more to man, then such would be the extent of man's delimitation of God. Thus, God continues to work, so that man's knowledge of Him may become deeper, and so that he may gradually come to know the substance of God. God uses His words to make man perfect. Your corrupt disposition is disclosed by the words of God, and your religious conceptions are replaced by the reality of God. God incarnate of the last days has chiefly come to fulfill the words that "the Word becomes flesh, the Word comes into the flesh, and the Word appears in the flesh," and if you do not have a thorough knowledge of this, then you will still be unable to stand fast; during the last days, God primarily intends to accomplish a stage of work in which the Word appears in the flesh, and this is one part of God's management plan. Thus, your knowledge must be clear; regardless of how God works, God does not allow man to delimit Him. If God did not do this work during the last days, then man's knowledge of Him could go no further. You would only know that God can be crucified and can destroy Sodom, and that Jesus can be raised from the dead and appear to Peter.... But you would never say that God's words can accomplish all, and can conquer man. Only through experiencing God's words can you speak of such knowledge, and the more of God's work that you experience, the more thorough your knowledge of Him will become. Only then will you cease to delimit God within your own conceptions. Man comes to know God by experiencing His work, and there is no other correct way to know God. Today, there are many people who do nothing but wait to see signs and wonders and the time of the catastrophe. Do you believe in God, or do you believe in the catastrophe? If you wait until the catastrophe it will be too late, and if God does not send down the catastrophe, is He then not God? Do you believe in signs and wonders, or do you believe in God Himself? Jesus did not display signs and wonders when He was derided by others; was He not God? Do you believe in signs and wonders, or do you believe in the substance of God? Man's views about belief in God are wrong! Jehovah spoke many words during the Age of Law, but even today some of them have yet to be fulfilled. Can you say that Jehovah was not God?

Today, it should be clear to all of you that, in the last days, it is principally the fact of "the Word becomes flesh" that is accomplished by God. Through His actual work on earth, He causes man to know Him, and to engage with Him, and to see His actual deeds. He causes man to clearly see that He is able to display signs and wonders and there are also times when He is unable to do so, and this is dependent on the age. From this you can see that God is not incapable of displaying signs and wonders, but instead changes His working according to His work, and according to the age. In the current stage of work, He does not show signs and wonders; that He showed some signs and wonders in the age of Jesus was because His work in that age was different. God does not do that work today, and some people believe Him incapable of displaying signs and wonders, or else they think that if He does not display signs and wonders, then He is not God. Is that not a fallacy? God is able to display signs and wonders, but He is working in a different age, and so He does not do such work. Because this is a different age, and because this is a different stage of God's work, the deeds made plain by God are also different. Man's belief in God is not the belief in signs and wonders, nor the belief in miracles, but the belief in His real work during the new age. Man comes to know God through the manner in which God works, and this knowledge produces in man the belief in God, which is to say, the belief in the work and deeds of God. In this stage of work, God mainly speaks. Do not wait to see signs and wonders; you won't see them! For you were not born during the Age of Grace. If you had been, you could have seen signs and wonders, but you were born during the last days, and so you can see only the reality and normality of God. Do not expect to see the supernatural Jesus during the last days. You are only able to see the practical God incarnate, who is no different from any normal man. In each age, God makes plain different deeds. In each age He makes plain part of the deeds of God, and the work of each age represents one part of the disposition of God, and represents one part of the deeds of God. The deeds that He makes plain vary with the age in which He works, but they all give man a knowledge of God that is deeper, a belief in God that is more down-to-earth, and more true. Man believes in God because of all of the deeds of God, and because God is so wondrous, so great, because He is almighty, and is unfathomable. If you believe in God because He is able to perform signs and wonders and can heal and cast out demons, then your view is wrong, and some people will say to you, “Are not evil spirits also able to do such things?” Is this not to confuse the image of God with the image of Satan? Today, man’s belief in God is because of His many deeds and the many ways in which He works and speaks. God uses His utterances to conquer man and make him perfect. Man believes in God because of His many deeds, not because He is able to show signs and wonders, and man only understands Him because they see His deeds. Only by knowing the actual deeds of God, how He works, what wise methods He uses, how He speaks, and how He makes man perfect—only by knowing these aspects—can you comprehend the reality of God and understand His disposition. What He likes, what He loathes, how He works upon man—by understanding the likes and dislikes of God, you can differentiate between that which is positive and negative, and through your knowledge of God there is progress in your life. In short, you must gain a knowledge of God’s work, and must put straight your views about the belief in God.

IS THE WORK OF GOD SO SIMPLE AS MAN IMAGINES?

As one who believes in God, you should understand that, today, in receiving the work of God in the last days and all the work of God’s plan in you, you have really received great exaltation and salvation from God. All of God’s work in the entire universe has focused on this group of people. He has devoted all His efforts to you and sacrificed all for you; He has reclaimed and given to you all the work of the Spirit throughout the universe. That is why I say, you are the fortunate. Moreover, He has shifted His glory from Israel, His chosen people, to you, in order to make the purpose of His plan fully manifest through you group of people. Therefore, you are those who will receive the inheritance of God, and even more the heirs of God's glory. Perhaps you all remember these words: "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, works for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." In the past, you have all heard this saying, yet none understood the true meaning of the words. Today, you know well the real significance they hold. These words are what God will accomplish in the last days. And they will be accomplished upon those cruelly afflicted by the great red dragon in the land where it lies. The great red dragon persecutes God and is the enemy of God, so in this land, those who believe in God are subjected to humiliation and persecution. That is why these words will become reality in you group of people. As the work is carried out in a land that opposes God, all of His work is met with inordinate hindrance, and many of His words cannot be accomplished in good time; hence, people are refined because of the words of God. This too is an element of suffering. It is greatly arduous for God to carry out His work in the land of the great red dragon, but it is through such difficulty that God does a stage of His work to make manifest His wisdom and wondrous deeds. God takes this opportunity to make this group of people complete. Because of people's suffering, their caliber, and all the satanic disposition of people in this unclean land, God does His work of purification and conquest so that, from this, He may gain glory and gain those who stand witness to His deeds. This is the full significance of all the sacrifices that God has made for this group of people. That is to say, God does the work of conquest just through those who oppose Him. Therefore, only doing so can manifest the great power of God. In other words, only those in the unclean land are worthy to inherit the glory of God, and only this can give prominence to the great power of God. That is why I say the glory of God is gained in the unclean land and from those who live within. This is the will of God. This is just as in the stage of Jesus' work; He could only be glorified among those Pharisees who persecuted Him. If not for such persecution and the betrayal of Judas, Jesus would not have been ridiculed or slandered, much less crucified, and thus could never have gained glory. Wherever God works in each age and wherever He does His work in the flesh, He gains glory there and there gains those He intends to gain. This is the plan of God's work, and this is His management.

In God's plan of several thousand years, the work done in the flesh is in two parts: First is the work of the crucifixion, for which He is glorified; the other is the work of conquest and perfection in the last days, through which He will gain glory. This is the management of God. Thus, do not regard as too simple the work of God or God's commission to you. You are all heirs of the far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory of God, and this was specially ordained by God. Of the two parts of His glory, one is revealed in you; the entirety of one part of God's glory is bestowed upon you so that it may be your inheritance. This is the exaltation from God and His plan predetermined long ago. Given the greatness of the work God has done in the land in which the great red dragon dwells, such work, if moved elsewhere, would have long ago borne great fruit and been easily accepted by man. And such work would be far too easy to accept for those clergymen of the West who believe in God, for the stage of work by Jesus serves as a precedent. This is why He is unable to achieve this stage of work of glorification elsewhere; that is, as there is support from all men and acknowledgment from all nations, there is no place for the glory of God to rest on. And this is precisely the extraordinary significance that this stage of work holds in this land. Among you, there is not one man who receives the protection of the law; rather, you are penalized by the law, and the greater difficulty is that no man understands you, be it your relatives, your parents, your friends, or your colleagues. None understand you. When God rejects you, there is no way for you to continue living on earth. However, even so, people cannot bear to leave God; this is the significance of God's conquest of people, and this is God's glory. What you have inherited this day surpasses that of all former apostles and prophets and is greater even than that of Moses and Peter. Blessings cannot be received in a day or two; they must be earned through much sacrifice. That is, you must have refined love, great faith, and the many truths that God asks you to attain; in addition, you must be able to set your face toward justice and never be cowed or submit, and you must have a constant and unabating love for God. Resolution is demanded of you, as is change in your life disposition; your corruption must be remedied, and you must accept all the orchestration of God without complaint, and even be obedient until death. This is what you ought to achieve. This is the final aim of God, and the demands God asks of this group of people. As He bestows upon you, so too must He ask of you in return and make of you fitting demands. Therefore, all the work of God is not without reason, and from this can be seen why God time and again does the work of high standards and strict requirements. This is why you ought to be filled with faith in God. In short, all the work of God is done for your sake, so that you will be worthy to receive His inheritance. This is not so much for the sake of God's own glory but for the sake of your salvation and for perfecting this group of people deeply afflicted in the unclean land. You must understand the will of God. And so I exhort the many ignorant people without any insight or sense: Do not test God and resist no more. God has already endured all suffering that man has never endured, and long ago suffered more humiliation in man's stead. What else can you not let go of? What could be more important than the will of God? What could be above God's love? It is already a task doubly arduous for God to carry out His work in this unclean land. If man knowingly and willfully transgresses, the work of God will have to be prolonged. In any event, this is not in the interests of any, and is of benefit to none. God is not bound by time; His work and His glory come first. Therefore, however long it takes, He will not spare any sacrifice if it is His work. This is the disposition of God: He will not rest until His work is achieved. Only when the time comes that He obtains the second part of His glory can His work be drawn to a close. Should God be unable to finish throughout the universe the work of the second part of His glorification, His day will never come, His hand will never stray from His chosen, His glory will never come upon Israel, and His plan will never be concluded. You should see that the will and the work of God are not as simple as the creation of the heavens and earth and all things. For the work of today is to transform those who have been corrupted, who have grown extremely numb, and to purify those who were created then worked on by Satan, not to create Adam or Eve, much less to make the light or create all manner of plants and animals. His work now is to make pure all that has been corrupted by Satan so that they may be regained and become His possession and become His glory. Such work is not as simple as man imagines the creation of the heavens and earth and all things to be, and it is not akin to the work of cursing Satan to the bottomless pit as man imagines. Rather, it is to transform man, to turn that which is negative into the positive and to take into His possession that which does not belong to Him. This is the inside story of this stage of God's work. You must realize it, and should not oversimplify matters. The work of God is unlike any ordinary work. Its marvel cannot be conceived by the mind of man, and its wisdom cannot be attained by such. God is not creating all things, and He is not destroying them. Rather, He is changing all of His creation and purifying all things that have been defiled by Satan. Therefore, God shall commence work of great magnitude, and this is the total significance of the work of God. From these words, do you believe that the work of God is so simple?

YOU OUGHT TO LIVE FOR THE TRUTH SINCE YOU BELIEVE IN GOD

The common problem that exists in all men is that they understand the truth but cannot put it into practice. One factor is that man is unwilling to pay the price, and the other is that man's discernment is too inadequate; he is unable to see past many of the difficulties that exist in real life and knows not how to appropriately practice. As man has too little experience, poor caliber, and limited understanding of the truth, he is unable to resolve the difficulties he encounters in life. He can only pay lip service to his faith in God, yet is unable to bring God into his everyday life. In other words, God is God, and life is life, as if man has no relationship with God in his life. That is what all men believe. Such manner of faith in God will not allow man to be gained and perfected by Him in reality. In truth, it is not that the word of God is incomplete, but rather that the ability of man to receive His word is simply inadequate. It can be said that almost no man acts as originally required by God. Rather, their faith in God is in accordance with their own intentions, established religious notions, and customs. Few are those who undergo a transformation following the acceptance of God's word and begin to act in accordance with His will. Rather, they persist in their mistaken beliefs. When man begins to believe in God, he does so based on the conventional rules of religion, and lives and interacts with others entirely on the basis of his own philosophy of life. Such is the case for nine out of every ten people. Very few are those who formulate another plan and turn over a new leaf after beginning to believe in God. None regard or put into practice the word of God as the truth.

Take faith in Jesus, for instance. Whether a man was a novice in the faith or had been of the faith for a very long time, all simply put to use whatever talents they had and demonstrated whatever skills they possessed. Men simply added “faith in God,” these three words, into their usual lives, yet made no changes to their disposition, and their faith in God grew not in the slightest. The pursuit of man was neither hot nor cold. He said not that he did not believe, yet neither did he give fully to God. He had never truly loved God or obeyed God. His faith in God was both genuine and feigned, and he turned a blind eye and was not earnest in practice of his faith. He continued in such a state of befuddlement from the very beginning until his time of death. What is the meaning in this? Today, you must set on the right track since you believe in the practical God. Having faith in God, you should not solely seek blessings, but seek to love God and know God. Through His enlightenment and your own pursuit, you can eat and drink His word, develop a true understanding of God, and have a true love of God that comes from your heart. In other words, your love for God is most genuine, such that none can destroy or stand in the way of your love for Him. Then you are on the right track of faith in God. It proves that you belong to God, for your heart has been taken possession of by God and you can then be possessed by nothing else. Owing to your experience, the price you paid, and the work of God, you are able to develop an unbidden love for God. Then you are freed from the influence of Satan and live in the light of God’s word. Only when you have broken free from the influence of darkness can you be deemed to have gained God. In your belief of God, you must seek this goal. This is the duty of each of you. None should be complacent with things as they are. You cannot be of two minds toward the work of God or regard it lightly. You should think of God in all respects and at all times, and do all things for His sake. And when you speak or do things, you should place the interests of the house of God first. Only this conforms to God’s will.

The greatest fault of man having faith in God is that his faith is in words only, and God exists not at all in his practical life. All men, indeed, believe in the existence of God, yet God is not a part of their everyday lives. Many prayers to God come from the mouth of man, but God has little place in his heart, and so God tries man again and again. As man is impure, God has no alternative but to try man, so that he may feel ashamed and come to know himself in the trials. Otherwise, man shall all become the children of the archangel, and become increasingly corrupt. During man’s belief in God, many personal motives and objectives are cast off as he is unceasingly cleansed by God. Otherwise, no man can be used by God, and God has no way of doing in man the work that He ought. God first cleanses man. In this process, man may come to know himself and God may change man. Only after this can God work His life into man, and only in this way can the heart of man be fully turned to God. So, believing in God is not so simple as man may say. As God sees it, if you only have knowledge but do not have His word as life; if you are limited only to your own knowledge but cannot practice the truth or live out the word of God, then this is proof still that you have no heart of love for God, and shows that your heart belongs not to God. Coming to know God by believing in Him; this is the final goal and that which man shall seek. You must devote effort to living out the words of God so that they may be realized in your practice. If you have only doctrinal knowledge, then your faith in God will come to naught. Only if you then also practice and live out His word can your faith be considered complete and in accord with God's will. On this road, many men can speak of much knowledge, but at their time of death, their eyes brim with tears, and they hate themselves for having wasted a lifetime and lived for naught to old age. They had only understanding but never the opportunity to glorify God. They spent their entire lives fighting and journeying to and fro, yet upon their hour of death, there is regret in their hearts. Only in their dying hour do many come to their senses and realize the meaning of life. Is this then not too late? Why do you not seize the day and seek the truth that you love? Why wait until tomorrow? If in life you do not suffer for the truth or seek to gain it, could it be that you wish to feel regret in your dying hour? If so, then why believe in God? In truth, there are many matters in which man, if he devotes just the slightest effort, can put the truth into practice and thereby satisfy God. The heart of man is constantly possessed by demons and so he cannot act for the sake of God. Rather, he constantly journeys to and fro for the flesh, and profits nothing in the end. It is for these reasons that man has constant troubles and afflictions. Are these not the torments of Satan? Is this not corruption of the flesh? You should not fool God by only paying lip service. Rather, you must take tangible action. Do not fool yourself; what is the meaning in that? What can you gain by living for the sake of your flesh and toiling for fame and fortune?

THE SEVEN THUNDERS PEAL—PROPHESYING THAT THE GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM SHALL SPREAD THROUGHOUT THE UNIVERSE

I am spreading My work among the Gentile nations. My glory flashes throughout the universe; My will is embodied within a scattering of men, all steered by My hand and setting about the tasks I have assigned. From this point on, I have entered into a new age, bringing all men into another world. When I returned to My “homeland,” I commenced yet another part of the work in My original plan, so that man would come to know Me more deeply. I regard the universe in its entirety and see that^[a] it is an opportune time for My work, so I hurry back and forth, doing My new work upon man. This is a new age, after all, and I have brought new work to take more new people into the new age and to cast aside more of those that I shall eliminate. In the nation of the great red dragon, I have carried out a stage of work unfathomable to human beings, causing them to sway in the wind, after which many quietly drift away with the blowing of the wind. Truly, this is the “threshing floor” I am about to clear; it is what I yearn for and it is also My plan. For many wicked ones have crept in while I am at work, but I am in no hurry to drive them away. Rather, I shall disperse them when the time is right. Only after that shall I be the fountain of life, allowing those who truly love Me to receive from Me the fruit of the fig tree and the fragrance of the lily. In the land where Satan sojourns, the land of dust, there remains no pure gold, only sand, and so, meeting with these circumstances, I do such a stage of work. You should know that what I gain is pure, refined gold, not sand. How can the wicked remain in My house? How can I allow foxes to be parasites in My paradise? I employ every conceivable method to drive these things away. Before My will is revealed, no one is aware of what I am about to do. Taking this opportunity, I drive away those wicked ones, and they are forced to leave My presence. This is what I do to the wicked, but there will still be a day for them to do service for Me. The desire of men for blessings is much too strong; therefore I turn My body around and show My glorious countenance to the Gentile nations, so that men may all live in a world of their own and judge themselves, while I go on saying the words that I should say, and supplying men with what they need. When men come to their senses, I will have long since spread My work. I shall then express My will to men, and begin the second part of My work upon men, letting all men follow Me closely so as to coordinate with My work, and letting men do everything in their ability to carry out with Me the work that I must do.

None have faith that they will see My glory, and I do not compel them, but rather remove My glory from mankind's midst and take it to another world. When men once again repent, then I shall take My glory and show it to even more of those of faith. This is the principle by which I work. For there is a time when My glory leaves Canaan, and there is also a time when My glory leaves the chosen. Furthermore, there is a time when My glory leaves the whole earth, causing it to grow dim and plunging it into darkness. Even the land of Canaan shall not see the sunlight; all men will lose their faith, but none can bear to leave the fragrance of the land of Canaan. Only when I pass into the new heaven and earth shall I reveal the other part of My glory first in the land of Canaan, causing a glimmer of light to shine forth in the whole earth, sunk in pitch-dark night, so that the whole earth will come to the light. Let men all over the earth come to draw strength from the power of the light, allowing My glory to increase and appear anew to every nation. Let all humanity realize that I have long ago come to the human world and long ago brought My glory from Israel to the East; for My glory shines from the East, where it was brought over from the Age of Grace to this day. But it was from Israel that I departed and from there that I arrived in the East. Only when the light of the East gradually turns white will the darkness across the earth begin to turn to light, and only then will man discover that I have long ago gone from Israel and am rising anew in the East. Having once descended into Israel and later departed from it, I cannot again be born into Israel, because My work leads all of the universe and, what is more, the lightning flashes straight from East to West. For this reason I have descended in the East and brought Canaan to the people of the East. I wish to bring people from all over the earth to the land of Canaan, and so I continue to issue forth utterances in the land of Canaan to control the entire universe. At this time, there is no light in all the earth apart from Canaan, and all men are imperiled by hunger and cold. I gave My glory to Israel and then took it away, and afterward I brought the Israelites to the East, and all of humanity to the East. I have brought them all to the light so that they may be reunited with it, and be in association with it, and no longer have to search for it. I shall let all who are searching see the light again and see the glory I had in Israel; I shall let them see that I have long ago come down upon a white cloud into the midst of mankind, let them see the countless clouds of white and fruits in their abundant clusters, and, what is more, let them see Jehovah God of Israel. I shall let them look upon the Master of the Jews, the longed-for Messiah, and the full appearance of Me who have been persecuted by kings throughout the ages. I shall work upon the entire universe and I shall perform great work, revealing all My glory and all My deeds to man in the last days. I shall show My glorious countenance in its fullness to those who have waited many years for Me, to those who have longed for Me to come upon a white cloud, to Israel that has longed for Me to appear once again, and to all mankind who persecute Me, so that all will know that I have long ago taken away My glory and brought it to the East, so that it is no longer in Judea. For the last days have already come!

Throughout the universe I am doing My work, and in the East, thunderous crashes issue forth endlessly, shaking all denominations and sects. It is My voice that has led all men into the present. I shall cause all men to be conquered by My voice, to fall into this stream, and submit before Me, for I have long since reclaimed My glory from all the earth and issued it forth anew in the East. Who does not long to see My glory? Who does not anxiously await My return? Who does not thirst for My reappearance? Who does not pine for My loveliness? Who would not come to the light? Who would not look upon the richness of Canaan? Who does not long for the return of the Redeemer? Who does not adore the Great Almighty? My voice shall spread throughout the earth; I wish, facing My chosen people, to speak more words to them. Like the mighty thunders that shake the mountains and rivers, I speak My words to the whole universe and to mankind. Hence the words in My mouth have become man's treasure, and all men cherish My words. The lightning flashes from the East all the way to the West. My words are such that man is loath to give them up and at the same time finds them unfathomable, but rejoices in them all the more. Like a newborn infant, all men are glad and joyful, celebrating My coming. By means of My voice, I shall bring all men before Me. Thenceforth, I shall formally enter into the race of men so that they will come to worship Me. With the glory that I radiate and the words in My mouth, I shall make it such that all men come before Me and see that the lightning flashes from the East and that I have also descended unto the “Mount of Olives” of the East. They will see that I have already long been on earth, no longer as the Son of the Jews but as the Lightning of the East. For I have long since been resurrected, and have departed from mankind’s midst, and then reappeared with glory among men. I am He who was worshiped countless ages before now, and I am also the infant forsaken by the Israelites countless ages before now. Moreover, I am the all-glorious Almighty God of the present age! Let all come before My throne and see My glorious countenance, hear My voice, and look upon My deeds. This is the entirety of My will; it is the end and the climax of My plan, as well as the purpose of My management. Let every nation worship Me, every tongue acknowledge Me, every man repose his faith in Me, and every people be subject unto Me!

THE ESSENTIAL DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE INCARNATE GOD AND PEOPLE USED BY GOD

For so many years God’s Spirit has been searchingly working on earth. Over the ages God has used so many people to do His work. Yet God’s Spirit still has no suitable resting place. So God moves through different people doing His work and largely He uses people to do it. That is, in all these many years, God’s work has never stopped. It keeps being carried forward in man, continuously to this day. Though God has said so much and done so much, man still does not know God, all because God has never appeared to man and He is formless. So God has to accomplish this work—having all men know the practical significance of the practical God. For this purpose, God must show His Spirit tangibly to people and work in their midst. Only when God’s Spirit assumes physical form, takes on flesh and bones, and visibly walks among people, accompanying them in their lives, sometimes showing and sometimes hiding Himself, are people able to more deeply understand Him. If God always remained in the flesh, He would not be able to fully complete His work. After working in the flesh for a period of time, doing the ministry that needs to be done in the flesh, God must depart the flesh and work in the spiritual realm in the image of the flesh just as Jesus did so after working for a period of time in normal humanity and completing all the work that He needed to complete. You may remember this from “The Path ... (5)”: “I remember My Father saying to Me, ‘On earth, only carry out My will and complete My commission. Nothing else is of Your concern.’” What do you see in this passage? When God comes to the earth, He only does the work of divinity. This is the heavenly Spirit’s commission to the incarnate God. He comes only to go everywhere and speak, to utter His voice in different methods and from different perspectives. He primarily holds supplying man and teaching man as His goals and working principle. He does not concern Himself with such things as interpersonal relationships or the details of people’s lives. His main ministry is to speak for the Spirit. When God’s Spirit appears in the flesh tangibly, He only provides for man’s life and releases the truth. He does not get involved in man’s work, that is, He does not participate in the work of humanity. Humans cannot do divine work, and God does not participate in human work. In all the years of God working on this earth, He has always used people to do His work. But these people cannot be considered God incarnate; they can only be considered people used by God. But the God of today can speak directly from the perspective of divinity, send forth the Spirit’s voice, and work on behalf of the Spirit. All those people whom God has used over the ages similarly have God’s Spirit working through their bodies, so why can’t they be called God? Today’s God is God’s Spirit working directly in the flesh, and Jesus was also God’s Spirit working in the flesh. These latter two are called God. So what’s the difference? Throughout time, the people whom God has used all have normal thought and reason. They all know how to conduct themselves and handle life’s affairs. They hold normal human ideology and have all the things normal people should have. Most of them have exceptional talent and innate intelligence. In working through these people, God’s Spirit harnesses their talents, which are their God-given gifts. It is God’s Spirit that brings their talents into play, using their strengths to serve God. However, God’s essence is ideology-free and thought-free. It does not incorporate human ideas and even lacks what humans normally have. That is, God does not even comprehend the principles of human conduct. This is how it is when today’s God comes to the earth. He works and speaks without incorporating human ideas or human thought, but directly reveals the original intentions of the Spirit and directly works on behalf of God. This means the Spirit comes forth to work, which brings in not even a bit of man's ideas. That is, the incarnate God embodies divinity directly, is without human thought or ideology, and has no understanding of the principles of human conduct. If there were only divine work (meaning if it were only God Himself doing the work), God's work could not be carried out on earth. So when God comes to earth, He has to have a few people He uses to work in humanity in conjunction with His work in divinity. In other words, He uses human work to support His divine work. Otherwise, man would be unable to come into direct contact with the divine work. This is how it was with Jesus and His disciples. During His life Jesus abolished the old laws and established new commandments. He also spoke a lot. All this was done in divinity. His disciples, such as Peter, Paul, and John, all rested their subsequent work on Jesus' words as its foundation. That is, God was doing launch work at that age, ushering in the Age of Grace. He brought in a new era, abolishing the old, and made the words "God is the Beginning and the End" come true. In other words, man must do human work on the foundation of divine work. After Jesus said everything He needed to say and finished His work on earth, He departed man. And people after Him worked according to the principles in His words and practiced according to the truths He spoke. These were all people working for Jesus. If it were Jesus alone doing the work, no matter how much He talked, people still would not be able to come into contact with His word, because He worked in divinity and could only speak divine speech. It was impossible for Him to explain things to the point where normal people could understand His word. So He had to have the apostles and prophets who came after Him supplement His work. This is the principle of how God incarnate works—using the incarnate flesh to speak and act so as to complete the work of divinity, and then using a few or more people after God's own heart to supplement God's work. That is, God uses people after His heart to shepherd and water in humanity so that every person can receive the truth.

If God only comes into the flesh and does the work of divinity without additionally having a few people after God's heart cooperating with Him, then man would be unable to understand God's will and unable to be in contact with God. God has to use normal people after

His heart to complete this work, to look after and shepherd churches, so that man's thinking and man's brain are able to imagine God's work. In other words, God uses a few people after His heart to "translate" His work in divinity, to reveal it, that is, to transform divine language into human language, so that people can all comprehend it, all understand it. If God did not do so, no one would understand God's divine language, because the number of such people after God's heart is, after all, small, and man's ability to comprehend is weak. That is why God chooses this method when working through the incarnation. If there were only divine work, man would be unable to know or be in contact with God because man does not understand God's language. Man is able to understand this language only through the use of people after God's heart to clarify His words. However, if there were only such people working in humanity, it would only be able to maintain man's normal life; it would not be able to transform man's disposition. God's work would not be able to have a new start; there would only be the same old songs, the same old platitudes. It is only via the incarnate God saying all that needs to be said and doing all that needs to be done at the flesh level, and people after Him working and experiencing according to His words, that their life disposition is able to change and they are able to flow with the times. He who works in divinity represents God, while those who work in humanity are people used by God. That is, the incarnate God is substantively different from the people used by God. The incarnate God can do the work of divinity, but the people used by God cannot. At the beginning of each age, God's Spirit speaks personally to launch the new era and bring man to a new beginning. When He finishes His speaking, it signifies that God's work in divinity is done. Thereafter, people all follow the lead of those used by God to enter life experience. Similarly, in this stage God brings man into the new age and gives everyone a new start. With this, God's work in the flesh concludes.

God comes to the earth not to perfect His normal humanity. He comes not to do the work of normal humanity, but only to do the work of divinity within normal humanity. What God considers normal humanity is not what man imagines. Man defines "normal humanity" as having a wife, or a husband, sons and daughters. To man,^[a] these things mean one is a normal person. But God does not see it this way. He sees normal humanity as having the normal human thoughts and lives and being born of normal people. But His normalcy does not include having a wife, or a husband, and children the way man understands normalcy. That is, to man, the normal humanity that God speaks of is what man would consider the absence of humanity, almost lacking in feeling and seemingly devoid of fleshly needs, just like Jesus, who had only the exterior of a normal person and took on the appearance of a normal person, but in essence did not completely possess what a normal person possesses. From this it can be seen that the incarnate God's substance does not encompass the entirety of normal humanity, but only a portion of the things that people should have, to sustain the rules of normal human living and normal human intellect. But these things have nothing to do with what man considers normal humanity. They are what God incarnate should have. Some people say, however, that God incarnate can be said to possess normal humanity only if He has a wife, sons and daughters, a family. Without these things, they say, He is not a normal person. I ask you then, does God have a wife? Is it possible for God to have a husband? Can God have children? Are these not fallacies? However, the incarnate God cannot spring from cracks between rocks or fall down from the sky. He can only be born to a normal human family. That is why He has parents and sisters. These are the things that the normal humanity of the incarnate God must have. This was the case with Jesus. Jesus had a father and mother, sisters and brothers. This was all normal. But if He had a wife and sons and daughters, then His would not have been the normal humanity that God wanted in the God incarnate. If so, He would not have been able to represent divinity in His work. It was because He did not have a wife or children but was born of normal people into a normal family that He was able to do the work of divinity. To clarify, what God considers a normal person is a person born into a normal family. Only such a person is qualified to do divine work. If, on the other hand, the person had a wife, children, or a husband, that person would not be able to do divine work because he would possess only the normal humanity that humans require but not the normal humanity that God requires. God's thoughts and people's understandings are often hugely different and leagues apart. Much of this stage of God's work fights against and vastly differs from people's notions. One can say that this stage of God's work is all done by divinity hands-on, with humanity playing a supporting role. Because God comes to the earth to perform His work Himself rather than letting man do it, He incarnates Himself in the flesh (in the body of an incomplete, normal person) to do His work. He uses this incarnation to present mankind with a new age, to tell mankind of the next step in His work, so they can practice according to the path described by His word. With that, God concludes His work in the flesh. He needs to depart mankind, no longer residing in the flesh of normal humanity, but rather moving away from man to do another part of His work. He then uses men after His own heart to continue His work on earth among this group of people, but in humanity.

The incarnate God cannot stay with man forever because God has a lot more other work to do. He cannot be bound to flesh; He has to shed the flesh to do the work He needs to do, though He does that work in the image of the flesh. When God comes to the earth, He does not wait until He has reached the form that a normal person reaches over a lifetime before dying and leaving. No matter how old His flesh is, when His work is finished, He goes and leaves man. He has no age, He does not count His days according to the age of man. Instead He ends His life in the flesh according to the step of His work. Some people may feel that God, who comes into the flesh, must develop to a certain stage, become an adult, reach old age, and leave only when that body fails. This is man's imagination; God does not work like that. He comes into the flesh only to do the work He is supposed to do, not to live man's life of being born to parents, growing up, forming a family and starting a career, having children, or experiencing life's ups and downs—all the activities of normal life. God coming to earth is God's Spirit being brought to the flesh, coming into the flesh, but God does not live a normal human life. He only comes to accomplish one part in His management plan. After that He will leave mankind. When He comes into the flesh, God's Spirit does not perfect the normal humanity of the flesh. Rather, at a God-predetermined time, the divinity does direct work. Then, after doing all that He needs to do and fully completing His ministry, the work of God's Spirit in this stage is done, at which time the incarnate God's life ends, regardless of whether His flesh has reached death age. That is, what stage of life the flesh reaches, how long it lives on earth, all depend on the work of the Spirit. It has nothing to do with what man considers to be normal humanity. Take Jesus as an example. He lived in the flesh for thirty-three and a half years. In terms of the life span of a human body, He should not have died at that age and should not have left. But God's Spirit did not care about all that. When His work was finished, the body was taken away, disappearing with the Spirit. This is the principle how God works in the flesh. So, strictly speaking, God incarnate is without normal humanity. Again, He comes to the earth not to live a normal human life. He does not first establish a normal human life and then begin working. Rather, as long as He is born into a normal human family, He is able to do divine work. He does not pull in even a bit of man's ideas; He is not fleshly, and He certainly does not adopt the ways of society or get involved in man's thoughts or notions, much less connect with man's philosophies of human conduct. This is the work that God incarnate wants to do and the practical significance of His incarnation. God comes into the flesh primarily to do a stage of the work that needs to be done in the flesh. He undertakes no other trivial processes, and He does not experience normal man's experiences. The work that God's incarnate flesh needs to do does not include normal human experiences. So, God comes into the flesh just to accomplish the work He needs to accomplish in the flesh. The rest has nothing to do with Him. He does not go through those trivial processes. Once His work is done, the significance of His incarnation ends. Finishing this stage means the work that He needs to do in the flesh has concluded, the ministry of His flesh has completed. But He cannot keep working in the flesh indefinitely. He has to go to another place to work, a place outside of the flesh. Only in this way can He fully accomplish and better expand His work. God works according to His original plan. He knows what He needs to do and what He has concluded like the palm of His hand. God leads every individual on a path that He has already predetermined. No one can escape this. Only those who follow the guidance of God's Spirit will be able to enter into rest. It may be that in later work, it is not God leading man by speaking in the flesh, but a tangible Spirit leading man's life. Only then would man be able to concretely touch God, see God, and more fully enter into the reality God requires, so as to be perfected by the practical God. This is the work that God wants to accomplish, what He has long planned. From this, you should all see the path you should take!

ESCAPE FROM THE INFLUENCE OF DARKNESS AND YOU WILL BE GAINED BY GOD

What is the influence of darkness?

What is referred to as the influence of darkness is the bondage of Satan, the influence of Satan, and it is an influence that has an aura of death.

After you have sincerely prayed to God, you turn your heart to Him completely. At this point, your heart is moved by God's Spirit, you are willing to give yourself completely, and in this moment, you have escaped from the influence of darkness. If all that man does is pleasing to God and fits with His requirements, then he is someone who lives inside God's words, and he is someone who lives under the care and protection of God. If men are unable to practice God's words, always fooling Him, acting in a perfunctory manner with Him, and not believing in His existence, such men are all living under the influence of darkness. Men who have not received the salvation of God are all living under the domain of Satan, that is, they all live under the influence of darkness. Those who do not believe in God are living under the domain of Satan. Even those who believe in the existence of God may not necessarily be living in the light of God, because those who believe in Him may not necessarily be living inside God's words, and they may not necessarily be men who are able to obey God. Man only believes in God, and due to his failure to know God, he is still living within the old rules, living within dead words, living in a life that is dark and uncertain, not fully purified by God or completely gained by God. Therefore, while it goes without saying that those who do not believe in God are living under the influence of darkness, even those who believe in God may still be living under its influence, for the Holy Spirit has not performed work on them. Those who have not received the grace of God or the mercy of God, and those who cannot see the work of the Holy Spirit, are all living under the influence of darkness; those who only enjoy the grace of God yet do not know Him are also living under the influence of darkness most of the time. If a man believes in God yet spends most of his life living under the influence of darkness, then this man's existence has lost its meaning, not to mention those who do not believe in the existence of God.

All those who cannot accept God's work and therefore are unable to meet His demands are living under the influence of darkness; only those who seek the truth and are able to meet God's demands will receive blessings from Him, and only they will escape from the influence of darkness.

Men who have not been released, who are always controlled by certain things and unable to give their hearts to God, are men who are under the bondage of Satan, and who are living under an aura of death.

Those unfaithful to their own duties, unfaithful to God's commission, and those not performing their function at the church are living under the influence of darkness.

Those who deliberately disturb the church life, who deliberately destroy relationships between the brothers and sisters, or assemble their own gangs are living even deeper under the influence of darkness; they are living within the bondage of Satan.

Those who have an improper relationship with God, who always have extravagant desires, who always want to gain an advantage, and who never seek transformation in their disposition are men living under the influence of darkness.

Those who are always sloppy, are not serious in their practice of the truth, and who do not seek to meet the desires of God but only satisfy their own flesh are also men who are living under the influence of darkness and shrouded in death.

Those who engage in crookedness and deception when performing work for God, who deal with God in a perfunctory manner, cheat God, and who always think for themselves are men living under the influence of darkness.

All those who cannot sincerely love God, who do not seek the truth, and who do not focus on transforming their disposition are living under the influence of darkness.

If you want to be praised by God, you must first escape from Satan's influence of darkness, open your heart to God, and turn it to God completely. Are the things that you are now doing praised by God? Have you turned your heart to God? Have the things that you have done been what God has required of you? Do they fit with the truth? You must examine yourself at all times, concentrate on eating and drinking God's words, lay out your heart before Him, love Him with sincerity, and devotedly expend yourself for God. Such men will surely receive God's praise.

Those who do not live their life with honesty, who behave one way in front of others but another way behind their backs, who give an appearance of humility, patience, and love while in essence they are insidious, cunning, and have no loyalty to God—these people are the typical representatives of those living under the influence of darkness. They are the ilk of the serpent.

Those whose belief in God is always for their own gains, who are self-righteous and haughty, who show themselves off, and protect their own status are those who love Satan and oppose the truth. They resist God and belong completely to Satan.

Those who are not attentive to God's burdens, who do not wholeheartedly serve God, who are always concerned with their own interests and the interests of their family, who are unable to abandon everything to expend themselves for God, and never live by His words are living outside of God's words. Such men cannot receive God's praise.

When God created men, it was to have them enjoy His richness and genuinely love Him; in this way, men would live in His light. Today, all those who are unable to love God, are not attentive to His burdens, are unable to fully give their hearts to God, are unable to take God's heart as their own, are unable to shoulder God's burdens as their own—God's light is not shining upon any such men, therefore they are all living under the influence of darkness. They are on a path that goes against God's will, all that they do has not a shred of truth, and they are in collusion with Satan. Such people are living under the influence of darkness. If you can always eat and drink God's words as well as be attentive to His will and practice His words, then you belong to God, and you are someone living inside God's words. Are you willing to escape from Satan's domain and live in the light of God? If you live inside God's words, then the Holy Spirit will have an opportunity to perform His work; if you live under Satan's influence, then the Holy Spirit will have no opportunity to perform any work. The work that the Holy Spirit performs on men, the light that He shines on men, and the confidence that He gives to men last for only a moment; if they are not careful and do not pay attention, the work performed by the Holy Spirit will pass them by. If men live inside God's words, then the Holy Spirit will be with them and perform work on them; if men are not living inside God's words, then they are living within the bondage of Satan. Men living in a corrupt disposition do not have the presence or the work of the Holy Spirit. If you are living within the sphere of God's words, if you are living within the state required by God, then you belong to Him and His work will be performed on you; if you are not living within the sphere of God's requirements but instead are living under Satan's domain, then you are certainly living under Satan's corruption. Only by living within God's words and giving your heart to Him, can you meet His requirements; you must do as God says, you must make God's words the foundation of your existence and the reality of your life, and only then will you belong to God. If you sincerely practice in accordance with God's will, He will perform work on you and then you will live under God's blessings, live in the light of God's countenance, grasp the work that the Holy Spirit performs, as well as feel the joy of God's presence.

To escape from the influence of darkness, you must first be loyal to God and have the eagerness to seek the truth—only then will you have a correct state. Living in the correct state is the precondition for escaping from the influence of darkness. Not having the correct state means that you are not loyal to God and that you do not have the eagerness to seek the truth. Then, escaping from the influence of darkness is out of the question. Man's escape from the influence of darkness is based on My words, and if man cannot practice in accordance with My words, they will not escape from the bondage of the influence of darkness. To live in the correct state is to live under the guidance of God's words, to live in the state of being loyal to God, to live in the state of seeking the truth, to live in the reality of sincerely expending for God, to live in the state of genuinely loving God. Those who live in these states and within this reality will gradually transform as they enter more deeply into the truth, and they will transform with the deepening of the work, until eventually they will certainly be gained by God, and they will come to genuinely love God. Those who have escaped from the influence of darkness will be able to gradually grasp God's will, gradually understand the heart of God, and eventually become intimate with God. Not only will they have no notions of God and no rebellion against Him, but they will come to detest even more the notions and rebellion that they had before, engendering genuine love for God in their hearts. Those who are unable to escape from the influence of darkness are occupied with their flesh, and they are full of rebellion; their hearts are filled with human notions and philosophies of life as well as their own intentions and deliberations. God requires the singular love of man, and He requires man to be occupied by His words and man's love for Him. To live within God's words, to discover that which man should seek from within His words, to love God as a result of His words, to run around for the sake of God's words, to live for God's words—these are all things that man should achieve. Everything must be built on God's words, and only then will man be able to meet God's requirements. If man is not equipped with God's words, he is nothing but a maggot who is possessed by Satan. Weigh it in your own heart—how many words of God have taken root inside of you? In which things are you living in accordance with God's words? In which things have you not been living in accordance with God's words? If they have not fully taken hold of you, then to what extent have they taken hold of you? In your everyday life, are you being controlled by Satan, or are you being guided by God's words? Are your prayers initiated from His words? Have you come out of your negative state through the enlightenment of God's words? To take God's words as the foundation of your existence, this is what everyone should enter into. If God's words are not present in your life, then you are living under the influence of darkness, you are rebellious against God, you are resisting God, and you are dishonoring His name—such men's belief in God is purely mischief and disturbance. How much of your life has been lived in accordance with His words? How much of your life has not been lived in accordance with His words? How much of what God's words have required of you has been fulfilled in you? How much has been lost in you? Have you closely examined such things?

To escape from the influence of darkness, one aspect is that it requires the work of the Holy Spirit, and another aspect is that it requires dedicated cooperation from man. Why do I say that man is not on the right track? In the first place, if a man is on the right track, he will be able to give his heart to God, which is a task that requires a long period of time to enter into because humankind has always been living under the influence of darkness and has been under Satan's bondage for thousands of years. Therefore, this entry cannot be achieved in a day or two. I brought up this issue today so that men can have a grasp of their own state; regarding what is the influence of darkness and what it is to live within the light, entry becomes possible when man is able to discern these things. This is because you must know what Satan's influence is before you can escape from it, and only then will you have the path for gradually ridding yourself of it. As to what to do thereafter, that is a matter for humans themselves. You must always enter in from a positive aspect and you must never wait passively. It is only this way that you can be gained by God.

BELIEVING IN GOD SHOULD FOCUS ON REALITY, NOT RELIGIOUS RITUALS

How many religious customs do you observe? How many times have you rebelled against the word of God and gone your own way? How many times have you put into practice the word of God because you are truly considerate of His burdens and seek to fulfill His desire? Understand the word of God and put it into action. Be principled in your actions and deeds; this is not abiding by rules or to do so grudgingly just for show. Rather, this is the practice of truth and living by the word of God. Only practice such as this satisfies God. Any custom that pleases God is not a rule but the practice of truth.

Some men have a penchant for drawing attention to themselves. In the presence of his brothers and sisters, he says he is indebted to God, but behind their backs, he does not practice the truth and does entirely otherwise. Is this not as those religious Pharisees? A man who truly loves God and has the truth is one who is loyal to God, but does not outwardly reveal so. He is willing to practice the truth when matters arise and does not speak or act in a manner going against his conscience. He demonstrates wisdom when matters arise and is principled in his deeds, no matter the circumstances. A man such as this is one who truly serves. There are some who often pay lip service to their indebtedness to God. They spend their days with brows locked in worry, put on an affected air, and feign a wretched countenance. How despicable! And if you were to ask him, "In what ways are you indebted to God? Please tell me!" he would be rendered speechless. If you are loyal to God, then speak not of it in public, but use your actual practice to show your love for God, and pray to Him with a true heart. Those who use only words to deal with God are all hypocrites! Some speak of indebtedness to God with each prayer, and begin to weep whenever they pray, even without the moving of the Holy Spirit. Men such as this are possessed by religious rituals and notions; they live by such rituals and notions, always believing that such actions please God, and that superficial godliness or sorrowful tears are that which God favors. What good can come of such absurd ones? In order to demonstrate their humility, some feign graciousness when speaking in the presence of others. Some are deliberately servile in the presence of others, like a lamb without any strength at all. Is this the manner of people of the kingdom? A person of the kingdom should be lively and free, innocent and open, honest and lovely; one who lives in a state of freedom. He has character and dignity, and can stand witness wherever he goes; he is one beloved by both God and man. Those who are novice in the faith have too many outward practices; they must first undergo a period of dealing and breaking. Those who have faith in God in their hearts are not outwardly distinguishable to others, but their actions and deeds are commendable to others. Only such men can be deemed to be living out the word of God. If you preach the gospel every day to this person and that, bringing them to salvation, yet in the end, you are still living in rules and doctrines, then you cannot bring glory to God. Such manner of men are religious people, and hypocrites too.

Whenever such religious people congregate, they ask, "Sister, how have you been these days?" She replies, "I feel indebted to God and that I am unable to fulfill His heart's desire." Another says, "I, too, am indebted to God and unable to satisfy Him." These few sentences and words alone express the vile things deep within their hearts. Such words are the most loathsome and exceedingly repugnant. The nature of such men opposes God. Those who focus on reality communicate whatever is in their hearts and open their hearts in communication. There is not a single false exercise, no civilities or empty pleasantries. They are always straightforward and observe no earthly rules. There are those who have a penchant for outward display, even without any sense. When another sings, he begins to dance, not even realizing that the rice in his pot has already burned. Such manner of men are not godly or honorable, and are far too frivolous. These are all manifestations of the lack of reality! Some gather to commune about the matters of life in the spirit, and though they speak not of indebtedness to God, they retain a true love for Him within their hearts. Your indebtedness to God has nothing to do with others; you are indebted to God, not man. So what use is it for you to constantly speak of this to others? You must place importance on entering into reality, not outward zeal or display.

What do the superficial good deeds of man represent? They represent the flesh, and even the best of outward practices do not represent life, only your own individual temperament. The outward practices of man cannot fulfill the desire of God. You constantly speak of your indebtedness to God, yet you cannot supply the life of others or provoke others to love God. Do you believe that such actions will satisfy God? You believe that this is God's heart's desire, that this is of the spirit, but in truth this is absurd! You believe that what pleases you and what you wish is that which God delights in. Can what pleases you represent that of God? Can the character of man represent God? What pleases you is precisely that which God abhors, and your habits are that which God loathes and rejects. If you feel indebted, then go and pray before God. There is no need to speak of it to others. If you do not pray before God and instead constantly draw attention to yourself in the presence of others, can this fulfill the desire of God's heart? If your actions are always in appearance only, this means that you are the most vain of men. What manner of man is he who only has superficial good deeds but is devoid of reality? Such men are hypocritical Pharisees and religious people! If you do not put off your outward practices and cannot make changes, then the elements of hypocrisy in you will grow even more. The greater the elements of hypocrisy, the more resistance there is to God, and in the end, such manner of men will surely be cast away!

ONLY THOSE WHO KNOW THE WORK OF GOD TODAY CAN SERVE GOD

To bear testimony to God and shame the great red dragon you must have a principle, and a condition: In your heart you must love God, and enter into the words of God. If you do not enter into the words of God, then you will have no way of shaming Satan. Through the growth of your life, you renounce the great red dragon and bring utter humiliation upon it, and only then is the great red dragon truly shamed. The more you are willing to put the words of God into practice, the greater the proof of your love of God and loathing of the great red dragon; the more you obey the words of God, the greater the proof of your longing for the truth. People who do not long for the words of God are people who are without life. Such people are those who are outside the words of God, and who belong to religion. People who truly believe in God have a more profound knowledge of God's words through eating and drinking the words of God. If you do not long for the words of God, then you cannot truly eat and drink the words of God, and if you have no knowledge of the words of God, then you have no means of testifying to God or satisfying God.

In your belief in God, how should you know God? You should come to know God based on the words and work of God today, without deviation or fallacy, and before all else you should know the work of God. This is the foundation of knowing God. All those various fallacies that lack a pure acceptance of the words of God are religious conceptions, they are an acceptance that is deviant and erroneous. The greatest skill of religious figures is taking the words of God that were accepted in the past and checking them off against the words of God today. If, when serving the God of today, you cling to the things enlightened by the Holy Spirit in the past, then your service will cause an interruption, and your practice will be outdated and nothing more than religious ceremony. If you believe that those who serve God must be outwardly humble and patient..., and if you put this kind of knowledge into practice today, then such knowledge is religious conception, and such practice has become a hypocritical performance. “Religious conceptions” refers to things that are outmoded and obsolete (including the acceptance of words previously spoken by God and light directly revealed by the Holy Spirit), and if they are put into practice today, then they are the interruption of God’s work, and of no benefit to man. If man is unable to purge those things within him that belong to religious conceptions, then they will become a great hindrance to man’s service to God. People with religious conceptions have no way of keeping up with the steps of the Holy Spirit’s work, they fall one step behind, then two—for these religious conceptions cause man to become extraordinarily self-right and arrogant. God feels no nostalgia for what He spoke and did in the past; if it is obsolete, then He eliminates it. Surely you are able to let go of your conceptions? If you cling to the words that God spoke in the past, does this prove that you know the work of God? If you are unable to accept the light of the Holy Spirit today, and instead cling to the light of the past, can this prove that you follow the footsteps of God? Are you still unable to let go of religious conceptions? If that is the case, then you will become someone who opposes God.

If man can let go of religious conceptions, then he will not use his mind to measure the words and work of God today, and instead obeys directly. Even though God’s work today is manifestly unlike that of the past, you are able to let go of the views of the past and directly obey the work of God today. If you are capable of such knowledge that you give pride of place to the work of God today no matter how He worked in the past, then you are someone who has let go of their conceptions, who obeys God, and who is able to obey the work and words of God and follow the footsteps of God. In this, you will be someone who truly obeys God. You do not analyze or study the work of God; it is as if God has forgotten His previous work, and you, too, have forgotten it. The present is the present, and the past is the past, and since today God has put aside that which He did in the past, you should not dwell on it. Only then will you be someone who completely obeys God and has completely let go of their religious conceptions.

Because there are always new developments in God's work, thus there is new work, and thus there is also work that is obsolete and old. This old and new work is not contradictory, but complementary; each step follows on from the last. Because there is new work, the old things must, of course, be eliminated. For example, some of the long-established practices and habitual sayings of man have, coupled with man's many years of experience and teachings, formed all manner of conceptions in the mind of man. Yet more propitious to the formation of such conceptions by man is that God has yet to fully reveal His true face and inherent disposition to man, combined with the spread, over many years, of traditional theories from ancient times. It is fair to say that, during the course of man's belief in God, the influence of various conceptions has led to the continual formation and evolution of a knowledge in man in which he has all kinds of conceptions about God—with the result that many religious people who serve God have become His enemies. And so, the stronger people's religious conceptions, the more they oppose God, and the more they are the enemies of God. The work of God is always new and never old, and it never forms doctrine and is, instead, continually changing and renewing to a greater or lesser extent. This work is the expression of the inherent disposition of God Himself. It is also the inherent principle of God's work, and one of the means by which God accomplishes His management. If God did not work in this way, man would not change or be able to know God, and Satan would not be defeated. Thus, in His work there continually occur changes that appear erratic, but which are actually periodic. The way in which man believes in God, however, is quite different: He clings to old, familiar doctrines and systems, and the older they are the more palatable they are to him. How could the foolish mind of man, a mind that is as intransigent as stone, accept so much unfathomable new work and words of God? Man abhors the God who is always new and never old; he only likes the antiquated old God who is white-haired and immobile. Thus, because God and man each have their own likes, man has become the enemy of God. Many of these contradictions still exist even today, at a time when God has been doing new work for almost six thousand years. They are, then, beyond remedy. Maybe it is because of the stubbornness of man, or the inviolability of God's administrative decrees by any man—but those clergymen and women still cling to moldy old books and papers, while God carries on with His uncompleted work of management as if He had no one by His side. Though these contradictions make enemies of God and man, and are even irreconcilable, God pays them no heed, as if they were there and yet not there. Man, however, still sticks by his beliefs and conceptions, and never lets go of them. Yet one thing is self-evident: Even though man does not deviate from his stance, God's feet are always moving and He is always changing His stance according to the environment, and in the end, it is man who will be defeated without a fight. God, meanwhile, is the greatest enemy of all of His foes who have been defeated, and is also the champion of those among mankind who have been defeated and those who have yet to be defeated. Who can compete with God and be victorious? Man's conceptions seem to come from God because many of them were born in the wake of God's work. Yet God does not forgive man because of this, nor, moreover, does He pour praise on man for producing batch after batch of products "for God" that are outside the work of God. Instead, He is extremely disgusted by man's conceptions and old, pious beliefs, and even ignores the date on which these conceptions first emerged. He does not accept at all that these conceptions are caused by His work, for the conceptions of man are spread by man; their source is the thoughts and mind of man, and is not God, but Satan. God's intention has always been for His work to be new and alive, not old and dead, and that which He makes man hold firm to is divided into ages and periods, not everlasting and immutable. That is because He is a God who causes man to live and be new, rather than a devil who causes man to die and be old. Do you still not understand this? You have conceptions about God and are incapable of letting go of them because you are closed-minded. It is not because there is too little sense to God's work, or because the work of God is inhumane—nor, moreover, is it because God is always negligent in His duties. That you cannot let go of your conceptions is because you are too lacking in obedience, and because you have not the slightest likeness of a creature of God, and not because God is making things difficult for you. All of this has been caused by you, and bears no relation to God; all suffering and misfortune is caused by man. God's intentions are always good: He does not wish to cause you to produce conceptions, but wishes for you to change and be renewed as the ages pass. Yet you can't tell chalk from cheese, and are always either studying or analyzing. It is not that God is making things difficult for you, but that you have no reverence for God, and your disobedience is too great. A tiny creature dares to take some trivial part of that which was previously given by God, and turns it around in order to attack God—is this not the disobedience of man? Man, it is fair to say, is utterly unqualified to express his views before God, much less is he qualified to come up with whatever worthless, stinking, rotten maxims he feels like—to say nothing of those moldy conceptions. Are they not even more worthless?

Someone who truly serves God is someone who is after God's heart and fit for use by God, and who is able to let go of their religious conceptions. If you wish eating and drinking the words of God to be fruitful, then you must let go of your religious conceptions. If you wish to serve God, then it is even more necessary to first let go of religious conceptions and obey the words of God in all that you do. This is what should be possessed by someone who serves God. If you lack this knowledge, as soon as you serve, you will cause interruptions and disturbances, and if you keep holding on to your conceptions, then you will inevitably be struck down by God, never to get up again. Take the present, for example. A lot of the utterances and work of today are incompatible with the Bible, and incompatible with the work previously done by God, and if you have no desire to obey, then you may fall at any time. If you wish to serve in accordance with the will of God, then you must first let go of religious conceptions and rectify your own views. Much of what is said in the future will be incompatible with what was said in the past, and if now you lack the will to obey, you will be unable to walk the path that lies ahead. If one of God's methods of working has taken root inside you and you never let it go, then this method will become your religious conception. If what God is has taken root within you, then you have gained the truth, and if the words and truth of God are capable of becoming your life, you will no longer have conceptions about God. Those who possess a true knowledge of God will have no conceptions, and will not abide by doctrine.

Wake yourself up by asking the following questions:

1. Does the knowledge within you interfere with your service to God?
2. How many religious practices are there in your daily life? If you are only able to give the appearance of piety, does this mean that your life has grown up and matured?
3. When you eat and drink the words of God, are you able to let go of your religious conceptions?
4. When you pray, are you able to do away with religious ceremony?
5. Are you someone who is fit for use by God?
6. How much of your knowledge of God contains religious conceptions?

GENUINE LOVE FOR GOD IS SPONTANEOUS

All people have been subject to refinement because of God's words. If it hadn't been for God incarnate mankind absolutely would not be blessed to suffer that way. It can also be put this way—those who are able to accept the trials of God's words are blessed people. Based on people's original caliber, their behavior, and their attitudes toward God, they are not worthy of receiving this kind of refinement. It is because they have been uplifted by God that they have enjoyed this blessing. People used to say that they were not worthy of seeing the face of God or hearing His words. Today it is entirely because of God's uplifting and His mercy that people have received the refinement of His words. This is the blessing of every single person who is living in the last days—have you personally experienced this? In which aspects people should suffer and have setbacks is destined by God, and is not based on people's own requirements. This is absolutely true. Every believer should possess the ability to undergo the trials of God's words and suffer within His words. Is this something that you can see clearly? So the suffering you have undergone has been traded for today's blessings; if you do not suffer for God, you cannot gain His praise. Maybe you have complained in the past, but no matter how much you have complained God does not remember that about you. Today has come and there is no reason to look into yesterday's matters.

Some people say that they try to love God but cannot, and when they hear that God is about to depart they then have love for Him. Some people generally don't put the truth into practice, and when they hear that God is about to depart in anger they come in front of Him and pray: "Oh God! Please do not go. Give me a chance! God! I have not satisfied You in the past; I have been indebted to You and resisted You. Today I am willing to fully offer up my body and heart so that I may finally satisfy You and love You. I will not have that opportunity again." Have you made that kind of prayer? When someone prays this way it is because their conscience has been roused by God's words. Humans are all numb and dull-witted. They are subject to chastisement and refinement yet they do not know what God is accomplishing. If God didn't work this way, people would still be befuddled; no one could inspire the spiritual feelings in people's hearts. It is only God's words of judging and exposing people that can bear that fruit. So, all things are achieved and fulfilled because of God's words, and it is only because of His words that mankind's love for God has been roused. If people only loved God based on their own consciences they would not see any results. Didn't people base their love for God on their consciences in the past? Was there a single person who took the initiative to love God? It was only through the encouragement of God's words that they loved God. Some people say: "I've followed God for so many years and enjoyed so much of His grace, so many blessings. I've been subject to refinement and judgment from His words. So I've come to understand much, and I've seen God's love. I must thank Him, I must repay His grace. I will satisfy God with death, and I will base my love for Him on my conscience." If people only rely on the feelings of their consciences, they cannot feel God's loveliness; if they just rely on their consciences, their love for God will be feeble. If you only speak of repaying God's grace and love, you will not have any drive in your love for Him; loving Him based upon the feelings of your conscience is a passive approach. Why do I say that it's a passive approach? This is a practical issue. What kind of love is this? Isn't it trying to fool God and just going through the motions for Him? Most people believe that there is no reward for loving God, and one will be chastised all the same for not loving Him, so overall just not sinning is good enough. So loving God and repaying His love based on the feelings of one's conscience is a passive approach, and it is not love for God that comes spontaneously from one's heart. Love for God should be a genuine feeling from deep in a person's heart. Some people say: "I myself am willing to pursue God and to follow Him. Now God wants to abandon me but I still want to follow Him. Whether He wants me or not, I will still love Him, and in the end I must gain Him. I offer up my heart to God, and no matter what He does, I will follow Him for my entire life. No matter what, I must love God and I must gain Him; I will not rest until I have gained Him." Do you have this kind of will?

The path of believing in God is the path of loving Him. If you believe in Him you must love Him; however, loving Him doesn't only refer to repaying His love or loving Him based on the feelings of the conscience—it is a pure love for God. There are times when people just rely on their consciences and they are not able to feel God's love. Why did I always say: "May God's Spirit move our spirits"? Why didn't I speak of moving people's consciences to love God? It is because people's consciences cannot feel God's loveliness. So if you are not convinced by those words, you may use your conscience to feel His love, and you will have some drive at that moment but then it will disappear. If you only use your conscience to feel God's loveliness, you have the drive when you pray, but after that it just goes away, it disappears. What is that about? If you only use your conscience you will be unable to rouse your love for God; when you really feel His loveliness in your heart your spirit will be moved by Him, and it is only at that time that your conscience will be able to play its original role. That is to say that when people have been moved by God in their spirits and when their hearts have gained knowledge and encouragement, that is, after they have gained experience, only then will they be able to effectively love God with their consciences. Loving God with your conscience is not wrong—this is the lowest level of loving God. Mankind's way of love of just barely doing justice to God's grace absolutely cannot impel their proactive entering in. When people obtain some of the work of the Holy Spirit, that is, when they see and taste God's love in their practical experience, when they have some knowledge of God and truly see that God is so worthy of mankind's love and how lovely He is, only then are people able to genuinely love God.

When people contact God with their hearts, when their hearts are able to entirely return to Him, this is the first step of human love for God. If you want to love God, you must first be able to return your heart to Him. What is returning your heart to God? It's when everything that you pursue in your heart is for the sake of loving and gaining God, and this shows that you have completely returned your heart to God. Aside from God and His words, there is almost nothing else in your heart (family, wealth, husband, wife, children or other things). Even if there is, they cannot occupy your heart, and you do not think of your future prospects but you only pursue loving God. At that time you will have completely returned your heart to God. If you are still making plans for yourself in your heart then you are always pursuing your own personal benefit: “When can I make a small request of God? When will my family become wealthy? How can I get some nice clothing? ...” If you’re living in that state it shows that your heart has not fully returned to God. If you only have God’s words in your heart and you are able to pray to God and become close to Him at all times, as if He were very close to you, as if God were within you and you were within Him, if you are within that kind of state, it means that your heart has been in the presence of God. If you pray to God and eat and drink of His words every day, are always thinking of the work of the church, if you show consideration for God’s will, use your heart to genuinely love Him and satisfy His heart, then your heart will belong to God. If your heart is occupied by a number of other things, then it is still occupied by Satan and it has not truly turned to God. When someone’s heart has truly turned toward God, they will have genuine, spontaneous love for Him and will be able to consider God’s work. Although they will still have foolish and senseless states, they will be able to have consideration for the interests of the house of God, for His work, and for a change in their disposition. Their heart will be entirely correct. Some people are always waving the flag of the church no matter what they do; the truth is that this is for their own benefit. That kind of person does not have the right kind of motive. He is crooked and deceitful and most of the things that he does are to seek his own personal benefit. That kind of person does not pursue loving God; his heart still belongs to Satan and cannot turn toward God. God has no way to obtain that kind of person.

The first step of truly loving God and being gained by Him is to completely turn your heart toward God. In every single thing that you do, search yourself and ask: “Am I doing this based on a heart of love for God? Is there any personal intention in it? What is my actual goal in doing this?” If you want to hand your heart over to God you must first subdue your own heart, give up on all of your own intentions, and achieve the point of being completely for God. This is the path to practice giving your heart to God. What does subduing one’s own heart refer to? It is letting go of the extravagant desires of one's flesh, not coveting the blessings of status or coveting comfort, doing everything to satisfy God, and that one's heart can fully be for Him, not for one's own sake.

Genuine love for God comes from deep within the heart; it is a love that only exists on the basis of mankind's knowledge of God. When someone's heart completely turns toward God then they have love for God, but that love is not necessarily pure and it's not necessarily complete. This is because there is a certain distance between a person's heart completely turning toward God and that person having a genuine understanding of God and a genuine adoration for Him. The way for someone to achieve true love of God and to know God's disposition is to turn their heart toward God. After they give their true heart over to God, they will begin to enter into the experience of life, and this way their disposition will start to change, their love for God will gradually grow, and their knowledge of God will also gradually increase. So turning one's heart to God is the precondition for getting on the right track of life experience. When people place their hearts in front of God, they only have a heart of longing for Him but not of love for Him, because they do not have an understanding of Him. Even though in this circumstance they do have some love for Him, it is not spontaneous and it is not genuine. This is because anything that comes from man's flesh is an emotional effect and does not come from genuine understanding. It's just a momentary impulse and it cannot be long-lasting adoration. When people don't have an understanding of God they can only love Him based on their own preferences and their individual notions; that type of love cannot be called spontaneous love, nor can it be called genuine love. When someone's heart genuinely turns toward God, they are able to think of God's interests in everything, but if they do not have that understanding they are not capable of having genuinely spontaneous love. All they are able to do is fulfill some functions for the church and perform a bit of their duty, but it's without root or basis. That kind of person has a disposition that is difficult to change; they are all people who either do not pursue the truth, or do not understand it. Even if a person entirely turns their heart toward God it doesn't mean that their heart of love for God is completely pure, because those who have God in their hearts don't necessarily have love in their hearts for God. This concerns the distinction between someone who does or does not pursue understanding of God. Once a person has an understanding of Him, it shows that their heart has fully turned toward God, it shows that their genuine love for God in their heart is spontaneous. Only that kind of person is one who has God in their heart. Turning one's heart toward God is a precondition for them getting onto the right track, for understanding God, and for achieving love of God. It is not a marker of completing their duty to love God, nor is it a marker of having genuine love for Him. The only way for someone to achieve genuine love of God is to turn their heart toward Him, which is also the first thing one of His creations ought to do. Those who love God are all people who seek life, that is, people who seek the truth and people who truly want God; they all have the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit and have been moved by Him. They are all able to be guided by God.

When someone is able to feel that they are indebted to God it is because they have been moved by the Spirit; if they feel that then they will tend to have a heart of longing and will be able to pursue entry into life. But if you stop at a certain step, you will be unable to go deeper; there is still the peril of being stuck in Satan's net, and once it reaches a certain point you will be taken captive by Satan. God's illumination allows people to know themselves, and after that allows them to feel their indebtedness to God, and feel willing to cooperate with Him and to cast off the things that do not please Him. This is the principle of God's work. You are all willing to pursue growing up in your lives and loving God, so have you ridden yourself of your superficial ways? If you only rid yourself of those ways and you do not cause any disruptions or show off yourself, is that really pursuing growing up in your life? If you don't have any kind of superficial behaviors at all but you do not enter into God's words, it means that you are a person who doesn't have any proactive progress. What's the root of adopting superficial behaviors? Are your actions for the sake of growing up in your life? Are you pursuing being qualified to be one of God's people? Whatever it is that you focus on is what you live out; if you focus on superficial ways then your heart is focused externally, and you will have no way to pursue growing up in your life. God requires a change in disposition, but you are always pursuing outward things; this type of person will have no way to change their disposition! Everyone has a certain way before they have become mature in their life, which is that they must accept the judgment, the chastisement, and the perfecting of God's words. If you do not have God's words but you only rely on your own confidence and will, everything you do is just based on zeal. That is, if you want growth in your life you must eat and drink, and understand God's words more. All those who are perfected by His words are able to live them out; those who do not undergo the refinement of His words, who do not undergo the judgment of His words cannot be fit for His use. So to what degree do you live out His words? Only if you eat and drink God's words and are able to compare them to your own state of life, and find a path of practice in light of the issues I bring up will your practice be correct. It will also be after God's heart. Only someone who has this kind of practice is one who has the will to love God.

CONCERNING THE PRACTICE OF PRAYER

You pay no attention to prayer in your daily life. People have always overlooked prayer. In their prayers before they were simply going through the motions and playing around, and no one has ever fully given their heart before God and truly prayed to God. People only pray to God when something happens to them. Throughout all this time, have you ever truly prayed to God? Have you ever wept tears of pain before God? Have you ever come to know yourself before God? Have you ever had a heart-to-heart prayer with God? Praying is practiced gradually: If you don't ordinarily pray at home, then you will have no way of praying in church, and if you don't normally pray during small assemblies, then you will be incapable of praying during large assemblies. If you do not ordinarily draw near to God or reflect upon the words of God, then you will have nothing to say when it is time to pray—and even if you do pray, your lips will just be moving, you won't be truly praying.

What does it mean to truly pray? It means speaking the words within your heart to God, and communing with God having grasped His will and based upon His words; it means feeling particularly close to God, feeling that He is in front of you, and that you have something to say to Him; and it means being especially radiant within your heart, and feeling that God is especially lovely. You will feel especially inspired, and after hearing your words your brothers and sisters will feel gratified, they will feel that the words you speak are the words within their hearts, the words they wish to say, and that what you say represents what they want to say. This is what it means to truly pray. After you have truly prayed, in your heart you will feel at peace, and gratified; the strength to love God will rise up, and you will feel that nothing in your entire life is more worthy or significant than loving God—and all this will prove that your prayers have been effective. Have you ever prayed in such a way?

And what about the content of prayers? You should pray, step-by-step, in accordance with your true state and that which is to be done by the Holy Spirit, and you should commune with God in keeping with God's will and His requirements of man. When you begin practicing your prayers, first give your heart to God. Do not attempt to grasp God's will; only try to speak the words within your heart to God. When you come before God, speak thus: "O God! Only today do I realize that I used to disobey You. I am truly corrupt and despicable. Before, I was wasting my time; starting from today I will live for You, I will live out a life of meaning, and satisfy Your will. I would that Your Spirit always works within me, and always illuminates and enlightens me, so that I can bear strong and resounding testimony before You, allowing Satan to see Your glory, Your testimony, and the proof of Your triumph within us." When you pray in this way, your heart will be completely set free, having prayed in this way, your heart will be closer to God, and by often praying in this way, the Holy Spirit will inevitably work within you. If you always call out to God in this way and make your resolution before God, the day will come when your resolution can be accepted before God, when your heart and entire being will be received by God, and you will ultimately be made perfect by God. Prayer is of the utmost importance for you. When you pray, you receive the work of the Holy Spirit, your heart is thus touched by God, and the strength of the love for God within you comes forth. If you do not pray with your heart, if you do not open your heart to commune with God, then God will have no way of working within you. If, having prayed, you have spoken all the words within your heart and the Spirit of God has not stirred, if you do not feel inspired inside, then this shows that your heart is not earnest, that your words are not true, and still impure. If, having prayed, you are gratified, then your prayers have been accepted by God and the Spirit of God has worked within you. As someone who serves before God, you cannot be without prayers. If you truly see fellowship with God as something that is meaningful and valuable, could you forsake prayer? No one can be without communion with God. Without prayer, you live in the flesh, you live in the bondage of Satan; without true prayer, you live under the influence of darkness. I hope that the brothers and sisters are able to truly pray each and every day. This is not adherence to doctrine, however, but an effect that must be achieved. Are you willing to forgo a little sleep and gratification, saying morning prayers at dawn and then enjoying the words of God? If you pray and eat and drink the words of God, in this way, with a pure heart, then you will be more accepted by God. If you do every day, practicing giving your heart to God each day and communing with God, then your knowledge of God is sure to increase, and you will be better able to grasp God's will. You should say: "O God! I wish to fulfill my duty. In order that You may be glorified in us, and may enjoy the testimony in us, this group of people, I can but devote my entire being to You. I beg You to work within us, so that I can truly love and satisfy You, and make You the objective that I pursue." When you are possessed of this burden, God will surely make you perfect; you should not only pray for the sake of yourself, but also for the sake of carrying out the will of God, and for the sake of loving Him. Such is the truest kind of prayer. Do you pray in order to carry out the will of God?

Before, you did not know how to pray, and overlooked prayer; today, you must do your best to train yourselves to pray. If you are unable to summon the strength within you to love God, then how can you pray? You should say: "O God! My heart is incapable of truly loving You, I wish to love You but I lack the strength. What should I do? I wish for You to open the eyes of my spirit, I wish for Your Spirit to touch my heart, so that before You I am divested of all passive states, and unconstrained by any person, matter, or thing; my heart I completely lay bare before You, such that my entire being is devoted before You, and You may test me however You wish. Now, I give no thought to my prospects, nor am I bound by death. Using my heart that loves You, I wish to seek the way of life. All things and events are in Your hands, my fate is in Your hands, and, moreover, my life is controlled by Your hands. Now, I pursue the love of You, and regardless of whether You let me love You, regardless of how Satan interferes, I am determined to love You." When you encounter such things, you pray in this way. If you do so every day, the strength to love God will gradually rise up.

How does one enter into true prayer?

Whilst praying, your heart must be at peace before God, and it must be sincere. You are truly communing and praying with God; you must not deceive God using nice-sounding words. Prayer is centered around that which God wishes to complete today. Ask God to bring you greater enlightenment and illumination, and bring your actual state and troubles before God to pray, and make resolution before God. Prayer is not the following of procedure, but the seeking of God using your true heart. Ask that God protect your heart, making it able to often be at peace before God, making you able to know yourself, and despise yourself, and forsake yourself in the environment that God has set for you, thus allowing you to have a normal relationship with God and making you someone who truly loves God.

What is the significance of prayer?

Prayer is one of the ways in which man cooperates with God, it is a means by which man calls upon God, and it is the process by which man is touched by God's Spirit. It can be said that those who are without prayer are dead ones without spirit, proof that they lack the faculties to be touched by God. Without prayer, they are unable to attain a normal spiritual life, much less are they able to follow the work of the Holy Spirit; without prayer, they sever their relationship with God, and are incapable of receiving God's approval. Being someone who believes in God, the more you pray, the more you are touched by God. Such people have greater resolution and are more able to receive the latest enlightenment from God; as a result, only people like this can be made perfect as soon as possible by the Holy Spirit.

What is the effect to be achieved by prayer?

People are able to carry out the practice of prayer and understand the significance of prayer, but the effect to be achieved by prayer is no simple matter. Prayer is not a case of going through the formalities, or following procedure, or reciting the words of God, which is to say, prayer does not mean parroting words and copying others. In prayer, you must give your heart to God, sharing the words in your heart with God so that you may be touched by God. If your prayers are to be effective, then they must be based on your reading of God's words. Only by praying amid God's words will you be able to receive more enlightenment and illumination. A true prayer is shown by having a heart that yearns for the requirements made by God, and being willing to fulfill these requirements; you will be able to hate all that God hates, upon the basis of which you will have knowledge, and will know and be clear about the truths explained by God. Having the resolution, and faith, and knowledge, and a path by which to practice after praying—only this is truly praying, and only prayer such as this can be effective. Yet prayer must be built upon the foundation of enjoying God's words and communing with God in His words, your heart being able to seek God and being at peace before God. Such prayer has already reached the point of true communion with God.

Basic knowledge about praying:

1. Do not blindly say whatever comes to mind. There must be a burden within your heart, which is to say, you must have an objective when you pray.

2. Your prayers must contain the words of God; they must be based upon the words of God.

3. When praying, you cannot go over old ground; you must not bring up things that are outdated. You should specially train yourself to speak the actual words of the Holy Spirit; only then will you be able to make a connection with God.

4. Group prayer must be centered around a core, which must be the work of the Holy Spirit today.

5. All people must learn how to pray for others. They must find the part in God's words that they wish to pray for, based upon which they must have a burden, and for which they must often pray. This is one manifestation of care for God's will.

Personal prayer life is based upon understanding the significance of prayer and the basic knowledge of prayer. Man must often pray for his shortcomings in his daily life, and must pray upon the foundation of the knowledge of God's words in order to achieve changes in his life disposition. Everyone should establish their own prayer life, they should pray for the knowledge based upon God's words, should pray in order to seek the knowledge of God's work. Lay your actual circumstances before God, and be pragmatic, and don't pay attention to method; the key is to attain a true knowledge, and to actually experience God's words. Anyone who pursues entry into the spiritual life must be able to pray in multiple ways. Silent prayer, pondering the words of God, coming to know the work of God, and so on—this targeted work of communion, is in order to achieve entry into normal spiritual life, making your own situation before God better and better, and causing ever greater progress in your life. In short, all that you do—whether it be eating and drinking the words of God, or praying silently or declaring loudly—is in order to clearly see God's words, and His work, and that which He wishes to achieve in you. More importantly, it is in order to reach the standards that God requires and take your life to the next level. The lowest standard that God requires of people is that they be able to open their hearts to Him. If man gives his true heart to God and says what is really within his heart to God, then God is willing to work in man; God does not want the twisted heart of man, but his pure and honest heart. If man does not truly speak his heart to God, then God does not touch man's heart, or work within him. Thus, the most crucial thing about praying is to speak the words of your true heart to God, telling God of your flaws or rebellious disposition and completely opening yourself up to God. Only then will God be interested in your prayers; if not, then God will hide His face from you. The minimum criterion for prayer is that you must be able to keep your heart at peace before God, and it must not depart from God. Perhaps, during this period, you have not gained a newer or higher view, but you must use prayer to keep things as they are—you cannot regress. This is the very least that you must achieve. If you cannot accomplish even this, then it proves that your spiritual life has not entered onto the right track; as a result, you are unable to hold on to your original vision, and bereft of faith in God, and your resolution subsequently disappears. Your entry into the spiritual life is marked by whether or not your prayers have entered onto the right track. All people must enter into this reality, they must all do the work of consciously training themselves in prayer, not passively waiting, but consciously seeking to be touched by the Holy Spirit. Only then will they be people who truly seek God.

When you begin to pray, be realistic, and mustn't overreach yourself; you cannot make extravagant demands, hoping that as soon as you open your mouth you will be touched by the Holy Spirit, enlightened and illuminated, and bestowed with much grace. That is impossible—God does not do things that are supernatural. God accomplishes people's prayers in His own time and sometimes He tests your faith to see whether you are loyal before Him. When you pray you must have faith, perseverance, and resolution. When they begin training themselves to pray, most people don't feel that they have been touched by the Holy Spirit and so lose heart. This won't do! You must have persistence, you must focus on feeling the touch of the Holy Spirit, and on seeking and exploring. Sometimes, the path that you act upon is the wrong one; sometimes, your motivations and conceptions are unable to stand firm before God, and so God's Spirit doesn't move you; so too are there times when God looks at whether or not you are loyal. In short, you must devote more effort to training yourself. If you discover that the path you act upon is deviant, you can change the way you pray. As long as you truly seek, and long to receive, then the Holy Spirit will surely take you into this reality. Sometimes you pray with a true heart but don't feel as if you have been particularly touched. At times like these you must rely on your faith, and trust that God looks upon your prayers; you must have perseverance in your prayers.

You must be honest, and must pray in order to rid yourself of the craftiness in your heart. As you use prayer to purify yourself whenever needed, and use it to be touched by the Spirit of God, your disposition will gradually change. The true spiritual life is a life of prayer, and it is a life that is touched by the Holy Spirit. The process of being touched by the Holy Spirit is the process of changing man's disposition. A life that has not been touched by the Holy Spirit is not a spiritual life, it is still religious ritual; only those who are often touched by the Holy Spirit, and have been enlightened and illuminated by the Holy Spirit, are people who have entered into the spiritual life. Man's disposition constantly changes as he prays, and the more that he is moved by the Spirit of God, the more proactive and obedient he is. So, too, will his heart gradually be purified, after which his disposition will gradually change. Such is the effect of true prayer.

KNOW THE NEWEST WORK OF GOD AND FOLLOW THE FOOTSTEPS OF GOD

Now, you are to pursue becoming the people of God, and shall begin the entire entry onto the right track. To be the people of God means entry into the Age of Kingdom. Today, you officially begin to enter into the training of the kingdom, and your future lives shall cease to be as slack and sloppy as they were before; such lives are incapable of attaining the standards required by God. If you do not feel any urgency, then this shows that you have no desire to improve yourself, that your pursuit is muddled and confused, and you are incapable of fulfilling God's will. Entry into the training of the kingdom means beginning the life of the people of God—are you willing to accept such training? Are you willing to feel a sense of urgency? Are you willing to live under God's discipline? Are you willing to live under God's chastisement? When God's words come upon you and test you, how will you act? And what will you do when faced with all manner of facts? In the past, your focus was not on life; today, you must enter into the reality of life, and pursue changes in your life disposition. This is what must be achieved by the people of the kingdom. All those who are the people of God must possess life, they must accept the training of the kingdom, and pursue changes in their life disposition. This is what God requires of the people of the kingdom.

God's requirements for the people of the kingdom are as follows:

1. They must accept God's commissions, which is to say, they must accept all of the words spoken in God's work of the last days.
2. They must enter into the training of the kingdom.
3. They must pursue having their hearts touched by God. When your heart has completely turned to God, and you have a normal spiritual life, you will live in the realm of freedom, which means you will live under the care and protection of God's love. Only when you live under the care and protection of God will you belong to God.
4. They must be gained by God.
5. They must become a manifestation of God's glory on earth.

These five points are My commissions for you. My words are spoken unto the people of God, and if you are unwilling to accept these commissions, I will not force you—but if you truly accept them, then you will be able to carry out the will of God. Today, you begin to accept God's commissions, and pursue becoming the people of the kingdom and attaining the standards required to be the people of the kingdom. This is the first step of entry. If you wish to fully carry out God's will, then you must accept these five commissions, and if you are able to achieve them, you will be after God's heart and surely made great use of by God. What is crucial today is entry into the training of the kingdom. Entry into the training of the kingdom involves the spiritual life. Previously, there was no talk of the spiritual life, but today, as you begin entry into the training of the kingdom, you officially enter into the spiritual life.

What kind of life is the spiritual life?

The spiritual life is one in which your heart has completely turned to God, and is able to be mindful of God's love. It is one in which you live in God's words, and nothing else occupies your heart, and you are able to grasp the will of God today, and are guided by the light of the Holy Spirit today in order to fulfill your duty. Such a life between man and God is the spiritual life.

If you are unable to follow the light of today, then a distance has opened up in your relationship with God—it may even have been severed—and you are without a normal spiritual life. A normal relationship with God is built upon the foundation of accepting the actual words of God. Do you have a normal spiritual life? Do you have a normal relationship with God? Are you someone who follows the work of the Holy Spirit? If you are able to follow the light of the Holy Spirit today, and can grasp God's will within His words, and enter into these words, then you are someone who follows the stream of the Holy Spirit. If you do not follow the stream of the Holy Spirit, then you are undoubtedly someone who does not pursue the truth. The Holy Spirit has no chance of working within those who have no desire to improve themselves, and as a result, such people are never able to summon their strength, and are always passive. Today, do you follow the stream of the Holy Spirit? Are you in the stream of the Holy Spirit? Have you emerged from a passive state? All those who believe in the words of God, who take the work of God as the foundation, and follow the light of the Holy Spirit today—they are all in the stream of the Holy Spirit. If you believe that God's words are unequivocally true and correct, and if you believe the words of God no matter what He says, then you are someone who pursues entry into the work of God, and in this way you fulfill God's will.

To enter into the stream of the Holy Spirit you must have a normal relationship with God, and you must first rid yourself of your passive state. Some people always follow the majority, and their hearts have strayed too far from God; such people have no desire to improve themselves, and the standards they pursue are too low. Only the pursuit of loving God and being gained by God is God's will. There are people who only use their conscience to repay God's love, but this is insufficient for God's will; the higher the standards you pursue, the more suited you are to God's will. As someone who is normal, and who pursues the love of God, entry into the kingdom to become one of the people of God is your true future, and a life that is of the utmost value and significance. No one is more blessed than you—and why do I say this? Because those who do not believe in God live for the flesh, and they live for Satan, but today you live for God, and live to carry out the will of God. That is why I say your lives are of the utmost significance.

Only this group of people, who have been selected by God, are able to live out a life of the utmost significance: No one else on earth is able to live out a life of such value and meaning. Because you have been selected by God, and are raised up by God, and, moreover, because of God's love for you, you have grasped the true life, and know how to live a life that is of the utmost value. This is not because your pursuit is good, but because of the grace of God; it was God who opened the eyes of your spirit, and it was the Spirit of God that touched your heart, giving you the good fortune to come before Him. If the Spirit of God had not enlightened you, then you would be incapable of seeing what is lovely about God, nor would it be possible for you to love God. It is wholly because the Spirit of God has touched your heart that it has turned to God. Sometimes, when you are enjoying the words of God, your spirit is touched, and you feel that you can't help but love God, that there is great strength within you, and that there is nothing that you can't put aside. If you feel like this, then you have been touched by the Spirit of God, and your heart has wholly turned to God, and you will pray to God and say: "O God! We truly have been predestined and chosen by You. Your glory gives me pride, and it feels glorious for me to be one of Your people. I will expend anything and give anything to carry out Your will, and will devote all my years, and an entire lifetime of efforts, to You." When you pray like this, there will be unending love and true obedience toward God in your heart. Have you ever had such an experience as this? If people are often touched by the Spirit of God, then they are especially willing to devote themselves to God in their prayers: "O God! I wish to behold Your day of glory, and I wish to live for You—nothing is more worthy or meaningful than to live for You, and I have not the slightest desire to live for Satan and the flesh. You raise me up by enabling me to live for You today." When you have prayed in this way, you will feel that you can't help but give your heart to God, that you must gain God, and that you would hate to die without having gained God while you are alive. Having spoken such a prayer, there will be an inexhaustible strength within you, and you will not know from where it comes; inside you there will be limitless power, and you will have a great sense that God is lovely, and that He is worth loving. This is when you will have been touched by God. All those who have had such an experience have been touched by God. For those who are often touched by God, changes occur in their lives, they are able to make their resolution and are willing to completely gain God, the love for God in their hearts is stronger, their hearts have completely turned to God, they hold no regard for family, the world, entanglements, or their future, and they are willing to devote a lifetime of efforts to God. All those who have been touched by the Spirit of God are people who seek after the truth, and who have hope of being made perfect by God.

Have you turned your heart to God? Has your heart been touched by the Spirit of God? If you have never had such an experience, and if you have never prayed in such a way, then this shows that God has no place in your heart. All those who are guided by the Spirit of God and who have been touched by the Spirit of God are possessed of the work of God, which shows that God's words and God's love have taken root within them. Some people say: "I am not as earnest as you in my prayers, nor am I so touched by God; sometimes—when I meditate and pray—I feel that God is lovely, and my heart is touched by God." Nothing is more important than man's heart. When your heart has turned to God, your entire being will have turned to God, and at that time your heart will have been touched by the Spirit of God. Most among you have had such an experience—it's just that the depths of your experiences are not the same. Some people say: "I don't say many words of prayer, I just listen to the communion of others and the strength rises up within me." This shows that you have been touched by God inside. People who have been touched by God inside are inspired when they hear the communion of others; if a person's heart remains totally unmoved when they hear inspiring words, then this proves that the work of the Holy Spirit is not within them. There is no yearning inside them, which proves that they have no resolve, and thus they are without the work of the Holy Spirit. If a person has been touched by God, he will have a reaction when he hears the words of God; if he has not been touched by God, then he has not engaged with the words of God, they bear no relation to him, and he is incapable of being enlightened. Those who have heard the words of God and had no reaction are people who have not been touched by God—they are people who are without the work of the Holy Spirit. All those who are able to accept the new light are touched, and possessed of the work of the Holy Spirit.

Measure yourself:

1. Are you in the midst of the present work of the Holy Spirit?
2. Has your heart turned to God? Have you been touched by God?
3. Have God's words taken root inside you?

4. Is your practice built upon the foundation of God's requirements?

5. Do you live under the guidance of the present light of the Holy Spirit?

6. Is your heart ruled by old conceptions, or is it ruled by the actual words of God?

Hearing these words, what is the reaction within you? Having believed for all these years, do you have God's words as your life? Has there been a change in your corrupt disposition of before? Do you, in accordance with the actual words of God, know what it is to have life, and what it is to be without life? Is this clear to you? Of principal importance in following God is that everything should be according to the actual words of God: Whether you are pursuing entry into life or the fulfillment of God's will, everything should be centered around the actual words of God. If what you commune and pursue are not centered around the actual words of God, then you are a stranger to the words of God, and totally bereft of the work of the Holy Spirit. What God wants are people who follow His footsteps. No matter how wonderful and pure what you understood before is, God does not want it, and if you are unable to put aside such things, then they will be a tremendous obstacle to your entry in the future. All those who are able to follow the present light of the Holy Spirit are blessed. The people of ages past also followed the footsteps of God, yet they could not follow until today; this is the blessing of the people of the last days. Those who can follow the present work of the Holy Spirit, and who are able to follow the footsteps of God, such that they follow God wherever He leads them—these are people who are blessed by God. Those who do not follow the present work of the Holy Spirit have not entered into the work of God's words, and no matter how much they work, or how great their suffering, or how much they run about, none of it means anything to God, and He will not commend them. Today, all those who follow the actual words of God are in the stream of the Holy Spirit; those who are strangers to the actual words of God are outside of the stream of the Holy Spirit, and such people are not commended by God. Service that is divorced from the actual utterances of the Holy Spirit is service that is of the flesh, and of conceptions, and it is incapable of being in accordance with God's will. If people live among religious conceptions, then they are unable to do anything that is fit for God's will, and even though they serve God, they serve in the midst of their imagination and conceptions, and are totally incapable of serving in accordance with the will of God. Those who are unable to follow the work of the Holy Spirit do not understand the will of God, and those who do not understand the will of God cannot serve God. God wants service that is after His own heart; He does not want service that is of conceptions and the flesh. If people are incapable of following the steps of the Holy Spirit's work, then they live amid conceptions, and the service of such people interrupts and disturbs. Such service runs contrary to God, and thus those who are unable to follow the footsteps of God are incapable of serving God; those who are unable to follow the footsteps of God most certainly oppose God, and are incapable of being compatible with God. "Following the work of the Holy Spirit" means understanding the will of God today, being able to act in accordance with the present requirements of God, being able to obey and follow the God of today, and entering in accordance with the newest utterances of God. Only this is someone who follows the work of the Holy Spirit and is in the stream of the Holy Spirit. Such people are not only capable of receiving God's praise and seeing God, but can also know God's disposition from the latest work of God, and can know man's conceptions and disobedience, and man's nature and substance, from His latest work; furthermore, they are able to gradually achieve changes in their disposition during their service. Only people such as this are those who are able to gain God, and who have genuinely found the true way. Those who are eliminated by the work of the Holy Spirit are people who are incapable of following the latest work of God, and who rebel against the latest work of God. That such people openly oppose God is because God has done new work, and because the image of God is not the same as that in their conceptions—as a result of which they openly oppose God and pass judgment upon God, leading to their loathing and rejection by God. Possessing the knowledge of the latest work of God is no easy matter, but if people can intentionally obey the work of God and seek the work of God, then they will have the chance to see God, and will have the chance to gain the newest guidance of the Holy Spirit. Those who intentionally oppose the work of God cannot receive the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit or the guidance of God; thus, whether or not people can receive the latest work of God depends on the grace of God, it depends on their pursuit, and it depends on their intentions.

All who are able to obey the actual utterances of the Holy Spirit are blessed. It does not matter how they used to be, or how the Holy Spirit used to work within them—those who have gained the latest work are the most blessed, and those who are unable to follow the latest work today are eliminated. God wants those who are able to accept the new light, and He wants those who accept and know His latest work. Why is it said that you must be a chaste virgin? A chaste virgin is able to seek the work of the Holy Spirit and understand the new things, and moreover, able to put aside old conceptions, and obey the work of God today. This group of people, who accept the newest work of today, were predestined by God before the ages, and are the most blessed of people. You hear the voice of God directly, and behold the appearance of God, and so, throughout heaven and earth, and throughout the ages, none have been more blessed than you, this group of people. All this is because of God's work, because of God's predestination and selection, and because of God's grace; if God did not speak and utter His words, could your circumstances be as they are today? Thus, may all glory and praise be to God, for all this is because God raises you up. With these things in mind, could you still be passive? Could your strength still be unable to rise up?

That you are able to accept the judgment, chastisement, smiting, and refinement of God's words, and, moreover, are able to accept God's commissions, was predestined by God at the beginning of time, and thus you must not be too distressed when you are chastised. No one can take away the work that has been done in you, and the blessings that have been bestowed within you, and no one can take away all that has been given to you. People of religion brook no comparison with you. You are not possessed of great expertise in the Bible, and are not equipped with religious theory, but because God has worked within you, you have gained more than anyone throughout the ages—and so this is your greatest blessing. Because of this, you must be even more dedicated to God, and even more loyal to God. Because God raises you up, you must bolster your efforts, and must ready your stature to accept the commissions of God. You must stand firm in the place God has given you, pursue becoming one of the people of God, accept the training of the kingdom, be gained by God and ultimately become a glorious testament to God. How many of these resolves do you possess? If you are possessed of such resolves, then ultimately you are sure to be gained by God, and will become a glorious testament to God. You should understand that the principal commission is being gained by God and becoming a glorious testament to God. This is the will of God.

The actual words of the Holy Spirit are the dynamics of the work of the Holy Spirit, and the Holy Spirit's continual enlightenment of man during this period is the trend of the work of the Holy Spirit. And what is the trend in the work of the Holy Spirit today? It is the leadership of the people into the actual work of God, and into a normal spiritual life. There are several steps to entry into a normal spiritual life:

1. First, you must pour your heart into the words of God. You must not pursue God's words in the past, and must not study them nor compare them with the words of today. Instead, you must completely pour your heart into the actual words of God. If there are people who still wish to read the words of God, spiritual books, or other accounts of preaching from the past, who do not follow the actual words of the Holy Spirit, then they are the most foolish of people; God detests such people. If you are willing to accept the light of the Holy Spirit today, then completely pour your heart into the actual utterances of God. This is the first thing you must achieve.

2. You must pray upon the foundation of the actual words spoken by God, enter into the words of God and commune with God, and make your resolutions before God, establishing what standards you wish to pursue the accomplishment of.

3. You must pursue profound entry into the truth upon the foundation of the work of the Holy Spirit today. Do not hold on to outdated utterances and theories from the past.

4. You must seek to be touched by the Holy Spirit, and enter into the words of God.

5. You must pursue entry into the path walked by the Holy Spirit today.

And how do you seek being touched by the Holy Spirit? What's crucial is to live in God's actual words, and to pray upon the foundation of God's requirements. Having prayed in this way, the Holy Spirit is sure to touch you. If you do not seek based upon the foundation of the actual words spoken by God, then this is fruitless. You should pray, and say: "O God! I oppose You, and I owe You so much; I am so disobedient, and never able to satisfy You. O God, I wish for You to save me, I wish to give service to You to the very end, I wish to die for You. You judge me and chastise me, and I have no complaints; I oppose You and I deserve to die, so that all people may behold Your righteous disposition in my death." When you pray from within your heart in this way, God will hear you, and will guide you; if you do not pray upon the foundation of the actual words of the Holy Spirit, then there is no possibility of the Holy Spirit touching you. If you pray according to God's will, and according to that which God wishes to do today, you will say: "O God! I wish to accept Your commissions and be faithful to Your commissions, and I am willing to devote my entire life to Your glory, so that all that I do can reach the standards of the people of God. May my heart be touched by You. I wish for Your Spirit to ever enlighten me, to make all I do bring shame upon Satan, that I am ultimately gained by You." If you pray in this way, centered around the will of God, then the Holy Spirit will inevitably work in you. It matters not how many are the words of your prayers—what is key is whether or not you grasp the will of God. You may all have had the following experience: Sometimes, whilst praying in an assembly, the dynamics of the work of the Holy Spirit reach their peak, causing everyone's strength to rise up. Some people cry bitterly and weep tears while praying, overcome with remorse before God, and some people show their resolve, and make vows. Such is the effect to be achieved by the work of the Holy Spirit. Today, it is crucial that all people completely pour their hearts into the words of God. Do not focus on the words that were spoken before; if you still hold on to what came before, then the Holy Spirit will not work within you. Do you see how important this is?

Do you know the path walked by the Holy Spirit today? The several points above are what is to be accomplished by the Holy Spirit today and in the future; they are the path taken by the Holy Spirit, and the entry that ought to be pursued by man. In your entry into life, at the very least you must pour your heart into the words of God, and be able to accept the judgment and chastisement of God's words; your heart must yearn for God, you must pursue profound entry into the truth, and the objectives required by God. When you are possessed of this strength, then it shows that you have been touched by God, and your heart has begun to turn to God.

The first step of entry into life is to completely pour your heart into the words of God, and the second step is to accept being touched by the Holy Spirit. What is the effect to be achieved by accepting being touched by the Holy Spirit? To be able to yearn to seek and explore a more profound truth, and to be capable of cooperating with God in positive manners. Today, you cooperate with God, which is to say there is an objective to your pursuit, to your prayers, and to your communion of God's words, and you perform your duty in accordance with God's requirements—only this is cooperating with God. If you only speak of letting God act, but do not take any action, neither praying nor seeking, then could this be called cooperation? If you have nothing of cooperation in you, and are bereft of training for entry that has an objective, then you are not cooperating. Some people say: “Everything depends on the predestination of God, it is all done by God Himself; if God did not do it, then how could man?” God’s work is normal, and not the slightest bit supernatural, and it is only through your active seeking that the Holy Spirit works, for God does not force man—you must give God the opportunity to work, and if you do not pursue or enter, and if there is not the slightest yearning in your heart, then God has no chance of working. By what path can you seek being touched by God? Through prayer, and coming closer to God. But most importantly, remember, it must be upon the foundation of the words spoken by God. When you are often touched by God, you are not enslaved by the flesh: Husband, wife, children, and money—they are all incapable of shackling you, and you wish only to pursue the truth and to live before God. At this time, you will be someone who lives in the realm of freedom.

THOSE WHOSE DISPOSITION HAS CHANGED ARE THOSE WHO HAVE ENTERED INTO THE REALITY OF GOD’S WORDS

The path that the Holy Spirit takes in people is to first pull their hearts out of all people, events, and things, and into the words of God so that in their hearts they all believe that God’s words are utterly without doubt and completely true. Since you believe in God you must believe in His words; if you have believed in God for many years but you don’t know the path that the Holy Spirit takes, are you really a believer? To achieve the life of a normal person and a proper life of man with God, you must first believe His words. If you have not completed the first step of work that the Holy Spirit does in people, you have no foundation. You are lacking the most basic principle, so how can you walk the path ahead? Taking the right track of God perfecting man is entering the right track of the Holy Spirit’s actual work; it is also taking the path that the Holy Spirit walks. Right now, the path the Holy Spirit walks is God's actual words. So, for one to walk it, he must obey, and eat and drink of the actual words of God incarnate. He is doing the work of words, and everything is spoken from His words, and everything is established on His words, His actual words. Whether it's being fully without doubts about God become flesh or knowing Him, one must put much effort into His words. Otherwise, he cannot accomplish anything at all, and he will be left with nothing. Only by coming to know God and satisfy Him on the foundation of eating and drinking His words can one gradually establish a proper relationship with Him. Eating and drinking His words and putting them into practice is the best cooperation with God, and it is the practice that best bears witness as one of His people. When one understands and is able to obey the essence of God's actual words, he is living on the path that is led by the Holy Spirit and he has entered the right track of God perfecting man. It used to be that people sought grace and sought peace and joy, and then were able to obtain God's work. It's different now. If they do not have the words of God become flesh, if they do not have the reality of those words, they cannot gain approval from God and will be eliminated by God. To achieve a proper spiritual life, first eat and drink God's words and put them into practice; and on this foundation establish a proper relationship between man and God. How do you cooperate? How do you stand witness as one of His people? How do you establish a proper relationship with God?

This is how to see if you have a proper relationship with God in your daily life:

1. Do you believe God's own testimony?
2. Do you believe in your heart that God's words are true and infallible?
3. Are you someone who puts His words into practice?
4. Are you devoted to what He entrusts you with? How can you be devoted to it?
5. Is everything you do for the sake of satisfying and being loyal to God?

Through these things, you can take stock of whether you have a proper relationship with God at this current stage.

If you are able to accept what God entrusts to you, accept His promise, and follow the path of the Holy Spirit, this is carrying out God's will. Do you have inner clarity on the path of the Holy Spirit? Are your current actions in accordance with His path? Is your heart drawing close to God? Are you willing to follow the newest light from the Holy Spirit? Are you willing to be obtained by God? Are you willing to become a manifestation of God's glory on earth? Do you have the will to achieve what God requires? If you have the will to cooperate as soon as God speaks and you have the will to satisfy Him, if this is your internal dynamic, it means that God's words have borne fruit in your heart. If you don't have that kind of will and you do not have a goal in your pursuit, it means that your heart has not yet been moved by God.

As people have officially entered into the training of the kingdom, God's requirements of them have been elevated. How can one see that? It was said before that people do not have life, but now people seek life, seek to be one of God's people, and to be obtained and perfected by God. Isn't this being elevated? In reality, requirements of people are simpler than they used to be. People aren't required to be service-doers or to die—all that is required of them is to be people of God. Isn't that simpler? As long as you offer up your heart to God and obey His guidance, all will come to fruition. Why do you think it's so difficult? What is now spoken of regarding entering into life is clearer than before; people used to be unclear and didn't know what the reality of life is about. Those who have a reaction to hearing God's words, who have the enlightenment and illumination of the Holy Spirit, and who have gained His perfection and a change in disposition before Him—all of these people have life. What God wants is living beings, not lifeless things. If you are lifeless, you do not have life, and God will not speak to you, and He particularly will not raise you up to be one of His people. Since you have been uplifted by God, having received such a great blessing from Him, this means that you are all people who have life, and those who have life come from God.

For one to pursue a change in his life disposition, the path of practice is simple. If you are able to follow the actual words of the Holy Spirit in your practical experiences, you will be able to achieve a change in your disposition. If you follow and seek whatever the Holy Spirit says, you are someone who obeys Him, and this way you will be able to have a change in disposition. Man's disposition changes with the Holy Spirit's actual words; if you always uphold your old past experiences and rules, your disposition will not change. If the Holy Spirit spoke today to tell all people to enter into a life of normal humanity but you continue to focus on the surface and you are confused about reality and do not take it seriously, you will be someone who is not keeping up with

His work and you will not be someone who has entered the path led by the Holy Spirit. Whether or not your disposition can change depends upon whether or not you keep up with the Holy Spirit's actual words and have genuine understanding. This is different from what you understood before. What you understood of a change in disposition before was that you, who are easy to judge, through God's disciplining no longer speak carelessly. But this is just one aspect of the change, and right now the most critical point is following the guidance of the Holy Spirit. You follow whatever God says; you obey whatever He says. People cannot change their disposition themselves; they must undergo the judgment and chastisement and painful refinement of God's words, or being dealt with, disciplined, and pruned by His words. Only after that can they achieve obedience and devotion to God, and not try to fool Him and deal with Him perfunctorily. It is under the refinement of God's words that people have a change in disposition. Only those who undergo the exposure, judgment, disciplining, and dealing with of His words will no longer dare to do things recklessly, and will become calm and collected. The most important point is that they are able to obey God's actual words and obey God's work, and even if it is not in line with human notions, they can put them aside and intentionally obey. When a change in disposition has been spoken of in the past, it has mainly been about forsaking oneself, allowing the flesh to suffer, disciplining one's body, and ridding oneself of fleshly preferences—this is one type of change in disposition. People now know that the real expression of a change in disposition is obeying the actual words of God as well as being able to have a genuine understanding of His new work. This way people will be able to get rid of their previous understanding of God in their notions, and achieve a true understanding of and obedience to Him. Only this is a genuine expression of a change in disposition.

People's pursuit of entry into life is based on God's words; it has been said before that everything is accomplished because of His words, but no one has seen the facts. If in this stage you enter into experience you will be completely clear—this is building a good foundation for future trials, and no matter what God says, you just need to enter into His words. When God says He starts to chastise people, you accept His chastisement. When God asks people to die, you accept that trial. If you are always living within His newest utterances, in the end God's words will perfect you. The more you enter into God's words, the more quickly you will be perfected. Why do I fellowship again and again and ask you to understand and enter into God's words? It is only by focusing your pursuit toward God's words and experiencing them and entering into the reality of them that the Holy Spirit will have the opportunity to work in you. So you are all contestants in every method of God's work, and no matter whether your suffering has been great or mild in the end, you will all have a souvenir. In order to achieve your final perfection, you must enter into all of God's words. For the Holy Spirit to perfect people, He does not work unilaterally. He requires people's cooperation; He needs everyone to consciously cooperate with Him. No matter what God says, you simply enter into His words—this is more beneficial for your lives. Everything is for the sake of your change in disposition. When you enter into God's words, your heart will be moved by God, and you will be able to understand everything that God wants to achieve in this step of work, and you will have the will to achieve it. In the times of chastisement, some people believed that it was the method of work and did not believe in God's words. As a result, they did not undergo refinement and they came out of the times of chastisement having gained nothing and understood nothing. There were some who truly entered into these words without a shred of doubt; they said that God's words are true and infallible and that people should be chastised. They struggled within this for a period of time and let go of their future and destiny, and once they came out from that their disposition changed significantly, and they had an even deeper understanding of God. Those who came out from the midst of chastisement all felt the loveliness of God, and they knew that that step of God's work was His great love coming upon mankind, that it was the conquest and the salvation of God's love. And they also said that God's thoughts are always good, and everything that God does in man is love, not hate. Those who did not believe God's words or place importance on them did not undergo refinement during the times of chastisement, and the result was that the Holy Spirit did not accompany them, and they gained nothing. For those who entered into the times of chastisement, although they did undergo refinement, the Holy Spirit was working inside of them in a hidden way, and the outcome was that they experienced a change in their life disposition. Some people seemed to be very positive from the outside. They were always happy, but they didn't enter into that state of the refinement of God's words and didn't change at all, which was the consequence of not believing God's words.

If you don't believe His words the Holy Spirit won't work in you. God appears to all those who believe His words; those who believe and understand His words will gain His love!

Enter into the state of God's words, focus on doing it in an active way, and find what should be put into practice; only by doing so can you have a change in your life disposition. It is only through this way that you can be perfected by God, and it is only people who have been perfected by God in that way who can be in line with His will. To receive new light, you must live within His words. If you have only been moved by the Holy Spirit once, that is not adequate at all—you must go deeper. Those who have only been moved once have just had the zeal in them aroused and they become willing to seek, but they cannot maintain that for the long term, and they must always receive being moved by the Holy Spirit. There have been so many times I have brought up that I hope that God's Spirit may move people's spirits, that they may pursue a change in their life disposition, and while they seek to be moved by God they understand their own inadequacies, and that in the process of experiencing His words, they cast off the impure things in themselves (self-rightness, arrogance, and their own notions, and so on). Do not believe that just proactively receiving new light is adequate—you must also cast off things from the negative aspects. You need to not only enter from the positive aspects, but you also need to rid yourselves of all impure things in the negative aspects. You must be constantly examining yourself regarding which impure things still exist within you. People's religious notions, intents, hopes, self-rightness, and arrogance are all unclean things. Compare yourself to all God's words of revelation, and look into yourself for any religious notions you may hold. Only if you truly recognize them can you cast them off. Some people say that now it is enough to just follow the light of the present work of the Holy Spirit and nothing else needs to be heeded. Then how will you get rid of your religious notions when they come up? Do you think it is that simple to follow God's words? In your real life, there are still religious things that can be disruptive, and when these things come up, they can disrupt your ability to accept new things. These are all problems that actually exist. If you only pursue the actual words of the Holy Spirit you cannot satisfy God's will. While you pursue the present light of the Holy Spirit, you should recognize which notions and intentions you still hold, what particularly human self-rightness there is, and which behaviors are disobedient to God. And after you have recognized all of these things, you must cast them off. Having you forsake your previous actions and behaviors is all for the sake of following the Holy Spirit's current words. For a change in disposition, on the one hand, it is achieved through God's words, and on the other hand, it requires that people cooperate. That is, God's work and people's practice are both indispensable.

In your future path of service, how can you satisfy God's will?

One crucial point is to pursue entering into life, pursue a change in disposition, and pursue entering more deeply into the truth—this is the path to achieving being perfected and being obtained by God. All of you are to receive God's commission, so what is that? This is relevant to the next step of work, which is going to be greater work that is carried out throughout the entire universe. So now you should pursue a change in your life disposition so that in the future you will truly become the proof of God gaining glory through His work, and be made into specimens for His future work. Today's pursuit is all laying a foundation for the future work; it is for you to be used by God and so that you are able to bear witness for Him. If this is the object of your pursuit, you will be able to gain the presence of the Holy Spirit. The higher the object of your pursuit is, the more possible it will be for you to be perfected. The more you pursue the truth, the more the Holy Spirit will work. The greater energy you have for pursuit, the more you will gain. The Holy Spirit perfects people based on their internal state. Some people say that they are not willing to be used by God or to be perfected by Him, that it will be fine if they have peace in the flesh, and do not suffer any catastrophes. Some people are not willing to enter into the kingdom, but are willing to descend into the bottomless pit, and God will also fulfill that for you. Whatever you pursue will be what God fulfills. So what is your current pursuit? Are you pursuing being perfected? Are your current actions and behaviors for the sake of being perfected by God, for being obtained by Him? You must constantly measure yourself this way in your daily life. If you focus your heart on pursuing a single goal, God will definitely perfect you. This is the path of the Holy Spirit. The path led by the Holy Spirit is attained through people's seeking. The more you long to be perfected and obtained by God, the more the Holy Spirit will work within you. The more you do not seek, and the more negative and retreating you are, the more the Holy Spirit lacks opportunities to work. The Holy Spirit will gradually abandon you. Are you willing to be perfected by God? Are you willing to be obtained by God? Are you willing to be used by God? You should pursue doing everything for the sake of being perfected, obtained, and used by God, allowing everything in the universe to see God's actions revealed in you. Among all things, you are the master of them, and among all that there is, you will allow God to gain His testimony and His glory because of you—this shows that you are the most blessed generation!

ON QUIETING YOUR HEART BEFORE GOD

Quieting your heart before God is one of the most crucial steps for entering into God's words, and is a lesson that all people presently have an urgent need to enter. The entry ways to quieting your heart before God are:

1. Withdraw your heart from external things, be quiet before God, and pray to God with a focused heart.
2. With your heart quiet before God, eat, drink, and enjoy God's words.
3. Make it a usual practice to meditate on and contemplate God's love and ponder God's work with your heart.

First begin with the matter of prayer. Be single-minded, and pray at a fixed time. No matter how pressed for time, or how busy, or what comes upon you, pray every day as normal, and eat and drink God's words as normal. As long as you eat and drink God's words, no matter what your surroundings are, your spirit is especially pleased, nor are you bothered by the people, events, or things around you. When you normally contemplate God in your heart, what goes on outside cannot bother you. This is what it means to have stature. Begin from prayer first: Praying at peace before God is most fruitful. After that, eat and drink the words of God, and ponder God's words and try to obtain the light, find the path to practice, know what the aims of God's utterances are, and understand without deviation. Ordinarily, draw close to God normally in your heart, contemplate God's love, and ponder the words of God, without being disturbed by external things. When your heart is at peace to a degree that you are able to muse, so that, within yourself, you contemplate God's love and truly draw near to God regardless of what environment you are in, and you have ultimately reached the point where you give praise in your heart, and it is even better than praying, then in this you will be possessed of a certain stature. If you are able to achieve the states described above, then this will prove that your heart is truly at peace before God. This is the first step; it is a basic exercise. Only after they are able to be at peace before God can people be touched by the Holy Spirit, and enlightened and illuminated by the Holy Spirit, only then are they able to truly commune with God, and able to grasp God's will and the guidance of the Holy Spirit—and in this, they will have entered onto the right track in their spiritual lives. Exercising yourself to live before God to reach a certain depth so that you are able to rebel against yourself, to despise yourself, and to live in God's words, this truly is quieting your heart before God. Being able to despise oneself, curse oneself, and rebel against oneself is the result that God's work achieves, and people can't do this. Therefore the practice of quieting one's heart before God is a lesson people should immediately enter. Some people not only cannot usually quiet their hearts before God, but their hearts are not quiet before God even when they pray. This is altogether too far from God's standards! If your heart cannot be quiet before God can you be moved by the Holy Spirit? If you cannot be quiet before God, you can be distracted when someone comes by, you can be distracted when people are talking, and your heart can be drawn away when others are doing things, so you are not someone living before God. If your heart truly is quiet before God you won't be bothered by anything going on in the world outside, and no person, event, or thing will occupy you. If you have entry into this, then those negative states or all negative things, such as human conceptions, philosophy of life, abnormal relationships with people, and thoughts in your heart will naturally disappear. Because you are always pondering God's words, and your heart is always drawing close to God and occupied by the actual words of God, those negative things are unconsciously stripped off. When positive new things occupy you, negative old things will have no place, so don't pay attention to those negative things. You needn't make efforts trying to control them. Pay attention to being quiet before God, eat and drink more of God's words and enjoy them, sing more hymns praising God, and let God have a chance to work on you, because God at present wants to personally perfect people, and He wants to gain your heart; His Spirit moves your heart, and if you live before God following the guidance of the Holy Spirit you will satisfy God. If you pay attention to living in God's words and fellowship more about the truth to gain the enlightenment and illumination of the Holy Spirit, then those religious conceptions, self-rightness and self-importance will all disappear, and then you will know how to spend for God, know how to love God, and how to satisfy God. Those things outside God are then unconsciously forgotten.

Pondering the words of God and praying over the words of God at the same time as eating and drinking the actual words of God—this is the first step to being at peace before God. If you can be truly at peace before God, then the enlightenment and illumination of the Holy Spirit will be with you.

All spiritual life is achieved by relying on being quiet before God. In praying you must be quiet before God before you can be moved by the Holy Spirit. By being quiet before God when you eat and drink God's words you can be enlightened and illuminated and be able to achieve truly understanding God's words. In your usual meditation and fellowship, and when you are drawing close to God with your heart, only when you are quiet before God can you have genuine closeness to God, genuine understanding of God's love and God's work, and true thoughtfulness toward God's intentions. The more you are usually able to be quiet before God the more you can be illuminated, and the more you are able to understand your own corrupt disposition, what you lack, what you should enter, what function you should serve, and where you have defects. All these are achieved by relying on being quiet before God. If you truly reach some depth in being quiet before God, you can touch some mysteries in the spirit, touch on what God at present wants to do on you, touch on deeper understanding of God's words, and touch on the essence of God's words, on the substance of God's words, on the being of God's words, and you can see the path of practice more thoroughly and more accurately. If you cannot be quiet in your spirit to a certain depth, you will just be somewhat moved by the Holy Spirit, inside you will feel strength, and some enjoyment and peace, but you will not touch anything deeper. I have said before, if one does not use all their strength, it will be difficult for them to hear My voice or see My face. This refers to achieving depth in being quiet before God, not to external effort. A person who can truly be quiet before God is able to free themselves from all worldly ties and can achieve being occupied by God. All people who are unable to be quiet before God are assuredly dissolute and unrestrained. All who are able to be quiet before God are people who are pious before God, people who yearn for God. It is only people who are quiet before God who pay attention to life, pay attention to fellowship in spirit, who thirst for God's words, and who pursue the truth. All those who pay no attention to being quiet before God, who do not practice being quiet before God are vain people who are completely attached to the world, who are without life; even if they say they believe in God they are just paying lip-service. Those God ultimately perfects and completes are people who can be quiet before God. Therefore, people who are quiet before God are people graced with great blessings. People who during the day take little time to eat and drink God's words, who are completely preoccupied with external affairs, and do not pay attention to life entry are all hypocrites with no prospect of developing in the future. It is those who can be quiet before God and genuinely commune with God who are God's people.

To come before God to accept His words as your life, you must first be quiet before God. Only when you are quiet before God will God enlighten you and make you understand. The quieter people are before God, the more they are able to gain God's enlightenment and illumination. These require people to have piety and faith. Only thus can they achieve perfection. The fundamental exercise for entering spiritual life is being quiet before God. All your spiritual training will be effective only if you are quiet before God. If you cannot quiet your heart before God you cannot receive the work of the Holy Spirit. If your heart is quiet before God no matter what you are doing then you are someone who lives before God. If your heart is quiet before God and drawing close to God no matter what you are doing, this proves that you are a person who is quiet before God. When you talk with others, when you are walking, you are able to say, "My heart is drawing close to God, and is not focused on outward things, and I can be quiet before God." This is a person who is quiet before God. Do not come into contact with things that can draw your heart away to the outside, and do not come into contact with people who can draw your heart away from God. Drop whatever it is that can distract your heart from being close to God, or stay away from it. That way is more beneficial to your life. Now is the time of the great work of the Holy Spirit. It is the time when God Himself is perfecting people. If at this moment you cannot be quiet before God then you are not someone who returns before the throne of God. If you pursue things other than God there is no possibility of being perfected by God. Those who today can hear such utterances from God and still cannot be quiet before God are people who do not love the truth, people who do not love God. If you will not offer yourself now when will you? To offer oneself is to quiet one's heart before God. This is a genuine offering. Whoever truly offers their hearts to God now certainly can be completed by God. Nothing, no matter what it is, can disturb you; whether that is to prune you, or deal with you, or whether you meet with frustration or failure, your heart should always be quiet before God. No matter how people treat you, your heart should be quiet before God. No matter what environments you face, be it adversities, suffering, or persecution, or whether many kinds of trials come upon you, your heart should always be quiet before God. This is the way to being perfected. Only if you are truly quiet before God will you be clear about God's actual words, practice more correctly the Holy Spirit's illumination and enlightenment and not deviate, be able to touch more clearly God's intentions and have a clearer direction in your service, be able to touch more accurately the moving and guidance of the Holy Spirit and have the certainty to live under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. These are the results that truly being quiet before God achieves. When people are not clear about God's words, are without a way to practice, cannot touch on God's intentions, or have no principles of practice, this is because their hearts are not quiet before God. The purpose of being quiet before God is to be earnest and pragmatic and seek correctness and transparency in God's words, ultimately to achieve understanding the truth and knowing God.

If your heart cannot be constantly quiet before God, God cannot perfect you. If a person is without will that equals being without a heart, and people without hearts cannot be quiet before God. They do not know how much work God does or how much He says, neither do they know how to put it into practice. Are these not people without hearts? Can people without hearts be quiet before God? God cannot perfect people without hearts, and they belong among the animals. God has spoken so clearly and thoroughly, yet your heart still cannot be moved and you still cannot be quiet before God; isn't this being an animal? Some people go astray in practicing being quiet before God. When it's time to cook they don't cook, and when it's time to work they don't work, but just go on praying and meditating. Being quiet before God does not mean not cooking or working, nor ignoring life, but being able to quiet one's heart before God, being able to keep God's place in one's heart in all normal circumstances. When you pray, kneel down properly before God to pray; when you work or prepare food, quiet your heart before God, ponder God's words or sing hymns. No matter what environment you are in, you have a way to practice, do all you can to be close to God, do all you can to quiet your heart before God. When circumstances permit, pray single-mindedly; when circumstances do not permit, draw near to God in your heart while doing the work with your hands. When you can eat and drink God's words then eat and drink God's words; when you can pray then pray; when you can contemplate God then contemplate Him; do all you can to exercise yourself for entry based on your environment. Some people can be quiet before God when nothing arises, but as soon as something happens their hearts leave God. That is not being quiet before God. The correct way to experience is that under no circumstances does one's heart leave God, or feel disturbed by outside people, events, or things: This is a person who is truly quiet before God. Some people say that when they pray in meetings their hearts can be quiet before God, but when in fellowship they cannot be quiet before God and their thoughts become distracted. This is not being quiet before God. Most people at present are in this state, and their hearts cannot always be quiet before God. So you need to put more effort into exercising yourselves in this area, entering step by step onto the right track of life experience and walking onto the path of being perfected by God.

BE MINDFUL OF GOD'S WILL TO ATTAIN PERFECTION

The more you are mindful of God's will, the more of a burden you have; the more of a burden you have, the richer your experience will be. When you are mindful of God's will, God will give this burden to you, and God will enlighten you on the things that He has entrusted you with. After God has given you this burden, you will pay attention to the truths of this aspect when eating and drinking God's words. If you have a burden related to the state of the brothers' and sisters' lives, this is a burden entrusted to you by God, and your daily prayers will always carry this burden. What God does has been entrusted to you, you are willing to carry out that which God wants to do, and this is what it means to take on God's burden as your own. At this point, your eating and drinking of God's words will focus on the issues in these aspects, and you will think, how am I going to resolve these issues? How am I going to allow the brothers and sisters to be released, to have enjoyment in their spirits? You will focus on solving these issues when you are in fellowship, you will focus on eating and drinking words relating to these issues when you are eating and drinking God's words, you will be eating and drinking God's words while carrying this burden, and you will understand God's requirements. At this point, you will be clearer about the path to walk. This is the enlightenment and illumination of the Holy Spirit brought about by your burden, and this is God providing His guidance to you. Why do I say this? If you do not have a burden, then you do not pay attention when eating and drinking God's words; when you are eating and drinking God's words while carrying a burden, you are able to grasp the essence of God's words, find your way, and be mindful of God's will. Therefore, you should ask God in your prayers to place more burdens on you so that He may entrust you with greater things, you are better able to find a path of practice ahead, you become more effective in eating and drinking God's words, you are able to grasp the essence of His words, and you are more able to accept being moved by the Holy Spirit.

Eating and drinking God's words, practicing praying, accepting God's burden, accepting what He entrusts you with—all these are for the purpose of having the path in front of you. The more of a burden that you have for God, the easier it will be for you to be perfected by God. Some are unwilling to cooperate even when they have been called upon; these are lazy people who wish to revel in comfort. The more you are asked to cooperate in serving God, the more experience you will gain. Because you have more burdens and you experience more, you will have more opportunities to be perfected. Therefore, if you can serve God with sincerity you will be mindful of God's burden, and this way you will have more opportunities to be perfected by God. Such a group of people are being perfected at this time. The more the Holy Spirit moves you, the more time you will devote to being mindful of God's burden, the more you will be perfected by God, the more you will be gained by God, and in the end, you become someone who is used by God. At present, there are some who carry no burden for the church. These people are slack and sloppy, and they only care about their own flesh. They are too selfish and are also blind. You will not have any burden if you are unable to see this matter clearly. The more mindful you are of God's will, the heavier the burden that God will entrust to you. Selfish people are unwilling to suffer such things, they are unwilling to pay the price, and as a result they will miss the opportunity to be perfected by God. Is this not hurting oneself? If you are someone who is mindful of God's will, you will develop a true burden for the church. In fact, instead of calling this a burden for the church, it is rather a burden for your own life, because the burden you develop for the church is for you to be perfected by God through such experiences. Therefore, whoever carries the heaviest burden for the church and whoever carries the burden of entering into life will be those who are perfected by God. Have you seen this clearly? If the church you are with is in a mess and yet you are still not worried or anxious, if the brothers and sisters are not eating and drinking God's words properly and yet you turn even more of a blind eye, then you are not carrying any burdens. Such people are not liked by God. Those liked by God hunger and thirst for righteousness and they are mindful of His will. Therefore, you should be mindful of God's burden now. You should not wait for the righteous disposition of God to be revealed to all men before you become mindful of God's burden. Wouldn't it be too late then? Now is a good opportunity to be perfected by God. If you allow this opportunity to slip through your fingers, you will regret it for the rest of your life, just like Moses was unable to enter the good land of Canaan and he regretted it for the rest of his life, dying with remorse. Once God's righteous disposition has been revealed to all peoples, you will regret it. Even if God does not chastise you, you will chastise yourself due to your own remorse. Some are not convinced by this. If you don't believe it, just wait and see. Some people will serve as the fulfillment of these words. Are you willing to become the sacrificial offering for these words?

If you do not seek out opportunities to be perfected by God, if you do not strive to pursue being perfected, then you will ultimately be filled with remorse. Now is the best opportunity to be perfected—this is the best time. If you do not earnestly seek perfection by God, once His work has concluded it will be too late—you will have missed this opportunity. No matter how great your aspirations, if God is no longer performing work, regardless of the effort that you put in, you will never be able to be perfected. You must seize this opportunity and cooperate through the great work of the Holy Spirit. If you miss this opportunity, you will not be given another no matter how much effort you put in. Some people cry: "God, I am willing to be mindful of Your burden, and I am willing to satisfy Your will.” Yet they have no path to practice, therefore their burdens will not last. If there is a path, you will gain experience step by step, and it will be structured and organized. After one burden has been completed, another is given to you. Through the deepening of your life experience, your burdens deepen as well. Some people only carry a burden when moved by the Holy Spirit, and after a period of time, they no longer carry any burdens when there is no path to practice. Your burden cannot be fully resolved simply from eating and drinking God’s words. By understanding many truths, you will gain discernment, you will be able to solve problems using the truth, and you will have a more precise understanding of God’s words and God’s will. With these things, you will develop burdens, and you will be able to perform good work only once you have a burden. If you just have a burden but you do not have a clear understanding of the truth, that won’t work either. You must have experiences of God’s words yourself, and know how to practice them, and you must first enter into reality yourself before you can provide for others, lead others, and be perfected by God.

It says in “The Path ... (4)” that you are all people of the kingdom predestined by God before the ages, and this cannot be taken away from you by anyone. It also says that God wishes for everyone to be used by God and perfected by God, and He requires them to stand as His people, and that only becoming God’s people may fulfill His will. You had fellowship on this matter at that time, fellowship on the path of entry based on the criteria for God’s people, therefore the work performed by the Holy Spirit during that time was to take everyone out of their negative state and lead them into a positive state. During that time, the trend of the work of the Holy Spirit was to have everyone enjoy God’s words as God’s people, and to allow each of you to understand clearly that you are God’s people predestined before the ages, and that this cannot be taken away by Satan. So you all prayed: “God! I am willing to be Your people, because we have been predestined by You before the ages, because You have bestowed this on us. We are willing to take up this position and satisfy You.” When you prayed in such a way, the Holy Spirit would move you—that was the trend of the work of the Holy Spirit. In this period of time it is to pray and practice to calm your heart before God so that you are able to pursue life and pursue entry into the training of the kingdom. This is the first step. At the moment, God’s work is to have everyone enter the right track, have a normal spiritual life and true experience, be moved by the Holy Spirit, and based on this foundation, accept that which is entrusted by God. The purpose of entering into the training of the kingdom is to allow your every word, every deed, every move, and every thought and idea to enter into God's words, to allow you to be moved by God more often and develop love for God and a heavier burden for God's will, so that everyone is on the path to be perfected by God, and everyone is on the right track. Once you are on the path to be perfected by God, then you are on the right track.

When your mind and ideas as well as your wrong intentions can be corrected and you are able to turn from being mindful of your flesh to being mindful of God's will, and when wrong intentions present themselves and you are able to not be disturbed by them and act in accordance with God's will—if you are able to achieve such a transformation, then you are on the right track of life experience. When your prayer practices are on the right track, this is when you will be moved by the Holy Spirit in your prayers. Every time you pray, you will be moved by the Holy Spirit; every time you pray, you will be able to quiet your heart before God. Every time that you eat and drink a passage of God's word, if you are able to grasp the work that He is performing at present, and are able to know how to pray, how to cooperate, and how to enter in, only this is achieving results from eating and drinking God's words. When you are able to find the path of entry from God's words, and are able to grasp the current dynamics of God's work and the trend of the work of the Holy Spirit in His words, this shows that you are on the right track. If you have not grasped the key points when eating and drinking God's words, if you are unable to find a path to practice after eating and drinking God's words, it shows that you still do not know how to eat and drink His words and that you have not found the method or principle for eating and drinking His words. If you have not grasped the work performed by God at present, you will be unable to accept God's commission. The work currently performed by God is what men must enter into and have knowledge of at present. Do you have a grasp of these things?

Once you have attained results from eating and drinking God's words, and your spiritual life has become normal, and you are able to eat and drink God's words as normal, pray as normal, carry on your church life as normal, regardless of the trials that you may face, the circumstances that you may encounter, the sickness of the flesh that you may endure, the estrangement of brothers and sisters, or difficulties in your family—if you can reach this point, then it shows that you are on the right track. Some people are too fragile and they are lacking perseverance. They whimper when facing some small obstacle; they become weak. The pursuit of truth demands perseverance and determination. If you are unable to satisfy God's will this time, you must be able to loathe yourself, to be quietly determined in your heart that you will satisfy God's will the next time around. If this time you were not mindful of God's burden, you should be determined to rebel against the flesh when facing the same obstacle in the future, and resolve to satisfy God's will. This is how you become praiseworthy. Some people do not even know if their own thoughts and ideas are right—such people are fools! If you would like to subdue your heart and rebel against the flesh, you must first know whether your intentions are right, and only then can you subdue your heart. If you do not know whether your intentions are right, can you subdue your heart and rebel against the flesh? Even if you rebel, you are doing so in a confused manner. You should know that to rebel against your wrong intentions is to rebel against the flesh. When you know that your intentions, your thoughts and ideas are not right, you should rush to turn back and walk the right path. You must first have a breakthrough in this aspect and enter in through such practices, because you know best whether your intentions are right or not. When the wrong intentions are corrected and are for the sake of God, then you have attained the goal of subduing your heart.

The key for you now is to have knowledge of God, to have knowledge of God's work, and you must know how the Holy Spirit performs His work on man; this is the key for entering into the right track. It will be easy for you to enter into the right track once you have grasped this key. You believe in God and know God, which shows that your belief in Him is genuine. If you continue to experience until the end yet are still unable to know God, then you are surely someone who resists God. Those who only believe in Jesus Christ but do not believe in the incarnate God of today are all condemned. They are all contemporary Pharisees because they do not recognize the God of today, and they all resist God. No matter how devoted their belief in Jesus is, it will all be in vain; they will not receive God's praise. All those who say that they believe in God yet have no true knowledge of God in their hearts are hypocrites!

To seek being perfected by God, one must first understand what it means to be perfected by Him, what conditions one must possess to be perfected, and then seek the path of practice once one has a grasp of such matters. One must possess a certain caliber in order to be perfected by God. Many of you do not possess the necessary caliber, which requires you to pay a certain price and your subjective effort. The less your caliber, the more subjective effort you must put in. The greater your understanding of God's words and the more you put them into practice, the faster you can enter onto the path of being made perfect by God. Through praying, you can be made perfect amid prayers; through eating and drinking the words of God, grasping the substance of God's words, and living out the reality of God's words, you can be made perfect. Through experiencing God's words on a daily basis, you come to know what is lacking in you, and, moreover, come to know your Achilles' heel and weaknesses, and you offer prayer to God, through which you will gradually be made perfect. The paths to being made perfect: praying, eating and drinking the words of God, grasping the essence of God's words, entering into the experience of God's words, coming to know what is lacking in you, obeying the work of God, being mindful of God's burden and forsaking the flesh through your loving heart, and having frequent fellowship with brothers and sisters, which enriches your experiences. Whether it be communal life or your personal life, and whether it be large assemblies or small ones, all can allow you to acquire experiences and receive training so that your heart can be quiet before God and return to God. All of this is the process of being made perfect. Experiencing the words of God that has been spoken of means being able to actually taste the words of God and allowing them to be lived out in you so that you have greater faith and love toward God. Through this way, you will gradually shed the corrupt satanic disposition, you will gradually divest yourself of improper motivations, and live out the likeness of a normal person. The greater the love for God within you—which is to say, the more of you that has been made perfect by God—the less you are corrupted by Satan. Through your practical experiences, you will gradually enter onto the path of being made perfect. Thus, if you wish to be made perfect, being mindful of the will of God and experiencing the words of God are especially important.

GOD PERFECTS THOSE AFTER HIS OWN HEART

God now wants to gain a group of people—they are those who strive to cooperate with Him, who can obey His work, who believe the words God speaks are true, and who can put God's requirements into practice. They are those who have true understanding in their hearts. They are the ones who can be perfected, and they will inevitably walk the path of perfection. Those without a clear understanding of God's work, who do not eat and drink of God's words, who pay no attention to His words, and who are without any love for God in their hearts—people like this cannot be perfected. Those who doubt God in the flesh, who remain uncertain about Him, who are never serious about His words, and who always deceive Him, they resist God and are of Satan—there is no way to perfect such people.

If you wish to be perfected, you must first be favored by God because He perfects those whom He favors and who are after His own heart. If you wish to be after God's own heart, your heart must be obedient to God in His work, you must strive to pursue the truth, and you must accept God's observation in all things. Has all you do undergone God's observation? Is your intent correct? If your intent is correct, God will approve of you; if your intent is wrong, this shows that what your heart loves is not God, but the flesh and Satan. Therefore you must accept God's observation in all things through prayer. When you pray, although My person is not there in front of you, the Holy Spirit is with you, and when you pray to this person, you also pray to the Spirit of God. Why do you believe in this flesh? Because He has the Spirit of God. Would you believe in this person without the Spirit of God? When you believe in this person, you believe in the Spirit of God. When you fear this person, you fear the Spirit of God. Faith in God's Spirit is faith in this person, and faith in this person is also faith in the Spirit of God. When you pray, you feel the Spirit of God is with you, and that God is before you; therefore you pray to His Spirit. Today, most people are too afraid to bring their actions before God, and while you may deceive His flesh, you cannot deceive His Spirit. Any matter that cannot withstand God's observation is not in accord with the truth and should be cast aside; otherwise it is a sin against God. So, no matter whether it's when you pray, when you speak and fellowship with your brothers and sisters, or when you perform your duty and handle your business, you must lay your heart before God. When you fulfill your function, God is with you, and so long as your intent is correct and is for the work of God's house, He will accept all you do, so you should earnestly devote yourself to fulfilling your function. When you pray, if you have love for God in your heart and seek God's care, protection, and observation, if these are your intent, your prayers will be effective. For example, when you pray at meetings, if you open your heart and pray to God and tell Him what is in your heart without speaking falsehoods—then your prayers will be effective. If you earnestly love God in your heart, then make an oath to God: "God, who is in the heavens and on earth and among all things, I swear to You: May Your Spirit examine all I do and protect and care for me at all times. It makes it possible for all I do to stand in Your presence. Should my heart ever cease to love You or betray You, give me Your severe chastisement and curse. Pardon me in neither this world nor the next!" Do you dare make such an oath? If you do not, this shows you are cowardly, and that you still love yourself. Do you have this resolve? If this is truly your resolve, you must make this oath. If you have the resolve to make such an oath, God will fulfill your resolve. When you swear an oath to God, He listens. God determines whether you are sinful or righteous by your prayer and your practice. This now is the process of perfecting you, and if you truly have faith in being perfected, you will bring all you do before God and accept His observation, and if you do something outrageous or betray God, He will "perfect" you according to your oath, and then no matter what happens to you, be it perdition or chastisement, it is your own business. You made the oath, so you should carry it out. If you make an oath, but don't carry it out, you will suffer perdition. Since you make the oath, God will perfect you according to your oath. Some are afraid after they pray, and say, "Oh no, my chance at debauchery is gone; my chance to do wicked things is gone; my chance to indulge my worldly greed is gone!" These people still love the world and sin, and they are certain to suffer perdition.

To be a believer in God means that all you do must be brought before Him and made subject to His observation. If what you do can be brought before God's Spirit but not before God's flesh, this shows that you have not subjected yourself to the observation of His Spirit. Who is the Spirit of God? Who is the person witnessed by God? Are They not one and the same? Most see Them as two, believing the Spirit of God is

His alone, and the person witnessed by God is merely a man. But you're wrong, aren't you? On whose behalf does this person work? Those who do not know God incarnate do not have spiritual understanding. God's Spirit and His incarnate flesh are one, because God's Spirit is materialized in the flesh. If this person is unkind to you, will God's Spirit be kind? Aren't you confused? Today, any who cannot accept God's observation cannot receive His approval, and any who do not know God incarnate cannot be perfected. Look at all that you do and see if it can be brought before God. If you cannot bring all that you do before God, this shows that you are an evildoer. Can evildoers be perfected? All that you do, every action, every intent, and every reaction must be brought before God. Even your daily spiritual life—your prayers, your closeness with God, eating and drinking of God's words, fellowship with your brothers and sisters, living the life of the church, and your service in partnership—must be brought before God and observed by Him. It is such practice that will help you mature in life. The process of accepting God's observation is the process of purification. The more you accept God's observation, the more you are purified, and the more you are in accord with God's will, so that you will not hear the call of debauchery and dissipation, and your heart will live in His presence. The more you accept His observation, the more ashamed Satan is and the more you are able to forsake the flesh. So, the acceptance of God's observation is a path people must practice. No matter what you do, even during fellowship with your brothers and sisters, if you bring your acts before God and seek His observation, and if your intent is to obey God Himself, what you practice will be much more correct. Only if you bring all you do before God and accept God's observation can you be someone who lives in the presence of God.

Those without understanding of God can never completely obey. People like this are sons of disobedience. They are too ambitious, and there is too much rebellion in them, so they distance themselves from God and are unwilling to accept His observation. People like this cannot be perfected easily. Some people are selective in how they eat and drink of God's words and in their acceptance of them. They accept portions of God's words which accord with their notions while rejecting those which do not. Is this not the most blatant rebellion and resistance against God? If someone believes in God for years without gaining even a little understanding of Him, he is an unbeliever. Those who are willing to accept God's observation are those who pursue an understanding of Him, who are willing to accept His words. They are the ones who will receive God's inheritance and blessings, and they are the most blessed. God curses those with no place for Him in their hearts. He chastises and abandons such people. If you do not love God, He will abandon you, and if you do not listen to what I say, I promise that God's Spirit will abandon you. Try it if you don't believe! Today I tell you a path of practice, but whether you put it into practice is up to you. If you are faithless, if you do not practice, you'll see whether or not the Holy Spirit works in you! If you don't pursue understanding of God, the Holy Spirit will not work in you. God works in those who pursue and treasure His words. The more you treasure God's words, the more His Spirit will work in you. The more a person treasures God's words, the greater his chance of being perfected by God. God perfects those who truly love Him. He perfects those whose hearts are at peace before Him. If you treasure all of God's work, if you treasure God's enlightenment, if you treasure God's presence, if you treasure God's care and protection, if you treasure how God's words become your reality and provision for life, you are most after God's heart. If you treasure God's work, if you treasure all the work that He has done upon you, He will bless you and cause all that is yours to multiply. If you do not treasure God's words, He will not work on you, but He will only give you a little grace for your faith, or bless you with a little material wealth or safety for your family. You should strive to make God's words your reality, satisfy Him and be after His own heart, and you should not merely strive to enjoy His grace. Nothing is more important for believers than to receive God's work, gain perfection, and become ones who carry out God's will. This is the goal you should pursue.

All that man pursued in the Age of Grace is now obsolete, because there is currently a higher standard of pursuit, a pursuit of something both loftier and more practical, a pursuit that can better satisfy what man requires inside. For those in ages past, God did not do today's work upon them, He did not speak to them as much as He has spoken today, nor were His requirements of them as high as today. That God raises these things to you now shows that God's ultimate intention is focused on you, this group. If you truly wish to be perfected by God, then pursue it as your central goal. No matter whether you are running around, spending yourself, serving a function, or are entrusted by God, you should seek to be perfected and satisfy God's will. You should seek these in all you do. If someone says he does not pursue perfection by God or entry into life, but only pursues fleshly peace and joy, then he is utterly blind. Those who do not pursue the reality of life, but only pursue eternal life in the world to come and safety in this world are utterly blind. So, all that you do should be done for the purpose of being perfected and gained by God.

The work God does in people is to provide for them based on their different requirements. The larger a man's life, the more he requires, and the more he pursues. If at this phase you have no pursuits, it proves the Holy Spirit has abandoned you. All those who pursue life will never be abandoned by the Holy Spirit—they always pursue, and always yearn. People like these are never content to rest where they are. Each phase of the Holy Spirit's work aims to achieve an effect in you, but if you grow complacent, if you no longer have needs, if you no longer accept the work of the Holy Spirit, He will abandon you. People require God's observation every day; they require abundant provision from God every day. Can people do without eating and drinking of God's word every day? If someone always feels like he can't eat or drink enough of God's word, if he always seeks it and hungers and thirsts for it, the Holy Spirit will always do work upon him. The more someone yearns, the more practical things can come out of his fellowship. The more intensely someone seeks the truth, the more quickly his life grows, giving him rich experience and making him a wealthy man in the house of God.

THE TRULY OBEDIENT SHALL SURELY BE GAINED BY GOD

The work of the Holy Spirit changes from day to day, rising higher with each step; the revelation of tomorrow becomes even higher than today's, step by step climbing ever higher. Such is the work by which God perfects man. If man cannot keep pace, then he may be forsaken at any time. If man does not have an obedient heart, then he cannot follow to the end. The old age has passed; now is a new age. And in a new age, new work must be done. Particularly in the final age where man will be perfected, God will perform new work ever more quickly. Therefore, without obedience in his heart, man will find it difficult to follow the footsteps of God. God abides not by the rules, nor does He treat any stage of His work as unchanging. Rather, the work done by God is ever newer and ever higher. His work becomes more and more practical with each step, more and more in line with the actual needs of man. Only after man experiences this kind of work can he attain the final transformation of his disposition. Man's knowledge of life grows ever higher, therefore the work of God likewise becomes ever higher. Only in this way can man reach perfection and be fit for God's use. On one hand, God works this way to counter and reverse the notions of man, while on the other, to lead man into a higher and more realistic state, into the highest realm of belief in God, so that in the end, the will of God is done. All those of a disobedient nature and with a heart of resistance shall be forsaken in this fast and powerful work; only those who have an obedient heart and are willing to be humbled will progress to the end of the road. In such work, all of you should learn how to submit and to put aside your notions. Every step should be taken with caution. If you are careless, you will surely become one of those loathed and rejected by the Holy Spirit and one who disrupts the work of God. Prior to undergoing this stage of work, man's rules and laws of old were so innumerable that they got carried away, and as a result, they became conceited and forgot their place. These are all obstacles in the way of man accepting the new work of God and are hostile to man coming to know God. It is dangerous for man to have neither obedience in his heart nor a yearning for the truth. If you obey only the work and words that are simple, and are unable to accept any of a deeper intensity, then you are one who keeps to old ways and cannot keep pace with the work of the Holy Spirit. The work done by God differs across periods of time. If you show great obedience in one phase, yet in the next phase show less or none at all, then God shall desert you. If you keep pace with God as He ascends this step, then you must continue to keep pace when He ascends the next. Only such men are obedient to the Holy Spirit. Since you believe in God, you must remain constant in your obedience. You cannot simply obey when you please and disobey when you do not. Such manner of obedience is not approved by God. If you cannot keep pace with the new work I fellowship and continue to hold on to the former sayings, then how can there be growth in your life? In God's work, He supplies you through His word. When you obey and accept His word, then the Holy Spirit shall surely work in you. The Holy Spirit works exactly in the way I speak. Do as I have said, and the Holy Spirit will promptly work in you. I release a new light for you to see and bring you into the present light. When you walk into this light, the Holy Spirit will immediately work in you. Some may be recalcitrant and say, "I simply will not do as you say." Then I tell you that now this is the end of the road. You have withered away and have no more life. Therefore, in experiencing the transformation of your disposition, it is most crucial to keep pace with the present light. The Holy Spirit not only works in certain men who are used by God, but even more in the church. He could be working in anyone. He may work in you now, and after you have experienced it, He may work in someone else next. Follow closely; the more you follow the present light, the more your life can grow. Follow those whom the Holy Spirit works in, whatever kind of man he may be. Take in his experiences through your own, and you will receive even higher things. In so doing you will see growth more quickly. This is the path of perfection for man and a way through which life grows. The path to perfection is reached through your obedience to the work of the Holy Spirit. You do not know through what kind of person God will work to perfect you, nor through what person, occurrence, or thing He will bring you profit and enable you to gain some insight. If you are able to walk onto this right track, this shows that there is great hope for you to be perfected by God. If you are unable to do so, this shows that your future is bleakness and one of darkness. When you walk upon the right track, you will be given revelation in all things. No matter what the Holy Spirit may reveal to others, if you continue on in your experience on the basis of their knowledge, then it shall become your life, and you shall be able to supply others because of this experience. Those who supply others by parroting words are those without experience; you must learn to find, through the enlightenment and illumination of others, a way of practice before speaking of your own actual experience and knowledge. This will be of greater benefit to your own life. You should experience in this way, obeying all that comes from God. You should seek the mind of God in all things and learn lessons in all things, creating growth in your life. Such practice affords the fastest growth.

The Holy Spirit enlightens you through your practical experiences and perfects you through your faith. Are you truly willing to be perfected? If you are truly willing to be perfected by God, then you will have the courage to cast aside your flesh, and will be able to do as God says and not be passive or weak. You will be able to obey all that comes from God, and all of your actions, whether or not done in His presence, will be presentable to God. Be an honest person and practice the truth in all things, and you will be perfected. Those deceitful men who act one way before God and another way behind His back are not willing to be perfected. They are all sons of perdition and destruction; they belong not to God but to Satan. They are not the kind of man chosen by God! If your actions and behavior cannot be presented before God or be looked upon by the Spirit of God, then this illustrates a problem with you. Only if you accept the judgment and chastisement of God, and place importance on the transformation of your disposition will you be set on the path to being perfected. If you are truly willing to be perfected by God and to carry out the will of God, then you should obey all of God's work and issue not a word of complaint, nor should you evaluate or judge the work of God at will. These are the very basic conditions for being perfected by God. The requirement for those who seek to be perfected by God is this: do all things on the basis of your love for God. What does on the basis of love for God mean? This means that all of your actions and behavior can be presented before God. As you hold the right intentions, whether your actions are right or wrong, you are not afraid for them to be shown to God or to your brothers and sisters; you dare to swear to God. Your every intention, thought, and idea can be presented before God to be examined. If you practice and enter in this way, then growth in your life will be swift.

Since you believe in God, then you must put faith in all of the words and work of God. That is to say, since you believe in God, you must obey Him. If you are unable to do this, then it matters not whether you believe in God. If you have believed in God for many years, yet never obeyed Him or accepted all of His words, and instead asked God to submit to you and follow your notions, then you are the most rebellious of all, and you are an unbeliever. How is one such as this able to obey the work and words of God that do not conform to the notions of man? The most disobedient person is one that intentionally defies and resists God. He is the enemy of God and is an antichrist. Such a person always retains hostility against the new work of God, shows no intent to submit, and has never gladly obeyed or humbled himself. He exalts himself before others and never submits to another. Before God, he considers himself the most proficient in preaching the word and most skillful in working on others. He never discards the treasures already in his possession, but treats them as family heirlooms to be worshiped, to be preached to others, and used to lecture those fools who adore him. There are indeed some such people in the church. It can be said that they are “indomitable heroes,” generation after generation sojourning in the house of God. They think preaching the word (doctrine) to be their highest duty. One year after another and one generation after the other, they perform their holy and sacred duty. None dare touch them and none dare openly reproach them. They became “king” in the house of God, acting tyrannically through the ages. These demons seek to join hands and together destroy My work; how can I allow these living devils to exist before Me? Even those with only half an obedient heart cannot walk until the end, much less these tyrants without the slightest obedience in their hearts. The work of God is not easily gained by man. Even if man uses all of his strength, he will only be able to gain just a portion and attain perfection in the end. What then of the children of the archangel who seek to destroy the work of God? Do they not have even less hope of being gained by God? The purpose of My work to conquer is not solely for the sake of conquest, but to conquer so as to reveal righteousness and unrighteousness, to obtain proof for the punishment of man, to condemn the wicked, and furthermore, I conquer to perfect those with a heart of obedience. In the end, all will be separated according to kind, and all those perfected have their thoughts filled with obedience. This is the final work done. Those filled with rebellion will be punished, sent to burn in the fires and forever be cursed. When that time comes, those former “great and indomitable heroes” will become the basest and most shunned “weak and useless cowards.” Only this can illustrate all the righteousness of God and that the disposition of God allows no offense. Only this can appease the hatred in My heart. Do you not agree that this is very reasonable?

Not all those who experience the work of the Holy Spirit can receive life, and not all in this stream can receive life. Life is not a common property shared by all, and the transformation of disposition is not easily achieved by all. Submission to the work of God must be tangible and must be lived out. Submission on a superficial level cannot receive the approval of God, and the heart of God cannot be pleased by simple obedience to the surface of the word of God without seeking a transformation of your disposition. Obedience to God and submission to the work of God are one and the same. Those who submit only to God but not to the work of God cannot be deemed to be obedient, and surely neither can those who do not truly submit and are outwardly sycophantic. Those who truly submit to God are all able to gain from the work and achieve understanding of the disposition and work of God. Only such men truly submit to God. Such men are able to gain new knowledge from new work and experience new changes from the same. Only such men have the approval of God; only this kind of man is one perfected and has undergone a transformation of his disposition. Those approved by God are those who gladly submit to God, as well as to His word and work. Only this kind of man is in the right; only this kind of man truly desires and seeks God. And those who merely speak of their faith in God, yet in actuality curse Him are those who mask themselves. They are venomous, the most treacherous of man. These scoundrels will one day have their vile masks ripped away. Is that not the work that is being done today? Those who are wicked will always be wicked and will not escape the day of punishment. Those who are good will always be good and will be revealed when the work comes to an end. Not one of the wicked shall be deemed to be righteous, nor any of the righteous deemed to be wicked. Would I let any stand wrongfully accused?

As your life progresses, you must always have new entry and new and higher insight, which grow deeper with every step. This is what all of man should enter into. Through communing, listening to a message, reading the word of God, or handling a matter, you will gain new insight and new enlightenment. You do not live within the rules of old and times of old. You always live within the new light, and do not stray from the word of God. This is what is considered setting on the right track. It will not do to simply pay the price on a superficial level. The word of God becomes higher and new things appear day by day. It is necessary as well for man to make new entry every day. God perfects up to the point of which He has spoken; if you cannot keep pace, then you fall behind. Your prayers must become deeper; you must eat and drink more of the word of God, deepen the revelations you receive, and decrease negativity. You must strengthen your judgment so that you are able to gain insight, and by understanding that which is in the spirit, gain insight into the outward things and grasp the core of any issue. If you do not have such qualities, how will you be able to lead the church? If you only speak of letters and doctrines without any reality and without a way of practice, you can only get by for a short period of time. It may be marginally acceptable for new believers, but after some time, when new believers gain actual experience, then you will no longer be able to supply them. Then how are you fit for God's use? You cannot do work without new enlightenment. Those without new enlightenment are those who fail to experience, and such men never gain new knowledge or experience. And they can never perform their function in supplying life, nor can they be fit for God's use. This kind of man is wasted and useless. In truth, such men are unable to perform their function at all in the work and are all good for nothing. Not only do they fail to perform their function, they actually place an unnecessary strain on the church. I exhort these "old men" to hurry and leave the church so that others no longer have to see you. Such men have no understanding of the new work but are filled with notions. They serve no function in the church; rather, they make instigation and spread negativity, even engage in all manner of misconduct and disturbance in the church, thereby confusing and disconcerting those who make no distinctions. These living devils, these evil spirits should leave the church as soon as possible, lest the church be blighted as a result. You may not fear the work of today, but do you not fear the righteous punishment of tomorrow? There are large numbers of people in the church who are freeloaders, as well as a great number of wolves that seek to disrupt the natural work of God. These are all demons sent by the Devil and are vicious wolves who seek to devour the guileless lambs. If these so-called men cannot be expelled, then they become parasites on the church and moths feeding on the offerings. These contemptible, ignorant, base, and repugnant maggots will one day soon be punished!

THE AGE OF KINGDOM IS THE AGE OF WORD

In the Age of Kingdom, God uses the word to usher in a new age, to change the means of His work, and to do the work for the entire age. This is the principle by which God works in the Age of Word. He became flesh to speak from different perspectives, enabling man to truly see God, who is the Word appearing in the flesh, and His wisdom and wonder. Such work is done to better achieve the goals of conquering man, perfecting man, and eliminating man. This is the true meaning of using the word to work in the Age of Word. Through the word, man comes to know the work of God, the disposition of God, the essence of man, and what man ought to enter into. Through the word, all the work God wishes to do in the Age of Word is accomplished.

Through the word, man is revealed, eliminated, and tried. Man has seen the word, heard the word, and become aware of the existence of the word. As a result, man believes in the existence of God; man believes the almightiness and wisdom of God, as well as God's heart of love for man and His desire to save man. Though the word "word" is simple and ordinary, the word from the mouth of God become flesh shakes the entire universe; His word transforms the heart of man, the notions and the old disposition of man, and the old appearance of the entire world. Through the ages, only the God of this day works in such a manner, and only He speaks and saves man thus. Thereafter, man lives under the guidance of the word, shepherded and supplied by the word; they live in the world of the word, live within the curses and blessings of God's word, and even more live under the judgment and chastisement of the word. These words and this work are all for the sake of man's salvation, achieving God's will, and changing the original appearance of the world of old creation. God created the world with the word, leads men throughout the universe with the word, conquers and saves them with the word. Finally, He shall use the word to bring the entire world of old to an end. Only then is the management plan wholly complete. Throughout the Age of Kingdom, God uses the word to do His work and achieve the results of His work; He does not work wonders or perform miracles; He merely does His work through the word. Because of the word, man is nourished and supplied; because of the word, man gains knowledge and true experience. Man in the Age of Word has truly received exceptional blessings. Man suffers no pain of the flesh and simply enjoys the bountiful supply of the word of God; they need not seek or journey forth, and at ease they see the appearance of God, hear Him speak personally, receive His supply, and see Him personally do His work. Man in ages past was unable to enjoy such things, and these are blessings that they could never receive.

God is determined to make man complete. Whichever perspective from which He speaks, it is all for the sake of perfecting these people. Words spoken from the perspective of the Spirit are difficult for man to understand, and man is unable to find a path to practice, for man has a limited ability to receive. The work of God achieves different effects, and each step of the work has His purpose. Moreover, He must speak from different perspectives to perfect man. If He uttered His voice from the perspective of the Spirit alone, this stage of God's work could not be completed. From His tone of voice, you can see He is determined to make this group of people complete. As one who wishes to be perfected by God, what is the first step you must take? You must first come to know the work of God. As new means are used and the age has changed from one to the other, the means by which God works have also changed, as has the way God speaks. Now, not only have the means of His work changed, so has the age. It was formerly the Age of Kingdom, a stage of work in which to love God. Now, it is the Age of Millennial Kingdom—the Age of Word—that is, an age in which God uses many ways of speaking to perfect man and speaks from different perspectives to supply man. As soon as the times passed into the Age of Millennial Kingdom, God began to use the word to make man perfect, enabling man to enter into the reality of life and leading man onto the right track. Man has experienced so many steps of His work and has seen that the work of God does not remain unchanging. Rather, it is constantly evolving and deepening. After such a long time of experience, the work has turned and changed again and again, but whatever the changes, it never deviates from God's objective of working man. Even through ten thousand changes, its original purpose never changes, and it never deviates from truth or life. Changes in the means by which work is done are merely a change in the format of work and perspective of speaking, not a change in the central objective of His work. Changes in tone of voice and means of work are made to achieve an effect. A change in tone of voice does not mean a change in the purpose or principle of work. The essence of man believing in God is to seek life. If you believe in God yet do not seek life or truth or knowledge of God, then there is no belief in God! Is it realistic that you still seek to enter the kingdom to be king? Only achievement of true love for God through seeking life is reality; the pursuit and practice of truth are all reality. Experience the words of God while reading His words; in this way, you will grasp the knowledge of God through real experience. This is a true pursuit.

In the Age of Millennial Kingdom, whether you have entered into this new age is determined by whether you have entered into the reality of God's words and whether His words serve as the reality of your life. The word of God is made known to all so that, in the end, all men will live in the world of the word and the word of God will enlighten and illuminate every man within. If during this period of time, you are hasty and careless in reading the word of God, and you have no interest in His word, it shows that there is something wrong with your state. If you are unable to enter into the Age of Word, then the Holy Spirit does not work in you; if you have entered into this age, He will do His work. What can you do at the moment, the beginning of this Age of Word, to gain the work of the Holy Spirit? In this age, God will make it a reality among you that every man lives out the word of God, is able to put truth into practice, and loves God earnestly; that all men use the word of God as a foundation and their reality and have hearts of reverence for God; and that, through the practice of the word of God, man can then rule together with God. It is this work that God will achieve. Can you go without reading the word of God? There are many now who feel that they cannot go even a day or two without reading the word of God. They must read His word every day, and if time does not permit, listening to His word suffices. This is the feeling that the Holy Spirit gives man and how He begins to move man. That is, He governs man through words so that man can enter into the reality of the word of God. If you feel darkness and thirst after just one day without eating and drinking of the word of God, and you find it unacceptable, this shows that you have been moved by the Holy Spirit, and He has not turned away from you. You are then one who is in this stream. However, if you have no perception or feel no thirst after a day or two without eating and drinking of the word of God, and you do not feel moved, this shows that the Holy Spirit has turned away from you. This means, then, the state within you is not right; you have not entered into the Age of Word, and you are one who has fallen behind. God uses the word to govern man; you feel good if you eat and drink of the word of God, and if you do not, you will have no way to follow. The word of God becomes the food of man and the force that drives him. The Bible said that "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceeds out of the mouth of God." This is the work that God will accomplish this day. He will realize this truth in you. How is it that man in the past could go many days without reading the word of God but continue to eat and work? And why is this not the case now? In this age, God primarily uses the word to govern all. Through the word of God, man is judged and perfected, then finally taken into the kingdom. Only the word of God can supply the life of man, and only the word of God can give man light and the way of practice, particularly in the Age of Kingdom. As long as you daily eat and drink of His word and do not leave the reality of the word of God, God shall be able to make you perfect.

One cannot be in a rush to achieve success when seeking life; growth in life does not happen in just a day or two. The work of God is normal and practical, and it must undergo a necessary process. It took Jesus become flesh a process of 33.5 years to complete His work of crucifixion, let alone the life of man! It is also no easy task to make a normal man who manifests God. This is particularly so for the people of the nation of the great red dragon. They are of poor caliber and require a long period of God's word and work. So do not be in a hurry to see results. You must be proactive in eating and drinking of God's words, and put more effort on the words of God. After reading His words, you must be able to put them into practice in reality, and in the words of God, you then gain knowledge, insight, discernment, and wisdom. Through this, you will change without realizing it. If you are able to take as your principles the eating and drinking of the word of God, reading His word, coming to know it, experiencing it, and practicing it, you will grow without realizing it. Some say that he is unable to put the word of God into practice even after reading it! What is your hurry? When you reach a certain stature, you will be able to put His word into practice. Would a four- or five-year-old child say that he is unable to support or honor his parents? You should know now what your stature is, put into practice what you can, and do not be one who disrupts the management of God. Simply eat and drink of God's words and going forward, take that as your principle. Do not worry yet about whether God can make you complete. Do not delve into that yet. Simply eat and drink of God's words as you come across them, and it is assured that God will be able to make you complete. However, there is a principle by which you must eat and drink of His word. Do not do so blindly. Rather, seek out the words that you should come to know, that is, those that are related to vision. Another aspect that you must seek out is those of actual practice, that is, those about what you ought to enter into. One aspect is about knowledge, and the other relates to entering. Once you find out both, that is, when you grasp what to know and what to practice, you will know how to eat and drink of the word of God.

Going forward, talking about the word of God is the principle by which you speak. When you come together, you should fellowship about the word of God and use that as your topic; talk about what you know of the word of God, how you put His word into practice, and how the Holy Spirit works. If you fellowship about the word of God, the Holy Spirit will illuminate you. Man too must cooperate if this is to become a world of the word of God. If you do not enter into this, God cannot do His work. If you do not talk about His word, He cannot illuminate you. Whenever you are free, talk about the word of God. Do not talk idly! Let your life be filled with the word of God; then you are a devout believer. Even if your fellowship is superficial, that is all right. Without the superficial, there would be no depth. There is a process that must be undergone. Through your exercise, you gain insight into the illumination of the Holy Spirit upon you, and how to effectively eat and drink of the word of God. After a period of such exploration, you will enter into the reality of the word of God. Only if you have the resolution to cooperate will you receive the work of the Holy Spirit.

There are two aspects to the principle for eating and drinking of the word of God: One relates to knowledge, and the other entering. Which words should you come to know? You should come to know the words related to vision (that is to say, which age God has now entered into, what God wishes to achieve now, what incarnation is, and so on. These are all related to vision). What is the way that man should enter into? This refers to the words of God that man should practice and enter into. Those are the two aspects of eating and drinking of the word of God. From now, eat and drink of the word of God in this way. If you have a clear understanding of the words concerning vision, then there is no need to read more. Of primary importance is to eat and drink more of the words on entering, such as how to turn your heart toward God, how to quiet your heart before God, and how to forsake the flesh. That is what you should put into practice. Without knowing how to eat and drink of the word of God, true fellowship is not possible. Once you know how to eat and drink of His word, and you have grasped what is key, fellowship will become free. Whatever issues are raised, you are able to fellowship about them and grasp the reality. Fellowshiping about the word of God without reality means you are unable to grasp what is key, and this shows that you do not know how to eat and drink of His word. Some feel weariness when reading the word of God. Such a state is not normal. Indeed, what is normal is to never become tired of reading God's word, always thirst for it, and always think the word of God is good. This is how one who has really entered eats and drinks of the word of God. When you feel that the word of God is truly practical and is exactly what man should enter into; when you feel that His word is greatly helpful and beneficial to man, and that it is the supply of man's life, this feeling is given to you by the Holy Spirit, through your being moved by the Holy Spirit. This proves that the Holy Spirit is working in you and God has not turned away from you. Seeing that God is always speaking, some become tired of His words and think that it is of no consequence whether or not they read His words. That is not a normal state. Their hearts do not thirst to enter into reality, and such men neither thirst for nor place importance on being perfected. Whenever you find you do not thirst for the word of God, it shows that your state is not normal. In the past, whether God turned away from you was determined by whether you were at peace within and experienced enjoyment. Now the key is whether you thirst for the word of God, whether His word is your reality, whether you are faithful, and whether you are able to do what you can do for God. In other words, man is judged by the reality of the word of God. God directs His word to all people. If you are willing to read it, He will enlighten you, but if you are not, He will not. God enlightens those who hunger and thirst for righteousness, and those who seek Him. Some say that God did not enlighten them even after they read His word. How were the words read? If you skimmed through briefly and placed no importance on reality, how could God enlighten you? How could one who does not treasure the word of God be perfected by Him? If you do not treasure the word of God, then you will have neither truth nor reality. If you treasure His word, then you will be able to practice truth; it is then that you will have reality. So you must eat and drink of the word of God whatever the situation, whether you are busy or not, whether the circumstances are adverse or not, and whether you are being tried or not. All in all, the word of God is the foundation of man's existence. None can turn away from His word and must eat of His word as if they are the three meals of the day. Could it be such a simple matter to be perfected and gained by God? Whether or not you understand at present or whether you have insight into the work of God, you must eat and drink more of the word of God. This is entering in a proactive way. After reading the word of God, hasten to put into practice what you can enter into, and set aside for the moment what you cannot. There may be much of the word of God that you cannot understand in the beginning, but after two or three months, perhaps even a year, you will. Why is this? This is because God cannot make man complete in a day or two. Most of the time, when you read His word, you may not understand at the moment. At that point, it may seem like nothing more than text; only through a period of experience are you able to understand. God has spoken much, so you should do your utmost to eat and drink of His word. Without realizing it, you will come to understand and the Holy Spirit will enlighten you. When the Holy Spirit enlightens man, it is often without man's awareness. He enlightens and guides you when you thirst and seek. The principle by which the Holy Spirit works is centered on the word of God of which you eat and drink. All those who place no importance on the word of God and always have another attitude toward His word, one of carelessness and the belief that it makes no difference whether they read His word, are those without reality. Neither the work of the Holy Spirit nor enlightenment by Him can be seen in them. Such people are merely coasting along, and are pretenders without true qualifications, like Mr. Nanguo of the parable.^[a]

Without the word of God as your reality, you have no real stature. When the time comes to be tried, you will certainly fall, and then will your true stature be shown. But at that time, those who regularly seek to enter into reality shall understand the purpose of God's work. One who is possessed of conscience and thirsts for God should take practical action to repay God for His love. Those without reality cannot stand firm in the face of even trivial matters. There is simply a difference between those with a real stature and those without. Why is it that both eat and drink of the word of God, but some are able to stand firm in a trial while others flee from it? The obvious difference is that they lack a real stature; they do not have the word of God as their reality, and His word has not taken root within them. As soon as they are tried, there is no way for them. Why, then, can others stand firm in this respect? That is because they have great vision, or the word of God has become their experience within and what they have seen in reality has become the foundation of their existence. So they are able to stand firm through trials. This is real stature, and this is life too. Some may also read the word of God but then never put it into practice or are not earnest about it. Those who are not earnest place no importance on practice. Those without the word of God as their reality are those without real stature. Such people cannot stand firm through trials.

of view that you just focus on eating of, coming to know, and practicing His word. This is something you should do. Don't worry about how great your stature may become; simply focus on eating of His word. This is how man should cooperate. Your spiritual life is mainly to enter into the reality where you eat and drink of God's words and put them into practice. You should focus on nothing else. Church leaders should be able to lead all brothers and sisters in knowing how to eat and drink of God's words. This is the responsibility of all church leaders. Be they young or old, all should regard the eating and drinking of God's words with importance and keep His words in their hearts. If you enter into this reality, you will have entered the Age of Kingdom. Nowadays, most feel that they cannot live without eating and drinking of the word of God, and whatever the time, they feel that His word is novel. Then does man begin to set upon the right track. God uses the word to work and supply man. When all yearn and thirst for the word of God, they will enter into a world of His word.

God has spoken a great deal. How much do you have knowledge of? How much have you entered into? If a church leader has not led brothers and sisters into the reality of the word of God, they have been derelict in their duty and failed to fulfill their responsibilities! Whatever the depth of your eating and drinking, or however much you can receive, you must know how to eat and drink of His word; you must regard His word with importance and understand the importance and necessity of such eating and drinking. God has spoken so much. If you do not eat and drink of His word, nor do you seek or put His word into practice, you cannot be considered to believe in God. Since you believe in God, you must eat and drink of His word, experience His word, and live out His word. Only this is belief in God! If you say you believe in God yet cannot speak out any of His words or put them into practice, you are not considered to believe in God. This is "seeking bread to satisfy hunger." Speaking only of trivial testimony, useless matters, and superficial matters, and not having even the slightest bit of reality do not constitute belief in God. As such,^[a] you have not grasped the right way of believing in God. Why must you eat and drink more of God's words? Is it considered belief if you do not eat and drink of His words and seek only to ascend to heaven? What is the first step for one who believes in God? By what path does God perfect man? Can you be perfected without eating and drinking of the word of God? Can you be considered a person of the kingdom without the word of God as your reality? What exactly is belief in God? Believers in God should be possessed of good behavior externally, at the very least, and of utmost importance is to have the word of God. No matter what, you can never turn away from His word. Your knowledge of God and fulfillment of His will are all achieved through His word. All nations, sects, denominations, and sectors will be conquered through the word in the future. God will speak directly, and all people will hold the word of God in their hands; through this will people be perfected. The word of God pervades throughout: People speak of God's word and practice according to God's word, while kept within is still the word of God. Both within and without, they are steeped in the word of God, and thus are they perfected. Those who fulfill the will of God and are able to bear witness to Him are those who have the word of God as reality.

Entering into the Age of Word, that is, the Age of Millennial Kingdom, is the work that is being completed now. From now, practice fellowshiping about the word of God. Only through eating and drinking of His word and experiencing it can you exhibit the word of God. Only through your words of experience can others be convinced by you. If you do not have the word of God, none would be convinced! All those used by God are able to speak the word of God. If you cannot, this shows that the Holy Spirit has not worked in you and you have not been perfected. This is the importance of the word of God. Do you have a heart that thirsts for the word of God? Those who thirst for the word of God thirst for truth, and only such men are blessed by God. In the future, there are many more words that God will say to all denominations and all sects. He first speaks and utters His voice among you and makes you complete before moving on to speak and utter His voice to the Gentiles and conquer them. Through the word, all will be sincerely and utterly convinced. Through the word of God and His revelations, the corrupt disposition of man has diminished. All have the appearance of man, and man's rebellious disposition has so too lessened. The word works upon man with authority and conquers man within the light of God. The work that God will do in the present age, as well as the turning points of His work can all be found within His word. If you do not read His word, you will understand nothing. Through your own eating and drinking of His word, fellowshiping with brothers and sisters, and your actual experiences, your knowledge of the word of God will become comprehensive. Only thus can you truly live it out in reality.

ALL IS ACHIEVED BY THE WORD OF GOD

God speaks His words and does His work according to different ages, and in different ages, He speaks different words. God does not abide by rules, or repeat the same work, or feel nostalgia for the things of the past; He is a God who is always new and never old, and every day He speaks new words. You should abide by that which should be abided by today; this is the responsibility and duty of man. It is crucial that practice be centered around the present light and actual words of God. God does not abide by rules, and is able to speak from many different perspectives to make plain His wisdom and omnipotence. It matters not whether He speaks from the perspective of the Spirit, or of man, or of the third person—God is always God, and you cannot say that He is not God because of the perspective of man from which He speaks. Among some people there have emerged conceptions as a result of the different perspectives from which God speaks. Such people have no knowledge of God, and no knowledge of His work. If God always spoke from one perspective, would man not lay down rules about God? Could God allow man to act in such a way? Regardless of which perspective God speaks from, God has His aims for each. If God were always to speak from the perspective of the Spirit, would you be able to engage with Him? Thus, He speaks in the third person to provide His words to you and guide you into reality. Everything that God does is fitting. In short, it is all done by God, and you should not be doubtful about this. Provided that He is God, then no matter what perspective He speaks from, He is still God. This is an immutable truth. However He works, He is still God, and His substance will not change! Peter so loved God and was a man after God's own heart, but God did not witness him as the Lord or Christ, for a being's substance is what it is, and can never change. In His work, God does not abide by rules, but employs different methods to make His work effective and increase man's knowledge of Him. His every method of working helps man know Him, and is in order to make man perfect. No matter which method of working He employs, each is in order to build up man and make man perfect. Though one of His methods of working may have lasted for a very long time, it is in order to temper man's faith in Him. Thus you should not be doubtful. These are all the steps of God's work, and must be obeyed by you.

Today, what is spoken of is entry into reality. There is no talk of ascending to heaven, or ruling as kings; all that is spoken of is the pursuit of entry into reality. There is no more practical pursuit than this, and to talk of ruling as kings is not practical. Man has great curiosity, and he still measures God's work today by his religious conceptions. Having experienced so many of God's methods of working, man still does not know the work of God, still seeks signs and wonders, and still looks at whether God's words have been fulfilled. Is this not great blindness? Without the fulfillment of God's words, would you still believe that He is God? Today, many such people in the church are waiting to behold signs and wonders. They say, If God's words are fulfilled, then He is God; if God's words are not fulfilled, then He is not God. Do you, then, believe in God because of the fulfillment of His words, or because He is God Himself? Man's view of belief in God must be put right! When you see that God's words have not been fulfilled, you run off—is this belief in God? When you believe in God, you must leave everything to the mercy of God and obey all the work of God. God spoke so many words in the Old Testament—which of them did you see fulfilled with your own eyes? Can you say that Jehovah isn't God because you have not seen that? Seeing that the words of God have not been fulfilled, some wish to run away. Whoever wants to go should go, no one is stopping them! Try it, see if you can run away. Having run away, you'll still come back. God controls you with His word, and if you leave the church and the word of God, you will have no way of living. If you don't believe this, try for yourself—do you think you can just leave? The Spirit of God controls you, and you cannot leave. This is an administrative decree of God! If some people want to try, well, they can! You say this person is not God, so commit a sin against Him and see what He does. It is possible that your flesh will not die and you will still be able to feed and clothe yourself, but mentally it will be unbearable; you will feel stressed and tormented, nothing will be more painful. Man cannot bear to be mentally tormented and ravaged—perhaps you are able to endure the suffering of the flesh, but you are utterly incapable of enduring mental stress and long-lasting torment. Today you cannot see any signs and wonders, yet no one is able to run away, for God uses His word to control man. Intangible, invisible, without the advent of facts, yet still man cannot flee. Are these not the actions of God? Today, God has come to earth to provide man with life. He does not, as people imagine, coax you by showing signs and wonders in order to ensure a peaceful relationship between God and man. All those whose focus is not toward life, and who instead concentrate on making God show signs and wonders, are Pharisees! In the beginning, it was the Pharisees who nailed Jesus to the cross; if you measure God according to your own view of belief in God, believing in God if His words are fulfilled, and being doubtful and even blaspheming against God if they are not, then do you not nail Him to the cross? People such as this are negligent of their duties, and greedily revel in comfort!

On the one hand, the biggest problem with man is that he does not know the work of God. Though man's attitude is not one of denial, it is one of doubt; he does not deny, but he also does not fully acknowledge. If people have a thorough knowledge of God's work, then they won't run away. On the other hand, it is that man does not know reality. Today, it is with the word of God that each person has engaged; indeed, in the future you should not think to behold signs and wonders. I tell you plainly: During the present stage, all you are capable of seeing are the words of God, and though there are no facts, the life of God can still be wrought into man. It is this work which is the main work of the Millennial Kingdom, and if you cannot perceive this work, then you will become weak and fall down, will descend amid trials and, yet more grievously, will be taken captive by Satan. God has come to earth principally to speak His words; what you engage with is the word of God, what you see is the word of God, what you hear is the word of God, what you abide by is the word of God, what you experience is the word of God, and this incarnation of God principally uses the word to make man perfect. He does not show signs and wonders, and especially does not do the work Jesus did in the past. Although They are God, and are both flesh, Their ministries are not the same. When Jesus came, He also did part of God's work, and spoke some words—but what was the main work He accomplished? What He mainly accomplished was the work of crucifixion. He became the likeness of sinful flesh to complete the work of crucifixion and redeem all mankind, and it was for the sake of all mankind's sin that He served as a sin offering. This is the main work He accomplished. Ultimately, He provided the path of the cross to guide those who came later. When Jesus came, it was primarily to complete the work of redemption. He redeemed all mankind, and brought the gospel of the kingdom of heaven to man, and, furthermore, He brought the kingdom of heaven. As a result, those who came after all said, "We should walk the path of the cross, and sacrifice ourselves for the cross." Of course, in the beginning Jesus also did some other work and spoke some words to make man repent and confess his sins. But His ministry was still the crucifixion, and the three and a half years He spent preaching the way were in preparation for the crucifixion that came after. The several times that Jesus prayed were also for the sake of the crucifixion. The life of a normal man that He led and the thirty-three and a half years that He lived on earth were primarily for the sake of completing the work of crucifixion, they were to give Him strength, and make Him able to undertake this work, as a result of which God entrusted the work of crucifixion to Him. Today, what work will God incarnate accomplish? Today, God has become flesh primarily in order to complete the work of "the Word appearing in the flesh," to use the word to make man perfect, and make man accept the dealing of the word and the refinement of the word. In His words He causes you to gain provision and gain life; in His words, you see His work and deeds. God uses the word to chastise and refine you, and thus if you suffer hardship, it is also because of the word of God. Today, God does not work using facts, but words. Only after His word has come upon you can the Holy Spirit work within you and cause you to suffer pain or feel sweetness. Only the word of God can bring you into reality, and only the word of God is capable of making you perfect. And so, at the very least you must understand that the work done by God during the last days is principally the use of His word to make every person perfect and guide man. All the work that He does is through the word; He does not use facts to chastise you. There are times when some people resist God. God does not cause great discomfort for you, your flesh is not chastised nor do you suffer hardship—but as soon as His word comes upon you, and refines you, it is unbearable for you. Is that not so? At the time of the service-doers, God said to throw man into a bottomless pit. Did man really arrive at the bottomless pit? Simply through the use of words to refine man, man entered into the bottomless pit. And so, during the last days, when God becomes flesh, He principally uses the word to accomplish all and make all plain. Only in His words can you see what He is; only in His words can you see that He is God Himself.

When God incarnate comes to earth, He does no other work but the speaking of words—thus there is no need for facts; words suffice. That is because He has principally come to do this work, to allow man to behold His power and supremacy in His words, to allow man to see in His words how He humbly hides Himself, and to allow man to know His entirety in His words. All that He has and is are in His words, His wisdom and wondrousness are in His words. In this are you made to see the many methods with which God speaks His words. Most of God's work during all this time has been provision, revelation and dealing. He does not curse a man lightly, and even when He does, it is through the word. And so, in this age of God become flesh, do not try to see God heal and cast out demons again, do not always try to see signs—there is no point! Those signs cannot make man perfect! To speak plainly: Today, the real God Himself of the flesh only speaks, and does not act. This is the truth! He uses words to make you perfect, and uses words to feed and water you. He also uses words to work, and He uses words in place of facts to make you know His reality. If you are capable of perceiving this aspect of God's work, then it is difficult to be passive. Instead of focusing on things that are negative, you should focus only on that which is positive—which is to say, regardless of whether or not the words of God are fulfilled, or whether or not there is the advent of facts, God causes man to gain life from His words, and this is the greatest of all signs, and even more so, it is an undisputable fact. This is the best evidence through which to have knowledge of God, and is an even greater sign than signs. Only these words can make man perfect.

As soon as the Age of Kingdom began, God began to release His words. In the future, these words will be gradually fulfilled, and at that time, man will grow into life. God's use of the word to reveal the corrupt disposition of man is more real, and more necessary, and He uses nothing but the word to do His work in order to make perfect the faith of man, for today is the Age of Word, and it requires the faith, resolution and cooperation of man. The work of God incarnate of the last days is the use of His word to serve and provide. Only after God incarnate has finished speaking His words will they begin to be fulfilled. During the time that He speaks, His words are not fulfilled, because when He is in the stage of the flesh, His words cannot be fulfilled, and this is so that man may see that God is flesh and not Spirit, so that man may behold the reality of God with his own eyes. On the day that His work is complete, when all the words that should be spoken by Him on earth have been spoken, His words will begin to be fulfilled. Now is not the age of fulfillment, because He has not finished speaking His words. So when you see that God is still speaking His words on earth, do not await the fulfillment of His words; when God stops speaking His words, and when His work on earth has been completed, that will be the time His words begin to be fulfilled. In the words He speaks on earth, there is, in one regard, the provision of life, and in another, there is prophecy—the prophecy of things to come, of things that will be done, and of the things that have yet to be accomplished. There was also prophecy in the words of Jesus. In one regard, He supplied life, and in another regard, He spoke prophecy. Today, there is no talk of carrying out words and facts at the same time because the difference between that which can be seen by man's own eyes and that which is done by God is too great. It can only be said that, once the work of God has been completed, His words will be fulfilled, and the facts will come after the words. On earth, God incarnate of the last days performs the ministry of the word, and in performing the ministry of the word, He only speaks words, and cares not for other matters. Once God's work changes, His words will start to be fulfilled. Today, words are first used to make you perfect; when He gains glory in the entire universe, it will be the time when His work is complete, when all the words that should be spoken have been spoken, and all words have become facts. God has come to earth during the last days to perform the ministry of the word so that man may know Him, and so that man may see what He is, and see His wisdom and all of His wondrous deeds from His word. During the Age of Kingdom, God principally uses the word to conquer all people. In the future, His word will also come upon every sect, group, nation and denomination; God uses the word to conquer, to make all men see that His word carries authority and might—and so today, you face only the word of God.

The words spoken by God in this age are different to those spoken during the Age of Law, and so, too, do they differ from the words spoken during the Age of Grace. In the Age of Grace, God did not do the work of the word, but simply described the crucifixion in order to redeem all mankind. The Bible only describes why Jesus was to be crucified, and the sufferings He was subjected to on the cross, and how man should be crucified for God. During that age, all the work done by God was centered around the crucifixion. During the Age of Kingdom, God incarnate speaks words to conquer all those who believe in Him.

This is “the Word appearing in the flesh”; God has come during the last days to do this work, which is to say, He has come to accomplish the actual significance of the Word appearing in the flesh. He only speaks words, and rarely is there the advent of facts. This is the very substance of the Word appearing in the flesh, and when God incarnate speaks His words, this is the appearance of the Word in the flesh, and is the Word coming into the flesh. “In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God, and the Word became flesh.” This (the work of the appearance of the Word in the flesh) is the work that God will accomplish in the last days, and is the final chapter of His entire management plan, and so God has to come to earth and manifest His words in the flesh. That which is done today, that which will be done in the future, that which will be accomplished by God, man’s final destination, those who will be saved, those who will be destroyed, and so on—this work that should be achieved in the end has all been clearly stated, and is all in order to accomplish the actual significance of the Word appearing in the flesh. The administrative decrees and constitution that were previously issued forth, those who will be destroyed, those who will enter into rest—these words must all be fulfilled. This is the work principally accomplished by God incarnate during the last days. He makes people understand where those predestined by God belong and where those not predestined by God belong, how His people and sons will be classified, what will happen to Israel, what will happen to Egypt—in the future, every one of these words will be accomplished. The steps of God’s work are accelerating. God uses the word as the means to reveal to man what is to be done in every age, what is to be done by God incarnate of the last days, and His ministry that is to be performed, and these words are all in order to accomplish the actual significance of the Word appearing in the flesh.

I have previously said that “All who seek to behold signs and wonders will be forsaken; they are not those who will be made perfect.” I have spoken so many words, yet you have not the slightest knowledge of this work, and, having arrived at this point, still you ask for signs and wonders. Is your belief in God the pursuit of seeing signs and wonders, or is it in order to gain life? Jesus also spoke many words that, today, have yet to be fulfilled. Can you say that Jesus is not God? God witnessed that He was Christ and the beloved Son of God. Can you deny this? Today, God only speaks words, and if you are incapable of thoroughly knowing, then you cannot stand fast. Do you believe in Him because He is God, or do you believe in Him based on whether or not His words are fulfilled? Do you believe in signs and wonders, or do you believe in God? Today He does not show signs and wonders—is He really God? If the words He speaks are not fulfilled, is He really God? Is the substance of God determined by whether or not the words He speaks are fulfilled? Why is it that some people are always waiting for the fulfillment of God's words before believing in Him? Does this not mean they do not know Him? All those who possess such conceptions are people who deny God; they use conceptions to measure God; if God's words are fulfilled they believe in God, and if they aren't they don't believe in God; and they always pursue signs and wonders. Are they not the Pharisees of modern times? Whether or not you are able to stand firm depends on whether or not you know the real God—this is crucial! The greater the reality of God's word in you, the greater your knowledge of the reality of God, and the more you are able to stand fast during trials. The more you look to signs and wonders, the more you are unable to stand firm, and you will fall amid trials. Signs and wonders are not the foundation; only the reality of God is life. Some people do not know the effects that are to be achieved by God's work. They spend their days in bewilderment, not pursuing the knowledge of God's work. Their pursuit is always to make God fulfill their desires, only after which are they serious in their belief. They say that they will pursue life if the words of God are fulfilled, but that if His words are not fulfilled, then there is no possibility of them pursuing life. Man thinks that belief in God is the pursuit of beholding signs and wonders and the pursuit of ascending to heaven and the third heaven. There is no one who says that their belief in God is the pursuit of entry into reality, the pursuit of life, and the pursuit of being gained by God. What value has such a pursuit? Those who do not pursue the knowledge of God and the satisfaction of God are people who do not believe in God, they are people who blaspheme God!

Now do you understand what belief in God is? Is belief in God beholding signs and wonders? Is it ascending to heaven? Believing in God is not easy. Today, that kind of religious practice should be purged; pursuing the manifestation of the miracles of God, pursuing God's healing and His casting out of demons, pursuing the bestowment of peace and ample graces by God, pursuing the gaining of prospects and comfort for the flesh—these are religious practices, and such religious practices are a vague and abstract form of belief. Today, what is real belief in God? It is the acceptance of God's word as the reality of your life and the knowing of God from His word in order to achieve a true love of Him. To be clear: It is the belief in God so that you may obey God, love God, and perform the duty that should be performed by a creature of God. This is the aim of believing in God. You must achieve a knowledge of the loveliness of God, of how worthy God is of reverence, of how, in His creatures, God does the work of salvation and making them perfect—this is the minimum that you should possess in your belief in God. Belief in God is principally the switch from a life in the flesh to a life of loving God, from a life within naturalness to a life within the being of God, it is coming out from under the domain of Satan and living under the care and protection of God, it is being able to achieve obedience to God and not obedience to the flesh, it is allowing God to gain your entire heart, allowing God to make you perfect, and freeing yourself from the corrupt satanic disposition. Belief in God is principally so that the power and glory of God may be manifested in you, so that you may carry out God's will, and accomplish God's plan, and be able to bear testimony to God before Satan. Belief in God should not be in order to behold signs and wonders, nor should it be for the sake of your personal flesh. It should be for the pursuit of knowing God, and being able to obey God, and like Peter, obeying Him until death. This is what it is mainly in order to achieve. Eating and drinking the word of God is in order to know God and in order to satisfy God. Eating and drinking the word of God gives you a greater knowledge of God, only after which can you obey God. Only if you know God can you love Him, and the attainment of this aim is the only aim man should have in his belief in God. If, in your belief in God, you always try to behold signs and wonders, then the viewpoint of this belief in God is wrong. Belief in God is principally the acceptance of the word of God as the reality of life. Only putting into practice the words of God from His mouth and carrying them out within yourself is the attainment of the aim of God. In believing in God, man should pursue being made perfect by God, being able to submit to God, and the complete obedience to God. If you can obey God without complaint, be mindful of God's desires, achieve the stature of Peter, and possess the style of Peter spoken of by God, then that will be when you have achieved success in belief in God, and it will signify that you have been gained by God.

God does His work in the entire universe. All those who believe in Him must accept His word, and eat and drink His word; no one can be gained by God through seeing the signs and wonders shown by God. Throughout the ages, God has always used the word to make man perfect, thus you should not devote all your attention to signs and wonders, but should pursue being made perfect by God. In the Old Testament Age of Law, God spoke some words, and in the Age of Grace, Jesus, too, spoke many words. After Jesus had finished saying these many words, the apostles and prophets that came later caused people to practice according to the laws and commandments set out by Jesus, and caused them to experience according to the principles spoken of by Jesus. God of the last days principally uses the word to make man perfect. He does not use signs and wonders to oppress man, or convince man; this cannot make plain the power of God. If God only showed signs and wonders, then it would be impossible to make plain the reality of God, and thus impossible to make man perfect. God does not make man perfect by signs and wonders, but uses the word to water and shepherd man, after which is achieved the complete obedience of man and man's knowledge of God. This is the aim of the work He does and the words He speaks. God does not use the method of showing signs and wonders to make man perfect—He uses words, and uses many different methods of work to make man perfect. Whether it be the refinement, dealing, pruning, or provision of words, God speaks from many different perspectives to make man perfect, and to give man a greater knowledge of the work, wisdom and wondrousness of God. When man is made complete at the time that God concludes the age in the last days, he will be qualified to look upon signs and wonders. When you have a knowledge of God and are able to obey God no matter what He does, you will see signs and wonders, for you will have no conceptions about the reality of God. At the moment, you are corrupt and incapable of complete obedience to God—are you qualified to see signs and wonders? The time that God shows signs and wonders is when God punishes man, and also when the age changes, and, moreover, when the age concludes. When God's work is being carried out normally, He does not show signs and wonders. Showing signs and wonders is supremely easy, but that is not the principle of God's work, nor is it the aim of God's management of man. If man saw signs and wonders, and if the spiritual body of God were to appear to man, would all people not believe in God? I have previously said that a group of overcomers are gained from the East, overcomers who come from amid the great tribulation. What is the meaning of such words? They mean that these people who have been gained only truly obeyed after undergoing judgment and chastisement, and dealing and pruning, and all kinds of refinement. The belief of such people is not vague and abstract, but real. They have not seen any signs and wonders, or any miracles; they do not speak of abstruse letters and doctrines, or profound insights; instead they have reality, and the words of God, and a true knowledge of the reality of God. Is such a group not more capable of making plain the power of God? God's work during the last days is real work. During the age of Jesus, He did not come to make man perfect, but to redeem man, and so He displayed some miracles to make people follow Him. For He principally came to complete the work of crucifixion, and showing signs was not part of the work of His ministry. Such signs and wonders were work that was done in order to make His work effective; they were extra work, and did not represent the work of the entire age. During the Old Testament Age of Law, God also showed some signs and wonders—but the work God does today is real work, and He would definitely not show signs and wonders now. As soon as He showed signs and wonders, His real work would be thrown into disorder, and He would be unable to do any more work. If God said for the word to be used to make man perfect, but also showed signs and wonders, then could whether or not man truly believes in Him be made plain? Thus, God does not do such things. There is too much of religion within man; God has come during the last days to expel all the religious conceptions and supernatural things within man, and make man know the reality of God. He has come to remove an image of God that is abstract and fanciful—an image which, in other words, does not exist at all. And so, now the only thing that is precious is for you to have a knowledge of reality! The truth overrides everything. How much truth do you possess today? Is all that shows signs and wonders God? Evil spirits can also show signs and wonders; are they all God? In his belief in God, what man searches for is the truth, what he pursues is life, rather than signs and wonders. Such should be the goal of all those who believe in God.

PEOPLE WHO CAN BE ABSOLUTELY OBEDIENT TOWARD GOD'S PRACTICALITY ARE THOSE WHO TRULY LOVE GOD

Having knowledge of practicality and being able to clearly see God's work—all of this is seen in His words. It is only in God's words that you can gain enlightenment, so you should equip yourself with His words more. Share your understanding from God's words in fellowship, and through your fellowship others can gain enlightenment and it can lead people onto the path—this path is practical. Before God sets up an environment for you, every single one of you must first equip yourselves with His words. This is something that everyone should do—it is an urgent priority. The first thing to do is to be able to eat and drink His words. For the things that you are unable to do, seek out a path of practice from His words, and look in His words for any issues you don't understand or any difficulties you have. Make God's words your supply, allow them to help you resolve practical difficulties and practical problems, and allow His words to become your help in life—this requires you to put effort into it. Results must be achieved from eating and drinking the word of God. You must be able to quiet your heart in front of Him, and to practice in accordance with His words when you encounter issues. When you have not encountered any issues, just eat and drink. Sometimes you can pray and think of God's love, have fellowship on your understanding of His words, and have fellowship on the enlightenment and illumination you experience inside and the reaction you have when reading them, and you can lead people onto the path—this is practical. The goal of doing this is to allow God's words to become your practical supply.

Over the course of a day, how many hours do you spend truly in front of God? How much of your day is given to God? How much is given to the flesh? If your heart is always facing Him, this is the first step on the right track toward being perfected by God. You can devote your heart and body and all of your genuine love to God, place them before Him, be completely obedient toward Him, and be absolutely considerate to His will. Not for the flesh, not for family, and not for your personal desires, but for the interests of God's household. In everything you can take God's word as the principle, as the foundation. That way, your intentions and your perspectives will all be in the right place, and you will be someone who gains God's praise before Him. Those who God likes are people who are absolute toward Him, people who are devoted to Him and none other. Those who He loathes are people who are half-hearted about Him, and who rebel against Him. He loathes those who believe in Him and always want to enjoy Him, but cannot completely expend themselves for Him. He loathes those who say they love Him but who rebel against Him in their hearts. He loathes those who use flowery words to engage in deception. Those who do not have genuine dedication to God or genuine obedience to Him are treacherous people; they are naturally too arrogant. Those who cannot be genuinely obedient in front of the normal, practical God are even more arrogant, and they in particular are the dutiful progeny of the archangel. Those who truly expend themselves for God place their whole beings in front of Him. They genuinely obey all of His utterances, and they are able to put His words into practice. They make God's words the foundation of their existence, and they are able to genuinely seek the portions of practice in God's word. This is someone who truly lives in front of God. If what you do is beneficial for your life and satisfies God's will, and through eating and drinking His words, you can meet your inner needs and inadequacies so that your life disposition is transformed, then this will satisfy God's will. If you act according to God's requirements, if you do not satisfy the flesh but satisfy His will, this is entering into the reality of His words. When talking about more realistically entering into the reality of God's words, it means you can perform your duty and satisfy God's requirements. Only these kinds of practical actions can be called entering into the reality of His words. If you are able to enter into this reality, then you have the truth. This is the beginning of entering into reality; you must first carry out this training and only after that will you be able to enter into deeper realities. Think of how to keep the commandments and how to be loyal in front of God. Do not always think of when you will be able to enter the kingdom—if your disposition does not change whatever you think of will be useless! To enter into the reality of God's words, you must first be able to make your ideas and thoughts all for God—this is the barest necessity. There are many people who are currently in the midst of trials; they do not understand God's work. But I tell you—if you don't understand it, you'd better not make judgments about it. Perhaps there will be one day when the truth will all come to light and then you will know it. Not making judgments would be beneficial for you, but you cannot just passively wait. You must seek to actively enter in—only this is a person who has practical entry.

Because of their rebelliousness, people are always developing notions about the practical God. This requires all people to learn how to be obedient because the practical God is an enormous trial for mankind. If you cannot stand firm, then everything is finished; if you do not have an understanding of the practicality of the practical God, you will not be able to be perfected by God. A critical step in whether or not people can be perfected is understanding the practicality of God. The practicality of God incarnate come to earth is a trial for each and every person. If you are able to stand firm in this aspect then you are someone who knows God, and you are someone who truly loves Him. If you can't stand firm in this aspect, if you only believe in the Spirit and you cannot have faith in the practicality of God, then no matter how great your faith in God is, it is useless. If you cannot believe in the visible God, can you believe in God's Spirit? Aren't you trying to fool God? You are not obedient to the visible and tangible God, so are you able to obey the Spirit? A spirit is invisible and intangible, so when you say that you obey God's Spirit, aren't you just speaking nonsense? The key to keeping the commandments is having an understanding of the practical God. Once you have an understanding of the practical God, you will be able to keep the commandments. Keeping the commandments includes two components: One is maintaining steadfast belief in^[a] the essence of His Spirit and being able to accept the examination of the Spirit in front of Him. Another is being able to have a genuine understanding of the incarnate flesh, and achieving genuine obedience. Whether it's in front of the flesh or in front of the Spirit, a heart of obedience to and fear of God should always be kept. Only this kind of person is qualified to be perfected. If you have an understanding of the practicality of the practical God, that is standing firm in this trial, and then nothing will be too much.

Some people say that the commandments are easy to keep, that you just need to come in front of God, speak frankly and devoutly without gesticulating, and this is keeping the commandments. Is that right? So you do some things behind the scenes that resist God—does this count as keeping the commandments? You must fully understand the issue of keeping the commandments. This is linked to whether or not you understand the practical God; if you have an understanding of practicality, and do not stumble and fall in this trial, this counts as you having strong testimony. Bearing a resounding witness for God is mainly related to whether you have an understanding of the practical God or not, and whether or not you are able to obey in front of this person who is not only ordinary, but normal, and even obey until the death. If you truly bear a witness for God through this obedience, that means you have been obtained by God. Being able to obey to the death, and being free of complaints in front of Him, not making judgments, not slandering, not having notions, and not having any other intentions—this way God will gain glory. Obedience in front of a regular person who is looked down upon by man and being able to obey to the death without any notions—this is true testimony. The reality that God requires people to enter into is that you are able to obey His words, able to put His words into practice, able to bow down in front of the practical God and know your own corruption, able to open up your heart in front of Him, and in the end be gained by Him through these words of His. God gains glory when these words conquer you and make you fully obedient to Him; through this He shames Satan and completes His work. When you don't have any notions of the practicality of God incarnate, that is, when you stand firm in this trial, then you bear a good witness. If there is a day when you have full understanding of the practical God and you can obey until the death like Peter, you will be gained by God, and be perfected by Him. What God does that is not in line with your notions is a trial for you. If it were in line with your notions, it wouldn't require you to suffer or be refined. It is because His work is so practical and that it isn't in line with your notions that it requires you to let go of your notions. This is why it's a trial for you. It is because of God's practicality that all people are in the midst of trials; His work is practical, not supernatural. By fully understanding His practical words, His practical utterances without any notions, and being able to genuinely love Him more the more practical His work is, you will be gained by Him. The group of people that God will gain are those who know God, that is, who know His practicality, and even more they are those who are able to obey God's practical work.

During God's time in the flesh, the obedience He requires of people is not what people imagine—to not make judgments or resist. Rather,

He requires that people make His words their principle for life and the foundation of their survival, that they absolutely put the essence of His words into practice, and that they absolutely satisfy His will. One aspect of requiring people to obey God incarnate refers to putting His words into practice, and another aspect refers to being able to obey His normalcy and practicality. These must be both absolute. Those who can achieve both of these aspects are all those who have a heart of genuine love for God. They are all people who have been gained by God, and they all love God as they love their own life. God incarnate bears normal and practical humanity in His work. This way, His exterior shell of both normal and practical humanity becomes an enormous trial for people; it becomes their greatest difficulty. However, God's normalcy and practicality cannot be avoided. He tried everything to find a solution but in the end He could not rid Himself of the exterior shell of His normal humanity because, after all, He is God become flesh, not the God of the Spirit in heaven. He is not the God that people cannot see, but the God wearing the shell of one of creation. In this, ridding Himself of the shell of His normal humanity would by no means be easy. So no matter what, He still does the work that He wants to do from the perspective of the flesh. This work is the expression of the normal and practical God, so how could it be okay for people to not obey? What on earth can people do about the actions of God? He does whatever He wants to do; whatever He's happy with is how it is. If people do not obey, what other sound plans can they have? Up until now, it is still just obedience that can save people; there are no other clever ideas. If God wants to test people, what can they do about it? But all of this is not the idea of God in heaven; it is the idea of God incarnate. He wants to do this, so no person can change it. God in heaven does not interfere with what He does, so shouldn't people obey Him even more? Although He is both practical and normal, He is completely the God become flesh. Based on His own ideas, He does whatever He wants to. God in heaven has handed over all tasks to Him; you must obey whatever He does. Although He has humanity and He is very normal, all of this is what He has deliberately arranged, so how can people look at Him, eyes wide with disapproval? He wants to be normal, so He is normal. He wants to live within humanity, so He lives within humanity. He wants to live within divinity, so He lives within divinity. People can see it however they want. God will always be God and people will always be people. His essence cannot be denied because of some minor detail, nor can He be pushed outside of the “person” of God because of one little thing. People have the freedom of human beings, and God has the dignity of God; these do not interfere with each other. People can condemn or understand God as they wish. Can’t they tolerate God being a little more casual? Do not be so serious—everyone should have tolerance for each other, then wouldn’t everything be settled? Would there still be any estrangement? If one can’t tolerate such a small thing, how can they even think of being a magnanimous person, a true man? It’s not God giving mankind a hard time, but mankind giving God a hard time. They are always handling things by making mountains out of molehills—they really do make something out of nothing, and it is so unnecessary! When God works within normal and practical humanity, what He does is not the work of mankind, but the work of God. However, people do not see the essence of His work—they always see the exterior shell of His humanity. They have not seen such great work, but they insist on seeing God’s ordinary and normal humanity and they will not let go of it. How can this be called obeying God? God in heaven has now “turned into” God on earth, and God on earth is now God in heaven. It doesn’t matter if Their external appearances are the same or what Their work is like. Overall, He who does God’s own work is God Himself. You must obey whether you want to or not—this is not something that you get to choose! God must be obeyed by people, and people must absolutely obey God without the slightest bit of pretense.

The group of people that God incarnate wants to gain today is those who conform to His will. People need only obey His work, not always concern themselves with the ideas of God in heaven, live within vagueness, or make things difficult for God in the flesh. Those who are able to obey Him are those who absolutely listen to His words and obey His arrangements. These people pay no mind at all to what God in heaven is really like or what kind of work God in heaven is currently doing in mankind, but they fully give their hearts to God on earth and they place their entire beings in front of Him. They never consider their own safety, and they never make a fuss over the normalcy and practicality of God in the flesh. Those who obey God in the flesh can be perfected by Him. Those who believe in God in heaven will gain nothing. This is because it is not God in heaven, but it is God on earth that bestows the promises and blessings upon people. People should not always magnify God in heaven and see God on earth as an average person. This is unfair. God in heaven is great and wonderful with marvelous wisdom, but this doesn't exist at all. God on earth is very average and insignificant; He is also very normal. He does not have an extraordinary mind or earth-shattering acts. He just works and speaks in a very normal and practical way. While He does not speak through thunder or summon the wind and the rain, He truly is the incarnation of God in heaven, and He truly is the God living amongst humans. People must not magnify the one that they are able to understand and that corresponds to their own imaginations as God, or see the One they cannot accept and absolutely cannot imagine as lowly. All of this is people's rebelliousness; it is all the source of mankind's resistance to God.

THOSE WHO ARE TO BE MADE PERFECT MUST UNDERGO REFINEMENT

If you believe in God, you must obey God, put the truth into practice, and fulfill your duty. Additionally, you must understand the things you should experience. If you only experience being dealt with, being disciplined, and judgment, if you are only able to enjoy God, but you are unable to feel when God is disciplining you or dealing with you, this is unacceptable. Perhaps in this instance of refinement you are able to stand your ground. This is still not enough; you must march forward. The lesson of loving God is endless, and there is never an end to it. People see believing in God as too simple, but once they gain some practical experience, they realize that belief in God is not as simple as people imagine. When God works to refine man, man suffers, his love of God becomes greater, and more of God's might is revealed in him. The less man's refinement, the less his love of God, and the less God's might is revealed in him. The greater his refinement and pain and the more his torment, the deeper his true love of God will be, the more genuine his faith in God will be, and the deeper his knowledge of God will be. In your experiences you will see that those who suffer great refinement and pain, and much dealing and discipline have a deep love of God, and a more profound and penetrating knowledge of God. Those who have not experienced being dealt with have but a superficial knowledge, and can only say: "God is so good, He bestows grace upon people so that they can enjoy Him.” If people have experienced being dealt with and disciplined, then they are able to speak the true knowledge of God. So the more wondrous God’s work in man is, the more valuable and significant it is. The more impenetrable it is to you and the more incompatible it is with your notions, the more God’s work is able to conquer you, gain you, and make you perfect. The significance of God’s work is so great! If He did not refine man in this way, if He did not work according to this method, then God’s work would be ineffectual and without significance. This is the reason behind the extraordinary significance of His selection of a group of people during the last days. It was said before that God would select and gain this group. The greater the work He carries out within you, the deeper and purer your love. The greater the work of God, the more man is able to get a taste of His wisdom and the deeper is man’s knowledge of Him. During the last days, 6,000 years of God’s plan for management will come to an end. Can it possibly end just like that, so easily? Once He conquers mankind, will His work be over? Can it be so simple? People imagine that it’s so simple, but what God does is not that simple. No matter what part of God’s work it is, all is unfathomable to man. Were you able to fathom it, then God’s work would be without significance or value. The work done by God is unfathomable; it is too much at odds with your notions, and the more irreconcilable it is with your notions, the more it shows that God’s work is meaningful; were it compatible with your notions, then it would be meaningless. Today, you feel that God’s work is too wondrous, and the more wondrous it is, the more you feel that God is unfathomable, and you see how great God’s deeds are. If He only did some superficial, perfunctory work to conquer man and then that was it, then man would be incapable of beholding the significance of God’s work. Although you are receiving a little refinement now, it is of great benefit to the growth of your life—and so such hardship is of the utmost necessity to you. Today, you are receiving a little refinement, but afterward you will truly be able to behold the deeds of God, and ultimately you will say: “God’s deeds are so wondrous!” These will be the words in your heart. Having experienced God’s refinement for a while (the trial of^a service-doers and the times of chastisement), some people ultimately said: “Believing in God is really difficult!” This “difficult” shows that God’s deeds are unfathomable, that God’s work is possessed of great significance and value, and is highly worthy of being treasured by man. If, after I have done so much work, you had not the slightest knowledge, then could My work still have value? It will make you say: “Service to God is really difficult, the deeds of God are so wondrous, God truly is wise! He’s so lovely!” If, after undergoing a period of experience, you are able to say such words, then this proves that you have gained God’s work in you. One day, when you’re abroad to spread the gospel and someone asks you: “How is your faith in God?” you will be able to say: “God’s actions are so marvelous!” As soon as they see you say this, they’ll feel that there’s something within you and that God’s actions truly are unfathomable. This is truly bearing witness. You will say that God’s work is full of wisdom, and His work in you has truly convinced you and conquered your heart. You will always love Him because He is more than worthy of mankind’s love! If you can speak to these things, you can move people’s hearts. All of this is bearing witness. If you are able to be a resounding witness, to move people to tears, that shows that you truly are one who loves God. That’s because you are able to act as a witness of love for God and God’s actions can be expressed through you. And through your expression, other people can seek out His actions, experience God, and they’ll be able to stand steady in whatever environment they find themselves in. Only bearing witness this way is genuinely bearing witness, and this is exactly what is required of you now. You should say that God’s actions are extremely valuable and worthy of being treasured by people, that God is so precious and so abundant, He can not only speak, but even more He can refine people’s hearts, bring them enjoyment, and He can gain them, conquer them, and perfect them. From your experience you will see that God is very lovable. So how much do you love God now? Can you really say these things from your heart? When you are able to express these words from the depths of your heart you will be able to bear witness. Once your experience has reached this level you will be capable of being a witness for God, and qualified for it. If you don’t reach this level in your experience, then you will still be too far off. It’s normal for people to have weaknesses in refinement, but after refinement you should be able to say: “God is so wise in His work!” If you are truly able to take in practical recognition of this, it is precious, and your experience is valuable.

a. The original text omits “the trial of.”

What are you pursuing now? What you should be pursuing is whether you are capable of expressing the deeds of God, whether you can become an expression and a manifestation of God, and whether you are fit to be used by Him. How much work has God really done in you? How much have you seen, how much have you touched? How much have you experienced, and tasted? Whether God has tested you, dealt with you, or disciplined you—no matter what, His actions and His work have been carried out on you, but as a believer in God, as someone who is willing to pursue being perfected by Him, are you able to express God's actions through your own practical experience? Can you live out God through this? Are you able to provide for others through your own practical experience, and expend yourself for the sake of God's work? In order to bear witness for God's actions you must be able to express what His actions are, and this is done through your experience, knowledge, and the suffering you have endured. Are you someone who bears witness for God's actions? Do you have this aspiration? If you are able to bear witness to His name, and even more, His actions, as well as live out the image that He requires of His people, then you are a witness for God. How do you actually bear witness for God? Seeking and longing to live out God, expressing God's actions through your words, allowing people to know and to see His actions—if you truly seek all of this, God will perfect you. If all you seek is to be perfected by God and be blessed in the very end, then the perspective of your faith in God is not pure. You should be pursuing how to see God's deeds in real life, how to satisfy Him when He reveals His will to you, seeking how to bear witness to His wondrousness and wisdom, and how to demonstrate His discipline and dealing on you. All of these are things you should be trying to figure out now. If your love for God is solely so that you can share in God's glory after He perfects you, it is still inadequate and cannot meet God's requirements. You need to be able to bear witness to God's actions, satisfy His demands, and experience the work He has done on people in a practical way. Whether it is pain, tears, or sadness, you must experience it all in practice. This is all so you can be a witness of God. Under the dominion of what exactly are you now suffering and seeking perfection? Is it to bear witness for God? Is it for blessings of the flesh or for future prospects? All your intentions, motivations, and personal goals to pursue must be put right and cannot be guided by your own will. If one person seeks perfection to receive blessings and to reign in power, while the other pursues perfection to satisfy God, to truly be a witness of God's deeds, which of the two means of pursuit would you choose? If you chose the first, then you are still too far off God's standards. I said before to let My actions be openly known across the entire universe and that I would reign as King in the universe. On the other hand, what you have been entrusted with is to go bear witness for God's deeds, not for you to be kings and appear to the whole universe. Let the entire cosmos be filled with God's deeds. Let everyone see them and acknowledge them. This is spoken of in relation to God Himself, and what human beings should do is to bear witness to God. How much of God do you know now? How much of God can you bear witness to? What is the purpose of God perfecting man? Once you understand God's will, how should you show consideration toward His will? If you are willing to be perfected and are willing to bear witness for God's deeds through what you live out, if you have this driving force, then nothing is too difficult. What people need now is confidence. If you have this driving force, then it is easy to let go of any negativity, passiveness, laziness and notions of the flesh, philosophies of life, rebellious disposition, emotions, and so forth.

While undergoing trials, it's normal for people to be weak, or have negativity within them, or to lack clarity on God's will or their path for practice. But in any case, you must have faith in God's work, and not deny God, like Job. Although Job was weak and cursed the day of his own birth, he did not deny that all things in human life were bestowed by Jehovah, and that Jehovah is also the One to take it all away. No matter how he was tested, he maintained this belief. No matter what kind of refinement you undergo in your experiences from God's words, God requires mankind's faith. This way, what is perfected are people's faith and aspirations. When you cannot touch or see it, it is under these circumstances that your faith is required. People's faith is required for when something cannot be seen by the naked eye, and your faith is required for when you cannot let go of your own notions. When you are not clear on God's work, what is required is your faith and that you take a firm stance and stand witness. When Job reached this point, God appeared to him and spoke to him. That is, it is only from within your faith that you will be able to see God, and when you have faith God will perfect you. Without faith, He cannot do this. God will bestow upon you whatever you hope to gain. If you don't have faith, you cannot be perfected and you will be unable to see God's actions, much less see His omnipotence. When you have faith and you can touch His actions in your practical experience, God will appear to you, and He will enlighten and guide you from within. Without that faith, God will be unable to do that. If you have lost hope in God, how will you be able to experience Him? Therefore, only when you have faith and you do not harbor doubts toward God, only when you have true faith in Him no matter what He does will He enlighten and illuminate you in your experiences, and only then will you be able to see His actions. These things are all achieved through faith, and faith is only achieved through refinement—faith cannot develop in the absence of refinement. What does faith refer to? Faith is the genuine belief and the sincere heart that humans should possess when they cannot see or touch something, when God's work is not in line with human notions, when it is beyond human reach. This is the faith that I speak of. People are in need of faith during times of hardship and refinement, and along with faith comes refinement. These are inextricable. No matter how God works or what kind of environment you are in, you will be able to pursue life, pursue the development of God's work in you, and pursue the truth. You will have an understanding of God's actions and you will be able to act according to the truth. This is your genuine faith, and this shows that you have not lost hope in God. You will still seek the truth in refinement, you will be able to truly love God and will not develop doubts of Him. No matter what He does, you will still practice the truth to satisfy Him, and you will be able to deeply seek out His will and be considerate of His will. Only this is true faith in God. Before, when God said that you would reign as a king, you loved Him, and when He openly showed Himself to you, you pursued Him. But now God is hidden, you cannot see Him, and troubles have come upon you. At this time, do you lose hope in God? So at all times you must pursue life and seek to satisfy God's will. This is called genuine faith, and it is the truest and most beautiful kind of love.

It used to be that people would all make their resolutions in front of God and say: "No matter who doesn't love God, I must love Him." But now, you are faced with refinement. It is not in line with your notions, so you lose faith in God. Is this genuine love? You have read many times about the deeds of Job—have you forgotten about them? True love can only take shape from within faith. You develop real love for God through your refinements, in your actual experiences you are considerate of God's will through your faith, and through faith you forsake your own flesh and pursue life—this is what people should do.

If you do this you will be able to see God's actions, but if you lack faith you will not be able to, and you will not be able to experience His work. If you want to be used and perfected by God, you must be possessed of everything: the will to suffer, faith, endurance, obedience, as well as the ability to experience the work of God, gain a grasp on His will, and be considerate of His sorrow. Perfecting a person is not easy, and every single refinement that you experience requires your faith and love. If you want to be perfected by God, just hitting the streets is not enough, and only expending yourself for God is not enough either. You must possess many things to be able to become someone who is perfected by God. When you face sufferings you must be able to not consider the flesh and not complain against God. When God hides Himself from you, you must be able to have the faith to follow Him, to maintain your previous love without allowing it to falter or disappear. No matter what God does, you must submit to His design, and be more willing to curse your own flesh than to complain against Him. When you are faced with trials you must satisfy God in spite of any reluctance to part with something you love, or bitter weeping. Only this can be called true love and faith. No matter what your actual stature is, you must first possess the will to suffer hardship as well as true faith, and you must have the will to forsake the flesh. You should be willing to personally endure hardships and suffer losses to your personal interests in order to satisfy God's will. You must also have a heart of regretting yourself, that you weren't able to satisfy God in the past, and be able to regret yourself now. Not a single one of these can be lacking and God will perfect you through these things. If you lack these conditions, you cannot be perfected.

Now, people have all seen that someone who serves God should not only know how to suffer for His sake, but even more, they should understand that believing in God is for the sake of seeking to love Him. God's use of you isn't just to refine you or have you suffer, but it is to have you know His actions, know the true significance of human life, and particularly to have you know that serving God is not an easy task. Experiencing God is not about enjoying grace, but more about suffering because of your love for Him. Since you enjoy God's grace, you must also enjoy His chastisement—you must experience all of these things. You can experience God's enlightenment in you, and you can also experience Him dealing with you and His judgment. That way, you experience all sides. God has done judgment work on you, and He has also done chastisement work on you. God's word has dealt with you, but it has also enlightened you, illuminated you. When you want to run away, God's hand still tugs at you. All of this work is to let you know that everything about man is at the mercy of God. You may think believing in God is about suffering, or doing many things for Him, or for the peace of your flesh, or for everything to go well for you, for everything to be comfortable—but none of these are purposes people should have for believing in God. If that is what you believe, then your perspective is incorrect and you simply cannot be perfected. God's actions, God's righteous disposition, His wisdom, His words, and His wondrousness and unfathomableness are all things people ought to understand. Use this understanding to get rid of the personal requests as well as the individual hopes and notions in your heart. Only by eliminating these can you meet the conditions demanded by God. Only through this can you have life and satisfy God. Believing in God is for the sake of satisfying Him and for living out the disposition He requires, so that His actions and glory may be manifested through this group of unworthy people. That is the correct perspective for believing in God, and also the goal you should seek. You should have the right viewpoint of believing in God and seek to obtain God's words. You need to eat and drink God's words, and be able to live out the truth, and especially see His practical deeds, see His wonderful deeds throughout the entire universe, as well as the practical work He does in the flesh. Through their actual experiences, people can appreciate just how God does His work on them and what His will is toward them. All of this is to eliminate their corrupt satanic disposition. Rid yourself of the unclean and unrighteous inside of you, strip away your wrong intentions, and you can develop true faith in God. Only by having true faith can you truly love God. You can only genuinely love God on the foundation of your belief in Him. Can you achieve loving God without believing in Him? Since you believe in God, you cannot be muddle-headed about it. Some people become full of vigor as soon as they see that faith in God will bring them blessings, but lose all energy as soon as they see they have to suffer refinements. Is that believing in God? In the end, faith in God is about complete and utter obedience before Him. You believe in God but still have demands of Him, have many religious notions you cannot put down, personal interests you cannot let go of, and still seek blessings of the flesh and want God to rescue your flesh, to save your soul—these are all expressions of people with the wrong perspective. Even though people with religious beliefs have faith in God, they don't seek dispositional change, don't pursue knowledge of God, and only seek the interests of their flesh. Many among you have faiths that belong in the category of religious convictions. That is not true faith in God. To believe in God people must possess a heart to suffer for Him and the will to give themselves up. Unless they meet these two conditions it does not count as faith in God, and they will not be able to achieve dispositional change. Only people who genuinely seek the truth, seek knowledge of God, and pursue life are those who truly believe in God.

When trials come upon you, how will you integrate God's work to face them? Will you be negative or will you understand God's refinement of mankind from a positive aspect? What will you gain through your refinements? Will your love for God grow? When you are subject to refinement, will you be able to integrate the trials of Job and treat God's work in you seriously? Will you be able to see how God tests mankind through the trials of Job? What kind of inspiration can Job's trials bring to you? Will you be willing to stand witness for God in the midst of your refinements, or will you want to satisfy the flesh in a comfortable environment? What truly is your perspective on faith in God? Is it truly for Him, and not for the flesh? Do you actually have a target for your seeking? Are you willing to undergo refinements to be perfected by God, or would you rather be chastised and cursed by God? How do you really see the matter of bearing witness for God? What should people do in certain environments to truly be a witness for God? Since the practical God has shown so much actual work in you, why do you always have the thought of leaving? Is your belief in God for God? For most of you, it is for individual plans and pursuit of personal benefit. Very few people believe in God for God—isn't this rebelliousness?

The work of refinement is primarily to perfect people's faith and in the end reach a state where you want to leave but you cannot, where some people are bereft of a shred of hope but they still have their faith, where people no longer have hope in their own future, and only at this time will God's refinement conclude. Mankind still has not reached the stage of hovering between life and death—they have not tasted death, so the refinement is not at an end. Even those who were at the step of service-doers had not been refined to the utmost, but Job had been, with nothing to rely on. People must undergo refinements to the point that they have no hope and nothing to rely on—only then are they truly refinements. During the time of the service-doers, your heart was always quiet in front of God. No matter what He did and no matter what His will for you was, you always obeyed His arrangements and at the end of the road, you understood everything. Undergoing the trials of Job is also undergoing the trials of Peter. When Job was tested he stood witness, and in the end Jehovah was revealed to him. Only after he stood witness was he worthy of seeing the face of God. Why is it said: “I hide from the land of filth but show Myself to the holy kingdom”? That means that only when you are holy and stand witness can you have the dignity to see the face of God. If you cannot stand witness for Him, you do not have the dignity to see His face. If you retreat or complain against God in the face of refinements, failing to stand witness for Him and being Satan’s laughing stock, you will not gain the appearance of God. If you are like Job, who in the midst of trials cursed his own flesh and did not complain against God, and was able to detest his own flesh without complaining or sinning through his words, that is standing witness. When you undergo refinements to a certain degree and can still be like Job, utterly obedient in front of God and without other requirements of Him or your own notions, then God will appear to you. Now God does not appear to you because you have so many of your own notions, your personal prejudices, selfish thoughts, individual requirements and fleshly interests, and you are not worthy of seeing His face. If you see God, you will measure Him through your own conceptions—then it is you nailing Him to the cross. If many things come upon you that are not in line with your notions but you are able to put them aside and know God’s actions from these things, and in the midst of refinements you reveal your heart of love for God, this is standing witness. If your home is peaceful, you enjoy comforts of the flesh, no one is persecuting you, and your brothers and sisters in the church obey you, can you display your heart of love for God? Can this refine you? It is only through refinement that your love for God can be shown, and it is only through things occurring that are not in line with your conceptions that you can be perfected. It is through many negative things, many adversities that God perfects you. It is through many of Satan’s actions, accusations, and its expression in many people that God allows you to acquire knowledge, thus perfecting you.

If you touch God’s actions in your actual experience, He will appear to you, and enlighten and guide you from within. If you are not able to obey His words, He will not be able to do this. If you lack faith, if you have lost hope in God, how will you experience? If you have true faith in Him and are without doubts, if you open your heart to Him, He will perfect you. He will enlighten you in your practical experience and in your life. In people's practical lives, they have many personal difficulties, and on top of that, they cannot clearly see the extent of God's work, so this requires faith. Faith only comes through refinements—it cannot develop without being refined. If you have notions that you cannot let go of and you develop doubts toward God, you will sink down into refinements, and at these times what you most need is faith.

Your many experiences of failure, of weakness, and times of negativity could be said to be God's trials of you. This is because everything comes from God, all things and events are in His hands. Whether you fail or whether you are weak and you stumble all rests on God and is within His grasp. From God's side, this is a trial of you, and if you cannot recognize that, it will become temptation. There are two kinds of states that people should recognize: One comes from the Holy Spirit, and the other likely comes from Satan. One state is that the Holy Spirit illuminates you and allows you to know yourself, to detest and regret yourself and to be able to have genuine love for God, to set your heart on satisfying Him. The other state is that you know yourself, but you are negative and weak. It could be said that that is God's refinement. It could also be said that it is Satan's temptation. If you recognize that this is God's salvation of you and that you are now incredibly in His debt, and if from now on you try to repay Him and no longer fall into such depravity, if you put your effort into eating and drinking His words, and if you always consider yourself to be lacking, and have a heart of longing, then this is God's trial. After the suffering has ended and you are once again moving forward, God will still lead, illuminate, enlighten, and nourish you. But if you don't recognize it and you are negative, simply abandoning yourself to despair, if you think this way, then Satan's temptation has come upon you. When Job underwent trials, God and Satan were betting with each other, and God allowed Satan to afflict Job, to test him. Even though it was God testing Job, it was actually Satan that came upon him. For Satan, it was tempting Job, but Job was on God's side and if that hadn't been the case, he would have fallen into temptation. As soon as people fall into temptation they fall into danger. Undergoing refinement can be said to be a trial from God, but if you are not in a good state it can be said to be temptation from Satan. If you are not clear about the vision, Satan will accuse you and confuse you. Before you know it, you will fall into temptation.

If you do not experience the work of God you will never be able to be perfected. In your experience, you must also enter into the little details—how do you develop your notions and so many motives? What kind of suitable practices do you have for these? If you can experience God's work, this means that you have stature. If you only appear to have vigor, this is not true stature and you absolutely will not be able to take a stand. Only when you are able to experience and ponder God's work at any time, at any place, you are able to leave the shepherd, live independently by relying on God, and you are able to see God's actual actions, only then will God's will be achieved. Right now, most people do not know how to experience it. When they encounter an issue they don't know how to take care of it, they can't experience God's work, and they cannot lead a spiritual life. You must take God's words and work into your practical life.

Sometimes He gives you a certain type of feeling—you lose your inner enjoyment, you lose God's presence, and you are in darkness. This is a type of refinement. Whenever you do something it goes awry or you hit a wall. This is God's discipline. You may do something and not have any particular feeling about it, and others don't know either, but God knows. He will not let you go, and He will discipline you. The work of the Holy Spirit is very detailed. He very carefully observes people's every word and action, their every act and move, and their every thought and idea so that people can gain internal awareness of these things. You do something once and it goes awry, you do it again and it still goes awry, and gradually you will come to understand the work of the Holy Spirit. Through many times of being disciplined, you will know what to do to be in line with God's will and what is not in line with His will. In the end, you will have accurate responses to the Holy Spirit's guidance from within you. Sometimes you will be rebellious and you will be rebuked by God from within. This all comes from God's discipline. If you do not treasure God, if you slight His work, He will pay you no mind. The more seriously you take God, the more He will enlighten you. Right now, there are some people in the church who have a muddled and confused faith, and they do a lot of inappropriate things without discipline, and so the work of the Holy Spirit cannot be clearly seen in them. Some people fight, earn money, and conduct business without any discipline, and that kind of person is in even more danger. Not only do they not currently have the work of the Holy Spirit, but in the future they will be difficult to perfect. There are many people in whom the work of the Holy Spirit cannot be seen, in whom God's discipline cannot be seen. They are those who are not clear on God's will and who do not know His work. Those who can stand steady in the midst of refinements, who follow God no matter what He does, and at the very least are able to not leave, or achieve 0.1% of what Peter achieved are doing fine, but they have no value for use. Many people understand things quickly, have true love for God, and can exceed Peter's level. God does this kind of work, and this kind of person can gain His discipline and enlightenment and quickly throw off anything that is not in line with God's will. This kind of person is like gold—only this kind of person is truly valuable! If God has done many kinds of work but you are still like sand, like a stone, then you are worthless!

God's work in the country of the great red dragon is marvelous and unfathomable. He will eliminate some people because there are all kinds of people in the church—there are those who spend the church's money, those who cheat others, and more. If you do not clearly know the work of God you will be negative; this is because God's work can only be seen in a minority of people. At that time it will become clear who truly loves God and who does not. Those who truly love God have the work of the Holy Spirit, those who do not truly love Him will be revealed through His work, one step at a time. They will become the objects of elimination. These people will be revealed over the course of the work of conquering—they have no value for being perfected. And those who have been perfected have been gained by God in their entirety, and are capable of loving God like Peter. Those who have been conquered do not have spontaneous love, but only passive love, and they are forced to love God. Spontaneous love is developed through understanding gained through practical experience. This love occupies a person's heart and makes them voluntarily devoted to God; God's words become their foundation and they are able to suffer for God. Of course these are things possessed by someone who has been perfected by God. If you only seek to be conquered, then you cannot bear witness for God; if God only achieves His goal of salvation through conquering people, then the step of service-doers would be adequate. However, conquering people is not God's final goal—His final goal is to perfect people. So rather than say that this stage is the work of conquering, say that it is the work of perfecting and eliminating. Some people have not been fully conquered, and in the course of conquering them, a group of people will be perfected. These two pieces of work are carried out in unison. People have not departed throughout such a long period of work; this fact shows that the goal of conquering has been achieved—this is a fact of being conquered. Refinements are not for the sake of being conquered, but they are for the sake of being perfected. Without refinements, people could not be perfected. So refinements are so valuable! Today one group of people is being perfected, one group of people is being gained. The ten blessings mentioned previously were all aimed at those who have been perfected. Everything about changing their image on the earth is aimed at those who have been perfected. Those who have not been perfected cannot achieve this.

ONLY BY EXPERIENCING PAINFUL TRIALS CAN YOU KNOW THE LOVELINESS OF GOD

Just how much do you love God today? And just how much do you know of all that God has done in you? These are the things you should learn. When God arrives on earth, all that He has done in man and allowed man to see are so that man will love Him and truly know Him. That man is able to suffer for God and has been able to come this far is, in one regard, because of the love of God, and in another regard, is because of God's salvation; moreover, it is because of the work of judgment and chastisement that God has carried out in man. If you are without the judgment, chastisement, and trials of God, and if God has not made you suffer, then, to be honest, you do not truly love God. The greater God's work in man, and the greater man's suffering, the more it is able to show just how meaningful God's work is, and the more that man's heart is able to truly love God. How do you learn how to love God? Without torment and refinement, without painful trials—and if, furthermore, all that God gave man were grace, love, and mercy—would you be able to attain the true love of God? On one hand, during God's trials man comes to know his deficiencies, and sees that he is insignificant, contemptible, and lowly, that he has nothing, and is nothing; on the other hand, during His trials God creates different environments for man that make man more able to experience the loveliness of God. Although the pain is great, and sometimes insurmountable—and it even reaches the level of crushing grief—having experienced it, man sees how lovely is God's work in him, and only upon this foundation is there born in man the true love of God. Today man sees that with the grace, love, and mercy of God alone, he is incapable of truly knowing himself, much less is he able to know the essence of man. Only through both the refinement and judgment of God, only during such refinement can you know your deficiencies, and know that you have nothing. Thus, man's love of God is built upon the foundation of the refinement and judgment of God. If you only enjoy the grace of God, with a peaceful family life or material blessings, then you have not gained God, and your belief in God has failed. God has already carried out one stage of the work of grace in the flesh, and has already bestowed material blessings upon man—but man cannot be made perfect with grace, love, and mercy alone. In man's experiences he encounters some of God's love, and sees the love and mercy of God, yet having experienced for a period of time, he sees that God's grace and His love and mercy are incapable of making man perfect, and incapable of revealing that which is corrupt within man, nor are they able to rid man of his corrupt disposition, or make perfect his love and faith. God's work of grace was the work of one period, and man cannot rely on enjoying the grace of God in order to know God.

Through what is God's perfection of man accomplished? Through His righteous disposition. God's disposition primarily consists of righteousness, wrath, majesty, judgment, and curse, and His perfection of man is primarily through judgment. Some people don't understand, and ask why it is that God is only able to make man perfect through judgment and curse. They say that if God were to curse man, wouldn't man die? If God were to judge man, wouldn't man be condemned? Then how can he still be made perfect? Such are the words of people who do not know the work of God. What God curses is the disobedience of man, and what He judges are the sins of man. Although He speaks harshly, and without the slightest sensitivity, He reveals all that is within man, and through these stern words He reveals that which is essential within man, yet through such judgment, He gives man a profound knowledge of the essence of the flesh, and thus man submits to obedience before God. The flesh of man is of sin, and of Satan, it is disobedient, and the object of God's chastisement—and so, to allow man to know himself, the words of God's judgment must befall him and there must be employed every kind of refinement; only then can God's work be effective.

From the words spoken by God it can be seen that He has already condemned the flesh of man. Are these words, then, the words of curse? The words spoken by God reveal man's true colors, and through such revelation you are judged, and when you see that you are unable to satisfy God's will, inside you feel grief and remorse, you feel that you are so indebted to God, and insufficient for God's will. There are times when the Holy Spirit disciplines you from within, and this discipline comes from God's judgment; there are times when God reproaches you and hides His face from you, when He pays you no heed, and does not work within you, soundlessly chastising you in order to refine you. God's work in man is primarily in order to make plain His righteous disposition. What testimony does man ultimately bear to God? He testifies that God is the righteous God, that His disposition is righteousness, wrath, chastisement, and judgment; man testifies to the righteous disposition of God. God uses His judgment to make man perfect, He has been loving man, and saving man—but how much is contained within His love? There is judgment, majesty, wrath, and curse. Though God cursed man in the past, He did not completely cast man into the bottomless pit, but used that means to refine man's faith; He did not put man to death, but acted in order to make man perfect. The essence of the flesh is that which is of Satan—God said it exactly right—but the facts carried out by God are not completed according to His words. He curses you so that you might love Him, and so that you might know the essence of the flesh; He chastises you in order that you might be awakened, to allow you to know the deficiencies within you, and to know man's utter unworthiness. Thus, God's curses, His judgment, and His majesty and wrath—they are all in order to make man perfect. All that God does today, and the righteous disposition that He makes plain within you—it is all in order to make man perfect, and such is the love of God.

In man's traditional conceptions, God's love is His grace, mercy, and sympathy for the weakness of man. Although these things are also the love of God, they are too one-sided, and are not the primary means by which God makes man perfect. When some people have just begun to believe in God, it is because of illness. This illness is God's grace for you; without it, you would not believe in God, and if you did not believe in God then you wouldn't have come this far—and thus even this grace is the love of God. In the time of belief in Jesus, people did much that was unbeloved by God because they did not understand the truth, yet God has love and mercy, and He has brought man this far, and although man understands nothing, still God allows man to follow Him, and, furthermore, has led man to today. Is this not the love of God? That which is manifested in God's disposition is the love of God—this is absolutely right! When the building of the church reached its peak, God did the step of work of the service-doers and cast man into the bottomless pit. The words of the time of the service-doers were all curses: the curses of your flesh, the curses of your satanic corrupt disposition, and the curses of the things of you that do not fulfill God's will. The work done by God in that step was manifested as majesty, closely after which God carried out the step of the work of chastisement, and there came the trial of death. In such work, man saw the wrath, majesty, judgment, and chastisement of God, yet he also saw God's grace, and His love and mercy; all that God did, and all that was manifested as His disposition, was the love of man, and all that God did was able to fulfill the needs of man. He did it in order to make man perfect, and provided according to man's stature. If God had not done this, man would be incapable of coming before God, and would have no way of knowing the true face of God. From when man first began to believe in God until today, God has gradually provided to man in accordance with man's stature, so that, inside, man has gradually come to know Him. Only having come to today does man realize just how wonderful is the judgment of God. The step of work of the service-doers was the first incidence of the work of curse from the time of creation until today. Man was cursed into the bottomless pit. If God had not done that, today man would not have a true knowledge of God; it is only through the curse of God that man officially encounters the disposition of God. Those experiences showed man that his loyalty was unacceptable, that his stature was too small, that he was incapable of satisfying God's will, and that his claims of satisfying God at all times were nothing more than words. Although in the step of the work of the service-doers God cursed man, looked at from today that step of work was wonderful: It brought a great turning point for man, and caused a great change in his life disposition. Before the time of the service-doers, man understood nothing of the pursuit of life, what it means to believe in God, or the wisdom of God's work, nor did he understand that God's work can test man. From the time of the service-doers through to today, man sees how wondrous is the work of God, it is unfathomable to man, and using his brain he is unable to imagine how God works, and also sees how small is his stature and that too much of him is disobedient. When God cursed man, it was in order to achieve an effect, and He did not put man to death. Although He cursed man, He did so through words, and His curses did not actually befall man, for what God cursed was the disobedience of man, and so the words of His curses were also in order to make man perfect. Whether God judges man or curses him, both make man perfect: Both are in order to make perfect that which is impure within man. Through this means man was refined, and that which was lacking within man was made perfect through His words and work. Every step of God's work—whether it be harsh words, or judgment, or chastisement—makes man perfect, and is absolutely appropriate. Never throughout the ages has God done work such as this; today, He works within you so that you have appreciated His wisdom. Although you have suffered some pain within you, your hearts feel steadfast, and at peace; it is your blessing to be able to enjoy this stage of the work of God. Regardless of what you are able to gain in the future, all that you see of God's work in you today is love. If man does not experience God's judgment and refinement, his actions and fervor will always be on the outside, and his disposition will always remain unchanged. Does this count as having been gained by God? Today, although there is still much within man that is arrogant and conceited, man's disposition is much more stable than before. God's dealing of you is in order to save you, and although you may feel some pain at the time, the day will come when there occurs a change in your disposition. At that time, you will look back and see how wise the work of God is, and that will be when you are able to truly understand God's will. Today, there are some people who say they understand God's will—but that is none too realistic, they are talking nonsense, because at present they have yet to understand whether the will of God is to save man or curse man. Perhaps you cannot see it clearly now, but the day will come when you see that the day of God's glorification has arrived, and you see how meaningful it is to love God, so that you will come to know the human life, and your flesh will live in the world of loving God, that your spirit will be set free, your life will be full of joy, and that you will always be close to God, and will always look unto God. At that time, you will truly know how valuable the work of God today is.

Today, most people don't realize: They believe that suffering is without value, they are renounced by the world, their home life is troubled, they are not beloved of God, and their prospects are bleak. The suffering of some people reaches a certain point, and their thoughts turn to death. This is not the true love of God; such people are cowards, they have no perseverance, they are weak and powerless! God is eager for man to love Him, but the more man loves Him, the greater man's suffering, and the more man loves Him, the greater man's trials. If you love Him, then every kind of suffering will befall you—and if you don't, then perhaps everything will go smoothly for you, and all will be peaceful around you. When you love God, you will feel that much around you is insurmountable, and because your stature is too small you will be refined, and incapable of satisfying God; you will feel that God's will is too lofty, that it is beyond the reach of man. Because of all this you will be refined—because there is much weakness within you, and much that is incapable of satisfying the will of God, you will be refined inside. Yet you must clearly see that purification is only achieved through refinement. Thus, during these last days you must bear testimony to God. No matter how great your suffering, you should go on to the very end, and even at your last breath, still you must be faithful to God, and at the mercy of God; only this is truly loving God, and only this is the strong and resounding testimony. When you are tempted, you should say: "My heart belongs to God, and God has already gained me. I cannot satisfy you—I must devote my all to satisfying God." The more you satisfy God, the more God blesses you, and the greater the strength of your love for God; so, too, will you have faith and resolve, and will feel that nothing is more worthy or significant than a life spent loving God. It can be said that man has but to love God to be without sorrow. Although there are times when your flesh is weak and you are beset by many real troubles, during these times you will truly rely on God, and within your spirit you will be consoled, and you will feel certainty, and that you have something to depend upon. In this way, you will be able to overcome many environments, and so you will not complain about God because of the anguish that you suffer; you will want to sing, dance, and pray, to assemble and commune, to give thought to God, and you will feel that all the people, matters, and things around you that are organized by God are fitting. If you do not love God, all that you look upon will be irksome to you, nothing will be pleasing to your eyes; in your spirit you will not be free but downtrodden, your heart will always complain about God, and you will always feel that you suffer so much torment, and that it is so unjust. If you do not pursue for the sake of happiness, but in order to satisfy God and to not be accused by Satan, then such pursuit will give you great strength to love God. Man is able to carry out all that is spoken by God, and all that he does is able to satisfy God—this is what it means to be possessed of reality. Pursuing the satisfaction of God is using the love of God to put His words into practice; regardless of the time—even when others are without strength—inside of you there is still a heart which loves God, which profoundly yearns for God, and misses God. This is real stature. Just how great your stature is depends on how great your love of God is, on whether you are able to stand fast when tested, whether you are weak when a certain environment comes upon you, and whether you can stand your ground when your brothers and sisters reject you; the arrival of the facts will show just what your love of God is like. It can be seen from much of God's work that God really does love man, it's just that the eyes of man's spirit have yet to be completely opened, and he is unable to see through to much of the work of God, and the will of God, and the many things which are lovely about God; man has too little true love for God. You've believed in God throughout all this time, and today God has cut off all means of escape. Realistically speaking, you have no choice but to take the right path, the right path that you have been led on to by the harsh judgment and supreme salvation of God. Only after experiencing hardship and refinement does man know that God is lovely. Having experienced up until today, it can be said that man has come to know part of God's loveliness—but this is still not enough, because man is so lacking. He must experience more of God's wondrous work, and more of all the refinement of suffering set out by God. Only then can man's life disposition be changed.

ONLY LOVING GOD IS TRULY BELIEVING IN GOD

Today, as you seek to love and know God, in one respect you must endure hardship and refinement, and in another, you must pay a price. No lesson is more profound than the lesson of loving God, and it can be said that the lesson that people learn from a lifetime of belief is how to love God. Which is to say, if you believe in God you must love God. If you only believe in God but do not love Him, have not attained the knowledge of God, and have never loved God with a true love that comes from within your heart, then your belief in God is futile; if, in your belief in God, you do not love God, then you live in vain, and your entire life is the most lowly of all lives. If, throughout your whole life, you have never loved or satisfied God, then what is the point of you living? And what is the point of your belief in God? Isn't that a waste of effort? Which is to say, if people are to believe in and love God, then they must pay a price. Rather than trying to act in a certain way externally, they should seek true insight in the depths of their hearts. If you are enthusiastic about singing and dancing, but incapable of putting the truth into practice, can you be said to love God? Loving God requires seeking God's will in all things, and that you probe deep within when anything happens to you, trying to grasp God's will, and trying to see what God's will is in this matter, what He wishes you to achieve, and how you should be mindful of His will. For example: Something happens that requires you to endure hardship, at which time you should understand what God's will is, and how you should be mindful of His will. You must not satisfy yourself: First put yourself to one side. Nothing is more abject than the flesh. You must seek to satisfy God, and must fulfill your duty. With such thoughts, God will bring especial enlightenment to you in this matter, and your heart will also find comfort. Be it big or small, when something happens to you, you must first put yourself to one side and regard the flesh as the most lowly of all things. The more you satisfy the flesh, the more liberties it takes; if you satisfy it this time, next time it will ask for more, and as this carries on, you come to love the flesh even more. The flesh always has extravagant desires, it always asks that you satisfy it, and that you gratify it within, whether it be in the things you eat, what you wear, or in flying off the handle, or pandering to your own weaknesses and laziness.... The more you satisfy the flesh, the greater its desires become, and the more debauched the flesh becomes, until it gets to the point when people's flesh harbors even deeper conceptions, and disobeys God, and exalts itself, and becomes doubtful about the work of God. The more you satisfy the flesh, the greater the weaknesses of the flesh; you'll always feel that no one sympathizes with your weaknesses, you'll always believe that God has gone too far, and you'll say: How could God be so harsh? Why won't He give people a break? When people are too indulgent of the flesh, and cherish it too much, then they forfeit themselves. If you truly love God, and do not satisfy the flesh, then you'll see that everything God does is so right, and so good, and that His curse of your rebelliousness and judgment of your unrighteousness is justified. There will be times when God chastens and disciplines you, and raises up an environment to temper you, forcing you to come before Him—and you will always feel that what God is doing is wonderful. Thus you will feel as if there isn't much pain, and that God is so lovely. If you pander to the weaknesses of the flesh, and say that God goes too far, then you'll always feel in pain, and will always be depressed, and you will be unclear about all of the work of God, and it will seem as if God is not sympathetic to man's weakness at all, and unaware of man's difficulties. And thus you will feel miserable and alone, as if you have suffered great injustice, and at this time you will begin to complain. The more you pander to the weaknesses of the flesh in this way, the more you will feel that God goes too far, until it gets so bad that you deny the work of God, and begin to oppose God, and become full of disobedience. Thus, you must rebel against the flesh, and not pander to it: Your husband, wife, children, prospects, marriage, family—none of them matter! You need to have this resolve: "In my heart there is only God, and I must try my best to satisfy God, and not satisfy the flesh." If you are always possessed of such resolve, then when you put the truth into practice, and put yourself aside, you will be able to do so with but a little effort. It is said that there was once a farmer who saw a snake on the road that was frozen stiff. The farmer picked it up and held it to his breast, and after the snake was revived it bit the farmer to death. Man's flesh is like the snake: Its essence is to harm their lives—and when it completely gets its own way, your life becomes forfeit. The flesh belongs to Satan. Within it are extravagant desires, it thinks only for itself, it wants to enjoy comfort, and revel in leisure, wallowing in sloth and idleness, and having satisfied it to a certain point you will ultimately be eaten up by it. Which is to say, if you satisfy it this time, next time it will come asking for more. It always has extravagant desires and new demands, and takes advantage of your pandering to the flesh to make you cherish it even more and live among its comforts—and if you don't overcome it, you will ultimately forfeit yourself. Whether you can gain life before God, and what your ultimate end will be, depends on how you carry out your rebellion against the flesh. God has saved you, and chosen and predestined you, yet if today you are unwilling to satisfy Him, you are unwilling to put the truth into practice, you are unwilling to rebel against your own flesh with a heart that truly loves God, ultimately you will ruin yourself, and will thus endure extreme pain. If you always pander to the flesh, Satan will gradually gobble you up inside, and leave you without life, or the touch of the Spirit, until the day comes when you are completely dark inside. When you live in darkness, you will have been taken captive by Satan, you will no longer have God, and at that time you will deny God's existence and leave Him. Thus, if you wish to love God, you must pay the price of pain and endure hardship. There is no need for external fervency and hardship, reading more and running about more; instead, you should put aside the things within you: the extravagant thoughts, personal interests, and your own considerations, conceptions, and motivations. Such is God's will.

God's dealing of people's external disposition is also one part of His work; dealing with people's external, abnormal humanity, for example, or their lifestyle and habits, their ways and customs, as well as their external practices, and their fervency. But when He asks that people put the truth into practice and change their dispositions, what is primarily being dealt with are the motivations and conceptions within them. Only dealing with your external disposition isn't hard; it's like asking you not to eat the things you love, which is easy. That which touches upon the conceptions inside you, however, isn't easy to let go of: It requires you to rebel against the flesh, and pay a price, and suffer before God. This is particularly so with people's motivations. From the time of their belief in God until today, people have harbored many incorrect motivations. When you're not putting the truth into practice, you feel that all your motivations are correct, but when something happens to you, you will see that there are many incorrect motivations within you. Thus, when God makes people perfect, He causes them to realize that there are many conceptions within them that are obstructing their knowledge of God. When you recognize that your motivations are wrong, if you are able to stop practicing according to your conceptions and motivations, and are able to bear testimony to God and stand firm in your position in all that happens to you, this proves that you have rebelled against the flesh. When you rebel against the flesh, there will inevitably be a battle within you. Satan will try and make you follow it, will try and make you follow the conceptions of the flesh and uphold the interests of the flesh—but God’s words will enlighten and illuminate you within, and at this time it is up to you whether you follow God or follow Satan. God asks people to put the truth into practice primarily to deal with the things inside them, to deal with their thoughts, and their conceptions that aren’t after God’s heart. The Holy Spirit touches people inside, and carries out His work within them, and so behind everything that happens is a battle: Every time people put the truth into practice, or put the love of God into practice, there is a great battle, and though all may seem well with their flesh, in the depths of their hearts a life-and-death battle will, in fact, be going on—and only after this intense battle, after a tremendous amount of reflection, can victory or defeat be decided. One does not know whether to laugh or cry. Because many of the motivations within people are wrong, or else because much of God’s work is at odds with their conceptions, when people put the truth into practice a great battle is waged behind the scenes. Having put this truth into practice, behind the scenes people will have shed countless tears of sadness before finally making up their mind to satisfy God. It is because of this battle that people endure suffering and refinement; this is true suffering. When the battle comes upon you, if you are able to truly stand on the side of God, you will be able to satisfy God. Suffering in the course of practicing the truth is inevitable; if, when they put the truth into practice, everything within them were right, then they would not need to be made perfect by God, and there would be no battle, and they would not suffer. It is because there are many things within people that are not fit for use by God, and much of the rebellious disposition of the flesh, that people need to learn the lesson of rebelling against the flesh more profoundly. This is what God calls the suffering that He asked man to undergo with Him. When you encounter difficulties, hurry up and pray to God: O God! I wish to satisfy You, I wish to endure the final hardship to satisfy Your heart, and regardless of how great the setbacks I encounter, still I must satisfy You. Even if I have to give up my whole life, still I must satisfy You! With this resolve, when you pray thus you will be able to stand firm in your testimony. Each time they put the truth into practice, each time they undergo trials, each time they are tried, and each time God’s work comes upon them, people endure extreme pain. All of this is a test for people, and so within all of them there is a battle. This is the actual price that they pay. Reading more of God’s words and running about more is somewhat of a price. It is what people ought to do, it is their duty, and the responsibility that they should fulfill, but people must put aside that within them which needs to be put aside. If you don't, then no matter how great your external suffering, and how much you run around, all will be in vain! Which is to say, only the changes within you can determine whether your external hardship is of value. When your internal disposition has changed and you have put the truth into practice, then all your external suffering will gain God's approval; if there has been no change in your internal disposition, then no matter how much suffering you endure or how much you run about on the outside, there will be no approval from God—and hardship that is not confirmed by God is in vain. Thus, whether the price you have paid counts is determined by whether or not there has been a change in you, and by whether or not you put the truth into practice and rebel against your own motivations and conceptions to attain the satisfaction of God's will, the knowledge of God, and loyalty to God. No matter how much you run about, if you have never rebelled against your own motivations, only seek external actions and fervency, and never pay any attention to your life, then your hardship will have been in vain. If, in a certain environment, you have something you want to say, but inside you don't feel it's right, that it does not benefit your brothers and sisters, and may hurt them, then you won't say it, preferring to be pained within, for these words are incapable of satisfying God's will. At this time, there will be a battle inside you, but you will be willing to suffer pain and give up that which you love, you will be willing to endure this hardship to satisfy God, and although you will suffer pain inside, you will not pander to the flesh, and God's heart shall have been satisfied, and so you will also be comforted inside. This is truly paying a price, and is the price desired by God. If you practice in this way, God will surely bless you; if you can't achieve this, then no matter how much you understand, or how well you can speak, it will all be for nothing! If, on the road to loving God, you are able to stand on the side of God when He does battle with Satan, and you do not turn back to Satan, then you will have achieved the love of God, and you will have stood firm in your testimony.

In every step of work that God does within people, externally it appears to be interactions between people, as if born of human arrangements, or from human interference. But behind the scenes, every step of work, and everything that happens, is a wager made by Satan before God, and requires people to stand firm in their testimony to God. Take when Job was tried, for example: Behind the scenes, Satan was making a bet with God, and what happened to Job was the deeds of men, and the interference of men. Behind every step that God does in you is Satan's wager with God—behind it all is a battle. For example, if you are prejudiced toward your brothers and sisters, you will have words that you want to say—words that you feel may be displeasing to God—but it will be hard for you inside, and at this moment, a battle will commence within you: Do I speak or not? This is the battle. Thus, in everything there is a battle, and when there is a battle within you, thanks to your actual cooperation and actual suffering God works within you. Ultimately, inside you are able to put the matter aside and the anger is naturally extinguished. Such is the effect of your cooperation with God. Everything you do requires you to pay a certain price in your efforts. Without actual hardship, you can't satisfy God, it does not even come close to satisfying God, and they are nothing but empty slogans! Can these empty slogans satisfy God? When God and Satan do battle in the spiritual realm, how should you satisfy God, and how should you stand firm in your testimony to Him? You should know that everything that happens to you is a great trial and the time when God needs you to bear testimony. Externally, they might not seem like a big deal, but when these things happen they show whether or not you love God. If you do, you will be able to stand firm in your testimony to Him, and if you have not put the love of Him into practice, this shows you are not someone who puts the truth into practice, that you are without the truth, and without life, that you are chaff! Everything that happens to people is when God needs them to stand firm in their testimony to Him. Nothing major has happened to you at the moment, and you do not bear great testimony, but every detail of your daily life relates to the testimony to God. If you can win the admiration of your brothers and sisters, your family members, and everyone around you; if, one day, the unbelievers come, and admire all that you do, and see that all that God does is wonderful, then you will have borne testimony. Although you have no insight and your caliber is poor, through God's perfection of you, you are able to satisfy Him and be mindful of His will. Others will see what great work He has done in people of the poorest caliber. People come to know God, and become overcomers before Satan and loyal to God to an extent. So none will have more backbone than this group of people. This will be the greatest testimony. Although you are incapable of doing great work, you are able to satisfy God. Others can't put aside their conceptions, but you can; others can't bear testimony to God during their actual experiences, but you can use your actual stature and actions to repay God's love and bear resounding testimony to Him. Only this counts as actually loving God. If you are incapable of this, then you do not bear testimony among your family members, among your brothers and sisters, or before the people of the world. If you can't bear testimony before Satan, Satan will laugh at you, it will treat you as a joke, as a plaything, it will often make a fool of you, and drive you insane. In the future, great trials may befall you—but today, if you love God with a true heart, and if regardless of how great the trials ahead, irrespective of what happens to you, you are able to stand firm in your testimony, and able to satisfy God, then your heart will be comforted, and you will be unafraid no matter how great the trials you encounter in the future. You can't see what will happen in the future; you can only satisfy God during today's circumstances. You are incapable of doing any great work, and should focus on satisfying God by experiencing His words in real life, and bearing strong and resounding testimony that brings shame upon Satan. Although your flesh will remain unsatisfied and have suffered, you will have satisfied God and brought shame upon Satan. If you always practice in this way, God will open up a path before you. When, one day, a great trial comes, others will fall down, but you will still be able to stand firm: Because of the price you have paid, God will protect you so you can stand firm and not fall down. If, ordinarily, you are able to put the truth into practice and satisfy God with a heart that truly loves Him, then God will surely protect you during future trials. Though you are foolish and of little stature and poor caliber, God will not discriminate against you. It depends on whether your motivations are right. Today, you are able to satisfy God, in which you are attentive to the smallest detail, you satisfy God in all things, you have a heart that truly loves God, you give your true heart to God, and although there are some things that you can't understand, you can come before God to rectify your motivations, and seek God's will, and you do everything needed to satisfy God. Perhaps, your brothers and sisters will abandon you, but your heart will be satisfying God, and you will not covet the pleasures of the flesh. If you always practice in this way, you will be protected when great trials come upon you.

What internal state in people are these trials aimed at? They are targeted at the rebellious disposition in people that is incapable of satisfying God. There is much that is impure within people, and much that is hypocritical, and so God subjects them to trials in order to purify them. But if, today, you are able to satisfy Him, then the trials of the future will be a perfection for you. If, today, you are unable to satisfy Him, then trials of the future will tempt you, and you will unwittingly fall down, and at that time you won't be able to help yourself, for you can't keep up with God's work, and are not possessed of real stature. And so, if you wish to be able to stand firm in the future, better satisfy God, and follow Him to the very end, today you must build a strong foundation, you must satisfy God by putting the truth into practice in all things, and be mindful of His will. If you always practice in this way, there will be a foundation within you, and God will inspire in you a heart that loves Him, and He will give you faith. One day, when a trial truly befalls you, you may well suffer some pain, and feel aggrieved to a certain point, and suffer crushing grief, as if you'd died—but your love of God will not change, and will become even deeper. Such are the blessings of God. If you are able to accept all that God says and does today with a heart of obedience, then you will surely be blessed by God, and so you will be someone who is blessed by God, and receives His promise. If, today, you do not practice, when trials befall you one day you will be without faith or a loving heart, and at that time the trial will become temptation; you will be plunged amid Satan's temptation and will have no means of escape. Today, you may be able to stand firm when a small trial befalls you, but you won't necessarily be able to stand firm when a major trial befalls you one day. Some people are conceited, and think that they're near perfect already. If you don't go deeper at such times, and remain complacent, then you'll be in danger. Today, God does not do the work of greater trials, in appearance everything seems fine, but when God tries you, you will discover that you are too lacking, for your stature is too small, and you are incapable of enduring great trials. If, today, you do not forge ahead, if you stay in the same place, then when the great wind comes you will fall. You should often look at how small your stature is; only in this way will you make progress. If it is only during trials that you see that your stature is so small, that your willpower is so weak, that too little within you is real, and that you are inadequate for God's will—and if you only realize these things then, it will be too late.

If you do not know God's disposition, then you will inevitably fall during trials, because you are unaware of how God makes people perfect, and by what means He makes them perfect, and when God’s trials come upon you and they don’t match your conceptions, you will be unable to stand firm. God’s true love is His entire disposition, and when God’s entire disposition is shown to you, what does this bring to your flesh? When God’s righteous disposition is shown to you, your flesh will inevitably suffer much pain. If you don’t suffer this pain, then you cannot be made perfect by God, nor will you be able to devote true love to God. If God makes you perfect, He will surely show His entire disposition to you. From the time of creation until today, God has never shown His entire disposition—but during the last days He reveals it to this group of people whom He has predestined and selected, and by making people perfect He lays bare His dispositions, through which He makes complete a group of people. Such is God’s true love for people. Experiencing God’s true love for them requires that people endure extreme pain, and pay a high price. Only after this will they be gained by God and be able to give their true love back to God, and only then will God’s heart be satisfied. If people wish to be made perfect by God, and if they wish to carry out His will, and fully give their true love to God, then they must experience much suffering and many torments from the circumstances, to suffer pain worse than death, ultimately they will be forced to give their true heart back to God. Whether or not someone truly loves God is revealed during hardship and refinement. God purifies people’s love, and this is also only achieved amid hardship and refinement.

A BRIEF TALK ABOUT “THE MILLENNIAL KINGDOM HAS ARRIVED”

How do you see the vision of the Millennial Kingdom? Some people think about it a lot, and say that the Millennial Kingdom will last for a thousand years on earth, so if the older members of the church are unmarried, do they have to get married? My family has no money, should I start making money? ... What is the Millennial Kingdom? Do you know? People are purblind, and suffer a great ordeal. In fact, the Millennial Kingdom has yet to officially arrive. During the stage of making people perfect, the Millennial Kingdom is merely a microcosm; at the time of the Millennial Kingdom spoken of by God, man will have been made perfect. Previously, it was said that people would be like saints and stand firm in the land of Sinim. Only when people are made perfect—when they become the saints spoken of by God—will the Millennial Kingdom have arrived. When God makes people perfect, He purifies them, and the purer they are the more they are made perfect by God. When the impurity, rebelliousness, opposition, and things of the flesh within you are expelled, when you have been purified, then you will be beloved by God (and in other words, you will be a saint); when you have been made perfect by God and become a saint, you will be in the Millennial Kingdom. Now is the Age of Kingdom. In the Age of Millennial Kingdom people will depend on the words of God to live, and all nations will come under God's name, and all come to read God's words. At that time some will call by telephone, some will fax ... they will use every means to access God's words, and you, too, will come under God's words. All this is what happens after people are made perfect. Today, people are made perfect, refined, enlightened, and guided through words; this is the Age of Kingdom, it is the stage of people being made perfect, and it has no connection to the Age of Millennial Kingdom. During the Age of Millennial Kingdom, people will have already been made perfect and the corrupt disposition within them will have been made pure. At that time, the words spoken by God will guide people step by step, and reveal all of the mysteries of God's work from the time of creation until today, and His words will tell people of God's actions in every age and every day, how He guides people inside, the work He does in the spiritual realm, and will tell man of the dynamics of the spiritual realm. Only then will it truly be the Age of Word; now is merely a microcosm. If people are not made perfect and purified, they will have no way of living a thousand years on earth, and their flesh will inevitably decay; if people are purified inside, and they are no longer of Satan and the flesh, then they will remain alive on earth. In this stage you are still purblind, and all that you experience is loving God and bearing Him testimony for every day you live on earth.

"The Millennial Kingdom Has Arrived" is a prophecy, it is analogous to the foretelling of a prophet, one in which God prophesies what will happen in the future. The words that God speaks in the future and the words that He speaks today are not the same: The words of the future will guide the age, whereas the words He speaks today make people perfect, refine them, and deal with them. The Age of Word in the future is different from the Age of Word today. Today, all words spoken by God—regardless of the means by which He does so—are, in sum, in order to make people perfect, to purify that which is dirty within them, and to make them holy, and righteous before God. The words spoken today and the words spoken in the future are two separate things. The words spoken in the Age of Kingdom are to make people enter into all training, to bring people onto the correct track in everything, to expel all that is impure in them. Such is what God does in this age: He creates a foundation of His words in every person, He makes His words the life of every person, and He uses His words to enlighten and guide them inside at every moment, and when they are not mindful of God’s will, God’s words will be inside them to reproach and discipline them. The words of today are to be the life of man, they directly provide all that man needs, all that you lack inside is provided for by God’s words, and all those who accept God’s words are enlightened by eating and drinking His words. The words spoken by God in the future guide the people of the entire universe; today, these words are only spoken in China, and they do not represent those spoken throughout the entire universe. God will only speak to the entire universe when the Millennial Kingdom comes. Know that the words spoken by God today are all to make people perfect; the words spoken by God during this stage are in order to provide for people’s needs, not in order to allow you to know mysteries or see the miracles of God. That He speaks through many means is in order to provide for people’s needs. The Age of Millennial Kingdom has yet to arrive—the Age of Millennial Kingdom that is spoken of is the day of God’s glory. After Jesus’ work in Judea had been completed, God transferred His work to the China mainland and created another plan. He does another part of His work in you, He does the work of making people perfect with words, and uses words to cause people to suffer much pain as well as gain much of God’s grace. This stage of work will create a group of overcomers, and after He has made this group of overcomers, they will be able to testify to His deeds, they will be able to live out reality, and actually satisfy Him and be loyal to Him unto death, and in this way God will be glorified. When God is glorified, when He has made this group of people perfect, will be the Age of Millennial Kingdom.

Jesus was on earth for thirty-three and a half years, He came to do the work of crucifixion, and through the crucifixion God gained one part of glory. When God came in the flesh He was able to be humble and hidden, and could endure tremendous suffering. Although He was

God Himself, He still endured every humiliation, and every revilement, and He endured great pain in being nailed to the cross so as to complete the work of redemption. After this stage of work was concluded, although people saw that God had gained great glory, this was not the entirety of His glory; it was only one part of His glory, which He had gained from Jesus. Although Jesus was able to endure every hardship, to be humble and hidden, to be crucified for God, God only gained one part of His glory, and His glory was gained in Israel. God still has another part of glory: coming to earth to actually work and make perfect a group of people. During Jesus' stage of work, He did some supernatural things, but that stage of work was by no means only in order to perform the signs and wonders. It was primarily to show that Jesus could suffer, and be crucified for God, that Jesus was able to suffer tremendous pain because He loved God, and that although God abandoned Him, He was still willing to sacrifice His life for God's will. After God had completed His work in Israel and Jesus was nailed to the cross, God was glorified, and God had borne testimony before Satan. You neither know nor have seen how God has become flesh in China, so how can you see that God has been glorified? When God does much work of conquest in you, and you stand firm, then this work of God is successful, and this is part of God's glory. You see only this, and you have yet to be made perfect by God, have yet to give your heart entirely to God. You have yet to entirely see this glory; you only see that God has already conquered your heart, that you can never leave Him, and will follow God to the very end and your heart will not change. Thus is the glory of God. In what do you see God's glory? In the effects of His work in people. People see that God is so lovely, they have God in their hearts, and are unwilling to leave Him, and this is God's glory. When the strength of the brothers and sisters of the churches arises, and they can love God from their hearts, see the supreme might of the work done by God, the incomparable might of His words, when they see that His words carry authority and that He can embark upon His work in the ghost town of the China mainland, when, though people are weak, their hearts bow down before God and they are willing to accept God's words, and when, although they are weak and unfit, they are able to see that God's words are so lovable, and so worthy of their cherishment, then this is the glory of God. When the day comes on which people are made perfect by God, and are able to surrender before Him, and can completely obey God, and leave their prospects and fate in the hands of God, then the second part of God's glory will have been entirely gained. Which is to say, when the work of the practical God has been entirely completed, His work on the China mainland will come to an end; in other words, when those who were predestined and chosen by God have been made perfect, God will be glorified. God said that He has brought the second part of His glory to the East, yet this is invisible to the naked eye. God has brought His work to the East: He has already come to the East, and this is God's glory. Today, although His work has yet to be completed, because God has decided to work, it shall surely be accomplished. God has decided He shall complete this work in China, and He has resolved to make you perfect. Thus He gives you no way out—He has already conquered your hearts, and you have to go on whether you want to or not, and when you are gained by God, God is glorified. Today, God has yet to be completely glorified, because you have yet to be made perfect, and although your hearts have returned to God, there are still many weaknesses in your flesh, you are incapable of satisfying God, you are unable to be mindful of God's will, and there are many negative things that must be rid from you.

ONLY THOSE WHO KNOW GOD CAN BEAR TESTIMONY TO GOD

It is Heaven's law and earth's principle to believe in God and know God, and today—during an age when God incarnate personally does His work—is a particularly good time to know God. Satisfying God is achieved upon the foundation of understanding God's will, and to understand God's will, it is necessary to know God. This knowledge of God is the vision that a believer must have; it is the basis of man's belief in God. If man does not have this knowledge, then his belief in God is vague, and lies in empty theory. Though it is the resolution of people like this to follow God, they obtain nothing. All those who obtain nothing in this stream are the ones who will be eliminated, and they are the people who are merely doing the bare minimum. Whichever step of God's work you experience, you should be accompanied by a mighty vision. Without such a vision, it would be difficult for you to accept each step of new work, for man is incapable of imagining the new work of God, it is beyond man's conception. And so without a shepherd to tend to man, without a shepherd to fellowship about the visions, man is incapable of accepting this new work. If man cannot receive the visions, then he cannot receive the new work of God, and if man cannot obey God's new work, then man is incapable of understanding God's will, and so his knowledge of God amounts to nothing. Before man carries out the words of God, he must know the words of God, that is, understand God's will; only in this way can God's words be carried out accurately and according to God's heart. This must be possessed by everyone who seeks the truth, and is the process that must be experienced by everyone who tries to know God. The process of knowing the words of God is the process of knowing God, and also the process of knowing the work of God. And so, knowing the visions not only refers to knowing the humanity of God incarnate, but also includes knowing the words and work of God. From the words of God people come to understand God's will, and from the work of God they come to know God's disposition and what God is. Belief in God is the first step to knowing God. The process of advancing from the initial belief in God to the most profound belief in God is the process of knowing God, and the process of experiencing the work of God. If you only believe in God for the sake of believing in God, and do not believe in God in order to know God, then there is no reality to your belief, and it cannot become pure—of this there is no doubt. If, during the process by which he experiences God, man gradually comes to know God, then his disposition will gradually change, and his belief will become increasingly true. In this way, when man achieves success in belief in God, he will completely gain God. God went to such great lengths to become flesh for the second time and personally do His work so that man would be able to know Him, and would be able to see Him. Knowing God^[a] is the final effect to be achieved at the end of God's work; it is God's final requirement of mankind. He does this for the sake of His final testimony, and so that man may finally and completely turn to Him. Man can only love God by knowing God, and to love God he must know God. No matter how he seeks, or what he seeks to gain, he must be able to achieve the knowledge of God. Only in this way can man satisfy God's heart. Only by knowing God can man truly believe in God, and only by knowing God can he truly revere and obey God. Those who do not know God shall never truly obey and revere God. Knowing God includes knowing God's disposition, understanding God's will, and knowing what God is. Yet whichever aspect of knowing God it is, each requires man to pay a price, and requires the will to obey, without which no one would be able to follow to the end. The work of God is too incompatible with the conceptions of man, God's disposition and what God is are too difficult for man to know, and all that God says and does is too incomprehensible to man; if man wishes to follow God, but is unwilling to obey God, then man will gain nothing. From the creation of the world until today, God has done much work that is incomprehensible to man and which man has found hard to accept, and God has said much that makes the conceptions of man difficult to heal. Yet He has never ceased His work because man has too many difficulties; He has carried on working and speaking, and even though great numbers of "warriors" have fallen by the wayside, He is still doing His work, and continues to choose group after group of people who are willing to obey His new work. He does not pity those fallen "heroes," but instead treasures those who accept His new work and words. But to what end does He work in this way, step-by-step? Why is He always eliminating and choosing people? Why does He always employ such method? The aim of His work is for man to know Him, and thus be gained by Him. The principle of His work is to work on those who are able to obey the work He does today, and not to work on those who obey His past work, but oppose His work of today. This is the very reason why He has eliminated so many people.

The effects of the lesson of knowing God cannot be achieved in one or two days: Man must accumulate experiences, undergo suffering, and have true obedience. First of all, start from the work and words of God. You must understand what knowing God includes, how to achieve the knowledge of God, and how to see God during your experiences. This is what everyone must do when they have yet to know God. No one can grasp the work and words of God straight away, and no one can achieve a knowledge of God's entirety in a short time. What's required is the necessary process of experience, without which no one would be able to know God or truly follow God. The more work that God does, the more that man knows Him. The more at odds the work of God is with the conceptions of man, the more man's knowledge of Him is renewed and deepened. If the work of God were to remain forever unchanged, then man would have but a small knowledge of God. From the creation of the world until today, you must know clearly the visions of what God did during the Age of Law, what He did during the Age of Grace, and what He does during the Age of Kingdom. You must know the work of God. Only after following Jesus did Peter gradually come to know much of the work the Spirit did in Jesus. He said, “Relying on the experiences of man is not enough to achieve a complete knowledge of God; there must be many new things from the work of God to help us know God.” At the beginning, Peter believed that Jesus was sent by God, like an apostle, and he did not see Jesus as Christ. While Peter was called to follow^[a] Jesus, Jesus asked him, “Simon, son of Jonah, will you follow Me?” Peter said, “I must follow he who is sent by the heavenly Father. I must acknowledge he who is chosen by the Holy Spirit. I will follow You.” From his words, it can be seen that Peter simply had no knowledge of Jesus; he had experienced the words of God, had dealt with himself, and had suffered hardship for God, yet he did not know the work of God. After a period of experience, Peter saw in Jesus many of the deeds of God, saw the loveliness of God, and saw much of God’s being in Jesus. So too did he see that the words of Jesus could not have been spoken by man, and that the work Jesus did could not have been done by man. In Jesus’ words and actions, furthermore, Peter saw much of the wisdom of God, and much divine work. During his experiences, he did not merely come to know himself, but also focused on observing the actions of Jesus, from which he discovered many new things; namely, that there were many expressions of the practical God in the work that God did through Jesus, and that Jesus’ words, actions, the ways He shepherded the churches and the work He carried out differed from any ordinary man. Thus, from Jesus he learned many lessons that he was supposed to learn, and by the time Jesus was about to be nailed to the cross, he had gained some knowledge of Jesus—a knowledge which was the basis of his lifelong loyalty to Jesus, and of his crucifixion upside down for the sake of Jesus. He was possessed of some conceptions, and did not have a clear knowledge of Jesus at the beginning, but such things are inevitably found in corrupt man. When He was about to depart, Jesus told Peter that His crucifixion was the work He had come to do; He must be forsaken by the age, this impure old age must nail Him to the cross, and He had come to complete the work of redemption, and, having completed this work, His ministry would have come to an end. Upon hearing this, Peter was beset with sorrow, and felt even more devoted to Jesus. When Jesus was nailed to the cross, Peter wept bitterly in private. Prior to this, he had asked Jesus, "My Lord! You say You are going to be crucified. After You're gone, when will we see You again?" Is there not mixture in the words that he spoke? Are there not his conceptions? In his heart, he knew that Jesus had come to complete part of God's work, and that after Jesus left, the Spirit would be with him; although He would be nailed to the cross and ascend to heaven, the Spirit of God would be with him. At the time, he had some knowledge of Jesus, and knew that He had been sent by the Spirit of God, that the Spirit of God was within Him, and that Jesus was God Himself, He was Christ. Yet because of his love for Jesus, and because of the weakness of man, still Peter said such words. If you can observe and undergo meticulous experiences in every step of God's work, then you will be able to gradually discover the loveliness of God. And what was the vision of Paul? When Jesus appeared to him, Paul said, "My Lord! Who are You?" Jesus said, "I am Jesus whom you persecute." This was Paul's vision. Peter used the resurrection of Jesus and His appearance for 40 days, and Jesus' teachings during His lifetime, as his vision until he came to the end of his journey.

Man experiences God, knows himself, rids himself of his corrupt disposition, and seeks a growth in life all for the sake of knowing God. If you only seek to know yourself and deal with your own corrupt disposition, and have no knowledge of what work God does to man, of how great His salvation is, or of how you experience God and witness the deeds of God, then your experience is fatuous. If you think that being able to put the truth into practice, and being able to endure means that one's life has grown up, then this means that you still do not understand the true meaning of life, and still do not understand God's purpose in working man. One day, when you are in the religious churches, among members of the Repentance Church or the Life Church, you will encounter many devout people whose prayers contain visions, and who feel touched and have words to guide them in their pursuit of life. What's more, in many matters they are able to endure, and forsake themselves, not led by the flesh. At that time, you won't be able to tell the difference: You will believe that everything they do is right, is the natural expression of life, and what a pity it is that the name that they believe in is wrong. Are such beliefs not foolish? Why is it said that many people have no life? Because they do not know God, and thus it is said that they have no God, and have no life. If your belief in God has reached a certain point where you are capable of thoroughly knowing the deeds of God, the reality of God, and every stage of God's work, then you are possessed of the truth. If you do not know the work and disposition of God, then your experience is still lacking. How Jesus carried out that stage of His work, how this stage is being carried out, how God did His work in the Age of Grace and what work was done, what work is being done in this stage—if you do not have a thorough knowledge of these things, then you will never feel assured and secure. If, after a period of experience, you are able to know the work done by God and every step of God's work, and have a thorough knowledge of the aims of God's words, and why so many words spoken by Him have not been fulfilled, then you can rest easy and boldly pursue the road ahead, free from worry or refinement. You should see what God uses to achieve so much work of His. He uses the words He speaks, refining man and transforming man's conceptions through many kinds of words. All the suffering that you have endured, all the refinement that you have experienced, the dealing that you have accepted within you, the enlightenment that you have experienced—they have all been achieved using the words spoken by God. Because of what does man follow God? Because of the words of God! The words of God are deeply mysterious, and can touch man's heart, reveal things deep within man's heart, can make him know things that happened in the past, and allow him to see into the future. And so man endures suffering because of God's words, and is made perfect because of God's words, and only then does man follow God. What man should do in this stage is accept the words of God, and regardless of whether he is made perfect, or refined, what's key are the words of God; this is the work of God, and is the vision that man should know today.

How does God make man perfect? What is the disposition of God? And what is contained within His disposition? These must all be understood; this is spreading the name of God, it is bearing testimony to God, and exalting God, and man will ultimately achieve changes in his life disposition upon the foundation of knowing God. The more dealing and refinement that man undergoes, the greater his strength, and the more numerous the steps of God's work, the more that man is made perfect. Today, in man's experience, each step of God's work strikes back at the conceptions of man, and every step is unimaginable by man's intellect, and beyond his expectations. God provides all that is needed by man, and in every respect it is at odds with the conceptions of man, and when you are weak, God utters His words; only in this way can He provide your life. By striking back at your conceptions, you come to accept the dealing of God, and only in this way can you get rid of your corruption. Today, in one respect God incarnate works in divinity, and in another respect He works in normal humanity. You should not deny any work that God does, and you should obey whatever God says or does in normal humanity, and no matter how normal He is, you should obey and understand. Only once you have actual experience can you know for sure that He is God, and stop producing conceptions, and follow Him to the end. There is wisdom to God's work, and He knows how man can stand testimony to Him. He knows where man's vital weakness is, and the words He speaks can strike you at your vital weakness, but He also uses His majestic and wise words to make you stand testimony to Him. Such are the miraculous deeds of God. The work done by God is unimaginable by the intellect of man. The judgment of God reveals the kinds of corruption that man, being of the flesh, is possessed of, and what things are the essence of man, and it leaves man with nowhere to hide from his shame.

God does the work of judgment and chastisement so that man may know Him, and for the sake of His testimony. Without His judgment of man's corrupt disposition, man would not know His righteous disposition that allows no offense, and could not turn his old knowledge of God into a new one. For the sake of His testimony, and for the sake of His management, He makes His entirety public, thus enabling man to achieve the knowledge of God, and change his disposition, and bear resounding testimony to God through God's public appearance. Change is achieved in the disposition of man through different kinds of God's work; without such changes in man's disposition, man would be unable to bear testimony to God, and could not be after God's heart. Changes in man's disposition signify that man has freed himself from Satan's bondage, has freed himself from the influence of darkness, and has truly become a model and specimen of God's work, has truly become a witness of God and someone who is after God's heart. Today, God incarnate has come to do His work on earth, and He requires that man achieve knowledge of Him, obedience to Him, testimony to Him—know His practical and normal work, obey all of His words and work which do not accord with the conceptions of man, and bear testimony to all His work of saving man, and all the deeds He does that conquer man. Those who bear testimony to God must have a knowledge of God; only this kind of testimony is accurate, and real, and only this kind of testimony can shame Satan. God uses those who have come to know Him through undergoing His judgment and chastisement, dealing and pruning, to bear testimony to Him. He uses those who have been corrupted by Satan to bear testimony to Him, and so too does He use those whose disposition has changed, and who have thus gained His blessings, to bear testimony to Him. He does not need man to praise Him in word only, nor does He need the praise and testimony of the ilk of Satan, who have not been saved by Him. Only those who know God are qualified to bear testimony to God, and only those whose disposition has changed are qualified to bear testimony to God, and God will not allow man to intentionally bring shame upon His name.

HOW PETER CAME TO KNOW JESUS

During the time that Peter spent with Jesus, he saw many lovable characteristics in Jesus, many aspects worthy of emulation, and many which supplied him. Although Peter saw the being of God in Jesus in many ways, and saw many lovable qualities, at first he did not know Jesus. Peter began following Jesus when he was 20 years old, and continued so for six years. During that time, he never came to know Jesus, but was willing to follow Him purely out of admiration for Him. When Jesus first called to him on the shores of the Sea of Galilee, He asked: “Simon, son of Jonah, will you follow Me?” Peter said: “I must follow he who is sent by the heavenly Father. I must acknowledge he who is chosen by the Holy Spirit. I will follow You.” At the time, Peter had heard tell of a man named Jesus, the greatest of the prophets, God’s beloved Son, and Peter was constantly hoping to find Him, hoping for a chance to see Him (because that is how he was then led by the Holy Spirit). Although he had never seen Him and had only heard rumors about Him, gradually a yearning and adoration for Jesus grew in his heart, and he often yearned to one day look upon Jesus. And how did Jesus call upon Peter? He too had heard tell of a man called Peter, and it was not that the Holy Spirit instructed Him: “Go to the Sea of Galilee, where there is one called Simon, son of Jonah.” Jesus heard someone say that there was one called Simon, son of Jonah, and that people had heard his sermon, that he too preached the gospel of the kingdom of heaven, and that the people who heard him were all moved to tears. After hearing this, Jesus followed that person, and made for the Sea of Galilee; when Peter accepted Jesus’ call, he followed Him.

During his time following Jesus, he had many opinions of Him and always judged Him from his own perspective. Although he had a certain degree of understanding of the Spirit, Peter was not very enlightened, hence his words when he said: “I must follow he who is sent by the heavenly Father. I must acknowledge he who is chosen by the Holy Spirit.” He did not understand the things Jesus did and received no enlightenment. After following Him for some time he grew interested in what He did and said, and in Jesus Himself. He came to feel that Jesus inspired both affection and respect; he liked to associate with Him and stay beside Him, and listening to Jesus’ words rendered him supply and help. Over the time he followed Jesus, Peter observed and took to heart everything about His life: His actions, words, movements, and expressions. He gained a deep understanding that Jesus was not like ordinary men. Although His human appearance was exceedingly ordinary, He was full of love, compassion, and tolerance for man. Everything He did or said was of great aid to others, and by His side Peter saw and learned things he had never seen or had before. He saw that although Jesus had neither a grand stature nor unusual humanity, He had a truly extraordinary and uncommon air about Him. Although Peter couldn’t fully explain it, he could see that Jesus acted different from everyone else, for He did things far different from that done by ordinary man. From his time in contact with Jesus, Peter also realized that His character was different from that of an ordinary man. He always acted steadily and never with haste, never exaggerated nor underplayed a subject, and conducted His life in a way that was both normal and admirable. In conversation, Jesus was elegant and graceful, open and cheerful yet serene, and never lost His dignity in the execution of His work. Peter saw that Jesus was sometimes taciturn, yet other times talked incessantly. He was sometimes so happy that He became agile and lively like a dove, and yet sometimes so sad that He did not talk at all, as if He were a weather-beaten mother. At times He was filled with anger, like a brave soldier charging off to kill enemies, and sometimes even like a roaring lion. Sometimes He laughed; other times He prayed and wept. No matter how Jesus acted, Peter grew to have boundless love and respect for Him. Jesus' laughter filled him up with happiness, His sorrow plunged him into grief, His anger frightened him, while His mercy, forgiveness, and strictness made him come to truly love Jesus, developing a true reverence and longing for Him. Of course, Peter only gradually came to realize all of this once he had lived alongside Jesus for a few years.

Peter was a particularly sensible man, born with natural intelligence, yet he did a good many foolish things when following Jesus. At the very start, he had some notions about Jesus. He asked: "People say You are a prophet, so when You were eight and old enough to understand things, did You know You were God? Did You know You were conceived by the Holy Spirit?" Jesus replied: "No, I didn't! Don't I seem just like a very ordinary person to you? I am the same as anyone else. The person the Father sends is a regular person, not an extraordinary one. And though the work I do represents My heavenly Father, My image, My person, and My flesh cannot fully represent My heavenly Father, only one part of Him. Although I came from the Spirit, I am still a normal person, and My Father sent Me on earth as a regular person, not an extraordinary one." Only when Peter heard this did he gain a slight understanding of Jesus. And it was only after he had gone through countless hours of Jesus' work, of His teaching, His shepherding, and His sustaining, that he gained a much deeper understanding. In His 30th year, Jesus told Peter of His upcoming crucifixion, that He had come to do the work of crucifixion to redeem all mankind. He also told him that three days after the crucifixion, the Son of man would rise again, and once risen would appear to the people for 40 days. Peter was sad on hearing these words, but grew ever closer to Jesus as he took His words to heart.

After experiencing for some time, Peter came to realize that everything Jesus did was of the being of God, and he came to think that Jesus was exceptionally lovable. Only when he came to have this understanding did the Holy Spirit enlighten him from within. Then Jesus turned to His disciples and other followers and asked: "John, who do you say that I am?" John replied: "You are Moses." He then turned to Luke: "And you, Luke, who do you say that I am?" Luke replied: "You are the greatest of the prophets." He then asked a sister: "Who do you say that I am?" The sister replied: "You are the greatest of prophets who speaks many words from everlasting to everlasting. No one's prophecies are as great as Yours, nor anyone's wisdom more profound; You are a prophet." Then Jesus turned to Peter and asked: "Peter, who do you say that I am?" Peter replied: "You are the Christ, the Son of the living God. You come from heaven, You are not of the earth, You are not the same as God's creations. We are on earth and You are here with us, but You are of heaven, You are not of the world, and You are not of the earth." It was through his experience that the Holy Spirit enlightened him, which enabled him to come to this understanding. After this enlightenment, he admired everything Jesus had done even more, thought of Him as even more lovable, and was always in his heart reluctant to be parted with Jesus. So, the first time Jesus revealed Himself to Peter after He was crucified and resurrected Peter cried with exceptional happiness: "Lord! You are risen!" Then, weeping, he caught an extremely large fish, cooked it and served it to Jesus. Jesus smiled, but did not speak. Although Peter knew Jesus had been resurrected, he did not understand the mystery of it. When he gave Jesus the fish to eat, Jesus did not refuse and yet did not speak or sit down to eat, but instead suddenly vanished. This was an enormous shock to Peter, and only then did he understand that Jesus resurrected was different from the Jesus before. Once he realized this, Peter was grieved, but also gained comfort from knowing that the Lord had completed His task. He knew that Jesus had completed His task, that His time staying with man was over, and that man would have to walk his own path from then on. Jesus had once told him: "You too must drink from the bitter cup I have drunk from (this is what He said after the resurrection), you too must walk the path I have walked, you must lay down your life for Me." Unlike now, work at that time did not take the form of a face-to-face conversation. During the Age of Grace, the work of the Holy Spirit was very hidden, and Peter suffered through much hardship, and would sometimes reach the point of exclaiming: "God! I have nothing but this life. Although it is not worth much to You, I wish to dedicate it to You. Although men are unworthy to love You, and their love and hearts are worthless, I believe You can see the intent in men's hearts. And even though the bodies of men do not meet with Your acceptance, I wish for You to accept my heart." Upon uttering these prayers he would receive encouragement, especially when he prayed: "I'll dedicate my heart wholly to God. Even though I'm unable to do anything for God, I'll loyally satisfy God and devote myself to Him wholeheartedly. I believe God must look upon my heart." He said: "I ask for nothing in my life but that my thoughts of love for God and my heart's desire be accepted by God. I was with the Lord Jesus for so long, yet I never loved Him, this is my biggest debt. Even though I stayed with Him, I did not know Him, and even spoke irreverent words behind His back. Thinking of these things makes me feel even more indebted to the Lord Jesus." He always prayed in this manner. He said: "I am less than dust. I can do nothing but dedicate this loyal heart to God."

There was a climax in Peter's experiences, when his body was almost totally broken, but Jesus gave him encouragement within. And He appeared to him once. When Peter was in tremendous suffering and his heart was broken, Jesus instructed him: "You were with Me on earth, and I was here with you. And though before we were together in heaven, it is, after all, of the spiritual world. Now I am returned to the spiritual world, and you are on earth. For I am not of earth, and though you too are not of earth, you have to fulfill your function on earth. As you are a servant, you must do your duty to the best of your ability." Peter was comforted, having heard he could return to God's side. When Peter was in such agony that he was almost bedridden, he felt remorse to the point of saying: "I am so corrupted, I am not able to satisfy God." Jesus appeared to him and said: "Peter, could it be that you have forgotten the resolution you once made before Me? Have you really forgotten everything I said? Have you forgotten the resolution you made to Me?" Peter saw that it was Jesus and rose from the bed, and Jesus comforted him: "I am not of the earth, I have already told you—this you must understand, but have you forgotten something else I told you? 'You are also not of the earth, not of the world.' Right now there is work that you need to do, you cannot be grieved like this, you cannot suffer like this. Although men and God cannot coexist in the same world, I have My work and you have yours, and one day when your work is finished, we will be together in one realm, and I will lead you to be with Me forever." Peter was comforted and reassured after hearing these words. He knew that this suffering was something he had to endure and experience, and was inspired from then on. Jesus specially appeared to him at every key moment, giving him special enlightenment and guidance, and doing much work in him. And what did Peter regret the most? Jesus asked Peter another question (although it is not recorded in the Bible in this way) not long after Peter had said "You are the Son of the living God," and that question was: "Peter! Have you ever loved Me?" Peter understood what He meant, and said: "Lord! I once loved the Father in heaven, but I admit I have never loved You." Jesus then said: "If people do not love the Father in heaven, how can they love the Son on earth? And if people do not love the Son sent by God the Father, how can they love the Father in heaven? If people truly love the Son on earth, then they truly love the Father in heaven." When Peter heard these words he realized his lack. He always felt remorse to the point of tears over his words "I once loved the Father in heaven, but I have never loved You." After the resurrection and ascension of Jesus he felt even more remorse and grief over them. Recalling his past work and his present stature, he would often come to Jesus in prayer, always feeling regret and a debt due to his not having satisfied God's desire, and not measuring up to God's standards. These issues became his biggest burden. He said: "One day I will dedicate to You everything I have and everything I am, I will give You whatever is most valuable." He said: "God! I have only one faith and only one love. My life is worth nothing, and my body is worth nothing. I have only one faith and only one love. I have faith in You in my mind and love for You in my heart; these two things only have I to give to You, and nothing else." Peter was greatly encouraged by Jesus' words, because before Jesus was crucified He had said to him: "I am not of this world, and you too are not of this world." Later, when Peter reached a point of great pain, Jesus reminded him: "Peter, have you forgotten? I am not of the world, and it was only for My work that I departed earlier. You too are not of the world, have you forgotten? I have told you twice, do you not remember?" Peter heard Him and said: "I have not forgotten!" Jesus then said: "You once spent a happy time gathered with Me in heaven and a period of time by My side. You miss Me, and I miss you. Although the creatures are not worth mentioning in My eyes, how can I not love one who is innocent and lovable? Have you forgotten My promise? You must accept My commission on earth; you must fulfill the task that I entrusted you with. One day I will certainly lead you to be by My side." After hearing this, Peter became even more encouraged, and received even greater inspiration, such that when he was on the cross, he was able to say: "God! I cannot love You enough! Even if You ask me to die, I still cannot love You enough! Wherever You send my soul, whether or not You fulfill Your promises, whatever You do afterward, I love You and believe in You." What he held onto was his faith, and true love.

One evening, several of the disciples, including Peter, were on the fishing boat. They were all together with Jesus, and Peter asked Jesus a very naive question: "Lord! There is a question I have had for a very long time that I would like to ask You." Jesus replied: "Then please ask!" Peter then asked: "Was the work done during the Age of Law Your doing?" Jesus smiled, as if saying: "This child, how naive he is!" He then continued with purpose: "It was not Mine, it was Jehovah and Moses' doing." Peter heard this and exclaimed: "Oh! So it was not Your doing." Once Peter had said this, Jesus spoke no more. Peter thought to himself: "It was not You that did it, so no wonder You have come to destroy the law, as it was not Your doing." His heart was also eased. Afterward, Jesus realized that Peter was quite naive, but because he didn't have any insight at the time, Jesus didn't say anything else or directly refute him. Once Jesus gave a sermon in a synagogue, and many people were present, including Peter, to hear Him preach. Jesus said: "The One that will come from everlasting to everlasting will do the work of redemption during the Age of Grace, to redeem all of mankind from sin, but He will not be constrained by any regulation in leading man out of sin. He will walk out of the law and enter into the Age of Grace. He will redeem all of mankind. He will stride forward from the Age of Law into that of Grace, yet none know Him, He who came from Jehovah. The work Moses did was granted by Jehovah; Moses drafted the law because of the work Jehovah had done." Once this was said, He continued: "Those who abolish the commandments of the Age of Grace during the Age of Grace will meet with calamity. They must stand in the temple and receive God's destruction, and fire shall come upon them." When Peter had finished listening to this, he had somewhat of a reaction. During a period of his experience, Jesus shepherded and sustained Peter, speaking heart-to-heart with him, which gave Peter a slightly better understanding of Jesus. As Peter thought of the preaching of Jesus that day, then the question he had asked Him when they were on the fishing boat and the response Jesus had given, as well as how He had laughed, it was then that he understood it all. Afterward, the Holy Spirit enlightened Peter, and only through this did he understand that Jesus was the Son of the living God. Peter's understanding came from the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit, but there was a process to his understanding. It was through asking questions, hearing Jesus preach, then through receiving Jesus' special fellowship and His special shepherding, that Peter came to realize Jesus was the Son of the living God. It was not achieved overnight; it was a process, and this became a help to him in his later experiences. Why did Jesus not do the work of perfection in other people, but just in Peter? Because only Peter understood that Jesus was the Son of the living God, and none other knew this. Though there were many disciples who knew much in their time following Him, their knowledge was superficial. This is why Peter was chosen by Jesus as the exemplar of being made perfect. What Jesus said to Peter then is what He says to people today, whose knowledge and life entry must reach that of Peter. It is in accordance with this requirement and this path that God will perfect everyone. Why are people today required to have real faith and true love? What Peter experienced you too must experience, what fruits Peter gained from his experiences must too be manifested in you, and the pain that Peter suffered, you too must surely undergo. The path you walk is the same that Peter walked. The pain you suffer is the pain that Peter suffered. When you receive glory and when you live out a real life, then you live out the image of Peter. The path is the same, and in accordance with this is one made perfect. However, the caliber of the people of today is somewhat lacking in comparison to that of Peter, for times have changed, and so too has the extent of corruption. And also for Judea was a long-standing kingdom with an ancient culture. So you must try to improve your caliber.

Peter was a very sensible person, keen in everything he did, and also extremely honest. He suffered many setbacks. He came into contact with society at the age of 14, attending school while also often going to the synagogue. He had a lot of enthusiasm and was always willing to attend meetings. At the time, Jesus had not yet officially started His work; this was just the beginning of the Age of Grace. Peter started coming into contact with religious figures when he was 14; by the time he was 18 he was in contact with the religious elite, but after he had seen the religious chaos behind the scenes, he left. Seeing how crafty, cunning, and wrought by strife these people were, he became extremely disgusted (this was how the Holy Spirit worked at the time, to make him perfect. He especially moved him and did some special work in him), and so he withdrew from the synagogue at the age of 18. His parents persecuted him and would not let him believe (they belonged to the devil, and had no faith). Finally, Peter left home and traveled at will, fishing and preaching for two years, during which time he also led a fair few people. Now you should be able to clearly see the path that was taken by Peter. If you have seen this clearly, then you will have determined the work being done today, so you would not complain or be passive, or long for anything. You should experience Peter's mood at the time: He was stricken with sorrow; he no longer asked for a future or any blessing. He did not seek the profit, happiness, fame, or fortune of the world, and only sought to live a most meaningful life, which was to repay God's love and dedicate what he held most precious to God. Then he would be satisfied in his heart. He often prayed to Jesus with the words: "Lord Jesus Christ, I once loved You, but I did not truly love You. Though I said I had faith in You, I never loved You with a true heart. I only looked up to You, adored You, and missed You, but never loved You or truly had faith in You." He always prayed to make his resolution, he was constantly encouraged by the words of Jesus^[a] and converted them to motivation. Later, after a period of experience, Jesus tested him, provoking him to yearn for Him further. He said: "Lord Jesus Christ! How I miss You, and long to look upon You. I lack too much, and cannot make up for Your love. I beg You to soon take me away. When will You have need of me? When will You take me away? When will I once again look upon Your face? I do not wish to live any longer in this body, to continue becoming corrupted, and neither do I wish to rebel any further. I am ready to dedicate all I have to You as soon as I can, and I do not wish to sadden You any further." This is how he prayed, but he did not know at the time what Jesus would perfect in him. During the agony of his test, Jesus appeared to him again and said: "Peter, I wish to make you perfect, such that you become a piece of fruit, one that is the crystallization of My perfection of you, and which I will enjoy. Can you truly testify for Me? Have you done what I ask you to do? Have you lived out the words I have spoken? You once loved Me, but though you loved Me, have you lived Me out? What have you done for Me? You recognize that you are unworthy of My love, but what have you done for Me?" Peter saw that he had done nothing for Jesus and remembered his previous oath to give his life for God. And so, he no longer complained, and his prayers afterward grew much better. He prayed, saying: "Lord Jesus Christ! I once left You, and You too once left me. We have spent time apart, and time together in company. Yet You love me more than all else. I have repeatedly rebelled against You and repeatedly grieved You. How can I forget such things? The work You have done in me and what You have entrusted me with I always bear in mind, I never forget. With the work You have done in me I have tried my best. You know what I can do, and You further know what role I can play. Your wish is my command and I will dedicate everything I have to You. Only You know what I can do for You. Although Satan fooled me so much and I rebelled against You, I believe You do not remember me for those transgressions, that You do not treat me based on them. I wish to dedicate my entire life to You. I ask for nothing, and neither do I have other hopes or plans; I only wish to act according to Your intention and to do Your will. I will drink from Your bitter cup, and I am Yours to command.”

You must be clear about the path you walk; you must be clear about the path you will take in future, what it is that God will make perfect, and what has been entrusted upon you. One day, perhaps, you will be tested, and if then you are able to gain inspiration from Peter’s experiences, it will show that you are truly walking Peter’s path. Peter was commended by God for his true faith and love, and for his loyalty to God. And it was for his honesty and longing for God in his heart that God made him perfect. If you truly have the same love and faith as Peter, then Jesus will surely make you perfect.

ONLY BY EXPERIENCING REFINEMENT CAN MAN TRULY LOVE GOD

How should man love God during refinement? Having experienced refinement, during refinement people are able to truly praise God and to see just how much they are lacking. The greater your refinement, the more you are able to renounce the flesh; the greater their refinement, the more people’s love for God. This is what you should understand. Why must people be refined? What effect does it aim to achieve? What is the significance of God’s work of refinement in man? If you truly seek God, then having experienced His refinement to a certain point you will feel that it is so good, and that it is of the utmost necessity. How should man love God during refinement? By using the resolve to love God to accept His refinement: During refinement you are tormented inside, as if a knife were being twisted in your heart, yet you are willing to satisfy

God using your heart, which loves Him, and you are unwilling to care for the flesh. This is what is meant by practicing the love of God. You hurt inside, and your suffering has reached a certain point, yet you are still willing to come before God and pray, saying: “O God! I cannot leave You. Although there is darkness within me, I wish to satisfy You; You know my heart, and I would that You invest more of Your love within me.” This is practice during refinement. If you use the love of God as the foundation, refinement can bring you closer to God and make you more intimate with God. Since you believe in God, you must hand over your heart before God. If you offer up and lay your heart before God, then during refinement it will be impossible for you to deny God, or leave God. In this way your relationship with God will become ever closer, and ever more normal, and your communion with God will become ever more frequent. If you always practice in this way, then you will spend more time in God’s light, and more time under the guidance of His words, there will also be more and more changes in your disposition, and your knowledge will increase day by day. When the day comes and God’s trials suddenly befall you, you will not only be able to stand by God’s side, but will also be able to bear testimony to God. At that time, you will be like Job, and Peter. Having borne testimony to God you will truly love Him, and will gladly lay down your life for Him; you will be God’s witness, and one who is beloved by God. Love that has experienced refinement is strong, and not weak. Regardless of when or how God subjects you to His trials, you are able to care not whether you live or die, to gladly cast aside everything for God, and to happily endure anything for God—and thus your love will be pure, and your faith real. Only then will you be someone who is truly loved by God, and who has truly been made perfect by God.

If people fall under the influence of Satan, then they have no love for God within them, and their previous visions, love, and resolution have disappeared. People used to feel that they were supposed to suffer for God, but today they think it is shameful and have no shortage of complaints. This is the work of Satan; it shows that man has fallen under the domain of Satan. If you encounter this state you must pray, and turn the other way as soon as you can—this will protect you against Satan’s attacks. It is during bitter refinement that man can most easily fall under the influence of Satan—so how should you love God during such refinement? You should summon your will, laying your heart before God and devoting the last of your time to Him. No matter how

God refines you, you should be able to put the truth into practice to fulfill God's will, and you should take it upon yourself to seek God and seek communion with God. At times like these, the more passive you are, the more negative you will become and the easier it will be for you to regress. When it is necessary for you to serve your function, although you don't serve it well, you do all you can, and do it using nothing more than your love of God; regardless of what others say—whether they say you have done well, or that you have done badly—your motivations are correct, and you are not self-righteous, for you are acting in behalf of God. When others misinterpret you, you are able to pray to God and say: "O God! I do not ask that others tolerate me, nor that they forgive me. I only ask that I am able to love You in my heart, that I am certain in my heart, and that my conscience is clear. I do not ask that others commend me, or hold me in high regard; I only pursue to satisfy You from my heart, I serve my role by doing all that I can, and although I am foolish and stupid, and of poor caliber, and blind, I know that You are lovely, and I am willing to devote all I have to You." As soon as you pray in this way, your love for God emerges, and you feel much more certainty in your heart. This is what is meant by practicing the love of God. As you experience, you will fail twice and succeed once, or else fail five times and succeed twice, and as you experience in this way, only amid failure will you be able to see the loveliness of God and discover what is lacking within you. When you next encounter such situations, you should caution yourself, temper your steps, and pray more often. You will gradually develop the ability to triumph in such situations. When that happens, your prayers have been effective. When you see you have been successful this time, you will be gratified inside, and when you pray you will be able to feel God, and that the presence of the Holy Spirit has not left you—and only then will you know how God works within you. Practicing in this way will give you a path to experiencing. If you do not put the truth into practice, then you will be without the presence of the Holy Spirit within you. But if you put it into practice, then although you hurt inside, afterward the Holy Spirit will be with you, you will be able to feel the presence of God when you pray, you will have the strength to practice the words of God, and during communion with your brothers and sisters there will be nothing weighing on your conscience, and you will feel at peace, and in this way, you will be able to bring to light what you have done. Regardless of what others say, you will be able to have a normal relationship with God, you will not be constrained by others, you will rise above everything—and in this, you will demonstrate that your practice of God's words has been effective.

The greater God's refinement, the more people's hearts are able to love God. The torment in their hearts is of benefit to their lives, they are more able to be at peace before God, their relationship with God is closer, and they are better able to see God's supreme love and His supreme salvation. Peter experienced refinement hundreds of times, and Job underwent several trials. If you wish to be made perfect by God, you too must undergo refinement hundreds of times; only if you have to go through this process, and have to rely upon this step, are you able to satisfy God's will, and be made perfect by God. Refinement is the best means by which God makes people perfect; only refinement and bitter trials can bring out the true love for God in people's hearts. Without hardship, people lack the true love for God; if they are not tested within, and are not truly subjected to refinement, then their hearts will always be floating in the outside world. Having been refined to a certain point, you will see your own weaknesses and difficulties, you will see how much you are lacking and that you are unable to overcome the many problems you encounter, and you will see how great is your disobedience. Only during trials will people be able to truly know their real states, and trials make people better able to be made perfect.

During his lifetime, Peter experienced refinement hundreds of times and underwent many painful ordeals. This refinement became the foundation of his supreme love of God, and became the most significant experience of his entire life. That he was able to possess a supreme love of God was, in one sense, because of his resolve to love God; more importantly, however, it was because of the refinement and suffering that he underwent. This suffering became his guide on the path of loving God, and became the thing that was most memorable to him. If people do not undergo the pain of refinement when loving God, then their love is full of naturalness and their preferences; love such as this is full of the ideas of Satan, and simply incapable of satisfying God's will. Having the resolve to love God is not the same as truly loving God. Even though all that they think of in their hearts is for the sake of loving God, and satisfying God, as if their thoughts are without any human ideas, as if they are all for the sake of God, when their thoughts are brought before God, such thoughts are not commended or blessed by God. Even when people have fully understood all truths—when they have come to know them all—this cannot be said to be a sign of loving God, it cannot be said that these people actually love God. Despite having understood many truths without undergoing refinement, people are incapable of putting these truths into practice; only during refinement can people understand the real meaning of these truths, only then can people genuinely appreciate their inner meaning. At that time, when they try again, they are able to put the truths into practice properly, and in accordance with God's will; at that time, their human ideas are lessened, their human naturalness is reduced, and their human emotions are diminished; only at that time is their practice a true manifestation of the love of God. The effect of the truth of the love of God is not achieved through spoken knowledge or mental willingness, nor can it be achieved simply by being understood. It requires that people pay a price, and that they undergo much bitterness during refinement, and only then will their love become pure, and after God's own heart. In His requirement that man love Him, God does not demand that man love Him using passion, or naturalness; only through loyalty and the use of the truth to serve Him can man truly love Him. But man lives amid naturalness, and so is incapable of using the truth and loyalty to serve God. He is either too passionate about God or too cold and uncaring, he either loves God to the extreme or loathes Him to the extreme. Those who live amid naturalness always live between these two extremes, and they always live in a state without truth, and believe that they are right. Although I have brought this up time and time again, people are incapable of taking it seriously, they are incapable of fully knowing its importance, and so they live amid the faith of self-deception, and in the delusion of love for God that has no truth. Throughout history, as mankind has developed and the ages have passed, God's requirements of man have become ever higher, and He has increasingly demanded that man be absolute toward Him. Yet man's knowledge of God has become more and more vague and abstract, and his love of God has concomitantly become more and more impure. Man's state and all that he does are increasingly at odds with the will of God, for man has become ever more deeply corrupted by Satan. This requires that God do more, and greater, work of salvation. Man is increasingly exacting in his requirements of God, and his love of God is becoming less and less. People live in disobedience, without the truth, and they live lives that are without humanity; not only are they without the slightest love of God, but they are teeming with disobedience and opposition. Although they think they already have the utmost love for God, and could not be any more accommodating toward Him, God does not believe so. It is perfectly clear to Him how tainted man's love of Him is, and He has never changed His opinion of man because of man's pandering, nor ever repaid man's goodwill as a result of his devotion. Unlike man, God is able to differentiate: He knows who truly loves Him and who does not, and instead of being overcome with fervor and losing Himself because of man's momentary impulse, He treats man according to man's essence and behavior. God, after all, is God, and He has His dignity, and His insights; man, after all, is man, and God's head will not be turned by a love of man that is at odds with the truth. On the contrary, He treats all that man does appropriately.

Faced with man's state and his attitude toward God, God has done new work, allowing man to possess both knowledge of and obedience toward Him, and both love and testimony. Thus, man must experience God's refinement of him, as well as His judgment, dealing and pruning of him, without which man would never know God, and would never be capable of truly loving and bearing witness to Him. God's refinement of man is not merely for the sake of a one-sided effect, but for the sake of a multi-faceted effect. Only in this way does God do the work of refinement in those who are willing to seek the truth, in order that man's resolve and love are made perfect by God. To those who are willing to seek the truth, and who yearn for God, nothing is more meaningful, or of greater assistance, than refinement such as this. God's disposition is not so easily known or understood by man, for God, in the end, is God. At the end of the day, it is impossible for God to have the same disposition as man, and thus it is not easy for man to know His disposition. The truth is not inherently possessed by man, and is not easily understood by those who have been corrupted by Satan; man is devoid of the truth, and devoid of the resolve to put the truth into practice, and if he does not suffer, and is not refined or judged, then his resolve will never be made perfect. For all people, refinement is excruciating, and very difficult to accept—yet it is during refinement that God makes plain His righteous disposition to man, and makes public His requirements for man, and provides more enlightenment, and more actual pruning and dealing; through the comparison between the facts and the truth, He gives man a greater knowledge of himself and the truth, and gives man a greater understanding of God's will, thus allowing man to have a truer and purer love of God. Such are God's aims in carrying out refinement. All the work that God does in man has its own aims and significance; God does not do meaningless work, nor does He do work that is without benefit to man. Refinement does not mean removing people from before God, nor does it mean destroying them in hell. It means changing man's disposition during refinement, changing his motivations, his old views, changing his love for God, and changing his whole life. Refinement is a real test of man, and a form of real training, and only during refinement can his love serve its inherent function.

THOSE WHO LOVE GOD WILL FOREVER LIVE WITHIN HIS LIGHT

The substance of most people's belief in God is religious conviction: They are incapable of loving God, and can only follow God like a robot, unable to truly yearn for God or adore Him. They merely follow Him silently. Many people believe in God, but there are very few who love God; they only revere God because they fear catastrophe, or else they admire God because He is high and mighty—but in their reverence and admiration there is no love or true yearning. In their experiences they seek the minutiae of the truth, or else some insignificant mysteries. Most people merely follow, they fish in murky waters only to receive blessings; they do not seek the truth, nor do they truly obey God in order to receive God's blessings. The life of all people's belief in God is meaningless, it is without value, and in it are their personal considerations and pursuits; they do not believe in God in order to love God, but for the sake of being blessed. Many people act as they please, they do whatever they want, and never consider the interests of God, or whether what they do is in accordance with the will of God. Such people can't even achieve true belief, let alone the love of God. God's substance is not just for man to believe in; it is, moreover, for man to love. But many of those who believe in God are incapable of discovering this "secret." People don't dare to love God, nor do they try to love Him. They have never discovered that there is so much that is lovable about God, they have never discovered that God is the God who loves man, and that He is the God who is for man to love. The loveliness of God is expressed in His work: Only when they experience His work can people discover His loveliness, only in their actual experiences can they appreciate the loveliness of God, and without observing it in real life, no one can discover God's loveliness. There is so much to love about God, but without actually engaging with Him people are incapable of discovering it. Which is to say, if God did not become flesh, people would be incapable of actually engaging with Him, and if they were unable to actually engage with Him, they also wouldn't be able to experience His work—and so their love of God would be tainted with much falsehood and imagination. The love of the God in heaven is not as real as the love of the God on earth, for people's knowledge of God in heaven is built upon their imaginings, rather than upon what they have seen with their own eyes, and what they have personally experienced. When God comes to earth, people are able to behold His actual deeds and His loveliness, and they can see everything of His practical and normal disposition, all of which is thousands of times more real than the knowledge of the God in heaven. Regardless of how much people love the God in heaven, there is nothing real about this love, and it is full of human ideas. No matter how little their love for the God on earth, this love is real; even if there is only a little of it, it is still real. God causes people to know Him through real work, and through this knowledge He gains their love. It's like Peter: If he hadn't lived with Jesus, it would have been impossible for him to adore Jesus. So, too, was his loyalty toward Jesus built upon his engagement with Jesus. To make man love Him, God has come among man and lives together with man, and all that He makes man see and experience is the reality of God.

God uses reality and the advent of facts to make people perfect; God's words fulfill part of His perfection of people, and this is the work of guidance and opening the way. Which is to say, in God's words you must find the path of practice, and must find the knowledge of visions. By understanding these things, man will have a path and visions as they actually practice, and will be able to be enlightened through God's words, they will be able to understand that these things come from God, and able to discern much. After understanding, they must immediately enter into this reality, and must use God's words to satisfy God in their actual life. God will guide you in all things, and will give you a path of practice, and make you feel that God is so lovely, and allow you to see that every step of God's work in you is in order to make you perfect. If you wish to see God's love, if you wish to truly experience God's love, then you must go deep into reality, you must go deep into real life, and see that everything God does is love, and salvation, and so that people may leave behind that which is unclean, and in order to refine the things within them that are unable to satisfy God's will. God uses words to provide to man whilst also creating environments in real life that allow people to experience, and if people eat and drink many of God's words, then when they actually put them into practice, they can resolve all the difficulties in their lives using many words of God. Which is to say, you must have the words of God in order to go deep into reality; if you do not eat and drink the words of God, and are without the work of God, then you will have no path in real life. If you never eat or drink the words of God, then you will be confounded when something happens to you. You know only to love God, and are incapable of any differentiation, and have no path of practice; you are muddled and confused, and sometimes you even believe that by satisfying the flesh you are satisfying God—all of which is the consequence of not eating and drinking God's words. Which is to say, if you are without the aid of God's words, and only grope about within reality, then you are fundamentally incapable of finding the path of practice. People such as this simply don't understand what it means to believe in God, much less do they understand what it means to love God. If, using the enlightenment and guidance of God's words, you often pray, and explore, and seek, through which you discover that which you ought to put into practice, find opportunities for the work of the Holy Spirit, truly cooperate with God, and are not muddled and confused, then you will have a path in real life, and will truly satisfy God. When you have satisfied God, inside you there will be the guidance of God, and you will be especially blessed by God, which will give you a sense of enjoyment: You will feel especially honored that you have satisfied God, you will feel especially bright inside, and in your heart you will be clear and peaceful, your conscience will be comforted and free from accusations, and you will feel pleasant inside when you see your brothers and sisters. This is what it means to enjoy God's love, and only this is truly enjoying God. People's enjoyment of God's love is attained through experiencing: By experiencing hardship, and experiencing putting the truth into practice, they gain God's blessings. If you only say that God really loves you, that God has paid a heavy price in people, that He has patiently and kindly spoken so many words, and always saves people, your utterance of these words is only one side of the enjoyment of God. A more real enjoyment would be for people to put the truth into practice in their real life, after which they will be peaceful and clear in their hearts, they will feel so moved inside, and that God is so lovable. You will feel that the price you have paid is so worthwhile. Having paid a great price in your efforts, you will be especially bright inside: You will feel that you are truly enjoying God's love, and understand that God has done the work of salvation in people, that His refinement of people is in order to purify them, and that God tries people in order to test whether they truly love Him. If you always put the truth into practice in this way, then you will gradually develop a clear knowledge of much of God's work, and at that time you will always feel that God's words before you are as clear as crystal. If you can clearly understand many truths, you will feel that all matters are easy to put into practice, that you can overcome this issue, and overcome that temptation, and you will see that nothing is a problem for you, which will make you so free and liberated. At this moment you will be enjoying God's love, and God's true love will have come upon you. God blesses those who have visions, who have the truth, who have knowledge, and who truly love Him. If people wish to behold God's love, they must put the truth into practice in real life, they must be willing to endure pain and forsake that which they love to satisfy God, and despite the tears in their eyes, they must still be able to satisfy God's heart. In this way, God will surely bless you, and if you endure hardship such as this, it will be followed by the work of the Holy Spirit. Through the real life, and through experiencing God's words, people are able to see God's loveliness, and only if they have tasted God's love can they truly love Him.

The more you put the truth into practice, the more you are possessed of the truth; the more you put the truth into practice, the more you possess God's love; and the more you put the truth into practice, the more you are blessed by God. If you always practice in this way, you will gradually see God's love in you, and you will know God as Peter did: Peter said that God not only has the wisdom to create the heavens and earth and all things, but, moreover, that He also has the wisdom to do real work in people. Peter said that He is not only worthy of people's love because of His creation of the heavens and earth and all things, but, moreover, because of His ability to create man, to save man, to make man perfect, and to bequeath His love to man. So, too, did Peter say that there is much in Him that is worthy of man's love. Peter said to Jesus: "Are You not deserving of people's love for much more than creating of the heavens and earth and all things? There is more in You that is lovable, You act and move in real life, Your Spirit touches me inside, You discipline me, You reproach me—these things are even more worthy of people's love." If you wish to see and experience God's love, then you must explore and seek in real life, and must be willing to put aside your own flesh. You must make this resolution. You must be someone with resolve, who is able to satisfy God in all things, without being lazy, or coveting the enjoyments of the flesh, not living for the flesh but living for God. There may be times when you do not satisfy God. That's because you don't understand God's will; the next time, even though it will take more effort, you must satisfy Him, and must not satisfy the flesh. When you experience in this way, you will have come to know God. You will see that God created the heavens and earth and all things, that He has become flesh so that people can really and actually see Him, and really and actually engage with Him, that He is able to walk among man, that His Spirit can make people perfect in real life, allowing them to see His loveliness and experience His discipline, His chastening, and His blessings. If you always experience in this way, in real life you will be inseparable from God, and if one day your relationship with God ceases to be normal, you will be able to suffer reproach, and capable of feeling remorse. When you have a normal relationship with God, you will never wish to leave God, and if one day God says He will leave you, you will be afraid, and will say that you would rather die than be left by God. As soon as you have these emotions, you will feel that you are incapable of leaving God, and in this way you will have a foundation, and will truly enjoy God's love.

People often speak of letting God be their life, but they have yet to experience to that point. You are merely saying that God is your life, that He guides you every day, that you eat and drink His words each day, and you pray to Him each day, and so He has become your life. The knowledge of those who say this is so superficial. In many people there is no foundation; God's words have been planted within them, but they have yet to sprout, much less have they borne any fruit. Today, to what extent have you experienced? Only now, after God has forced you to come this far, do you feel that you cannot leave God. One day, when you have experienced to a certain point, if God were to make you leave, you wouldn't be able to. You will always feel that you can't be without God inside you; you can be without a husband, wife, or children, without a family, without a mother or father, without the enjoyments of the flesh, but you can't be without God. Being without God will be like losing your life, you won't be able to live without God. When you have experienced to this point, you will have hit the mark in your faith in God, and in this way God will have become your life, He will have become the foundation of your existence, and you will never again be able to leave God. When you have experienced to this extent, you will have truly enjoyed God's love, your relationship with God will be so close, God will be your life, your love, and at that time you will pray to God and say: O God! I can't leave You, You are my life, I can go without everything else—but without You I can't go on living. This is people's true stature; it is the real life. Some people have been forced to come as far as they have today: They have to go on whether they want to or not, and they always feel like they're between a rock and a hard place. You must experience such that God is your life, such that if God were taken away from you it would be like losing your life; God must be your life, and you must be incapable of leaving Him. In this way, you will have actually experienced God, and at this time, when you love God again, you will truly love God, and it will be a singular, pure love. One day when your experiences are such that your life has reached a certain point, you will pray to God, eat and drink the words of God, and will be unable to leave God inside, and even if you wanted to, you would not be able to forget Him. God will have become your life; you can forget the world, you can forget your wife and children, but you'll have trouble forgetting God—that is impossible, this is your true life, and your true love for God. When people's love of God has reached a certain point, nothing they love is equal to their love of God, He is their number one love, and in this way they are able to give up everything else, and are willing to accept all dealing and pruning from God. When you have achieved a love of God that surpasses all else, you will live in reality, and in God's love.

As soon as God becomes the life within people, they become unable to leave God. Is this not the deed of God? There is no greater testimony! God has worked to a certain point; He has said for people to do service, and be chastised, or to die, and people have not backed away, which shows that they have been conquered by God. People who have the truth are those who, in their real experiences, can stand firm in their testimony, stand firm in their position, stand on the side of God, without ever retreating, and who can have a normal relationship with people who love God, who, when things happen to them, are able to completely obey God, and can obey God unto death. Your practice and revelations in real life are the testimony of God, they are man's living out and the testimony of God, and this is truly enjoying God's love; when you have experienced to this point, the due effect will have been achieved. You are possessed of actual living out and your every action is looked upon with admiration by others. Your appearance is unremarkable, but you live out a life of the utmost piety, and when you communicate the words of God, you are guided and enlightened by Him. You are able to speak God's will through your words, communicate reality, and you understand much about serving in spirit. You are candid in your speech, you are decent and upright, non-confrontational and decorous, able to obey God's arrangements and stand firm in your testimony when things befall you, and you are calm and composed no matter what you are dealing with. This kind of person has truly seen God's love. Some people are still young, but they act as someone of middle age; they are mature, possessed of the truth, and admired by others—and these are the people who have testimony, and are the manifestation of God. Which is to say, when they have experienced to a certain point, inside they will have an insight toward God, and so their external disposition will also stabilize. Many people do not put the truth into practice, and do not stand firm in their testimony. In such people there is no love of God, or testimony to God, and these are the people most loathed by God. They eat and drink the words of God, but what they express is Satan, and they allow God's words to be vilified by Satan. In people such as this there is no sign of God's love; all that they express is of Satan. If your heart is always at peace before God, and you always pay attention to the people and things around you, and what is going on around you, and if you are mindful of God's burden, and always have a heart that reveres God, then God will often enlighten you within. In the church there are people who are "supervisors," they specifically watch the failings of others, and then copy and emulate them. They are incapable of differentiating, they do not hate sin, and do not loathe or feel disgusted by the things of Satan. Such people are filled with the things of Satan, and they will ultimately be utterly forsaken by God. Your heart should be ever reverent before God, you should be moderate in your words and actions and never wish to oppose or upset God. You should never be willing for God's work in you to have been for nothing, or to allow all the hardship you have endured and all that you have put into practice to come to naught. You must be willing to work harder and to love God more on the path ahead. These are the people who have a vision as their foundation. These are the people who seek progress.

If people believe in God, and experience God's words, with a heart that reveres God, then in such people there can be seen God's salvation, and God's love. These people are able to testify to God, they live out the truth, and what they testify to is also the truth, what God is, and God's disposition, and they live amid God's love and have seen God's love. If people wish to love God, they must taste God's loveliness, and see God's loveliness; only then can there be roused in them a heart that loves God, a heart that is willing to loyally expend for God. God does not make people love Him through words and expressions, or their imagination, and He does not force people to love Him. Instead, He makes them love Him of their own volition, and He makes them see His loveliness in His work and utterances, after which there is borne in them the love of God. Only in this way can people truly bear testimony to God. People do not love God because they have been urged to do so by others, nor is it a momentary emotional impulse. They love God because they have seen His loveliness, they have seen that there is so much of Him that is worthy of people's love, because they have seen God's salvation, wisdom, and wondrous deeds—and as a result, they truly praise God, and truly yearn for Him, and there is roused in them such a passion that they could not survive without gaining God. The reason why those who truly testify to God are able to give a resounding testimony to Him is because their testimony is upon the foundation of the true knowledge and true yearning for God. It is not according to an emotional impulse, but according to the knowledge of God and His disposition. Because they have come to know God, they feel that they must surely testify to God, and make all those who yearn for God know God, and be aware of God's loveliness, and His realness. Like people's love for God, their testimony is spontaneous, it is real, and has real significance and worth. It is not passive, or hollow and meaningless. The reason why only those who truly love God have the most value and meaning in their lives, and only they truly believe in God, is because these people live in God's light, they are able to live for God's work and management; they do not live in darkness, but live in the light; they do not live meaningless lives, but lives that have been blessed by God. Only those who love God are able to testify to God, only they are God's witnesses, only they are blessed by God, and only they are able to receive God's promises. Those who love God are God's intimates, they are the people beloved by God, and they can enjoy blessings together with God. Only people such as this will live to eternity, and only they will forever live under God's care and protection. God is for people to love, and He is worthy of all people's love, but not all people are capable of loving God, and not all people can testify to God and hold power with God. Because they are able to testify to God, and devote all their efforts to God's work, those who truly love God can walk anywhere beneath the heavens without anyone daring to oppose them, and they can wield power on earth and rule all the people of God. These people have come together from across the world, they speak different languages and have different skin colors, but their existence has the same meaning, they all have a heart that loves God, they all bear the same testimony, and have the same resolve, and the same wish. Those who love God can walk freely throughout the world, those who testify to God can travel across the universe. These people are beloved by God, they are blessed by God, and they will forever live in His light.

ONLY THOSE WHO FOCUS ON PRACTICE CAN BE PERFECTED

In the last days, God became flesh to do the work He ought to do and to perform His ministry of words. He came in person to work amidst human beings with the goal of perfecting those people who are after His heart. From the creation up until today He only does that work during the last days. Only during the last days was God incarnated to do such large-scale work. Though He endures hardships that people would find difficult to endure, though He as a great God has the humility to become an ordinary man, no aspect of His work has been delayed, and His plan is not thrown into confusion in the least. He is doing the work according to His original plan. One of the purposes of this incarnation is to conquer people. Another is to perfect the people He loves. He desires to see with His own eyes the people He perfects, and He wants to see for Himself how the people He perfects bear witness for Him. It is not one person who is perfected, and it is not two. It is however, a group of very few people. This group of people come from various countries of the world, and from various of the world's nationalities. The purpose of doing this much work is to gain this group of people, to gain the witness this group of people bear for Him, and to obtain the glory He gets through this group of people. He does not do work that has no significance, nor does He do work that has no value. It can be said that, in doing so much work, God's aim is to perfect all those whom He wishes to perfect. In what spare time He has outside of this, He will eliminate those who are evil. Know that He does not do this great work because of those who are evil; on the contrary, He gives His all because of that tiny number of people who are to be perfected by Him. The work He does, the words He speaks, the mysteries He reveals, and His judgment and chastisement are all for the sake of that tiny number of people. He did not become flesh because of those who are evil, much less do they incite great wrath in Him. He speaks truth, and talks of entry, because of those who are to be perfected, He became flesh because of them, and it is because of them that He bestows His promises and blessings. The truth, entry, and life in humanity of which He speaks are not for the sake of those who are evil. He wants to avoid speaking to those who are evil, and wishes to bestow all truths upon those who are to be perfected. Yet His work requires that, for the moment, those who are evil be allowed to enjoy some of His riches. Those who do not carry out truth, who do not satisfy God, and who interrupt His work are all evil. They cannot be perfected, and are loathed and rejected by God. Conversely, the people who put truth into practice and can satisfy God and who expend their entire selves in God's work are the people who are to be perfected by God. The ones whom God wishes to complete are none other than this group of people, and the work that God does is for the sake of these people. The truth of which He speaks is directed toward the people who are willing to put it into practice. He does not speak to the people who do not put truth into practice. The increase of insight and growth of discernment that He speaks of are aimed at the people who can carry out truth. When He speaks of those who are to be perfected He is talking of these people. The work of the Holy Spirit is directed toward the people who can practice truth. Things like owning wisdom and having humanity are directed toward the people who are willing to put truth into practice. Those who do not carry out truth may hear many truths and may comprehend many truths, but because they are among the evil persons, the truth that they understand only becomes doctrines and words, and has no significance for their change of disposition or for their lives. None of them is loyal to God; they are all people who see God but cannot obtain Him, and are all condemned by God.

The Holy Spirit has a path to walk in each person, and gives each person chances to be perfected. Through your negativity you are made to know your own corruption, and then through throwing off negativity you will find a path to practice, and this is the perfection of you. Further, through the continuous guidance and illumination of some positive things inside of you, you will proactively fulfill your function and grow in insight and gain discernment. When your conditions are good, you are especially willing to read the word of God, and especially willing to pray to God, and can relate the sermons you hear to your own states. At such times God enlightens and illuminates you within, making you realize some things of the positive aspect. This is perfection of you in the positive aspect. In negative states, you are weak and negative, and feel that you don't have God, yet God illuminates you, helping you find a path to practice. Coming out of this is attainment of perfection in the negative aspect. God can perfect man in both positive and negative aspects. It depends on whether you are able to experience, and on whether you pursue being perfected by God. If you truly seek being perfected by God, then the negative cannot make you suffer loss, but can bring you things that are more real, and can make you more able to know that which is lacking within you, more able to come to grips with your real states, and see that man has nothing, and is nothing; if you do not experience trials, you do not know, and will always feel that you are above others and better than everyone else. Through all this you will see that all that came before was done by God and protected by God. Entry into trials leaves you without love or faith, you lack prayer, and are unable to sing hymns—and, without realizing it, in the midst of this you come to know yourself. God has many means of perfecting man. He employs all manner of environments to deal with the corrupt disposition of man, and uses various things to lay man bare; in one regard He deals with man, in another He lays man bare, and in another He reveals man, digging out and revealing the “mysteries” in the depths of man's heart, and showing man his nature by revealing many of his states. God perfects man through many methods—through revelation, dealing, refinement, and chastisement—so that man may know that God is practical.

What is it that you seek now? Maybe it is to be perfected by God, to know God, to obtain God, or it is the style of a nineties Peter, or to have the faith greater than that of Job. You may seek a lot, whether seeking to be called righteous by God and arrive in front of the throne of God, or to be able to manifest God on earth and bear strong and resounding witness for God. Regardless of what you seek, overall, it is for the sake of God's management plan. No matter if you seek to be a righteous person, or you seek the style of Peter, or the faith of Job, or to be perfected by God, whatever you seek, in summation, it is all the work of God. In other words, regardless of what you seek, it is all for the sake of being perfected by God, it is all for the sake of experiencing God's word, to satisfy God's heart; it is all for the sake of discovering the loveliness of God, it is all for searching out a path to practice in real experience with the aim of being able to throw off your own rebellious disposition, achieving a normal state within yourself, being able to completely conform to God's will, to become a correct person, and to have a correct motive in everything you do. The reason for you experiencing all of these things is to arrive at knowing God and achieving growth of life. Though what you experience is God's word, and what you experience are actual events, the people, matters, and things in your surroundings, ultimately you are able to know God and to be perfected by God. To seek to walk the path of a righteous person or seek to put God's word into practice, these are the runway. Knowing God and being perfected by God are the destination. Whether you seek now perfection by God, or to bear witness for God, on the whole, it is ultimately in order to know God; it is in order that the work He does in you is not in vain, so that finally you come to know the reality of God, to know His greatness, more so to know God's humbleness and hiddenness, and to know the much work that God does in you. God has humbled Himself to a certain level, to do His work in these filthy and corrupt people, and to perfect this group of people. God not only became flesh to live and eat among people, to shepherd people, to provide what people need. More important is that He does His huge work of salvation and conquest upon these unbearably corrupt people. He came to the heart of the great red dragon to work these most corrupt of people, so that all people may be changed and made new. The immense hardship that God endures is not only the hardship that the God incarnate endures, but mainly it is that God's Spirit suffers extreme humiliation—He humbles and hides Himself so much that He becomes an ordinary person. God was incarnated and took the form of flesh so that people see that He has a normal human life, and that He has the normal human needs. This is enough to prove that God has humbled Himself to a certain level. The Spirit of God is realized in the flesh. His Spirit is so high and great, yet He takes the form of a common human, of a negligible human to do the work of His Spirit. The caliber, insight, sense, humanity, and lives of each of you show that you are really unworthy to accept God's work of this kind. You are really unworthy to let God endure such hardship for your sake. God is so great. He is so supreme, and people are so mean and lowly, yet He still works upon them. He not only was incarnated to provide for people, to speak to people, He even lives together with people. God is so humble, so lovable. If as soon as God's love is mentioned, as soon as God's grace is mentioned, you shed tears as you utter great praise, if you arrive at this state, then you have true knowledge of God.

There is a deviation in people's seeking nowadays; they only seek to love God and to satisfy God, but they do not have any knowledge of God, and have neglected the Holy Spirit's enlightenment and illumination within them. They do not have true knowledge of God as the foundation. In this way they lose energy as their experience progresses. All of those who seek to have true knowledge of God, the sort of person who in the past was not in good states, who tended toward negativity and weakness, who often shed tears, fell into discouragement, and became disappointed; such people are now in increasingly better states as they have more experience. After an experience of being dealt with and broken, or going through an episode of being refined, they have made great progress. Such states are not seen to befall them again, their dispositions have changed, and God's love is being lived out in them. There is a rule to God's perfection of people, which is that He enlightens you by using a desirable part of you so that you have a path to practice and can separate yourself from all negative states, helping your spirit attain release, and making you more able to love Him. In this way you are able to throw off the corrupt disposition of Satan. You are artless and open, willing to know yourself, and willing to put truth into practice. God sees that you are willing to know yourself and are willing to put truth into practice, so when you are weak and negative, He enlightens you doubly, helping you know yourself more, be more willing to repent for yourself, and be more able to practice the things that you should practice. Only in this way is your heart peaceful and at ease. A person who ordinarily pays attention to knowing God, who pays attention to knowing himself, who pays attention to his own practice will be able to frequently receive God's work, to frequently receive guidance and enlightenment from God. Even though in a negative state, he is able to turn around immediately, whether due to the action of conscience or due to enlightenment from God's word. The change of a person's disposition is achieved always when he knows his own actual state and knows the disposition and work of God. A person who is willing to know himself and is willing to open himself up will be able to carry out truth. This kind of person is a person who is loyal to God, and a person who is loyal to God has understanding of God, whether it is deep or shallow, meager or plentiful. This is God's righteousness, and it is something that people attain, it is their own gain. A person who has knowledge of God is one who has a basis, who has vision. This kind of person is certain about God's flesh, is certain about God's word, and is certain about God's work. Regardless of how God works or speaks, or how other people cause disturbance, he can stand his ground, and stand witness for God. The more a person is this way the more he can carry out the truth that he understands. Because he is always practicing God's word, he obtains more understanding of God, and possesses the resolution to forever stand witness for God.

To have discernment, to have submission, and to have the ability to see into things so that you are keen in spirit means you have God's words illuminating and enlightening you inside as soon as you encounter something. This is being keen in spirit. Everything that God does is for the sake of helping revive people's spirits. Why does God always say people are numb and dull-witted? It is because people's spirits have died, and they have become numb to such an extent that they are completely unconscious of things of the spirit. God's work is to make people's lives progress and it is to help people's spirits come alive, so that they can see into things of the spirit, and are always able to love God, to satisfy God. Arrival at this place shows that a person's spirit has been revived, and the next time he encounters something, he can react right away. He is responsive to sermons, and reacts quickly to situations. This is what achieving keenness of spirit is. There are many people who have a quick reaction to an external event, but as soon as entry into reality or the detailed things in spirit are mentioned, they become numb and dull-witted. They understand something only if it is staring them in the face. All these are signs of being spiritually numb and dull-witted, of having little experience of things of the spirit. Some people are keen of spirit and have discernment. As soon as they hear of something directed toward their states they lose no time in writing it down. They apply it to their subsequent experience, and to changing themselves. This is a person who is keen in spirit. And why is he able to react so quickly? Because he focuses on these aspects in daily life, and as soon as one of these aspects is mentioned, it happens to match his internal condition, and he is able to receive it immediately. It is similar to giving food to a hungry person; they are able to eat right away. If you give food to someone who is not hungry, they are not so quick to react. You often pray to God, and then you are able to react immediately when you encounter something: what God requires in this matter, and how you should act. God guided you on this matter last time; when you encounter this same sort of thing today you know how to enter this situation, to satisfy the heart of God. If you always practice in this way and always experience in this way, at some point you will become masterful at it. When reading God's word you know to what sort of person God is referring, you know what sort of conditions of the spirit He is talking about, and you are able to grasp the key point and put it into practice; this shows you are able to experience. Why are some people lacking in this respect? It is because they don't put much effort into the aspect of practice. Though they are willing to put truth into practice, they do not have true insight into the details of service, into the details of truth in their life. They get confused when something happens. In this way, you may be led astray when a false prophet or a false disciple comes along. It is not acceptable to ignore discernment. You must always pay attention to things of the spirit: how God works, what God speaks, what His demands on people are, with what sort of people you should come in contact, and what sort of people you should shun. You must put emphasis on these things when eating and drinking God's word and during experience. If you always experience things in this way, you will thoroughly understand many things, and will have discernment also. What is discipline by the Holy Spirit, what is blame born of human intent, what is guidance from the Holy Spirit, what is arrangement of an environment, what is God's words enlightening within, if you are not clear about these things, you will have no discernment. You should know what comes from the Holy Spirit, what is rebellious disposition, how to obey God's word, and how to throw off one's own rebelliousness; you should understand the details of all of these truths, so that when something happens, you have an appropriate truth with which to compare it, have suitable visions as the foundation, have principles in every matter and are able to act according to the truth. Then your life will be full of God's enlightenment, full of God's blessings. God will not mistreat any person who sincerely seeks Him. He will not mistreat any person who lives Him out and bears witness for Him, and He will not curse any person who is able to sincerely thirst for truth. If, while you are eating and drinking the words of God, you can pay attention to your own true condition, pay attention to your own practice, and pay attention to your own understanding, then, when you meet a problem, you will receive enlightenment and will gain practical understanding. Then you will have a path of practice and will have discernment for everything. A person who has truth is unlikely to be deceived, and is unlikely to behave disruptively or act excessively. Because of truth he is protected, and also because of truth he obtains more understanding. Because of truth he has more paths to practice, gets more opportunities for the Holy Spirit to work in him, and more opportunities to be perfected.

THE WORK OF THE HOLY SPIRIT AND THE WORK OF SATAN

How do you grasp the specifics in spirit? How does the Holy Spirit work in man? How does Satan work in man? How do evil spirits work in man? And what are the manifestations of this work? When something happens to you, does it come from the Holy Spirit, and should you obey it, or reject it? People's actual practice gives rise to much that is of human will yet which people always believe to come from the Holy Spirit. Some comes from evil spirits, yet still people think it is born of the Holy Spirit, and sometimes the Holy Spirit guides people from within, yet people are afraid that such guidance comes from Satan, and do not dare to obey, when in reality it is the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit. Thus, without differentiation there is no way to experience when such experiences are actually happening to you, and without differentiation, there is no way of gaining life. How does the Holy Spirit work? How do evil spirits work? What comes from the will of man? And what is born of the guidance and enlightenment of the Holy Spirit? If you grasp the rules of the Holy Spirit's work within man, then you will be able to grow your knowledge and differentiate in your daily life and during your actual experiences; you will come to know God, you will be able to understand Satan, you will not be confused in your obedience or pursuit, and you will be someone whose thoughts are clear, and who obeys the work of the Holy Spirit.

The work of the Holy Spirit is a form of proactive guidance and positive enlightenment. It does not allow people to be passive. It brings them solace, gives them faith and resolve and it enables them to pursue being made perfect by God. When the Holy Spirit works, people are able to actively enter; they are not passive or forced, but are proactive. When the Holy Spirit works, people are glad and willing, and they are willing to obey, and happy to humble themselves, and even though they are pained and fragile inside, they have the resolve to cooperate, they suffer gladly, they are able to obey, and they are untainted by human will, untainted by the thinking of man, and are certainly untainted by human desires and motivations. When people experience the work of the Holy Spirit, they are especially holy inside. Those who are possessed of the work of the Holy Spirit live out the love of God, the love of their brothers and sisters, and delight in the things that delight God, and loathe the things that God loathes. People who are touched by the work of the Holy Spirit have normal humanity, and they are possessed of humanity and constantly pursue the truth. When the Holy Spirit works within people, their conditions become better and better, and their humanity becomes more and more normal, and though some of their cooperation may be foolish, their motivations are right, their entry is positive, they do not try to interrupt, and there is no malevolence within them. The work of the Holy Spirit is normal and real, the Holy Spirit works in man according to the rules of the normal life of man, and He enlightens and guides in people according to the actual pursuit of normal people. When the Holy Spirit works in people, He guides and enlightens them according to the needs of normal people, He provides for them based on their needs, and He positively guides and enlightens them based upon what they lack, and upon their deficiencies; when the Holy Spirit works, this work is in consonance with the rules of the normal life of man, and it is only in real life that people are able to see the work of the Holy Spirit. If, in their everyday lives, people are in a positive state and have a normal spiritual life, then they are possessed of the work of the Holy Spirit. In such a state, when they eat and drink the words of God they have faith, when they pray they are inspired, when something happens to them they aren't passive, and as it is happening to them they are able to see the lessons that God requires them to learn, and they are not passive, or weak, and although they have real difficulties, they are willing to obey all the arrangements of God.

What effects are achieved by the work of the Holy Spirit? You can be foolish, and there can be no differentiation within you, but the Holy Spirit has but to work for there to be faith in you, for you to always feel that you can't love God enough, for you to be willing to cooperate, to be willing to cooperate no matter how great the difficulties ahead. Things will happen to you and it won't be clear to you whether they come from God or from Satan, but you will be able to wait, and you will be neither passive or remiss. This is the normal work of the Holy Spirit. When the Holy Spirit works within them, people still encounter real difficulties, sometimes they cry, and sometimes there are things that they can't overcome, but this is all a stage of the ordinary work of the Holy Spirit. Although they do not overcome those things, and although, at the time, they are weak and make complaints, afterward they are still able to love God with absolute faith. Their passiveness cannot stop them having normal experiences, and regardless of what other people say, and how they attack them, still they are able to love God. During prayer, they always feel that they used to be so indebted to God, and they resolve to satisfy God and renounce the flesh when they encounter such things again. This strength shows there is the work of the Holy Spirit within them, and this is the normal state of the work of the Holy Spirit.

What work comes from Satan? In the work that comes from Satan, the visions in people are vague and abstract, and they are without normal humanity, the motivations behind their actions are wrong, and although they wish to love God, there are always accusations within them, and these accusations and thoughts are always interfering within them, constraining the growth of their life, and stopping them from having normal conditions before God. Which is to say, as soon as there is the work of Satan within people, their hearts can't be at peace before God, they don't know what to do with themselves, the sight of an assembly makes them want to run away, and they are unable to close their eyes when others pray. The work of evil spirits wrecks the normal relationship between man and God, and upsets people's previous visions and the path that their life has entered upon, in their hearts they can never draw close to God, things always happen that cause disruption to them and enshackle them, and their hearts cannot find peace, leaving no strength to their love of God, and making their spirits sink downward. Such are the manifestations of the work of Satan. The work of Satan is manifested in the following: being unable to stand your ground and stand witness, causing you to become someone who is at fault before God, and who has no faithfulness toward God. At the interference from Satan, you lose the love and loyalty toward God within you, you are stripped of a normal relationship with God, you do not pursue the truth, or the improvement of yourself, you regress, and become passive, you indulge yourself, you give free rein to the spread of sin, and are not hateful of sin; furthermore, the interference of Satan makes you dissolute, it causes God's touch to disappear within you, and makes you complain about God and oppose Him, leading you to question God, and there is even the risk of you leaving God. All this is of the work of Satan.

When something happens to you in your daily life, how should you differentiate between whether it comes from the work of the Holy Spirit or from the work of Satan? When people's conditions are normal, their spiritual lives and their lives in the flesh are normal, and their reason is normal and orderly; generally what they experience and come to know within themselves at this time can be said to come from being touched by the Holy Spirit (having insights or possessing some shallow knowledge when you eat and drink the words of God, or being faithful when things happen to you, or having the strength to love God when things happen—these are all of the Holy Spirit). The Holy Spirit's work in man is especially normal; man is incapable of feeling it, and it seems to be through man himself—but in fact it is the work of the Holy Spirit. In daily life, the Holy Spirit does work both great and small in everyone, and it is simply that the extent of this work varies. Some people are of good caliber, they understand things quickly, and the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit is especially great within them; some people are of poor caliber, and it takes them longer to understand things, but the Holy Spirit touches them inside, and they, too, are able to achieve faithfulness to God—the Holy Spirit works in all those who pursue God. When, in daily life, people do not oppose God, or rebel against God, do not do things that are at odds with the management of God, and do not interfere with the work of God, in each one of them the Spirit of God works to a greater or lesser extent, and touches them, enlightens them, gives them faith, gives them strength, and moves them to enter proactively, not being lazy or coveting the enjoyments of the flesh, willing to practice the truth, and longing for the words of God—all this is work that comes from the Holy Spirit.

When people's state is not normal, they are forsaken by the Holy Spirit, there is grumbling within them, their motivations are wrong, they are lazy, they indulge in the flesh, and their hearts rebel against the truth, and all of this comes from Satan. When people's conditions are not normal, when they are dark inside and have lost their normal reason, have been forsaken by the Holy Spirit, and are unable to grasp God within themselves, this is when Satan is working within them. If people always have strength within them and always love God, then generally when things happen to them they come from the Holy Spirit, and whoever they meet is the result of the arrangements of God. Which is to say, when your conditions are normal, when you are in the great work of the Holy Spirit, then it is impossible for Satan to make you waver; upon this foundation it can be said that everything comes from the Holy Spirit, and although you may have incorrect thoughts, you are able to renounce them, and do not follow them. All this comes from the work of the Holy Spirit. In what situations does Satan interfere? When your conditions are not normal, when you have not been touched by God, and are without the work of God, and you are dry and barren inside, when you pray to God but grasp nothing, and eat and drink the words of God but are not enlightened or illuminated—at such times it is easy for Satan to work within you. In other words, when you have been abandoned by the Holy Spirit and you cannot grasp God, then many things happen to you that come from the temptation of Satan. Satan works at the same time as the Holy Spirit works, and interferes in man at the same time as the Holy Spirit touches the inside of man; at such times, however, the work of the Holy Spirit takes the leading position, and people whose conditions are normal can triumph, which is the triumph of the work of the Holy Spirit over the work of Satan. Yet when the Holy Spirit works, there is very little work of Satan; when the Holy Spirit works there is still a disobedient disposition within people, and all that was originally in them is still there, but with the work of the Holy Spirit it is easy for people to know the essential things of them and their rebellious disposition toward God—although they can only rid themselves of them during gradual work. The work of the Holy Spirit is especially normal, and as He works in people they still have troubles, they still cry, they still suffer, they are still weak, and there is still much that is unclear to them, yet in such a state they are able to stop themselves sliding backward, and can love God, and although they cry and are distressed inside, they are still able to praise God; the work of the Holy Spirit is especially normal, and not the slightest bit supernatural. Most people believe that, as soon as the Holy Spirit begins to work, changes occur in people's state and the essential things of them are removed. Such beliefs are fallacious. When the Holy Spirit works within man, the passive things of man are still there and his stature remains the same, but he has the illumination and enlightenment of the Holy Spirit, his state is more proactive, the conditions within him are normal, and he changes rapidly. In people's real experiences, they primarily experience the work of either the Holy Spirit or Satan, and if they are unable to get a hold over these states, and do not differentiate, then real experiences are out of the question, to say nothing of changes in disposition. Thus, the key to experiencing God is being able to see through to such things; in this way, it will be easier for them to experience.

The work of the Holy Spirit is proactive progress, while the work of Satan is regression and passivity, disobedience toward God, opposition to God, loss of faith in God, and unwillingness to even sing songs or get up and dance. That which comes from the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit is not forced upon you, but is especially natural. If you follow it, you will have the truth, and if you don't, then afterward there will be reproach. If it is the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit, then nothing you do will be interfered with or constrained, you will be set free, there will be a path to practice in your actions, and you will not be subject to any restraints, and be able to act upon the will of God. The work of Satan brings many things that cause interference to you, it makes you unwilling to pray, too lazy to eat and drink the words of God, and undisposed to live the life of the church, and it estranges you from the spiritual life. The work of the Holy Spirit does not interfere with your daily life, and does not interfere with your entry into a normal spiritual life. In many things that happen to you, you are unable to differentiate at the time. After a few days, however, you live out a little, and manifest a little, and there are some reactions within you, and through these manifestations you are able to tell whether the thoughts within you come from God or from Satan. Some things clearly make you oppose God and rebel against God, or stop you from putting the words of God into practice, and these things all come from Satan. Some things are not apparent, and you can't tell what they are at the time; afterward, when you have seen their manifestations, you can tell which come from Satan and which are directed by the Holy Spirit. Having clearly discerned such things, you won't easily be led astray in your experiences. Sometimes, when your conditions are not good, you have certain thoughts that take you out of your passive state—which shows that when your conditions are unfavorable, some of your thoughts can also come from the Holy Spirit. It is not the case that when you are passive, all your thoughts are sent by Satan; if that were true, then when would you be able to turn to a positive state? Having been passive for a period of time, the Holy Spirit gives you an opportunity to be made perfect, He touches you, and brings you out of your passive state.

Knowing what the work of the Holy Spirit is, and what the work of Satan is, you can compare these to your own state during your experiences, and to your own experiences, and in this way there will be many more truths relating to principle in your experiences. Having understood these things, you will be able to control your actual state, and will be able to have discernment in people and things that happen to you,^[a] and you won't have to spend so much effort in gaining the work of the Holy Spirit. Of course, that's as long as your motivations are right, and as long as you are willing to seek, and to practice. Language such as this—language which relates to principles—should feature in your experiences. Without it, your experiences will be full of the interference of Satan, and full of foolish knowledge. If you don't understand how the Holy Spirit works, then you don't understand how you are to enter, and if you don't understand how Satan works, then you don't understand how you are to be cautious in your footsteps. People should understand both how the Holy Spirit works and how Satan works; they are an indispensable part of people's experiences.

Although you believe in nothing but God, do you have a normal relationship with God? Some people say all that matters is that they have a normal relationship with God, and they don't concern themselves with their relationships with others. But how is a normal relationship with God manifested? Are such people not without the slightest actual knowledge? Why is it said that the extent of your resolve to love God, and whether you have truly renounced the flesh, depends on whether you are prejudiced toward your brothers and sisters, and on whether, if you are, you can push such prejudices aside. Which is to say, when your relationship with your brothers and sisters is normal, then your conditions before God are also normal. When one of your brothers and sisters is weak, you will not loathe them, despise them, make fun of them, or give them the cold shoulder. If you are able to be of service to them, you will commune with them and say, "I used to be passive and weak. I really did not want to attend an assembly, but something happened through which God enlightened me inside and disciplined me; I was reproached inside, I was so ashamed, and I always felt sorry toward God. Afterward, I dedicated myself to the life of the church, and the more I engaged with my brothers and sisters, the more I felt I couldn't do without God. When I was with them I didn't feel lonely; when I was shut in a room by myself I felt lonely and friendless, I felt that my life was empty, and my thoughts turned to death. Now that I was with my brothers and sisters, Satan did not dare to do its work, and I did not feel lonely. When I saw how strong the love for God of my brothers and sisters was, I was inspired, and so I was always with my brothers and sisters, and my passive state naturally disappeared." Hearing this, they feel that it is useless to pray at home, they still feel that there is no love between their brothers and sisters, that their life is empty, that they have no one to rely upon, and that it's not enough to merely pray. If you commune with them this way, then they will have a path by which to practice. If you feel you are unable to provide to them, then you can pay them a visit. This doesn't have to be done by the church leader—it is the responsibility of every brother and sister to do this work. If you see that a brother or sister is in a bad state, you should pay them a visit. This is the responsibility of every one of you.

A WARNING TO THOSE WHO DO NOT PRACTICE THE TRUTH

Those amongst brothers and sisters who are always venting their negativity are Satan's lackeys and they disturb the church. These people must one day be expelled and eliminated. In their belief in God, if people don't hold within them a God-revering heart, if they don't have a heart that is obedient to God, then not only will they be unable to do any work for God, but on the contrary will become people who disturb God's work and who defy God. When someone who believes in God does not obey God or revere God but instead defies Him, then this is the greatest disgrace for a believer. If the speech and conduct of a believer is always as casual and unrestrained as an unbeliever, then this believer is even more evil than the unbeliever; they are a typical demon. Those in the church who vent their venomous talk, those amongst brothers and sisters who spread rumors, foment disharmony and form cliques should have been expelled from the church. But because it is now a different era of God's work, these people have been restricted, for they are doomed to be objects for elimination. Those who have been corrupted by Satan all have a corrupt disposition. But whereas some people only have a corrupt disposition there are others who are not like this, in that not only do they have corrupt satanic dispositions, but their natures are also malicious to the extreme. All this type of person does and says is not only expressing their corrupt satanic dispositions, but they themselves are the real devil Satan. All they do is interrupt and disturb God's work, disturb the life entry of brothers and sisters, and destroy the normal life of the church. These wolves in sheep's clothing must sooner or later be cleared out, and one must adopt an attitude toward these lackeys of Satan that is in no way polite; one must adopt an attitude of abandonment toward them. Only by doing this can one stand at God's side and those who cannot do so are in collusion with Satan. God is always in the hearts of those who genuinely believe in God and they always carry within them a God-revering heart, a God-loving heart. Those who believe in God should do things with a cautious and prudent heart, and all they do should be in accordance with God's requirements and be able to satisfy the heart of God. They should not be headstrong, doing whatever they please; that does not befit saintly propriety. People cannot flaunt God's banner and run amok with it everywhere, swaggering and swindling everywhere; doing this is the most rebellious conduct. Families have rules and nations have laws, so how much more does God's family have strict standards? Does it not more so have administrative decrees? People are free to do what they want, but the administrative decrees of God cannot be altered at will. God is a God who does not allow people to offend Him and God is a God who puts people to death—do people really not know this already?

Every single church has people who disturb the church, people who interrupt God's work. These people are all Satan masquerading in God's family. This type of person is especially good at impersonating, coming respectfully before Me, nodding and bowing, behaving like mangy dogs, devoting their "all" in order to achieve their own objectives, but showing their ugly countenance before brothers and sisters. When they see someone practicing the truth they attack and exclude them, and when they see someone more terrible than they are themselves, they flatter and fawn upon them, acting like tyrants within the church. It can be said that the majority of churches have this type of "local villainous snake," this type of "lap dog" within them. They sneak around together, winking and secretly signaling to each other, and none of them practice the truth. Whoever has the most venom is the "head demon," and whoever has the highest prestige leads them, bearing their flag aloft. These people run wild within the church, spreading their negativity, releasing death, doing as they please, saying what they please, with no one daring to stop them, being full of satanic dispositions. As soon as they begin to cause disturbance, an air of death enters into the church. Those who practice the truth within the church are abandoned and are unable to achieve their potential, while those who disturb the church and spread death run wild within the church. What is more, the majority of people follow them. This kind of church is simply under Satan's control and the devil is their king. If the people of the church do not rise up and cast out those head demons, then they will also come to ruin sooner or later. From now on measures must be taken against this kind of church. If those who are capable of practicing a little truth are not engaging in seeking, then that church will be banned. If there is no one in a church who is willing to practice the truth, no one who can stand witness for God, then that church should be completely ostracized, and their connections with other churches must be severed. This is called burying death, and casting Satan out. If there are several local villainous snakes in a church, as well as some small flies who follow them who have no discernment whatsoever, if those of the church still cannot cast off the binds and manipulation of these snakes after they have seen the truth, then these fools will be eliminated in the end. Though these small flies may not have done anything terrible, they are even more cunning, even more slick and evasive and everyone like this will be eliminated. Not one will be left! Those who belong to Satan will be returned to Satan, while those who belong to God will surely go in search of the truth; this is determined by their natures. Let all those who follow Satan perish! No pity will be shown to these people. Let those who search for the truth attain provision and allow them to take pleasure in God's word to their hearts' content. God is righteous; He does not treat people unjustly. If you are a devil then you will be incapable of practicing the truth. If you are someone who searches for the truth then it is certain that you will not be taken captive by Satan—this is beyond all doubt.

Those who do not seek to progress always wish for others to be as negative and indolent as themselves, those who do not practice the truth are jealous of those who do practice the truth. Those who do not practice the truth always want to deceive those who are muddleheaded and who lack discernment. The things these people vent can cause you to degenerate, slip downward, develop abnormal conditions and be filled with darkness inside; they cause you to be distanced from God, and they make you cherish the flesh and indulge yourself. Those who do not love the truth, who are always dealing with God perfunctorily are without self-knowledge, and their dispositions seduce people into committing sins and defying God. They do not practice the truth and do not allow others to practice it either. They cherish sin and have no loathing for themselves. They do not know themselves and stop others from knowing themselves, and they stop others from longing for the truth. Those they deceive cannot see the light and fall into darkness; they do not know themselves, are unclear about the truth and become further and further from God. They do not practice the truth and they stop others from practicing the truth, bringing those foolish people before them. Rather than saying they believe in God, it would be better to say they believe in their ancestors, that what they believe in are the idols in their hearts. It would be best for those people who say they follow God to open their eyes and take a good look to see exactly who they believe in: Is it really God that you believe in, or Satan? If you know that what you believe in is not God but your own idols, then you had best not say you are a believer. If you really do not know who you believe in then, again, you had best not say you are a believer. To say that would be blasphemy! No one is forcing you to believe in God. Do not say you believe in Me, as I heard enough of those words long ago and I do not wish to hear them again, because what you believe in are the idols in your hearts and the local villainous snakes among you. Those who shake their heads when they hear the truth, who smile widely when they hear talk of death are the offspring of Satan, and they are all objects to be eliminated. There exist in the church many people who have no discernment, and when something deceptive happens they just stand by Satan's side. When they are called Satan's lackeys they feel so wronged. And someone might say they have no discernment, but they always stand on the side without truth. There has not been a single critical time when they have stood on the side of truth, not a single time when they have stood up and argued for the truth, so are they really without discernment? Why do they always stand by Satan's side? Why do they never say one word that is fair or reasonable for the truth? Is this situation really created by their momentary confusion? The less discernment someone has, the less able they are to stand on the side of truth. What does this show? Does it not show that those without discernment love evil? Does it not show that those without discernment are the loyal offspring of Satan? Why is it that they are always able to stand on the side of Satan and speak the same language as it? Their every word and deed, and their expressions prove amply that they are not any kind of lover of the truth, but rather that they are people who detest the truth. That they can stand on the side of Satan proves amply that Satan really loves these petty devils who fight for Satan's sake all their lives. Are all these facts not abundantly clear? If you truly are someone who loves the truth, then why can't you have any regard for those who practice the truth, and why do you immediately follow those who do not practice the truth the minute they have a slight change of countenance? What kind of problem is this? I do not care whether you have discernment or not, I do not care how great a price you have paid, I do not care how great your forces are and I do not care whether you are a local villainous snake or a flag-bearing leader. If your forces are great then that is only with the help of Satan's strength; if your prestige is high, then that is merely because there are too many around you who do not practice the truth; if you have not been expelled then that is because now is not the time for the work of expelling, rather it is time for the work of elimination. There is no rush to expel you now. I need only wait for that day to come after you have been eliminated to punish you. Whoever does not practice the truth will be eliminated!

Those who genuinely believe in God are those who are willing to put God's word into practice, and they are those who are willing to practice the truth. Those who can genuinely stand witness for God are also those who are willing to put His word into practice, and they are those who can genuinely stand on the side of the truth. Those who employ trickery and who do injustice are all people who have no truth and they all bring shame on God. Those in the church who engage in disputes are Satan's lackeys, and are the embodiment of Satan. This kind of person is too malicious. Those who have no discernment and are incapable of standing on the side of the truth all harbor evil intentions and tarnish the truth. These people are even more so typical representatives of Satan; they are beyond redemption and it goes without saying that they are all objects to be eliminated. Those who do not practice the truth should not be allowed to remain in God's family, nor should those who deliberately demolish the church. But now is not the time to do expelling work. They will merely be exposed and eliminated in the end. No more useless work is to be done on these people; those who belong to Satan are incapable of standing on the side of the truth, whereas those who search for the truth can stand on the side of the truth. Those who do not practice the truth are unworthy to hear the way of the truth and unworthy to bear witness to the truth. The truth is basically not for their ears but rather it is spoken for the ears of those who practice it. Before every person's end is revealed, those who disturb the church and interrupt the work will first be left to one side. Once the work is complete, these people will be exposed one after another before being eliminated. During the time of providing the truth, no attention is paid to them for the time being. When the whole truth is revealed to man those people should be eliminated, as that will also be the time when all people are classified after their kind. Because of their petty cleverness, those without discernment will come to ruin in the hands of evil people and they will be led astray by evil people and will be unable to return. These people should be handled in this way, as they do not love the truth, because they are incapable of standing on the side of the truth, because they follow evil people, they stand on the side of evil people, and because they collude with evil people and defy God. They know perfectly well that those evil people radiate evil but they harden their hearts and follow them, moving contrary to the truth. Are these people who do not practice the truth but who do destructive and abominable things not all doing evil? Although there are those among them who style themselves as kings and those who trail along behind, are their God-defying natures not all the same? What excuse can they have to say that God does not save them? What excuse can they have to say that God is not righteous? Is it not their own evil that will destroy them? Is it not their own rebelliousness that will drag them down into hell? Those who practice the truth will in the end be saved and made perfect through the truth. Those who do not practice the truth will in the end invite ruination through the truth. These are the ends that await those who practice the truth and those who do not. I advise those who are not planning on practicing the truth to leave the church as soon as possible to avoid committing even more sins. When the time comes, even regret will be too late, and in particular those who form cliques and create division, and those local villainous snakes within the church must leave even sooner. These people who are of an evil wolf nature are incapable of change, they had better leave the church at the earliest opportunity, never again to disturb the proper life of brothers and sisters, and so avoid God's punishment. Those of you who went along with them would do well to make use of this opportunity to reflect upon yourselves. Will you follow the evil ones out of the church, or remain and follow submissively? You must consider this matter carefully. I give you one more opportunity to choose. I am waiting for your answer.

YOU OUGHT TO MAINTAIN YOUR DEVOTION TO GOD

How is the Holy Spirit working within the church now? Do you have a grasp of that? What are the brothers' and sisters' greatest difficulties? What do they most lack? Currently, there are some people who are negative in the midst of trials, and some of them even complain, and some are no longer moving forward because God is no longer speaking. People have not entered the right track of belief in God. They cannot live independently, and they cannot maintain their own spiritual life. There are some people who follow along, pursue with energy, and are willing to practice when God speaks. But when God does not speak, they no longer move forward. People still have not understood God's will within their hearts and they do not automatically have love for God; their following God in the past was because they were forced. Now there are some people who are tired of God's work. Aren't they in danger? A lot of people are in a state of just coping. Although they eat and drink God's words and pray to Him, it's all half-hearted. They don't have the drive that they once did, and most people are not interested in God's work of refinement and perfection. It's as if they never have any internal drive, and when they are overcome by transgressions they do not feel indebted to God, nor do they regret themselves. They do not pursue the truth or leave the church. They only pursue temporary pleasures. This is the most foolish type of idiot! When the time comes, they will all be cast out, and not a single one will be saved! Do you think that if someone has been saved once they will always be saved? This is just trying to fool people! All those who do not pursue entry into life will be chastised. Most people have absolutely no interest in entering into life, in visions, or in putting the truth into practice. They do not pursue entering in, and they certainly don't pursue entering in more deeply. Aren't they ruining themselves? Right now, there is a portion of people whose conditions are getting better and better. The more the Holy Spirit works the more confidence they have, and the more they experience the more they feel the profound mystery of God's work. The deeper they enter in, the more they understand. They feel that God's love is so great, and they feel steady and enlightened inside. They have an understanding of God's work. These are the people in whom the Holy Spirit is working. Some people say, although there are no new words from God, I must still seek to go deeper into the truth, I must be earnest about everything in my actual experience and enter into the reality of God's words. This kind of person has the work of the Holy Spirit. Although God does not show His countenance and is hidden from every single person, and He does not utter a word, and there are times that people experience some internal refinement, yet God has not completely left people. If one cannot maintain the truth that they should carry out, they will not have the work of the Holy Spirit. During the period of refinement, of God not showing Himself, if you do not have confidence and you cower, if you do not focus on experiencing His words, this is fleeing from God's work. Later, you will be cast out. Those who do not seek to enter into the word of God cannot possibly stand as a witness for Him. People who are able to bear witness for God and satisfy His will are all entirely reliant upon their drive to pursue God's words. The work that God performs in people is primarily to allow them to gain the truth. Your pursuit of life is for the sake of perfecting you—it is all to make you suitable for God's use. All you are pursuing now is hearing mysteries, listening to God's words, feasting your eyes, having a look at something new or seeing what the trend is, and satisfying your curiosity. If this is the intention in your heart, there is no way for you to meet God's requirements. Those who do not pursue the truth cannot follow until the very end. Right now, it's not that God isn't doing something—it's that people are not cooperating, because they are tired of His work. They only want to hear words of His blessing, and they are unwilling to hear words of His judgment and chastisement. What's the reason for this? It's because people's desire to gain blessings has not been fulfilled, and they are negative and weak. It is not that God purposely does not allow people to follow Him, and it is not that He is purposely delivering blows to mankind. People are negative and weak only because their intentions are improper. God is the God that gives man life, and He cannot bring man into death. People's negativity, weakness, and retreat is all caused by themselves.

God's current work brings people some refinement, and only those who can stand firm within this refinement will gain God's approval. No matter how He conceals Himself, not speaking or working, you can still pursue with vigor. Even if God said that He would reject you, you would still follow Him. This is standing as a witness for God. If God conceals Himself from you and you stop following Him, is this standing witness for God? If people don't actually enter in, they don't have actual stature, and when they really encounter a great trial, they stumble. God is not speaking right now, or what He's doing is not in line with your own notions, so you are not okay. If God were currently acting according to your own notions, if He were satisfying your will and you were able to stand up and pursue with energy, then what would you really be living on? I say that there are many people who are living entirely reliant upon human curiosity! They absolutely do not have a true heart of pursuit. All those who do not pursue entry into the truth but rely on their curiosity in life are despicable people in danger! God's various kinds of work is all to perfect mankind. However, people are always curious, they like to inquire about hearsay, they're concerned about what's going on abroad—what's happening in Israel, if there was an earthquake in Egypt—they're always looking for some new, strange things to satisfy their selfish desires. They do not pursue life, nor do they pursue being perfected. They only seek to have the day of God arrive sooner so that their beautiful dream may be realized and their extravagant desires can be fulfilled. That kind of person is not practical—they are a person with an improper perspective. Pursuit of the truth is the foundation of mankind's belief in God. If people do not pursue entry into life, if they do not seek to satisfy God, then they will be subject to punishment. Those who are to be punished are those who have not had the work of the Holy Spirit during God's time of work.

How should people cooperate with God during this stage of His work? God is currently testing people. He is not uttering a word; He is concealing Himself and not directly contacting people. From the outside, it looks like He's not working, but the truth is that He is still working within man. Anyone who is pursuing entry into life and has a vision for their pursuit of life does not have doubts, even if they do not fully understand God's work. In the midst of trials, even when you don't know what God wants to do and what work He wants to accomplish, you should know that God's intentions for mankind are always good. If you pursue Him with a true heart, He will never leave you, and in the end He will surely perfect you, and bring people to an appropriate destination. Regardless of how God is currently testing people, there will be one day when He will provide people with an appropriate outcome and give them the appropriate retribution based on what they have done. God will not lead people to a certain point and then just cast them aside and ignore them. This is because He is a faithful God. At this stage, the Holy Spirit is doing the work of refinement. It is refining every single person. In the steps of work of the trial of death and the trial of chastisement, the refinement at that time was all refinement through words. For people to experience God's work, they must first understand His current work and understand how mankind should cooperate. This is something that everyone should understand. No matter what God does, whether it's refinement or if He's not speaking, every step of God's work is not in line with mankind's conceptions. They all break apart and break through people's conceptions. This is His work. But you must believe when God's work reaches a certain stage, no matter what He will not put all mankind to death. He gives both promises and blessings to mankind, and all those who pursue Him will be able to gain His blessings, while those who do not will be thrown out by God. This depends on your pursuit. No matter what, you must believe that when God's work is concluded, every single person will have a suitable destination. God has provided mankind with beautiful aspirations, but if they don't pursue, they cannot attain them. You should be able to see this now—God's refinement and chastisement is His work, but for people, they must pursue a change in disposition at all times. In your practical experience, you must first know how to eat and drink God's words and find what you should enter into and your shortcomings within His words, and seek entry in your practical experience. Take the portion of God's words that should be put into practice and try to practice it. Eating and drinking God's words is one aspect, the life of the church must also be maintained, you must have a normal spiritual life, and be able to hand over all of your current states to God. No matter how His work changes, your spiritual life should remain normal. A spiritual life can maintain your proper entering in. No matter what God does, you will be able to continue your spiritual life uninterrupted and fulfill your duty. This is what people should do. It is all the work of the Holy Spirit, but for those with a normal condition it is being perfected. For those with an abnormal condition it is a trial. In the Holy Spirit's current stage of refinement work, some people say that God's work is so great and that people are very much in need of refinement, otherwise their stature will be too small and they will have no way of reaching God's will. However, for those with a condition that is not good, it becomes a reason to not pursue God, and a reason to not attend gatherings or eat and drink God's word. In God's work, no matter what He does or what changes, at the very least people must maintain a normal spiritual life. Perhaps you have not been lax in this current stage of your spiritual life, but you still haven't gained much; you haven't reaped a great deal. Under these kinds of circumstances you must still follow the rules; you must keep to these rules so that you don't suffer losses in your life and so that you satisfy God's will. If your spiritual life is not normal, you cannot understand God's current work; you always feel that it is completely incompatible with your own notions, and you are willing to follow Him, but you lack internal drive. So no matter what God is currently doing, people must cooperate. If people don't cooperate the Holy Spirit can't do His work, and if people do not have a heart of cooperation, they cannot attain the work of the Holy Spirit. If you want to have the work of the Holy Spirit

inside of you, and want to gain God's approval, you must maintain your original devotion in front of God. Now, it's not necessary for you to have a deeper understanding, higher theory, or more things—all that is required is that you uphold God's word on the original foundation. If people do not cooperate with God and do not pursue deeper entry, God will take away what they once had. Inside, people are always greedy for ease and would rather enjoy what is already available. They want to gain God's promises without paying any price at all. These are the extravagant thoughts within mankind. Gaining life itself without paying a price—what has ever been so easy? When someone believes in God and seeks to enter into life and seeks a change in their disposition, they must pay a price and achieve a state where they will always follow God no matter what He does. This is something that people must do. Even if you follow all of this as a rule, you must stick to it, and no matter how great the trials, you cannot let go of your normal relationship with God. You should be able to pray, maintain your church life, and stay with brothers and sisters. When God tries you, you should still seek the truth. This is the minimum for a spiritual life. Always having a heart of seeking and striving to cooperate, applying all of your energy—can this be done? On this basis, discernment and entering into reality will be something that you can achieve. It's easy to accept God's word when your own state is normal, and it doesn't feel difficult to practice the truth, and you feel that God's work is great. But if your condition is poor, no matter how great God's work is and no matter how beautifully someone speaks, you will pay no mind. When a person's condition isn't normal, God cannot work in them, and they cannot achieve changes in their disposition.

If people don't have any confidence, it's not easy to continue down this path. Everyone can see now that God's work is not at all in line with people's notions—no matter how much work He does or how much He speaks, it is completely out of line with human notions. This requires people to have confidence and resolve to be able to stand by what they have already seen and what they have gained from their experiences. No matter what God does in people, they must uphold what they themselves possess, be sincere in front of God, and be devoted to Him to the very end. This is mankind's duty. This is what people should do—they should uphold this. Belief in God requires obedience of Him and experience of His work. God has done so much work—it could be said that for people it is all perfection, it's all refinement, and even more, it's all chastisement. There has not been a single step of God's work that has been in line with human notions; what people have enjoyed is God's harsh words. When God comes, people should enjoy His majesty and His wrath, but no matter how harsh His words are, He comes to save and perfect mankind. As creatures, people should fulfill the duties that they ought to, and stand witness for God in the midst of refinement. In every trial they should uphold the witness that they should bear, and bear a resounding witness for God. This is an overcomer. No matter how God refines you, you remain full of confidence and never lose confidence in God. You do what man should do. This is what God requires of man, and man's heart should be able to fully return to Him and turn toward Him at every single moment. This is an overcomer. Those who God refers to as overcomers are those who are still able to stand witness, maintain their confidence, and their devotion to God when under the influence of Satan and under siege by Satan, that is, when within the forces of darkness. If you are still able to maintain a heart of purity and your genuine love for God no matter what, you stand witness in front of God, and this is what God refers to as being an overcomer. If your pursuit is excellent when God blesses you, but you retreat without His blessings, is this purity? Since you are certain that this way is true, you must follow it until the end; you must maintain your devotion to God. Since you have seen that God Himself has come to the earth to perfect you, you should give your heart entirely to Him. No matter what He does, even if He determines an unfavorable outcome for you at the very end, you can still follow Him. This is maintaining your purity in front of God. Offering a holy spiritual body and a pure virgin to God means keeping a heart of sincerity in front of God. For mankind, sincerity is purity, and being able to be sincere toward God is maintaining purity. This is what you should put into practice. When you ought to pray, you pray; when you ought to gather together in fellowship, you do so; when you ought to sing hymns, you sing hymns; and when you ought to forsake the flesh, you forsake the flesh. When you perform your duty you do not muddle through it; when you are faced with trials you stand firm. This is devotion to God. If you do not uphold what people should do, then all of your previous suffering and resolutions were futile.

For every step of God's work, there is a way that people should cooperate. God refines people so that they have confidence in the midst of refinements. God perfects people so that they have confidence to be perfected by God and are willing to accept His refinements and being dealt with and pruned by God. The Spirit of God works within people to bring them enlightenment and illumination, and to have them cooperate with Him and practice. God does not speak during refinements. He does not utter His voice, but there is still the work that people should do. You should uphold what you already have, you should still be able to pray to God, be close to God, and stand witness in front of God; this way you will fulfill your own duty. All of you should see clearly from God's work that His trials of people's confidence and love require that they pray more to God, and that they savor God's words in front of Him more often. If God enlightens you and has you understand His will but you do not put it into practice at all, you will gain nothing. When you put God's words into practice, you should still be able to pray to Him, and when you savor His words you should always seek in front of Him and be full of confidence in Him without being disheartened or cold. Those who don't put God's words into practice are full of energy during gatherings, but fall into darkness when they return home. There are some who don't even want to gather together. So you must clearly see what duty it is that people should fulfill. You may not know what God's will actually is, but you can perform your duty, you can pray when you should, you can put the truth into practice when you should, and you can do what people ought to do. You can uphold your original vision. This way, you will be more able to accept God's next step of work. It's a problem if you do not seek when God works in a hidden way. When He speaks and preaches during assemblies, you listen with enthusiasm, but when He does not speak you lack energy and retreat. What kind of person does this? This is someone who just goes with the flow. They have no stance, no testimony, and no vision! Most people are like that. If you continue on that way, one day when you come upon a great trial, you will descend into punishment. Having a stance is very important in God's perfection of people. If you do not doubt a single step of God's work, you fulfill man's duty, you sincerely uphold what God has you put into practice, that is, you remember God's exhortations, and no matter what He does now you do not forget His exhortations, have no doubt about His work, maintain your stance, uphold your testimony, and are victorious every step of the way, in the end you will be perfected into an overcomer by God. If you are able to stand firm through every step of God's trials, and you can still stand firm to the very end, you are an overcomer, and you are someone who is perfected by God. If you cannot stand firm in your current trials, in the future it will become even more difficult. If you only undergo a bit of insignificant suffering and you do not pursue the truth, you will gain nothing in the end. You will be empty-handed. There are some people who give up their pursuit when they see that God is not speaking, and their heart becomes scattered. Isn't this a fool? These kinds of people have no reality. When God is speaking, they're always running around, busy and enthusiastic on the outside, but now that He's not speaking, they are no longer seeking. This kind of person has no future. During refinements, you must enter in from a positive perspective and learn the lessons you should learn; when you pray to God and read His word, you should compare your own state to it, discover your shortcomings, and find that you have so many lessons to learn. The more sincerely you seek in the midst of refinements, the more you will find yourself to be inadequate. When you are experiencing refinements there are many issues that you encounter; you cannot see them clearly, you complain, you reveal your own flesh—only through this do you discover how great your corrupt disposition is.

People are lacking in caliber and they fall far short of God's standards, in the future they may be even more in need of confidence to walk this path. God's work in the last days requires enormous confidence—it requires confidence even greater than that of Job's. Without confidence, people will not be able to continue to gain experience and will not be able to be perfected by God. When the day comes that great trials come, some people will leave this church, and some will leave that church. There will be some who had been doing quite well in their pursuit in the previous days and it's not clear why they no longer believe. Many things will happen and you will not know what is going on, and God will not reveal any signs or wonders, or do anything supernatural. This is to see if you can stand firm—God uses facts to refine people. You have not yet suffered much. In the future when great trials come, in some places every single person in the church will leave, and those you have gotten along very well with will leave and abandon their faith. Will you be able to stand firm then? Now, the trials you have faced have been minor, and you have probably been barely able to withstand them. This step includes refinements and perfecting through word only. In the next step, the facts will come upon you to refine you, and then you will be in the midst of peril. Once it becomes really serious, God will advise you to hurry up and leave, and religious people will try to rope you in. This is to see if you can continue on the path. These are all trials. The current trials are minor, but the day will come when there are parents in the home who no longer believe and there are children in the home who no longer believe. Will you be able to continue on? The farther forward you go, the greater your trials will become. God carries out His work of refining people according to their needs and their stature. During the stage of God perfecting mankind, it is not possible that the number of people will continue to grow—it will only shrink. It is only through these refinements that people can be perfected. Being dealt with, disciplined, tested, chastised, cursed—can you withstand all of this? When you see a church with a particularly good situation, the sisters and brothers are all seeking with great energy, you yourself feel encouraged. When the day comes that they have all left, some of them no longer believe, some have left to do business or get married, and some have joined the religion, will you be able to stand firm then? Will you be able to remain unaffected within? God's perfection of mankind is not such a simple thing! He utilizes many things to refine people. People see these as methods, but in God's original intention these aren't methods at all, but facts. In the end, when He has refined people to a certain point and they no longer have any complaints, this stage of His work will be complete. The great work of the Holy Spirit is to perfect you, and when He does not work and hides Himself, it is even more for the purpose of perfecting you, and this way it can particularly be seen whether people have love for God, and if they have true confidence in Him. When God speaks plainly, there's no need for you to search; it is only when He is concealed that you need to search, you need to feel your way through. You are able to fulfill the duty of a creature, and no matter what your future outcome and your destination are, you are able to pursue knowledge and love of God during the years you are alive, and no matter how God treats you, you are able to not complain. There is one condition for the work of the Holy Spirit within people. As long as they thirst and seek and are not half-hearted or doubtful about God's actions, and they are able to uphold their duty at all times, only this way can they gain the work of the Holy Spirit. In each step of God's work, what is required of mankind is enormous confidence and seeking in front of God—only through experience are people able to discover how lovable God is and how the Holy Spirit works in people. If you do not experience, if you do not feel your way through that, if you do not seek, you will gain nothing. You must feel your way through your experiences, and only through your experiences can you see God's actions, and recognize His wondrousness and unfathomableness.

HAVE YOU COME ALIVE?

When you have achieved the living out of normal humanity, and have been made perfect, although you will be unable to speak prophecy, nor of any mysteries, you will be living out and revealing the image of a human. God created man, after which man was corrupted by Satan, and this corruption has made people into dead bodies—and thus, after you have changed, you will be different from these dead bodies. It is the words of God that give life to people's spirits and cause them to be reborn, and when people's spirits are reborn they will have come alive. Mention of the "dead" refers to corpses that have no spirit, to people in whom their spirit has died. When people's spirits are given life, they come alive. The saints that were spoken of before refer to people who have come alive, those who were under Satan's influence but defeated Satan. The chosen people of China have endured the cruel and inhumane persecution and trickery of the great red dragon, which has left them mentally ravaged and without the slightest courage to live. Thus, the awakening of their spirits must begin with their substance: Bit-by-bit, in their substance their spirit must be awakened. When, one day, they come alive, there will be no more obstructions, and all will proceed smoothly. At the moment, this remains unachievable. Most people's living out contains much of the atmosphere of death, they are shrouded in an aura of death, and they lack too much. Some people's words carry death, their actions carry death, and almost everything they live out is death. If, today, people publicly bear testimony to God, then this work will fail, for they have yet to fully come alive, and there are too many dead among you. Today, some people ask why God doesn't show some signs and wonders so that He can quickly spread His work among the Gentile nations. The dead can't bear testimony to God; the living can, but most people today are dead, too many of them live in the cage of death, they live under the influence of Satan, and are unable to gain victory—and so how could they bear testimony to God?

Those who live under the influence of darkness are those who live amid death, they are those who are possessed by Satan. Without being saved by God, and judged and chastised by God, people are unable to escape the influence of death, they cannot become the living. These dead can't bear testimony to God, nor can they be used by God, much less enter the kingdom. God wants the testimony of the living, not the dead, and He asks that the living work for Him, not the dead. "The dead" are those who oppose and rebel against God, they are those who are numb in spirit and do not understand God's words, they are those who do not put the truth into practice and have not the slightest loyalty to God, and they are those who live under the domain of Satan and are exploited by Satan. The dead show themselves by standing in opposition to the truth, by rebelling against God, and by being lowly, contemptible, malicious, brutish, deceitful, and insidious. Even though such people eat and drink the words of God, they are unable to live out the words of God; they live, but they are the walking dead, they are breathing corpses. The dead are totally incapable of satisfying God, much less can they utterly obey Him. They can only deceive Him, blaspheme against Him, and betray Him, and all that they live out reveals the nature of Satan. If people wish to become living beings, and to bear testimony to God, and to be approved of by God, they must accept God's salvation, they must gladly submit to His judgment and chastisement, and must gladly accept the pruning and dealing of God. Only then will they be able to put all of the truths required by God into practice, and only then will they gain God's salvation, and truly become living beings. The living are saved by God, they have been judged and chastised by God, they are willing to devote themselves and are happy to lay down their lives to God, and they would gladly dedicate their whole lives to God. Only when the living bear testimony to God can Satan be shamed, only the living can spread the gospel work of God, only the living are after God's heart, and only the living are real people. Originally the man made by God was alive, but because of Satan's corruption man lives amid death, and lives under the influence of Satan, and so these people have become the dead who are without a spirit, they have become enemies who oppose God, they have become the tools of Satan, and they have become the captives of Satan. All the living people created by God have become dead, and so God has lost His testimony, and He has lost mankind, which He created and is the only thing that has His breath. If God is to take back His testimony, and take back those who were made by His own hand but who have been taken captive by Satan, then He must resurrect them so that they become living beings, and He must reclaim them so that they live in His light. The dead are those who have no spirit, those who are numb in the extreme, and who oppose God. Moreover, they are those who do not know God. These people have not the slightest intention of obeying God, they only rebel against Him and oppose Him, and have not the slightest loyalty. The living are those whose spirits have been reborn, who know to obey God, and who are loyal to God. They are possessed of the truth, and of testimony, and only these people are pleasing to God in His house. God saves those who can come alive, who can see God's salvation, who can be loyal to God, and willing to seek God. He saves those who believe in God's incarnation, and believe in His appearance. Some people can come alive, and some people can't; it depends on whether their nature can be saved or not. Many people have heard a lot of God's words yet do not understand God's will, they have heard God's many words but are still incapable of putting them into practice, they are incapable of living out any truth and also deliberately interfere with God's work. They are incapable of doing any work for God, they cannot devote anything to Him, and they also secretly spend the church's money, and eat in the house of God for free. These people are dead, and they will not be saved. God saves all those who are amid His work. But there is a part of them who cannot receive His salvation; only a small number can receive His salvation, for most people are too dead, they are so dead that they cannot be saved, they have been totally exploited by Satan, and in nature, they are too malicious. Neither was that small number of people fully able to obey God. They were not those who had been absolutely faithful to God since the beginning, or who had the utmost love for God since the beginning; instead, they have become obedient to God because of His work of conquest, they see God because of His supreme love, there are changes in their disposition because of God's righteous disposition, and they come to know God because of His work, which is both real and normal. Without this work of God, no matter how good these people are they would still be of Satan, they would still be of death, they would still be dead. That, today, these people can receive God's salvation is purely because they are willing to cooperate with God.

Because of their loyalty to God, the living shall be gained by God and live amid His promises, and because of their opposition to God, the dead shall be detested and rejected by God and live amid His punishment and curses. Such is the righteous disposition of God, and it is unchangeable by any man. Because of their own seeking, people receive God's approval and live in the light; because of their cunning schemes, people are cursed by God and descend amid punishment; because of their evildoing, people are punished by God; and because of their yearning and loyalty, people receive God's blessings. God is righteous: He blesses the living, and curses the dead, so that they are always amid death, and will never live in God's light. God will take the living into His kingdom, He will take the living into His blessings to be with Him forever. The dead He will strike into eternal death; they are the object of His destruction, and will always belong to Satan. God treats no one unjustly. All those who truly seek God will surely remain in the house of God, and all those who are disobedient to God, and incompatible with Him will surely live amid His punishment. Perhaps, you're unsure about God's work in the flesh—but one day God's flesh will not directly arrange man's end; instead, His Spirit will arrange man's destination, and at that time people will know that God's flesh and His Spirit are one, that His flesh cannot commit error, and that His Spirit is even more incapable of error. Ultimately, He will surely take those who come alive into His kingdom, not one more, nor one less, and those dead who have not come alive will be tossed into the cavern of Satan.

TO HAVE AN UNCHANGED DISPOSITION IS TO BE IN ENMITY TO GOD

After several thousand years of corruption, man has become numb and dull-witted, a demon that opposes God, to the extent that man's rebelliousness toward God has been documented in the books of history, and even man himself is incapable of giving a full account of his rebellious behavior—for man has been profoundly corrupted by Satan, and has been led astray by Satan that he knows not where to turn. Even today, man still betrays God: When man sees God, he betrays Him, and when he cannot see God, so too does he betray Him. There are even those who, having witnessed God's curses and God's wrath, still betray

Him. And so I say that man's sense has lost its original function, and that man's conscience, too, has lost its original function. The man that I look upon is a beast in human attire, he is a venomous snake, and no matter how pitiable he tries to appear before My eyes, I will never be merciful toward him, for man has no grasp of the difference between black and white, of the difference between truth and non-truth. Man's sense is so benumbed, yet he still wishes to gain blessings; his humanity is so ignoble yet he still wishes to possess the sovereignty of a king. Who could he be the king of, with sense such as that? How could he with such a humanity sit atop a throne? Man truly has no shame! He is a conceited wretch! For those of you who wish to gain blessings, I suggest you first find a mirror and look at your own ugly reflection—do you have what it takes to be a king? Do you have the face of one who could gain blessings? There has not been the slightest change in your disposition and you have not put any of the truth into practice, yet you still wish for a wonderful tomorrow. You're deluding yourself! Born into such a filthy land, man has been severely blighted by society, he has been influenced by feudal ethics, and he has been taught at "institutes of higher learning." The backward thinking, corrupt morality, mean view on life, despicable philosophy, utterly worthless existence, and depraved lifestyle and customs—all of these things have severely intruded upon man's heart, and severely undermined and attacked his conscience. As a result, man is ever more distant from God, and ever more opposed to Him. Man's disposition becomes more vicious by the day, and there is not a single person who will willingly give up anything for God, not a single person who will willingly obey God, nor, moreover, a single person who will willingly seek the appearance of God. Instead, under the domain of Satan, man does nothing but pursue pleasure, giving himself over to the corruption of the flesh in the land of mud. Even when they hear the truth, those who live in darkness give no thought to putting it into practice, nor are they inclined to seek out God even if they have beheld His appearance. How could a mankind so depraved have any chance of salvation? How could a mankind so decadent live in the light?

Man's disposition should be changed starting from the knowledge of his substance and through changes in his thinking, nature, and mental outlook—through fundamental changes. Only in this way will true changes be achieved in the disposition of man. Man's corrupt disposition stems from his being poisoned and trampled upon by

Satan, from the egregious harm that Satan has inflicted upon his thinking, morality, insight, and sense. It is precisely because these fundamental things of man have been corrupted by Satan, and are utterly unlike how God originally created them, that man opposes God and does not understand the truth. Thus, changes in man's disposition should begin with changes in his thinking, insight and sense that will change his knowledge of God and his knowledge of the truth. Those who were born in the most deeply corrupted of all lands are even more ignorant of what God is, or what it means to believe in God. The more corrupted people are, the less they know the existence of God, and the poorer their sense and insight. The source of man's opposition and rebelliousness against God is his corruption by Satan. Because he has been corrupted by Satan, man's conscience has grown numb, he is immoral, his thoughts are degenerate, and he has a backward mental outlook. Before he was corrupted by Satan, man naturally followed God and obeyed His words. He was naturally of sound sense and conscience, and of normal humanity. After being corrupted by Satan, his original sense, conscience, and humanity grew dull and were impaired by Satan. Thus, he has lost his obedience and love toward God. Man's sense has become aberrant, his disposition has become the same as that of an animal, and his rebelliousness toward God is ever more frequent and grievous. Yet man still neither knows nor recognizes this, and merely blindly opposes and rebels. The revelation of man's disposition is the expression of his sense, insight and conscience, and because his sense and insight are unsound, and his conscience has grown supremely dull, thus his disposition is rebellious against God. If man's sense and insight cannot change, then changes in his disposition are out of the question, as is being after God's heart. If man's sense is unsound, then he cannot serve God and is unfit for use by God. "Normal sense" refers to obeying and being faithful to God, to yearning for God, to being unequivocal toward God, and to having a conscience toward God. It refers to being of one heart and mind toward God, and not deliberately opposing God. Those who are of an aberrant sense are not like this. Since man was corrupted by Satan, he has produced conceptions about God, and he has had no loyalty or yearning for God, to say nothing of a conscience toward God. Man deliberately opposes and passes judgments on God, and, furthermore, hurls invective at Him behind His back. Man clearly knows He is God, yet still passes judgments on Him behind His back, has no intention of obeying Him, and merely makes blind demands and requests of God. Such people—people who have aberrant sense—are incapable of knowing their own despicable behavior or of regretting their rebelliousness. If people are capable of knowing themselves, then they have regained a little of their sense; the more people are rebellious against God but do not know themselves, the more they are of unsound sense.

The source of the revelation of man's corrupt disposition is nothing more than his dulled conscience, his malicious nature and his unsound sense; if man's conscience and sense are able to return to normal, then he will become fit for use before God. It is simply because man's conscience has always been numb, man's sense has never been sound, and is increasingly dull that man is increasingly rebellious toward God, such that he even nailed Jesus to the cross and has refused God incarnate of the last days entry into his home, and condemns God's flesh, and sees God's flesh as vile and lowly. If man had but a little humanity, he would not be so cruel in his treatment of God's incarnate flesh; if he had but a little sense, he would not be so vicious in his treatment of the flesh of God incarnate; if he had but a little conscience, he would not be so "grateful" to God incarnate in this way. Man lives in the era of God become flesh, yet he is incapable of thanking God for giving him such a good opportunity, and instead curses the coming of God, or completely ignores the fact of God's incarnation, and is seemingly against it and weary of it. Regardless of how man treats the coming of God, God, in short, has always carried on with His work regardless—even though man has not been the slightest bit welcoming toward Him, and blindly makes requests of Him. Man's disposition has become supremely vicious, his sense has grown supremely dull, and his conscience has been completely trampled by the evil one and long ago ceased to be the original conscience of man. Man is not only ungrateful to God incarnate for bestowing so much life and grace upon mankind, but has even become resentful toward God for giving him the truth; it is because man has not the slightest interest in the truth that he is resentful toward God. Not only is man unable to lay down his life for God incarnate, but he also tries to extract favors from Him, and claims an interest that is dozens of times greater than what man has given to God. People of such conscience and sense take all this as a given, and still believe that they have expended so much for God, and that God has given them too little. There are people who have given Me a bowl of water yet held out their hands and demanded the equivalent of^[a] two bowls of milk, or have given Me a room for one night but tried to charge Me many times more in accommodation fees. With such a humanity, and such a conscience, how could you still wish to gain life? What contemptible wretches you are! It is because of this humanity and conscience of man that God incarnate wanders across the land, with no place to find shelter. Those who are truly possessed of conscience and humanity should worship and wholeheartedly serve God incarnate not because of how much work He has done, but even if He were to do no work at all. This is what should be done by those who are of sound sense, and it is the duty of man. Most people even speak of conditions in their service to God: They do not care whether He is God or a man, and they only talk of their own conditions, and only pursue the achievement of their own desires. When you cook for Me, you demand chef's fees, when you run for Me, you ask for running fees, when you work for Me you demand work fees, when you wash My clothes you demand laundry fees, when you provide for the church you demand recuperation costs, when you speak you demand speaker's fees, when you give out books you demand distribution fees, and when you write you demand writing fees. Those I have dealt with even demand recompense from Me, while those who have been sent home demand reparations for the damage to their name; those who are unmarried demand a dowry, or compensation for their lost youth, those who kill a chicken demand butcher's fees, those who fry food demand frying fees, and those who make soup demand payment for that, too.... This is your lofty and mighty humanity, and these are the actions dictated by your warm conscience. Where is your sense? Where is your humanity? Let Me tell you! If you carry on like this, I will cease to work among you. I will not work among a pack of beasts in human attire, I will not suffer thus for such a group of people whose fair face hides a feral heart, I will not endure for such a pack of animals that has not the slightest possibility of salvation. The day I turn My back on you is the day you die, it is the day that darkness comes upon you, and the day that you are forsaken by the light! Let Me tell you! I will never be benevolent to a group such as yours, a group which is beneath even animals! There are limits to My words and actions, and with your humanity and conscience as they are, I will do no more work, for you are too lacking in conscience, you have caused Me too much pain, and your despicable behavior disgusts Me too much! People who are so lacking in humanity and conscience will never have the chance of salvation; I would never save such heartless and ungrateful people. When My day comes, I will rain down My scorching flames for all eternity upon the children of disobedience that once provoked My fierce wrath, I will impose My everlasting punishment upon those animals that once hurled invective at Me and forsook Me, I will burn for all time with the fires of My anger the sons of disobedience that once ate and lived together with Me but did not believe in Me, and insulted and betrayed Me. I will subject all those who provoked My anger to My punishment, I will rain down the entirety of My anger upon those beasts that once wished to stand shoulder-to-shoulder with Me yet did not worship or obey Me, the rod with which I strike man will fall upon those animals who once enjoyed My care and the mysteries that I spoke, and who tried to take material enjoyments from Me. I will be forgiving of no person who tries to take My place; I will spare none of those who attempt to wrest food and clothes from Me. For now, you remain free from harm and continue to overreach yourselves in the demands you make of Me. When the day of wrath arrives you will not make any more demands of Me; at that time, I will let you “enjoy” yourselves to your heart’s content, I will force your face into the earth, and you will never be able to get up again! Sooner or later, I am going to “repay” this debt to you—and I hope you patiently await the arrival of this day.

If these contemptible beings can truly set aside their extravagant desires and return to God, then they still have the chance of salvation; if man has a heart that truly yearns for God, then he will not be abandoned by God. Man fails to gain God not because God has emotion, or because God is unwilling to be gained by man, but because man does not want to gain God, and because man does not urgently seek God. How could one of those who truly seek God be cursed by God? How could one of sound sense and sensitive conscience be cursed by God? How could one who truly worships and serves God be consumed by the fires of His wrath? How could one who is happy to obey God be kicked out of God’s house? How could one who could not love God enough live in God’s punishment? How could someone who is happy to forsake everything for God be left with nothing? Man is unwilling to pursue God, unwilling to spend his belongings for God, and unwilling to devote a lifetime's effort to God, and instead says that God has gone too far, that too much about God is at odds with man's conceptions. With a humanity like this, even if you were unstinting in your efforts you would still be unable to gain God's approval, to say nothing of the fact that you don't seek God. Do you not know that you are the defective goods of mankind? Do you not know that no humanity is more lowly than yours? Do you not know what your "honorific title" is? Those who truly love God call you the father of the wolf, the mother of the wolf, the son of the wolf, and the grandson of the wolf; you are the descendants of the wolf, the people of the wolf, and you should know your own identity and never forget it. Do not think that you are some superior figure: You are the most vicious group of non-humans among mankind. Do you not know any of this? Do you know how much of a risk I have taken to work among you? If your sense cannot return to normal, and your conscience cannot work normally, then you will never be free of the "wolf" appellation, you will never escape the day of curse, will never escape the day of your punishment. You were born inferior, a thing without any worth. You are inherently a pack of hungry wolves, a pile of debris and rubbish, and, unlike you, I do not work upon you in order to gain favors, but because of the need of work. If you carry on being rebellious in this way, then I will stop My work, and will never work upon you again; on the contrary, I will transfer My work to another group that pleases Me, and in this way will leave you forever, because I am unwilling to look upon those who are in enmity to Me. So then, do you wish to be compatible with Me, or in enmity against Me?

ALL WHO DO NOT KNOW GOD ARE THOSE WHO OPPOSE GOD

To grasp the purpose of God's work, what effect to be achieved in man, and the will of God toward man, this is what every man who follows God should achieve. Now what all men lack is the knowledge of God's work. Man neither comprehends nor understands exactly what constitutes the deeds of God in man, all the work of God, and the will of God since the creation of the world. This inadequacy is not merely seen throughout the religious world, but moreover in all believers of God. When the day comes that you truly behold God and realize the wisdom of God; when you behold all the deeds of God and recognize what God is and has; when you behold His abundance, wisdom, wonder, and all His work in man, it is then that you will have attained successful faith in God. When God is said to be all-encompassing and greatly abundant, what is meant by all-encompassing? And what is meant by abundance? If this you do not understand, then you cannot be deemed a believer of God. Why do I say that those in the religious world do not believe in God and are evildoers, who are of the same kind as the devil? When I say they are evildoers, it is because they do not understand the will of God or see His wisdom. God at no time reveals His work to them; they are blind men, who do not see the deeds of God. They are those forsaken by God and do not possess at all the care and protection of God, much less the work of the Holy Spirit. Those without the work of God are evildoers and stand in opposition to God. Those who I say are in opposition to God are those who do not know God, those who acknowledge God with empty words yet do not know Him, those who follow God yet do not obey Him, and those who revel in the grace of God yet cannot stand witness to Him. Without an understanding of the purpose of God's work and the work of God in man, man cannot be in accord with the heart of God, and cannot stand witness to God. The reason that man opposes God stems, on the one hand, from the corrupt disposition of man, and on the other hand, from ignorance of God and lack of understanding of the principles of God's work and His will toward man. These two aspects merge into a history of man's resistance to God. Novices in the faith oppose God because such opposition lies within their nature, while the opposition against God of those with many years in the faith results from their ignorance of God, in addition to their corrupt disposition. In the time before God became flesh, the measure of whether a man opposed God was whether he kept the decrees set forth by God in heaven. For instance, in the Age of Law, any who did not keep the laws of Jehovah were those who opposed God; any who stole the offerings to Jehovah, and any who stood against those favored by Jehovah were those who opposed God and those who would be stoned to death; any who did not respect his father and mother, and any who struck or cursed another were those who did not keep the laws. And all who did not keep the laws of Jehovah were those who stood against Him. This was no longer so in the Age of Grace, when any who stood against Jesus were those who stood against God, and any who did not obey the words uttered by Jesus were those who stood against God. In this age, the determination of “opposition to God” became more clearly defined and more real. In the time when God had not become flesh, the measure of whether man opposed God was based on whether man worshiped and looked up to the invisible God in heaven. The definition of “opposition to God” at the time was not so real, for man then could neither see God nor know the image of God or how He worked and spoke. Man had no conceptions of God and believed in God in vagueness, for He had not appeared to man. Therefore, however man believed in God in their imaginations, God did not condemn man or ask much from man, for man could not see God at all. When God becomes flesh and comes to work among men, all behold God and hear His words, and all see the doings of God in the flesh. At that time, all the conceptions of man dissolve into nothing but foam. As for those who see the God appearing in the flesh, all who have obedience in their hearts shall not be condemned, whereas those who purposefully stand against Him shall be deemed an opponent of God. Such men are antichrists and are enemies who willfully stand against God. Those who have conceptions regarding God yet gladly obey will not be condemned. God condemns man on the basis of his intentions and actions, never for his thoughts and ideas. If man was condemned on such basis, then not one would be able to escape from the wrathful hands of God. Those who willfully stand against the incarnate God shall be punished for their disobedience. Their willful opposition to God stems from their conceptions of Him, which result in their disturbance to the work of God. Such men knowingly resist and destroy the work of God. Not merely do they have conceptions of God, but they do that which disturbs His work, and it is for this reason that such manner of men shall be condemned. Those who do not engage in willful disturbance of the work shall not be condemned as sinners, for they are able to intentionally obey and not cause disruption and disturbance. Such men shall not be condemned. However, when men have experienced many years of God’s work, if they still harbor their conceptions of God and remain unable to know the work of the incarnate God, and despite many years of experience, they continue to hold onto many conceptions of God and are still unable to come to know God, then even if they cause no trouble with so many conceptions of God in their hearts, and even if such conceptions do not show up, such men are of no service to the work of God. They are unable to preach the gospel or stand witness to God; such men are good-for-nothings and imbeciles. Because they do not know God and are incapable of casting away their conceptions of God, they are condemned. It can be said like this: It is not uncommon for novices in the faith to have conceptions of God or know nothing of Him, but it is abnormal for those who have believed for many years and experienced much of the work of God to hold such conceptions, and much more so for such men to have no knowledge of God. It is as a result of such abnormal state that such men are condemned. Such abnormal men are good-for-nothings; they are those who most oppose God and who have enjoyed the grace of God in vain. All such men shall be eliminated in the end!

Any who do not understand the purpose of God's work are those who stand against God, and even more so are those who are aware of the purpose of God's work yet do not seek to satisfy God. Those who read the Bible in grand churches recite the Bible every day, yet not one understands the purpose of God's work. Not one is able to know God; moreover, not one is in accord with the heart of God. They are all worthless, vile men, each standing on high to teach God. Though they brandish the name of God, they willfully oppose Him. Though they label themselves believers of God, they are ones who eat the flesh and drink the blood of man. All such men are devils who devour the soul of man, demons who purposefully disturb those who try to step onto the right path, and stumbling blocks that impede the path of those who seek God. Though they are of "robust flesh," how are their followers to know that they are antichrists who lead man in opposition to God? How are they to know that they are living devils who specially seek souls to devour? Those who honor themselves before God are the most lowly of men, while those who humble themselves are the most honorable. And those who think themselves to know the work of God and proclaim the work of God to others with great fanfare while their eyes are upon Him—these are the most ignorant of men. Such men are those without the testimony of God, and those who are arrogant and conceited. Those who believe that they have too little knowledge of God despite their actual experience and practical knowledge of God are those most beloved by Him. It is men such as these who truly have testimony and are truly able to be perfected by God. Those who do not understand the will of God are opponents of God; those who understand the will of God yet do not practice the truth are opponents of God; those who eat and drink the words of God yet go against the substance of God's words are opponents of God; those who have conceptions of the incarnate God and intentionally rebel are opponents of God; those who judge God are opponents of God; and any who is unable to know God and bear witness to Him is an opponent of God. So hear My exhortation: If you truly have the faith to walk this path, then continue following it. If you are unable to refrain from opposition to God, then you best walk away before it is too late. Otherwise, it truly bodes ill rather than well, for your nature is much too corrupt. You do not have the slightest loyalty or obedience, or a heart that thirsts for righteousness and truth. And neither have you the slightest bit of love for God. It could be said that your condition before God is in utter shambles. You are not able to keep what you ought or speak what you ought. You are unable to put into practice that which you ought, and you are unable to perform the function that you ought. You do not have the loyalty, conscience, obedience or resolution that you ought. You have not endured the suffering that you ought to have, and you do not have the faith that you ought. You are completely devoid of any merit; do you have the self-respect to go on living? I urge you that you are better off closing your eyes for eternal rest, thereby sparing God from concern for you and enduring suffering for your sake. You believe in God yet do not know His will; you eat and drink the words of God yet are unable to keep the demands of God. You believe in God yet do not know Him, and live though you have no aim to strive for. You have no values and no purpose. You live as a man yet do not have any conscience, integrity, or the slightest credibility. How can you be considered a man? You believe in God yet deceive Him. Furthermore, you take the money of God and eat of His offerings, yet, in the end, show no consideration for God's feelings or conscience toward God. Not even the most trivial of God's demands can you meet. So how can you be considered a man? The food you eat and air you breathe come from God, you enjoy His grace, yet in the end, you do not have the slightest knowledge of God. On the contrary, you have become good-for-nothings that oppose God. Are you not then a beast no better than a dog? Are there any among animals more malicious than you?

Those pastors and elders who stand in the high pulpit teaching man are opponents of God and in alliance with Satan; would not those of you who do not stand in the high pulpit teaching man be even greater opponents of God? Moreover, are you not then in collusion with Satan? Those who do not understand the purpose of God's work do not know how to be in accord with the heart of God. Certainly, it cannot be true for those who understand the purpose of His work? The work of God is never in error; rather, it is the pursuit of man that is flawed. Are not those degenerates who willfully oppose God more sinister and malicious than those pastors and elders? Many are those who oppose God, and among those many men, there exist various kinds of opposition against God. As there are all manner of believers, so too are there all manner of those who oppose God, each unlike the other. Not one of those who do not clearly recognize the purpose of God's work can be saved. Regardless of how man may have opposed God in the past, when man comes to understand the purpose of God's work and dedicates his efforts to satisfying God, his former sins shall be wiped away clean by God. As long as man seeks the truth and practices the truth, God will not keep in mind what he has done. Rather, it is on the basis of man's practice of the truth that God justifies man. This is the righteousness of God. Before man has seen God or experienced His work, regardless of how man acts toward God, He does not keep it in mind. However, once man has seen God and experienced His work, all deeds and actions of man are written down in the "annals" by God, for man has seen God and lived within His work.

When man has truly seen what God has and is, seen His supremacy, and truly come to know the work of God, and furthermore, when the former disposition of man is changed, then man will have completely cast away his rebellious disposition that opposes God. It can be said that every man has once opposed God and every man has once rebelled against God. However, if you are purposeful in obeying the incarnate God, and thenceforth satisfy God's heart with your loyalty, practice the truth that you ought, perform your duty as you ought, and keep the regulations that you ought, then you are one who is willing to cast aside your rebelliousness to satisfy God and one who can be perfected by God. Should you refuse to realize your errors and have no heart of repentance; should you persist in your rebellious ways and have not at all a heart to work with God and satisfy God, then such an obstinate fool as you will certainly be punished and shall never be one to be perfected by God. If such, you are the enemy of God this day and tomorrow, and so too will you remain the enemy of God the day after; you will forever be an opponent of God and the enemy of God. How could God let you off? It is the nature of man to oppose God, but man cannot purposefully seek out the “secrets” of opposing God because changing his nature is an insurmountable task. If such is the case, then you had better walk away before it is too late, lest your chastisement in the future become more severe, and lest your brutish nature emerge and become ungovernable until your fleshly body is terminated by God in the end. You believe in God to be blessed; if in the end, only misfortune befalls you, that would not be worthwhile. I exhort you to best construct another plan; any other exercise would be better than your belief in God. Surely there is more than this one path? Would you not go on living all the same without seeking the truth? Why live at odds with God in this manner?

Ever since people began to tread the right track of life, there have been many things about which they remain unclear. They are still in a complete muddle about God's work, and about much work they should do. This is due, on the one hand, to the deviation in their experience and the limitations in their capacity to receive; on the other, it is because God's work has not yet brought people to this stage. So, everyone is ambiguous about most spiritual matters. Not only are you unclear about what you should enter into; you are even more ignorant about God's work. This is more than simply a matter of the shortcomings in you: It is a great flaw belonging to all those in the religious world. Herein lies the key to why people do not know God, and so this flaw is a common defect shared by all those who seek after Him. Not a single person has ever known God, or has ever seen His true face. It is because of this that God's work becomes as arduous as moving a mountain or draining the sea. How many people have sacrificed their lives for God's work; how many have been cast out on account of His work; how many, for the sake of His work, have been tormented to death; how many, their eyes filled with tears of love for God, have died unjustly; how many have met with cruel and inhumane persecution...? That these tragedies come to pass—is it not all due to people's lack of knowledge about God? How could someone who does not know God have the face to come before Him? How could someone who believes in God and yet persecutes Him have the face to come before Him? These are not solely the inadequacies of those within the religious world, but rather are common to both you and them. People believe in God without knowing Him; it is for this reason alone that they do not revere God in their hearts, and do not fear Him in their hearts. There are even those who, with great pomp and circumstance, do the work that they envision by themselves within this stream, and go about doing God's work according to their own demands and prodigal desires. Many people act wildly, holding God in no esteem but following their own will. Are these not perfect embodiments of people's selfish hearts? Do these not manifest the overabundant element of deception people have? People may indeed be supremely intelligent, but how can their gifts take the place of God's work? People may indeed care for God's burden, but they cannot act too selfishly. Are people's deeds really divine? Can anyone be positively assured? To bear witness to God, to inherit His glory—this is God making an exception and lifting up people; how could they be worthy? God's work has only just begun, His words have only just begun to be spoken. At this point, people feel good about themselves; wouldn't that simply be courting humiliation? They understand far too little. Even the most gifted theoretician, the most silver-tongued orator, cannot describe all of God's abundance—how much the less can you? You had best not set your own worth higher than the heavens, but rather see yourselves as lower than the least of those rational people who seek to love God. This is the path by which you shall enter: to see yourselves as shorter than all others by a span. Why deem yourselves so high? Why place yourselves in such high estimation? On the long journey of life, you have taken but the few first steps. All you see is God's arm, not the whole of God. It behooves you to see more of God's work, to discover more of what you should enter into, because you have changed too little.

In working man and transforming his disposition, God's work never ceases, because they are lacking in too many ways and they fall far short of the standards set by Him. And so it can be said that, in the eyes of God, you will eternally be newborn babes, bearing very few of the elements that please Him, because you are nothing but creatures in God's hands. If one falls into complacency, would he not be loathed by God? That you can satisfy God today is spoken relative to your flesh, but matched against God, you will always be defeated in the arena. Man's flesh has never once known victory. Only through the work of the Holy Spirit is it possible for man to have redeeming features. In truth, out of the myriad things in God's creation, man is the lowest. Though he is the master of all things, man is the only one among them that is subject to Satan's trickery, the only one that falls prey in endless ways to its corruption. Man has never had sovereignty over himself. Most people live in the foul place of Satan, and suffer its derision; it teases them this way and that till they are half alive, enduring every vicissitude, every hardship in the human world. After toying with them, Satan puts an end to their destiny. And so people go through their whole lives in a daze of confusion, never once enjoying the good things that God has prepared for them, but instead being damaged by Satan and left in tatters. Today they have become so enervated and listless that they simply have no inclination to take notice of God's work. If people have no inclination to take notice of God's work, their experience is doomed forever to remain fragmented and incomplete, and their entry will forever be an empty space. In the several thousand years since God came into the world, any number of men with lofty ideals have been used by God to do His work over any number of years; but those who know His work are so few as to be almost non-existent. For this reason, untold numbers of people assume the role of resisting God at the same time that they take on His work, because, rather than doing His work, they actually do human work in a position conferred by God. Can this be called work? How can they enter in? Humanity has taken God's grace and buried it. Because of this, over generations past those who do His work have little entry. They simply do not speak about knowing God's work, because they understand too little of God's wisdom. It can be said that, though there are many who serve God, they have failed to see how exalted He is, and this is why all have set themselves up as God for others to worship.

For so many years God has remained hidden within creation; has observed through so many springs and autumns from behind a veiling mist; has looked down from the third heaven for so many days and nights; has walked among men for so many months and years. He has sat above all men quietly waiting through so many cold winters. Never once has He shown Himself openly to anyone, nor made a single sound, departing without a sign and just as silently returning. Who can know His true face? He has never once spoken to man, never once appeared to man. How easy is it for people to do God's work? Little do they realize that to know Him is of all things the most difficult. Today God has spoken to man, but man has never known Him, because his entry in life is too limited and shallow. Seen from His perspective, people are wholly unfit to appear before God. They have too little understanding of God and are too far estranged from Him. Moreover, the hearts with which they believe in God are too complicated, and they simply do not hold the image of God in their innermost hearts. As a result, God's painstaking effort, and His work, like pieces of gold buried beneath the sand, cannot emit a glint of light. To God, the caliber, motives, and views of these people are loathsome in the extreme. Impoverished in their capacity to receive, unfeeling to the point of insensibility, debased and degenerate, excessively servile, weak and without willpower, they must be led as cattle and horses are led. As for their entry in spirit, or entry in God's work, they pay not the slightest heed, possessing not one jot of determination to suffer for the sake of the truth. For this kind of person to be made complete by God will not be easy. Thus it is vital that you set about your entry from this angle—that through your work and your entry you approach getting to know God's work.

Your work and entry are quite poor; man does not place importance on work and is even more careless with entry. Man does not regard these as lessons that they ought to enter into; therefore, in their spiritual experience, virtually all man sees is fantastical illusions. Not very much is asked of you in terms of your experience in work, but, as one to be perfected by God, you ought to learn to work for God so that you may soon be after God's heart. Throughout the ages, those who did work have been called workers or apostles, which refers to a small number of people used by God. However, the work I speak of today does not refer solely to those workers or apostles; it is directed toward all those to be perfected by God. Perhaps there are many who have little interest in this, but, for the sake of entry, it would be best to discuss this truth.

When work is spoken of, man believes that work is to run to and fro for God, preach in all places, and spend for God. Though this belief is correct, it is too one-sided; what God asks of man is not solely to journey to and fro for God; it is more the ministry and supply within the spirit. Many brothers and sisters have never thought about working for God even after so many years of experience, for work as conceived by man is incongruous with that which is asked of by God. Therefore, man has no interest whatsoever in the matter of work, and this is precisely the reason why the entry of man is also quite one-sided. All of you should begin to enter by working for God, so that you may better experience all its aspects. This is what you should enter into. Work refers not to running to and fro for God; it refers to whether the life of man and what man lives out are for God to enjoy. Work refers to man using faithfulness they have to God and the knowledge they have of God to testify to God and minister to man. This is the responsibility of man and what all man should realize. In other words, your entry is your work; you are seeking to enter during the course of your work for God. Experiencing God is not only being able to eat and drink of His word; more importantly, you must be able to testify to God, to serve God, and to minister to and supply man. This is work, and also your entry; this is what every man should accomplish. There are many who only focus on journeying to and fro for God, and preaching in all places, yet overlook their personal experience and neglect their entry into the spiritual life. This is what causes those who serve God to become those who resist God. For so many years, those who serve God and minister to man have simply regarded working and preaching as entry, and none have taken their own spiritual experience as an important entry. Rather, they capitalize on the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit's work to teach others. When preaching, they are much burdened and receive the work of the Holy Spirit, and through this they release the voice of the Holy Spirit. At that time, those who work feel smug and self-satisfied, as if the work of the Holy Spirit is their own spiritual experience; they feel that all the words they speak during that time are their own being, and also as if their own experience is not as clear as they have described. In addition, they do not have an inkling what to say prior to speaking, but when the Holy Spirit works in them, they have an unceasing and continuous flow of words. After you have preached once in such a way, you feel that your actual stature is not as small as you believed. After the Holy Spirit works similarly in you several times, you then determine that you already have stature and mistakenly believe that the work of the Holy Spirit is your own entry and being. When you constantly have this experience, you become lax about your own entry. You then become lazy without noticing, and place no importance at all on your own entry. Therefore, when you are ministering to others, you must clearly distinguish between your stature and the work of the Holy Spirit. This will better facilitate your entry and better benefit your experience. Man regarding the work of the Holy Spirit as their own experience is the beginning of man's degeneration. Hence, whatever duty you perform, you ought to regard your entry as a key lesson.

One works to fulfill the will of God, to bring all those who are after God's heart before Him, to bring man to God, and to introduce the Holy Spirit's work and God's guidance to man, thereby perfecting the fruits of God's work. For this reason, it is imperative that you grasp the substance of working. As one used by God, all men are worthy of working for God, that is, all have the opportunity to be used by the Holy Spirit. However, there is one point that you must realize: When man does the work of God, man has the opportunity to be used by God, but what is said and known by man are not entirely the stature of man. You can only better come to know your deficiencies in your work, and receive greater enlightenment from the Holy Spirit, thereby allowing you to gain better entry in your work. If man regards guidance from God as man's own entry and what is inherent within man, there is no potential for man's stature to grow. The Holy Spirit enlightens man when they are in a normal state; at such times, man often mistakes the enlightenment they receive as their own stature in reality, for the Holy Spirit enlightens in a most normal way: by making use of what is inherent within man. When man works and speaks, or during man's prayer in his spiritual devotions, a truth will suddenly become clear to them. In reality, however, what man sees is only enlightenment by the Holy Spirit (naturally, this is related to cooperation from man) and not man's true stature. After a period of experience in which man encounters numerous real difficulties, the true stature of man is made apparent under such circumstances. Only at that time does man discover that man's stature is not so great, and the selfishness, personal considerations, and greed of man all emerge. Only after several cycles of such experience will many of those who are awakened within their spirits realize that it was not their own reality in the past, but a momentary illumination from the Holy Spirit, and man had but received the light. When the Holy Spirit enlightens man to understand the truth, it is often in a clear and distinct manner, without context. That is, He does not incorporate the difficulties of man into this revelation, and rather directly reveals the truth. When man encounters difficulties in entry, man then incorporates the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit, and this becomes the actual experience of man. For instance, an unmarried sister speaks thus during fellowship: "We do not seek glory and riches or covet the happiness of a love between husband and wife; we seek only to devote a heart of purity and singleness to God." She goes on to say: "Once people marry, there is much that besets them, and their heart of love for God is no longer genuine. Their hearts are always preoccupied with their family and their spouse, and so their hearts become much more complicated...." As she speaks, it is as if the words she speaks are what she is thinking in her heart; her words are resounding and powerful, as if all that she speaks comes from deep in her heart. She wishes she could devote herself entirely to God and hopes that brothers and sisters like her share the same resolution. It can be said that your resolution and feeling of being moved at this moment come entirely from the work of the Holy Spirit. When the method of God's work changes, you have grown a few years in age; you see that all your classmates and friends of your age have husbands, or you hear that after so-and-so became married, her spouse took her into the city to live and she got a job there. When you see her, your heart begins to feel envious. You see that she is full of charm and poise from head to toe; when she speaks, she has a cosmopolitan bearing and has completely lost her provincial air. This stirs up feelings in you. You, having spent for God all along, have no family or career, and have withstood much dealing; long ago, you entered middle age, and your youth quietly slipped away, as if you have been in a dream. You have come all this way to this day, but you do not know where to settle down. It is at that time you are in a whirlwind of thought, as if you are out of your wits. All alone and unable to sleep soundly, finding it difficult to fall asleep throughout the night, you, before you know it, begin to think of your resolution and your solemn vows to God. Why have these circumstances befallen you? Before you know it, silent tears fall and you are greatly pained. You come before God to pray and begin to think of the intimacy and inseparable closeness during your happy days with God. Scene after scene appears before your eyes, and the oath you made on that day rings once again in your ears, "Is God not my only intimate?" By that time, you are sobbing: "God! Beloved God! I have already given my heart to You entirely. I wish to be promised to You forever, and I will love You unchangingly my whole life long...." Only as you struggle in that extreme suffering do you truly sense how lovely God is, and only then do you realize clearly: I gave my all to God long ago. After such a blow, you become much more experienced in this matter and see that the work of the Holy Spirit at the time is not the possession of man. In your experiences afterward, you are no longer constrained in this entry; it is as if your scars have greatly benefited your entry. Whenever you encounter such circumstances, you will immediately recall your tears from that day, as if you are reuniting with God. You are in constant fear of again severing your relationship with God and damaging the emotional attachment (normal relationship) between you and God. This is your work and your entry. Therefore, when you receive the work of the Holy Spirit, you ought to more so focus on your entry at the same time, seeing exactly what is the work of the Holy Spirit and what is your entry, as well as incorporating the work of the Holy Spirit into your entry, so that you may be better perfected by Him and allow the substance of the Holy Spirit's work to be wrought in you. During the course of your experience of the Holy Spirit's work, you come to know the Holy Spirit, as well as yourselves, and amidst the numerous instances of extreme suffering, you develop a normal relationship with God, and the relationship between you and God grows closer day by day. After countless instances of pruning and refinement, you develop a true love for God. That is why you must realize that suffering, smiting, and tribulations are not daunting; what is frightening is having only the work of the Holy Spirit but not your entry. When the day comes that the work of God is finished, you will have labored for nothing; though you experienced the work of God, you will not have come to know the Holy Spirit or have had your own entry. The enlightenment of man by the Holy Spirit is not to sustain the passion of man; it is to open up a way out for the entry of man, as well as to allow man to come to know the Holy Spirit, and from that develop a heart of reverence and adoration for God.

God has entrusted much to humans and has also addressed their entry in countless ways. But because people's caliber is considerably poor, many of the words of God have failed to take root. There are various reasons for this poor caliber, such as the corruption of human thought and morality, and a lack of proper upbringing; feudal superstitions that have seriously taken hold of the heart of man; depraved and decadent lifestyles that have lodged many ills in the deepest corners of the human heart; a superficial grasp of cultural literacy, with almost ninety-eight percent of the people lacking education in cultural literacy and, what is more, very few receiving higher levels of cultural education, so that people basically have no idea what is meant by God or the Spirit, but have only a vague and unclear image of God acquired from feudal superstitions; pernicious influences that thousands of years of "the lofty spirit of nationalism" have left deep in the human heart as well as the feudal thinking by which people are bound and chained, without an iota of freedom, with no will to aspire or persevere, no desire to make progress, remaining instead passive and regressive, entrenched in a slave mentality. And so on. These objective factors have imparted an indelibly filthy and ugly cast to the ideological outlook, ideals, morality, and disposition of humanity. Humans, it would seem, are living in a terrorist world of darkness, which none among them seeks to transcend, and none among them thinks of moving on to an ideal world; rather, they are content with their lot in life,^[1] to spend their days bearing and raising children, striving, sweating, going about their chores, dreaming of a comfortable and happy family, of conjugal affection, of filial children, of joy in their twilight years as they peacefully live out their lives. ... For tens, thousands, tens of thousands of years until now, people have been squandering their time in this way, with no one creating a perfect life, all intent only on mutual slaughter in this dark world, on the race for fame and fortune, and on intriguing against one another. Who has ever sought after God's will? Has anyone ever heeded the work of God? All the parts of humanity occupied by the influence of darkness have long since become human nature, and so it is quite difficult to carry out the work of God, and people have even less heart to pay attention to what God has entrusted to them today. Anyway, I believe that people will not mind Me uttering these words since what I am talking about is the history of thousands of years. To speak of history means facts and, moreover, scandals that are obvious to all, so what point is there in saying that which is contrary to fact? But I also believe that reasonable people, upon seeing these words, will awaken and strive for progress. God hopes that humans can live and work in peace and contentment while at the same time being able to love God. It is God's will that all of humanity may enter into rest; more than this, the filling of the entire land with God's glory is God's great desire. It is just a shame that human beings remain benighted and unawakened, so badly corrupted by Satan that today they no longer have the likeness of humans. So human thought, morality and education form an important link, with training in cultural literacy forming a second link, the better to raise the cultural caliber of human beings and change their spiritual outlook.

Actually, God does not require much of humanity, but because the gap between people's caliber and the standard God requires is so large, most people simply look up in the direction of God's requirements but lack the ability to fulfill them. People's innate endowment, together with what they are equipped with after birth, is far from sufficient to meet the requirements of God. But simply to recognize this point is not a surefire solution. Distant water cannot quench an immediate thirst. Even if people know themselves to be inferior to dust, if they do not have the resolve to satisfy God's heart, much less take the advanced way to meet God's requirements, then what value does that kind of knowledge have? Is it not like drawing water with a sieve—a futile effort? The crux of what I am saying has to do with entry; that is the main topic.

Footnotes:

1. "Content with their lot in life" indicates that people stick by the rules and do nothing that violates laws.

During the course of man's entry, life is always boring, full of the monotonous elements of spiritual life, such as doing some praying, eating and drinking the words of God, or forming gatherings, so that people always feel that believing in God brings no great enjoyment. Such spiritual activities are always carried out on the basis of humanity's original disposition, which has been corrupted by Satan. Although people can sometimes receive the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit, their original thinking, disposition, lifestyles and habits are still rooted within, and so their nature remains unchanged. The superstitious activities that people engage in are what God hates the most, but many people are still unable to let go of them, thinking these superstitious activities to be decreed by God, and even today have yet to shed them completely. Such things as the arrangements young people make for wedding feasts and bridal trousseaus; gifts of cash, banquets, and similar ways with which joyous occasions are celebrated; ancient formulae that have been handed down; all the meaningless superstitious activities conducted in behalf of the dead and their obsequies: these are even more detestable to God. Even Sunday (the Sabbath, as observed by Jews) is detestable to Him; and the social relationships and worldly interactions between man and man are all the more despised and rejected by God. Even the Spring Festival and Christmas Day, which are known to everyone, are not decreed by God, let alone the toys and decorations (couplets, New Year cake, firecrackers, lanterns, Christmas gifts, Christmas parties, and Holy Communion) for these festive holidays—are they not idols in the minds of men? The breaking of bread on the Sabbath, wine, and fine linen are even more emphatically idols. All the traditional festival days popular in China, such as the Dragon Heads-raising Day, the Dragon Boat

Festival, the Mid-Autumn Festival, the Laba Festival, and New Year's Day, and the festivals in the religious world, such as Easter, Baptism Day, and Christmas Day, all of these unjustifiable festivals have been arranged and handed down from olden times to today by many people, and are thoroughly incompatible with the human race that God created. It is humanity's rich imagination and ingenious conception that have allowed them to be passed down to today. They appear to be free of flaws, but are in fact tricks Satan plays on humanity. The more a place is thronged with Satans, and the more obsolete and backward that place is, the more deeply entrenched are its feudal customs. These things bind people tight, allowing absolutely no room for movement. Many of the festivals in the religious world seem to display great originality and to create a bridge to the work of God, but they are actually the invisible ties with which Satan binds people from coming to know God—they are all Satan's cunning stratagems. In fact, when a stage of God's work is finished, He has already destroyed the tools and the style of that time, without leaving any trace. However, "devout believers" continue to worship those tangible material objects; meanwhile they consign what God has to the back of their minds, studying it no further, seeming to be full of the love of God when they actually pushed Him out of the house long ago and placed Satan on the table to worship. Portraits of Jesus, the Cross, Mary, Jesus' Baptism and the Last Supper—people venerate these as the Lord of Heaven, all the while repeatedly crying out "God the Father." Isn't this all a joke? To this day, many similar sayings and practices that have been passed down amongst humanity are hateful to God; they seriously obstruct the way ahead for God and, furthermore, create huge setbacks to humanity's entry. Putting aside the extent to which Satan has corrupted humanity, the insides of people are completely filled up with things like the law of Witness Lee, the experiences of Lawrence, the surveys by Watchman Nee, and the work of Paul. There is simply no way for God to work upon human beings, because they have inside them too much of individualism, laws, rules, regulations, systems, and the like; these things, in addition to people's feudal superstitious tendencies, have captured and devoured humanity. It is as if people's thoughts are an interesting film narrating a fairy tale in full color, with fantastic beings riding the clouds, so imaginative as to amaze people, leaving people dazed and speechless. To tell the truth, the work that God comes to do today is mainly to deal with and dispel the superstitious attributes of human beings and completely transform their mental outlook. God's work is not what has been handed down the generations and preserved till today by humanity; it is work as personally initiated by Him and completed by Him, without any need for succeeding to the legacy of a certain great spiritual man, or inheriting any work of a representative nature done by God in some other era. Human beings need not concern themselves with any of these things. God today has another style of speaking and of working, so why should human beings trouble themselves? If humans walk the path of today within the current stream while continuing the legacy of their "ancestors," they will not reach their destination. God feels deep repugnance for this particular mode of human behavior, just as He abominates the years, months and days of the human world.

The best way to change human disposition is to reverse those portions of people's innermost hearts that have been profoundly poisoned, allowing people to begin changing their thinking and morality. First of all, people need to see clearly that all these religious rites, religious activities, years and months, and festivals are hateful to God. They should break free from these bonds of feudal thinking and eradicate every trace of their deep-seated propensity to superstition. These are all included in humanity's entry. You must understand why God leads humanity out of the secular world, and again why He leads humanity away from rules and regulations. This is the gate through which you will enter, and although it has nothing to do with your spiritual experience, these are the greatest obstacles blocking your entry, blocking your knowing God. They form a net which enmeshes people. Many people read the Bible too much and can even recite numerous passages from the Bible from memory. In their entry today, people unconsciously use the Bible to measure the work of God, as if the basis of this stage in the work of God is the Bible and its source is the Bible. When the work of God is in line with the Bible, people strongly support the work of God and regard Him with newfound esteem; when the work of God does not match up with the Bible, people become so anxious that they break into a sweat, searching in it for the basis of the work of God; if the work of God has no mention in the Bible, people will ignore God. It can be said that, as far as God's work today is concerned, most people accept it with gingerly caution, give it selective obedience, and feel indifferent toward knowing it; as for the things of the past, they hold on to one half and abandon the other. Can this be called entry?

Holding the books of others as treasures, and treating them as the golden key to the gate of the kingdom, people simply show no interest in what God requires of them today. Moreover, many “intelligent experts” hold the words of God in their left hand and the “masterworks” of others in their right, as if they want to find the basis of the words of God in these masterworks in order to fully prove that the words of God are correct, and they even explain God’s words to others by integrating them with the masterworks, as if they were at work. To tell the truth, there are many “scientific researchers” among humanity who have never thought highly of today’s latest scientific achievements, scientific achievements that are without precedent (i.e. the work of God, the words of God, and the path for life entry), so people are all “self-reliant,” “preaching” far and wide on the strength of their silver tongues, and flaunting “the good name of God.” Meanwhile, their own entry is in peril and they seem to be as far from God’s requirements as the creation is from this moment. How easy is it to do the work of God? It seems that people have already made up their minds to leave half of themselves to yesterday and bring half to today, deliver half to Satan and present half to God, as if this is the way to ease their conscience and feel some sense of comfort. People’s inner worlds are so insidious, they are afraid of losing not only tomorrow but also yesterday, deeply afraid of offending both Satan and the God of today, who seems to be and yet not to be. Because people have failed to cultivate their thinking and morality properly, they are exceptionally lacking in discernment, and they simply cannot tell whether or not today’s work is that of God. Perhaps it is because people’s feudal and superstitious thinking is so deep that they have long placed superstition and truth, God and idols, in the same category, not caring to distinguish between these things, and they seem unable to discriminate clearly even after racking their brains. That is why human beings have stopped in their tracks and no longer move forward. All of these problems arise from people’s lack of the correct kind of ideological education, which creates great difficulties for their entry. As a result, people never feel any interest in the work of the true God, but persistently stick to^[1] the work of man (such as those whom they view as great men) as if it is imprinted with a brand. Are not these the latest topics that humanity should enter into?

WORK AND ENTRY (4)

If man can truly enter in accordance with the Holy Spirit's work, his life would quickly sprout like a bamboo shoot after a spring rain. Judging from most people's current statures, no one is attaching any importance to life. Instead, people are placing importance on some inconsequential surface matters. Or they are rushing hither and yon and working aimlessly and randomly without focus, not knowing in which direction to go and much less for whom. They are merely "concealing themselves humbly." The truth is, few among you know God's intentions for the last days. Scarcely any of you know God's footprint, and even fewer know what God's ultimate accomplishment will be. Yet everyone, by sheer willpower, is accepting discipline and dealing from others, as if gearing up^[1] and waiting for the day when they have finally made it and can relax. I will not offer any commentary on these "wonders" among people, but there is one point that you must all understand. Right now most people are progressing toward abnormality,^[2] their entry steps already marching toward a dead end.^[3] Perhaps many people think that is the Shangri-La that man longs for, believing it to be the place of freedom. In fact, it is not. Or one can say that people have already gone astray. But regardless of what people are doing, I still want to talk about what man should enter into. The merits and shortcomings of the multitudes are not the primary topic of this discourse. I hope that all brothers and sisters will be able to receive My words purely and precisely and not misunderstand My intention.

God is incarnated in the Chinese mainland, what the compatriots in Hong Kong and Taiwan call the inland. When God came from above to the earth, no one in heaven and earth knew about it, for this is the true meaning of God returning in a concealed fashion. He has been in the flesh working and living for a long time, yet no one has known about it. Even to this day, no one recognizes it. Perhaps this will remain an eternal riddle. God's coming into flesh this time is not something anyone is able to be aware of. No matter how large-scale and powerful the Spirit's work, God always stays composed, never giving Himself away. One can say that it is as if this stage of His work is taking place in the heavenly realm. Even though it is perfectly obvious to everyone, no one recognizes it. When God finishes this stage of His work, everyone will awake from their long dream and reverse their past attitude.^[1] I remember God once saying, "Coming into flesh this time is like falling into the tiger's den." What this means is that because this round of God's work has God coming into flesh and being born in the dwelling place of the great red dragon, His coming to earth this time is accompanied even more so with extreme dangers. What He faces are knives and guns and clubs; what He faces is temptation; what He faces are crowds wearing murderous looks. He risks being killed at any moment. God did come with wrath. However, He came in order to do the work of perfection, meaning to do the second part of His work that continues after redemption work. For the sake of this stage of His work, God has devoted utmost thought and care and is using every conceivable means to avoid the assaults of temptation, concealing Himself humbly and never flaunting His identity. In rescuing man off the cross, Jesus was only completing redemption work; He was not doing perfection work. Thus only half of God's work was being done, and finishing the redemption work was only half of His whole plan. As the new age was about to begin and the old one about to recede, God the Father began to deliberate the second part of His work and started preparing for it. In the past, this incarnation in the last days may not have been prophesied, and therefore that laid a foundation for the increased secrecy surrounding God's coming into flesh this time. At the break of dawn, unbeknownst to any, God came to earth and began His life in the flesh. People were unaware of this moment. Maybe they were all fast asleep, maybe many who were watchfully awake were waiting, and maybe many were praying silently to God in heaven. Yet among all these many people, not one knew that God had already arrived on earth. God worked like this so as to more smoothly carry out His work and achieve better results, and it was also to avoid more temptations. As man's spring slumber breaks, God's work will have long been finished and He shall depart, bringing to a close His life of roaming and sojourning on earth. Because God's work requires God to act and speak personally, and because there is no way for man to help, God has endured extreme pain to come to earth to do the work Himself. Man is unable to stand in for God's work. Therefore God risked dangers several thousand times greater than those during the Age of Grace to come down to where the great red dragon dwells to do His own work, to put all His thinking and care into redeeming this group of impoverished people, redeeming this group of people mired in a heap of manure. Even though no one knows of God's existence, God is not troubled because it greatly benefits God's work. Everyone is atrociously evil, so how can anyone tolerate God's existence? That is why on earth God is always silent. No matter how excessively cruel man is, God does not take any of it to heart, but just keeps doing the work He needs to do so as to fulfill the greater commission that the heavenly Father gave Him. Who among you has recognized God's loveliness? Who shows more consideration for God the Father's burden than His Son does? Who is able to understand the will of God the Father? God the Father's Spirit in heaven is often troubled, and His Son on earth prays frequently over God the Father's will, worrying His heart to pieces. Is there anyone who knows of God the Father's love for His Son? Is there anyone who knows how the beloved Son misses God the Father? Torn between heaven and earth, the two are constantly gazing after each other from afar, side by side in Spirit. O mankind! When will you be considerate of God's heart? When will you understand God's intention? Father and Son have always depended on each other. Why then should They be separated, one in heaven above and one on earth below? The Father loves His Son as the Son loves His Father. Why then should He have to wait with such longing and long with such anxiety? Although They have not been separated for long, does anyone know that the Father has already been anxiously yearning for so many days and nights and has long been looking forward to His beloved Son's quick return? He observes, He sits in silence, He waits. It is all for His beloved Son's quick return. When will He again be with the Son who is wandering on earth? Even though once together, They will be together for eternity, how can He endure the thousands of days and nights of separation, one in heaven above and one on earth below? Tens of years on earth are like thousands of years in heaven. How could God the Father not worry? When God comes to earth, He experiences the many vicissitudes of the human world just as man does. God Himself is innocent, so why let God suffer the same pain as man? No wonder God the Father longs so urgently for His Son; who can understand God's heart? God gives man too much; how can man adequately repay God's heart? Yet man gives God too little; how could God not therefore be worried?

1. "Reverse their past attitude" refers to how people's conceptions and views about God change once they know God.

Scarcely one among men understands God's urgent heart because people's caliber is too low and their spiritual sensitivity quite dull, and because they all neither notice nor heed what God is doing. So God keeps worrying about man, as if man's beastly nature could break out at any moment. This further shows that God's coming to earth is accompanied by great temptations. But for the sake of completing a group of people, God, laden with glory, told man of His every intention, hiding nothing. He has firmly resolved to complete this group of people. Therefore, come hardship or temptation, He looks away and ignores it all. He only quietly does His own work, firmly believing that one day when God has gained glory, man will know God, and believing that when man has been completed by God, he will fully understand God's heart. Right now there may be people tempting God or misunderstanding God or blaming God; God takes none of that to heart. When God descends into glory, people will all understand that everything God does is for the well-being of mankind, and people will all understand that everything God does is so that mankind can better survive. God's coming is accompanied by temptations, and God also comes with majesty and wrath. By the time God leaves man, He will have already gained glory, and He will leave fully laden with glory and with the joy of return. The God working on earth does not take things to heart no matter how people reject Him. He is just doing His work. God's creation of the world goes back thousands of years, He has come to earth to do an immeasurable amount of work, and He has fully experienced the human world's rejection and slander. No one welcomes God's arrival; everyone merely regards Him with a cold eye. In the course of these several thousand years' worth of hardships, man's conduct has long ago shattered God's heart. He no longer pays attention to people's rebellion, but is instead making a separate plan to transform and cleanse man. The derision, the slander, the persecution, the tribulation, the suffering of crucifixion, the exclusion by man, and so on that God has experienced in the flesh—God has tasted enough of these. God in the flesh has thoroughly suffered the miseries of the human world. The Spirit of God the Father in heaven long ago found such sights unbearable and threw His head back and shut His eyes, waiting for His beloved Son to return. All He wishes for is that people all listen and obey, are able to feel great shame before His flesh, and not rebel against Him. All He wishes for is that people all believe that God exists. He long ago stopped making greater demands of man because God has paid too high a price, yet man is resting easy,^[1] not at all taking God's work to heart.

Although what I am discussing today about God's work is filled with many "baseless words,"^[2] it has great relevance for man's entry. I am just talking some about work and then talking some about entry, but neither aspect is dispensable, and when combined, these two aspects are even more beneficial to man's life. The two aspects are complementary^[3] and greatly beneficial, causing people to further understand God's will and promoting people's relationship with God. Through today's talk on work, people's relationship with God is further improved, mutual understanding is deepened, and man is able to give greater consideration and care to God's burden; man can feel what God feels, have more confidence about being changed by God, and wait for God's reappearance. This is God's sole request of man today—to live out the image of one who loves God, so that the light of the crystallization of God's wisdom flashes forth in the age of darkness and so that man's living leaves behind a radiant page in God's work, shining forever in the East, commanding the attention of the world

Footnotes:

1. "Resting easy" indicates that people are unconcerned about God's work and don't see it as important.
2. "Baseless words" indicates that people are fundamentally incapable of grasping the source of the words that are spoken. They don't know what is being said. This phrase is used ironically.
3. "Complementary" indicates that if two aspects of "work" and "entry" are combined in fellowship, this is of greater benefit to our knowledge of God. and the admiration of all. This, more assuredly, is the better entry for those who love God today.

WORK AND ENTRY (5)

Today you all know that God is leading people onto the right track of life, that He is leading man to take the next step into another age, that He is leading man to transcend this dark old era, out of the flesh, away from the oppression of the forces of darkness and the influence of Satan, so that each and every person live in a world of freedom. For the sake of a beautiful tomorrow, and so that people may be bolder in their steps tomorrow, the Spirit of God plans everything for man, and in order that man may have greater enjoyment, God devotes all of His efforts in the flesh to preparing the path ahead of man, hastening the arrival of the day for which man longs. Would that you all cherish this beautiful moment; it is no easy feat to come together with God. Although you have never known Him, you have already long since been together with Him. If only everyone could remember these beautiful yet fleeting days forever, and make them their cherished possessions on earth. God's work has long since been revealed to man—but because people's hearts are too complicated, and because they have never had any interest in it, God's work has remained paused upon its original foundation. Their thoughts, conceptions, and mental outlook, it would seem, remain outdated, so much so that the mental outlook of many of them resembles that of the primitives of ancient times, and has not changed in the slightest. As a result, people are still bewildered and unclear about the work God does. They're even more unclear about what they do and what they should enter into. These things present tremendous difficulties to God's work and prevent people's lives from ever moving forward. Because of man's essence and the root reason of their poor caliber, they are fundamentally incapable of grasping these things, and never treat them as important. If you wish for progress in your life, you must begin paying attention to the details of your existence, grasping each and every one of them in order to control your entry into life, thoroughly transform the heart of every one of you, and resolve the problems of the emptiness within your hearts and a stale and dreary existence that afflict you, so that each of you will be renewed from the inside out and truly enjoy a life that is heightened, transcendent, and free. The aim is that each of you will be able to come alive, be revived in your spirit, and come to possess the likeness of a living being. Of all the brothers and sisters you come in contact with, rarely are there any who are vibrant and fresh. They are all like ancient ape men, simple-minded and stupid, apparently without any prospect of development. Even worse, the brothers and sisters I've come in contact with have been as boorish and uncivilized as mountain savages. They know hardly anything about manners, much less any of the basics of how to behave. Many are the young sisters who, though they may look intelligent and handsome, and have grown as pretty as flowers, still get themselves up in an "alternative" fashion. One sister's^[a] hair covers her whole face, leaving nothing to be seen of her eyes. Though her facial features are clean and decent, her hairstyle is repulsive, giving off a weird sensation, as if she were the number one offender in a juvenile detention center. Her eyes, limpid and bright, like emeralds in water, are offset by her clothing and hairstyle, making them seem like a pair of lanterns, seen suddenly on a pitch-dark night, that flash intermittently with a blinding brilliance that strikes terror into men's hearts, and yet it also appears as if she's deliberately hiding from someone. When I meet her, she's always devising ways to get away from the "scene," like a murderer who has just killed someone and, being afraid of being found out, is constantly dodging about; so, too, is she like the black Africans^[1] who have been slaves for generations and can never raise their heads before others. This spectrum of behaviors, down to the way these people dress and groom themselves, would take several months of work to improve.

For thousands of years, the Chinese people have led the life of slaves, and this has so constrained their thoughts, concepts, life, language, behavior, and actions that they have been left without the slightest freedom. Several thousand years of history have taken vital people possessed of a spirit and worn them down into something akin to corpses bereft of a spirit. Many are those who live under the butcher's knife of Satan, many are those who live in homes like the lairs of beasts, many are those who eat the same food as oxen or horses, and many are those who lie, insensate and in disarray, in the “netherworld.” In outward appearance, people are no different from primitive man, their place of rest is like a hell, and for companions they are surrounded by all manner of filthy demons and evil spirits. On the outside, human beings appear to be higher “animals”; in fact, they live and reside with filthy demons. Without anyone to tend to them, people live inside Satan’s ambushade, caught in its toils with no way of escape. Rather than saying that they gather with their loved ones in cozy homes, living happy and fulfilling lives, one should say that human beings live in Hades, dealing with demons and associating with devils. In fact, people are still bound by Satan, they live where filthy demons gather, and they are manipulated by these filthy demons, as if their beds were a place for their corpses to slumber on, as if they were a cozy nest. On entering their home, the courtyard is cold and lonely, a chill wind whistling through the dry branches. When I open the door to the “living space,” the room is pitch black—you could stretch out your hand and not see your fingers. A little light leaks in through a crack in the door, which makes the room feel even more gloomy and terrible. From time to time, rats emit strange squeaks, as if making merry. All within the room is repulsive and frightening, like a house in which someone who has just been put into the coffin used to live. The bed, quilts, and the unremarkable little cabinet in the room are all covered in dust, on the ground several little stools bare their fangs and brandish their claws, and spider webs hang on the walls. A mirror sits on the table, a wooden comb next to it. Walking toward the mirror, I pick up a candle and light it. I see that the mirror is covered in dust, creating a kind of “make-up” on people’s reflections^[a] so they look like they’ve just come out of a tomb. The comb is full of hairs. All these things are old and crude, and seem as if they’ve just been used by someone who just died. Looking at the comb, it feels as if there’s a corpse lying aside. The hairs in the comb, without blood circulating in them, have the smell of the dead about them. A chill wind enters through the crack in the door, as if a ghost is squeezing through the crack, returning to inhabit the room. There’s an oppressive chill about the room, and suddenly, a stench as of a rotting corpse, and at this moment it can be seen that there are a jumble of things hanging about the walls, on the bed is disheveled bedding, dirty and smelly, there is grain in the corner, the cabinet is coated with dust, the floor is covered with twigs and dirt, and so on—as if they have just been used by a dead person, lurching forward, gnashing their teeth and clawing at the air. It’s enough to give you the shivers. There’s not a vestige of life anywhere in the room, all’s dark and damp, like the Hades and hell spoken of by God. This is just like a man’s tomb, with the unpainted cabinet, stools, window frames, and doors clothed in mourning attire and paying silent tribute to the dead. Man has been living in this netherworld for several decades, or several centuries, or even several millennia, going out early and returning late. They emerge from their “tomb” at first light, when the cocks are crowing, and, look up at the sky and glance down at the ground, start their day’s activities. When the sun drops behind the mountains, they drag their tired body back to the “tomb”; by the time they’ve filled their belly it is dusk. Then, having finished making their preparations for leaving the “tomb” again tomorrow, they put out the light, which seems to be emitting the radiance of phosphorescent fires. At this time, all that can be seen beneath the moonlight are grave mounds spreading like little hillocks into every corner. From within the “tombs” emanates the sound of snores, rising and falling. People all lie fast asleep, and the filthy demons and ghosts too all seem to be resting peacefully. From time to time, one hears crows cawing from far off—the sound of these desolate cries on a still and silent night such as this is enough to send shivers down your spine and make your hair stand on end.... Who knows how many years they’ve spent in such settings, dying and being reborn, who knows how long they’ve remained in the human world where people and ghosts mingle, and what’s more, who knows how many times they’ve bidden farewell to the world. In this hell on earth men lead happy lives, as if they are without a single word of complaint, for they have long since grown accustomed to life in Hades. And so, people are fascinated by this place where filthy demons reside, as if the filthy demons are their friends and companions, as if the world of man is a band of hoods^[1]—for man’s original essence has long since vanished without a whisper, it has disappeared without a trace.

Footnotes:

1. “A band of hoods” is a metaphor for a company of evildoers. It refers to mankind’s corruption, and how there are no holy human beings among mankind.

People's appearance has something of a filthy demon about it; more than that, their actions are manipulated by filthy demons. Today, they look no different from filthy demons, as if they were birthed from filthy demons. Moreover, people are also extremely loving toward, and supportive of, their ancestors, who knows that man has long since been so downtrodden by Satan that they have become like gorillas in the mountains. Their bloodshot eyes hold an imploring look, and in the dim light that shines from them is a faint vestige of a filthy demon's baleful malice. Their faces are covered in wrinkles, cracked like the bark of a pine tree, their mouths protrude outward, as if fashioned by Satan, their ears are coated in grime inside and out, their backs are arched, their legs struggle to support their bodies, and their bony arms swing rhythmically back and forth. It's as if they're nothing but skin and bone, but then again they're also as fat as a mountain bear. Inside and out, they're groomed and dressed like an ape from ancient times—it's as if, today, these apes have yet to fully evolve into the shape of modern man,^[1] so backward are they!

Man lives side by side with the animals, and they get along harmoniously, without disputes or verbal disagreements. Man is fastidious in his care and concern for the animals, and the animals exist for the sake of man's survival, expressly for his benefit, without any advantage to themselves and in complete and total obedience to man. To all appearances, the relationship between man and beast is a close^[2] and harmonious^[3] one—and filthy demons, it would seem, are the perfect combination of man and beast. Thus, man and the filthy demons on earth are even more intimate and inseparable: Though apart from the filthy demons, man remains connected to them; meanwhile, the filthy demons hold nothing back from man, and "devote" all they have to them. Daily, people cavort in the "palace of the king of hell," frolicking in the company of the "king of hell" (their ancestor) and being manipulated by it, so that, today, people have become caked in grime, and, after spending so much time in Hades, have long since stopped wishing to return to the “world of the living.” Thus, as soon as they see the light, and behold the demands of God, and God’s character, and His work, they feel jittery and anxious, still yearning to return to the netherworld and reside with ghosts. Long ago did they forget God, and so they have ever wandered in the graveyard. When I meet a person, I try to talk to her, and only at this time do I discover that the person standing before Me is not human at all. Her hair is unkempt, her face filthy, and there is something wolf-like about her toothy smile. So, too, does she seem to have the awkwardness of a ghost that has just emerged from the tomb and beheld man of the living world. This person is always trying to form her lips into a smile; it appears both insidious and sinister. When she smiles at Me, it’s as if she’s got something to say but can’t seem to find the words, and so all she can do is stand to one side, looking blank and stupid. Seen from behind, she seems to present the “mighty image of the Chinese laboring people”; at these moments she appears even more loathsome, recalling the image of the descendants of the legendary Yan Huang/Yan Wang of old^[a] that people speak of. When I question her, she lowers her head in silence. It takes her a long time to reply, and she is very inhibited when she does so. She can’t keep her hands still, and sucks her two fingers like a cat. Only now do I realize that man’s hands look as if they’ve just been picking through rubbish, with ragged nails so discolored that one would never know that they were supposed to be white, “slender” nails thickly lined with dirt. Even more disgusting, the backs of their hands look like the skin of a chicken that’s just been plucked. The lines across their hands are almost all impregnated with the price of the blood and sweat of man’s labors, within each is something that looks like dirt, seemingly exuding the “aroma of the soil,” the better to represent the preciousness and praiseworthiness of man’s spirit of suffering—so that this spirit of suffering has even been deeply embedded in each of the lines on man’s hands. From head to toe, none of the clothing man wears looks anything like an animal’s pelt, but little do they know that, be they ever so “honorable,” their value is actually less than a fox’s fur—less, even, than a single peacock’s feather, for their clothing has long since made them so ugly that they look worse than a pig and a dog. Her skimpy top dangles halfway down her back, and her trouser legs—like chicken intestines—fully expose her ugliness to the bright sunlight. They are short and narrow, as if for the sake of showing that her feet have long since been unbound: They’re big feet, no longer the “three-inch golden lotuses” of the old society. This person’s dress is too Westernized, but also too cheap. When I meet with her, she’s always bashful, her face flushing crimson, and she’s unable to raise her head at all, as if she’s been trodden down by filthy demons, and can’t bring herself to look people in the face anymore. Dust covers man’s face. This dust, which has fallen from the sky, appears to fall all unfairly upon man’s face, making it look like sparrow’s down. Man’s eyes are like a sparrow’s, too: small and dry, without any brightness. When they talk, their speech is habitually halting and evasive, loathsome and disgusting to others. Yet many extol such people as “representatives of the nation.” Is this not a joke? God wishes to change people, to save them, to rescue them from the tomb of death, that they may escape from the life they lead in Hades and in hell.

WORK AND ENTRY (6)

Work and entry are inherently practical and refer to God’s work and man’s entry. Man’s complete lack of understanding of God’s true face and God’s work has brought great difficulties to his entry. To this day, many people still do not know the work God accomplishes in the last days or why God endures extreme humiliation to come into flesh and stand with man in weal and woe. Man knows nothing of the goal of God’s work, nor the purpose of God’s plan for the last days. For various reasons, people are always lukewarm and equivocal^[1] toward the entry that God demands, which has brought great difficulties to God’s work in the flesh. People seem to have all become obstacles and, to this day, they still have no clear understanding. Therefore I will talk about the work that God does on man, and God’s urgent intention, so that all of you will become God's loyal servants who, like Job, would rather die than reject God and will endure every humiliation, and who, like Peter, will offer your whole beings to God and become the intimates gained by God in the last days. May all brothers and sisters do everything in their power to offer their whole beings to God's heavenly will, become holy servants in the house of God, and enjoy the infinite promises bestowed by God, so that God the Father's heart can soon enjoy peaceful rest. "Accomplish God the Father's will" should be the motto of all who love God. These words should serve as man's guide for entry and the compass directing his actions. This is the resolve that man should have. To thoroughly finish God's work on earth and cooperate with God's work in the flesh—this is man's duty. One day, when God's work is done, man will bid Him farewell on an early return to the Father in heaven. Is this not the responsibility that man should fulfill?

When, in the Age of Grace, God returned to the third heaven, God's work of redeeming all of mankind had actually already moved into its closing act. All that remained on earth were the cross that Jesus carried, the fine linen that Jesus was wrapped in, and the crown of thorns and scarlet robe that Jesus wore (these were objects the Jews used to mock Him). That is, the work of Jesus' crucifixion had caused an uproar for a time and then had settled down. From then on, Jesus' disciples began to carry His work forward, shepherding and watering in the churches everywhere. The content of their work was this: to have all people repent, admit their sins, and be baptized; the apostles all spreading the inside story of Jesus' crucifixion and what actually happened, everyone not being able to help but fall down before Jesus to admit their sins, and furthermore the apostles spreading everywhere the words Jesus spoke and the laws and commandments He established. From that point began the building of churches in the Age of Grace. What Jesus talked about during that age also focused on man's life and the heavenly Father's will. It is only because the ages are different that many of those sayings and practices differ greatly from today's. But the essence of both is the same. Both are nothing more or less than the work of God's Spirit in the flesh. That kind of work and those words have continued to this day, and that is why what is still shared in today's religious churches is that sort of thing and is utterly unchanged. When Jesus' work concluded, the right track of Jesus Christ was taking hold on earth, but God began plans for another stage of His work, the matter of incarnation in the last days. To man, God's crucifixion concluded the work of God's incarnation, redeemed all of mankind, and allowed Him to seize the key to Hades. Everyone thinks God's work has been fully accomplished. In actuality, to God, only a small part of His work has been accomplished. He has only redeemed mankind; He has not conquered mankind, let alone changed the ugliness of Satan in man. That is why God says, "Although My incarnate flesh went through the pain of death, that was not the whole goal of My incarnation. Jesus is My beloved Son and was nailed to the cross for Me, but He did not fully conclude My work. He only did a portion of it." Thus God began the second round of plans to continue the work of the incarnation. God's ultimate intention is to perfect and gain everyone rescued from Satan's hands, which is why God prepared again to risk dangers to come into flesh. What is called "incarnation" indicates not carrying glory (not carrying glory because God's work is not yet finished), but appearing in the identity of the beloved Son, and that He is Christ, in whom God is well pleased. That is why this is said to be risking dangers. The flesh is of minuscule power and must exercise great caution,^[1] a far cry from the authority of the Father in heaven, and He only fulfills the ministry of the flesh, accomplishing God the Father's work and commission without getting involved in other work. He only accomplishes one part of the work. This is why God is called "Christ" upon coming to earth. This is the embedded meaning. The reason it is said that the coming is accompanied with temptations is because only one work project is being accomplished. Furthermore, the reason God the Father only calls Him "Christ" and "beloved Son" and has not given Him all the glory is precisely because the incarnate flesh comes to do one work project, not to represent the Father in heaven, but rather to fulfill the beloved Son's ministry. When the beloved Son completes the entire commission He has accepted onto His shoulders, the Father will give Him full glory along with the identity of Father. One can say that this is the heavenly rule. Because the One who has come into flesh and the Father in heaven are in two different circumstances, the two only gaze toward each other in Spirit, the Father keeping an eye on the beloved Son but the Son unable to see the Father from afar. It is because the function of the flesh is too small and He has the potential of being murdered at any moment, that this coming is said to be accompanied by great danger. This is the equivalent of God once again relinquishing His beloved Son and depositing Him into the tiger's mouth. It is at risk to life that God deposited Him in the place where Satan is most concentrated. Even in such dire straits, God still handed His beloved Son to the people of a filthy, licentious place for them to "bring up." This is because it is the only way for God's work to make total sense and the only way to fulfill all the wishes of God the Father and accomplish the last part of His work among mankind. Jesus only accomplished one stage of God the Father's work. Because of the barrier of the incarnate flesh and the differences in the work accomplished, Jesus Himself did not know that there would be a second return to flesh. Thus no one who has read historical accounts of Him has ever discovered Jesus prophesying that God wants to incarnate Himself for a second time to finish the entirety of His work in the flesh. Since Jesus did not even know of this matter, the great prophets and exegetes also do not know that God wants to return to flesh, meaning come into flesh again to do the second part of His work in the flesh. Therefore, no one realizes that God hid Himself in flesh starting a long time ago. This is understandable because it was only after Jesus was resurrected and rose to heaven that He accepted this commission, so God's second incarnation has no root and no basis and is, like rootless water, difficult to grasp. Moreover, it is hard to find references to it even in the highly renowned^[1] Bible. Of all of the Bible's many chapters and verses, not a single sentence or word mentions this matter. But Jesus' arrival in the world was long prophesied and furthermore was through conception by the Holy Spirit. Nevertheless, God still said it was at risk to life. Then what does that say about today? No wonder God says the incarnation this time risks dangers thousands of times greater than those during the Age of Grace. In many places, God has prophesied gaining a group of overcomers in the land of Sinim. It is in the world's East that overcomers are gained, so the landing spot of God's second incarnation is without a doubt the land of Sinim, exactly where the great red dragon lies coiled. There God will gain the descendants of the great red dragon so that it is thoroughly defeated and shamed. God wants to awaken these deeply suffering people, to awaken them completely, and to have them walk out of the fog and reject the great red dragon. God wants to awaken them from their dream, have them know the essence of the great red dragon, give all their heart to God, rise up out of the oppression of the dark forces, stand up in the East of the world, and become proof of God's victory. Only then will God gain glory. For just this reason, God brought the work that came to an end in Israel to the land where the great red dragon lies coiled and, nearly two thousand years after departing, has come again into flesh to continue the work of the Age of Grace. To man's naked eye, God is launching new work in the flesh. But to God, He is continuing the work of the Age of Grace, only with a time separation of a few thousand years, and only with a change in work location and work project. Although the flesh image that God has taken in today's work is quite a different person than Jesus, They share the same substance and root, and They are from the same source. Maybe They have many exterior differences, but the inner truths of Their work are completely identical. The ages, after all, are as different as night and day. How can God's work stay unchanged? Or how can the work interrupt each other?

Jesus took on the appearance of a Jew, conformed to the attire of the Jews, and grew up eating Jewish food. This is His normal human aspect. But today's incarnate flesh takes the form of the people of Asia and grows up on the food of the nation of the great red dragon. These do not conflict with the goal of God's incarnation. Rather, they complement each other, more fully completing the true significance of God's incarnation. Because the incarnate flesh is referred to as "Son of man" or "Christ," the exterior of today's Christ cannot be equated with Jesus Christ. After all, the flesh is called "Son of man" and is in the image of flesh. Every stage of God's work contains considerably deep meaning. The reason Jesus was conceived by the Holy Spirit is because He was to redeem sinners. He had to be without sin. But only in the end when He was forced to become the likeness of sinful flesh and took on the sins of the sinners did He rescue them off the cursed cross that God used to chastise people. (The cross is God's tool for cursing and chastising people; mentions of cursing and chastising are specifically about cursing and chastising sinners.) The goal was to have all sinners repent and to use crucifixion to have them admit their sins. That is, for the sake of redeeming all mankind, God incarnated Himself in a flesh that was conceived by the Holy Spirit and took on the sins of all mankind. The commonplace way of describing this is offering a holy flesh in exchange for all sinners, the equivalent of Jesus being a sin offering placed in front of Satan to “beseech” Satan to return to God the entire innocent mankind that it had trampled. Thus to accomplish this stage of redemption work required conception by the Holy Spirit. This was a necessary condition, a “treaty” during the battle between God the Father and Satan. That is why Jesus was given to Satan, and only then did this stage of work conclude. However, God’s redemption work today is already of unprecedented magnificence, and Satan has no reason to make demands, so God’s incarnation does not require conception by the Holy Spirit, for God is inherently holy and innocent. So God incarnate this time is no longer the Jesus of the Age of Grace. But He is still for the sake of God the Father’s will and for the sake of fulfilling God the Father’s wishes. How can this be considered an unreasonable saying? Must God’s incarnation follow a set of rules?

Many people look in the Bible for evidence, wanting to find a prophecy of God’s incarnation. How can man’s broken thinking know that God long ago stopped “working” in the Bible and has “jumped” outside of it to do with gusto the work that He had long planned but had never told man about? People are too lacking in sense. After only a taste of God’s disposition, they casually get up on a tall stage and sit in a high-class “wheelchair” inspecting God’s work, going so far as to start educating God with bombastic, rambling talk. Many an “old man,” wearing reading glasses and stroking his beard, opens up his yellowed “old almanac” (Bible) that he has been reading for a lifetime. Muttering words and eyes seemingly sparkling, he turns now to the Book of Revelation and now to the Book of Daniel, and now to the universally known Book of Isaiah. Staring at a page packed dense with tiny words, he reads in silence, his mind spinning ceaselessly. Suddenly the hand stroking the beard stops and begins pulling at it. Now and then one hears the sound of beard being broken. Such unusual behavior takes one aback. “Why use such force? What is he so mad about?” Back to the old man, his brows are now bristling. The silvered brows have landed like goose feathers precisely two centimeters from this old man’s eyelids, as if by chance and yet so perfectly, as the old man keeps his eyes glued to the mildewed-looking pages. He repeats the above sequence of actions several times, and then he can’t help but jump to his feet and begins chattering as if making small-talk^[1] with someone, though the light from his eyes has not left the almanac. Suddenly he covers up the present page and turns to “another world.” His movements are so hurried and frightening, almost taking people by surprise. Presently, the mouse that had come out of its hole and had just started to “feel unfettered” during his silence was so alarmed by his uncharacteristic movements that it ran straight back into the hole, disappearing without a trace. Now the old man’s motionless left hand resumes its up-and-down beard-stroking motion. He moves away from the seat, leaving the book on the desk. Through the slightly ajar door and the open window, the wind comes in, uncaringly blowing the book shut, then open, then shut and open again. There is an inexpressible forlornness about the scene, and except for the sound of the book’s pages being rustled by the wind, everything seems to have fallen silent. He, with hands clasped behind his back, paces the room, now stopping, now starting, shaking his head from time to time, seemingly repeating “Oh! God! Would You really do that?” From time to time he also nods, “O God! Who can fathom Your work? Is it not hard to search for Your footprints? I believe You do not do unreasonable things.” Presently the old man’s brows scrunch together, his eyes squeeze shut, showing an embarrassed look, and also an exceedingly pained expression, as if he wants to slowly deliberate. This is really challenging this “grand old man.” At this late stage in his life, he has “unfortunately” come upon this matter. What can be done about it? I am also at a loss and powerless to do anything. Who made his old almanac grow yellowed? Who made his beard and brows all grow heartlessly like white snow on different places on his face? It is as if his beard represents his background. Yet who knew man could become foolish to this degree, looking for the presence of God in the old almanac? How many sheets of paper can the old almanac have? Can it really record all of God’s deeds? Who dares to guarantee that? Man actually seeks God’s appearance and tries to fulfill God’s will by overly parsing words.^[2] Is trying to enter life this way as easy as it sounds? Is this not preposterous, false reasoning? Do you not find this laughable?

Footnotes:

1. “Small-talk” is a metaphor for the ugly face of people when they research into the work of God.
2. “Overly parsing words” is used to mock the experts in fallacies, who split hairs over the words but don’t seek the truth or know the work of the Holy Spirit.

WORK AND ENTRY (7)

It has taken man until this day to realize that what man lacks is not only the supply of spiritual life and experience of knowing God, but, more importantly, changes in their disposition. Due to man's complete ignorance of the history and ancient culture of mankind, they have not the slightest knowledge of God's work. Man hopes that deep in the heart, man can be attached to God, but due to the excessive corruption of man's flesh, as well as numbness and obtuseness, man is reduced to having not the slightest knowledge of God. God comes among man this day for the purpose of transforming their thoughts and spirits as well as the image of God in their hearts that they have had for thousands of years. Through this opportunity, He will make man perfect. That is, through man's knowledge He will change the way they come to know Him and their attitude toward Him, so that their knowledge of God can start from a clean slate, and their hearts are thereby renewed and transformed. Dealing and discipline are the means, while conquest and renewal are the goals. Dispelling the superstitious thoughts man has held about the vague God has forever been the intention of God, and lately has become a matter of urgency to Him. I hope all people give this further thought. Change how each person experiences so that this urgent intention of God can soon be done and the last stage of God's work on earth can be brought to a fruitful conclusion. Show your loyalty as you ought to, and comfort the heart of God one final time. I hope that none of the brothers and sisters shirk this responsibility or merely go through the motions. God comes in the flesh this time on invitation, and in light of the condition of man. That is, He comes to supply man with what is needed. He will enable every man, whatever caliber or breeding, to see the word of God and, from His word, see the existence and manifestation of God and accept God's perfection of them. His word will change the thoughts and conceptions of man so that the true countenance of God is firmly rooted in the depths of man's heart. This is God's only wish on earth. No matter how great the nature of man, how poor man's essence, or how man acted in the past, God pays no regard to these. He only hopes for man to completely renew the image of God they have in their hearts and to come to know the essence of mankind, thereby changing the ideological outlook of man. He hopes that man is able to deeply long for God and have an eternal attachment to Him. This is all that God asks of man.

Knowledge of several thousand years of ancient culture and history has closed off the thinking and concepts and mental outlook of man so tightly as to be impenetrable and nondegradable. Man lives in the eighteenth level of hell, as if they have been banished by God into the dungeons, never to see the light. Feudal thinking has oppressed man such that man can barely breathe and is suffocating. They have not the slightest strength to resist and just quietly endure and endure.... Never has any dared to fight or stand up for righteousness and justice; they simply live a life, no better than an animal's, under the abuse and assault of feudal lords, year after year, day after day. Man has never thought to seek God to enjoy happiness on earth. It is as if man has been beaten down, like the fallen leaves of autumn, withered and browned. Man has long lost their memory and helplessly lives in the hell by the name of the human world, waiting for the coming of the last day so that they may perish together with the hell, as if the last day that they yearn for is the day they shall enjoy restful peace. Feudal ethics have taken the life of man into "Hades," so that man has even less ability to resist. Various kinds of oppression forced man to gradually fall deeper into Hades and farther away from God. Now, God has been a complete stranger to man, and man still hastens to avoid Him when they meet. Man does not acknowledge Him and isolates Him as if man has never known or seen Him before. God has been waiting throughout the long journey of human life but has never directed His uncontrollable fury toward man. He has merely been waiting in silence for man to repent and start anew. God long ago came to the human world and endures the same suffering as man. He has lived with man for many years and none has discovered His existence. God has been silently enduring the misery of the human world while carrying out the work He has brought with Him. For the will of God the Father and the needs of mankind, He has endured, suffering pain never before experienced by man. Before man, He has quietly served them and humbled Himself, for the sake of God the Father's will and the needs of mankind. Knowledge of ancient culture has quietly stolen man from the presence of God and turned man over to the king of devils and its sons. The Four Books and Five Classics have taken the thinking and concepts of man into another age of rebellion, causing man to further worship those who wrote the Books and Classics, furthering their notions of God. The king of devils heartlessly cast out God from the heart of man without their awareness, while it gleefully took over the heart of man. From then on, man was possessed of an ugly and wicked soul with the face of the king of devils. A hatred of God filled their chests, and the maliciousness of the king of devils spread within man day by day until man was utterly consumed. Man no longer had freedom and was unable to break free from entanglement with the king of devils. Therefore, man could only stay in place and be seized, surrendering to it and becoming subjugated to it. It long ago planted the seed of the tumor of atheism within the young heart of man, teaching man fallacies such as “learn of science and technology, realize the Four Modernizations, there is no God in the world.” Not only that, it repeatedly proclaimed, “Let us build a beautiful homeland through our industrious labor,” asking all to be prepared from childhood to serve their country. Man was unconsciously brought before it, and it unhesitatingly took the credit (referring to God holding all of mankind in His hands). Never once did it feel ashamed or have a sense of shame. Moreover, it shamelessly captured God’s people into its house, while it leaped like a mouse onto the table and had man worship it as God. Such a desperado it is! It cries out such shocking scandals, “There is no God in the world. The wind is due to natural laws; the rain is moisture that condenses and falls in drops to the earth; an earthquake is the shaking of the surface of the earth due to geological changes; drought is due to dryness in the air caused by nucleonic disruption on the sun’s surface. These are natural phenomenon. Which part is an act of God?” It even shouts out^[a] such shameless statements: “Man evolved from ancient apes, and the world today has progressed from a primitive society of approximately a billion years ago. Whether a country flourishes or falls is decided by the hands of its people.” In the back, it has man hang it upside down on the walls and place it on tables to be enshrined and worshiped. While it cries out, “There is no God,” it regards itself as God, pushing God out of bounds of the earth relentlessly. It stands in God’s place and acts as the king of devils. How utterly ludicrous! It causes one to be consumed by a poisonous hatred. It seems that God is its sworn enemy and God is irreconcilable with it. It schemes to chase

God away while it remains unpunished and at large.^[1] Such a king of devils it is! How could we tolerate its existence? It will not rest until it has disturbed the work of God and left it in tatters and a complete shambles,^[2] as if it wants to oppose God until the end, until either the fish dies or the net breaks. It deliberately opposes God and moves ever closer. Its odious face has long ago been completely unmasked and is now bruised and battered,^[3] in a terrible plight, yet it does not relent in its hatred of God, as if it wishes it could devour God entirely at one mouthful to relieve the hatred in its heart. How could we tolerate it, this hated enemy of God! Only its eradication and complete extermination will bring our life's wish to an end. How can it be allowed to go on running rampant? It has corrupted man to such degree that man does not know the heavensun, and becomes deadened and obtuse. Man has lost normal human reason. Why not sacrifice our whole being to destroy and burn it to eliminate the fear of danger that remains and allow the work of God to reach unprecedented splendor sooner? This gang of scoundrels has come among men and caused utter unrest and turmoil. They have brought all men to the edge of a precipice, secretly planning to shove them down to be dashed to pieces and devour their corpses. They vainly hope to disrupt God's plan and compete with God in a long-shot gamble.^[4] That is by no means easy! The cross is prepared, after all, for the king of devils who is guilty of the most heinous crimes. God does not belong to the cross and has already left it to the devil. God long ago emerged victorious and no longer feels sorrow over the sins of mankind. He will bring salvation to all mankind.

From top to bottom and beginning to end, it has been disturbing the work of God and acting in discord with Him. All the talk of ancient cultural heritage, valuable knowledge of ancient culture, teachings of Taoism and Confucianism, and Confucian classics and feudal rites has taken man into hell. Advanced modern-day science and technology, as well as developed industry, agriculture, and business are nowhere to be seen. Rather, it simply emphasizes the feudal rites propagated by the ancient “apes” to deliberately disrupt, oppose, and destroy the work of God. Not only has it afflicted man until this day, but it wants to consume^[1] man completely. The teaching of the feudal code of ethics and passing down of knowledge of ancient culture has long infected man and turned man into devils big and small. There are but few who would readily receive God and jubilantly welcome the coming of God. Man’s face is filled with murder, and in all places, death is in the air. They seek to cast God out from this land; with knives and swords in hand, they arrange themselves in battle formation to annihilate God. Idols are spread across the land of the devil where man is constantly taught there is no God. Above this land permeates a nauseating odor of burning paper and incense, so thick that it is suffocating. It seems to be the smell of sludge that wafts up when the serpent twists and coils, and is enough that man cannot help but vomit. Besides, there can faintly be heard evil demons chanting scriptures. This sound seems to be coming from faraway in hell, and man cannot help but feel a chill down his spine. Across this land are scattered idols, with all colors of the rainbow, which turn the land into a dazzling world, and the king of devils keeps a smirk on its face, as if its evil plot has succeeded. Meanwhile, man is completely unaware of it, nor does man know that the devil has already corrupted him to such degree that he has become senseless and defeated. It wishes to wipe out God’s all in one blow, to again insult and assassinate Him, and attempts to tear down and disturb His work. How could it allow God to be of equal status? How can it tolerate God “interfering” with its work among men on earth? How can it allow God to unmask its odious face? How can it allow God to disrupt its work? How could this devil, fuming with rage, allow God to govern its court of power on earth? How could it willingly admit defeat? Its odious countenance has been revealed for what it is, hence one finds himself not knowing whether to laugh or cry, and it is truly difficult to speak of. Is this not its essence? With an ugly soul, it still believes that it is incredibly beautiful. This gang of accomplices! They come down among the mortals to indulge in pleasures and stir up disorder. Their disturbance causes fickleness in the world^[1] and brings panic in the heart of man, and they have distorted man so that man resembles beasts of unbearable ugliness, no longer possessing the slightest trace of the original holy man. They even wish to assume power as tyrants on earth. They impede the work of God so that it can barely move forward and close off man as if behind walls of copper and steel. Having committed so many sins and caused so much trouble, how could they expect anything other than to wait for chastisement? Demons and evil spirits have been running amok on earth and have closed off the will and painstaking effort of God, making them impenetrable. What a mortal sin! How could God not feel anxious? How could God not feel wrathful? They cause grievous hindrance and opposition to the work of God. Too rebellious! Even those demons big and small become haughty on the strength of the more powerful devil and begin to make waves. They deliberately resist the truth despite clear awareness of it. Sons of rebellion! It is as if, now that their king of hell has ascended to the kingly throne, they become smug and treat all others with contempt. How many seek the truth and follow righteousness? They are all beasts like pigs and dogs, leading a gang of stink flies in a dung heap to wag their heads and incite disorder.^[2] They believe that their king of hell is the most superior of kings, without realizing that they are nothing more than flies on rot. Not only that, they make slanderous remarks against the existence of God by relying on their pigs and dogs of parents. The minuscule flies think their parents to be as large as a toothed whale.^[3] Do they not realize that they are diminutive, yet their parents are unclean pigs and dogs a billion times larger than themselves? Unaware of their own lowliness, they run amok on the basis of the putrid odor of those pigs and dogs and have the delusional idea to procreate future generations. That is absolutely
